Number 1.

"At the Kansas City Tournament last week there were twenty-one events, each and all of which were won by Victor Light Roadsters, the track being too bad to use racers. This is a rare occurrence, but shows the popularity of the Victor in that part of the country."—Spectator.

We didn't lend these bicycles. The riders bought them to win on.

Yes, 21 is a large percentage of the events, but what we call your attention is that the bicycles were the same as we sell to riders; not racers, made to win races, and entirely different from roadsters. If you want a racer buy it or borrow it of those who make racers. We make Roadsters, and make them to "get there." Racing bicycles bear little relation to roadsters.

FACTORY REMOVED FROM WORCESTER TO HIGHLANDVILLE, MASS.

Office 178 Columbus Avenue, Boston.

MEDINA, N. Y., Oct. 5th, 1888.

SPRINGFIELD BICYCLE MFG. CO., Boston, Mass.:

Dear Sirs—In May last I purchased a Springfield Roadster, and since that time I have ridden as many miles as any rider in the country, and over every kind of road. I have ridden up sandy hills and down steep stony ones. I have ridden over rails and off of curbings; in short, my Springfield Roadster will take me almost anywhere in safety. It takes but little effort to propel it.

Respectfully, NEIL F. POSSON,
Teacher 4th Grade Medina Free Academy.

"I believe the Springfield Roadster is the best wheel manufactured for all around use." F. E. EASTLACK, Crawfordsville, Ind.

"I would ride no other." JONATHAN KOLB, M. D., Oxford, Ind.

"The most practical Roadster on the market." W. H. GARDINER, Fairfield, Neb.

"Too much in favor of the Springfield Roadster cannot be said. As an all around machine it has no equal." C. L. ROBERTS, Dunlap, Iowa.

"My No. 2 wheel runs like grease. It is the easiest running wheel I was ever on." F. M. MILLER, Coldwater, Mich.

"I know from experience that for comfort and ease, long distance riding, over good or rough roads, it is the best bicycle made." C. D. MCINTOSH, Salem, Ind.

"My wheel works very nicely and has never got out of order." JOHN S. COPP, Coldwater, Mich.

"There is no doubt in my mind that it is the most serviceable all around wheel in the market." C. E. WALKER, Secy. Pastime Cycling and Athletic Club, Chicago.

"I am very muched pleased with the Springfield Roadster." P. H. SERCOMBE, Milwaukee, Wis.

"It is far ahead of any wheel in the market for safety, durability and general road use. For bad roads and hill climbing it has no equal." ROTTMAN & PUGH, Terre Haute, Ind.

"It is the wheel of all wheels." CHAS. HEWITT, Arcola, Ill.

"The Springfield Roadster took the lead here early last spring and has held its own ever since. Twelve wheels were sold, over double the number of any other make. The boys all want them just as soon as they can dispose of their crank wheels." A. LEROY, Springfield, Ill.

EDITORS:
C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 2 NOVEMBER, 1888.

MR. GEORGE D. HAZARD, who for the past seven months has been connected with the advertising department of the WORLD, has by mutual consent severed his relations with this paper as its advertising manager. Mr. Hazard has decided to go out of the newspaper business, and has made arrangements to connect himself with the cycling interests in the manufacturing line. Just what the nature of the business is to be we are not yet at liberty to state, but in the near future we will give our readers the particulars of the business, which we believe will prove of interest to them. We also trust that Mr. Hazard will find his new business as profitable as the prospect now promises.

THE sad death of Mr. McCombie, resulting from a fall from his bicycle, has revived the question as to the possibility of introducing life assurance as one of the branches of League work. This question is by no means a new one to us or to the League officers. It has been discussed, and it has been dismissed as impracticable for the following reasons:

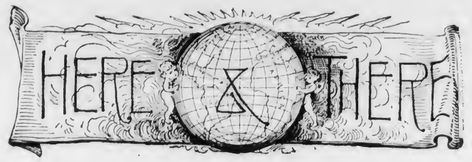
First—To organize and run an accident assurance department means a considerable increase in expense in the way of clerical force, record books and necessary stationary. Second—As the assurance department would have to be managed on a purely business basis it would be necessary to investigate and report on every claim made whether for death or for injury, and such investigation could not be asked for, gratis, from the local officers of the League. Third—That there are already in the field companies properly organized and fully equipped to do this business at living and reasonable rates.

The above are briefly some of the reasons given why it is not advisable for the League to go into the accident assurance business. There is this to be said on the other side, and that is, the proposed League Assurance Co. would not be liable for anything except where injury or death resulted from riding a bicycle, hence the percentage of assessment would be much less than where claims are made on all accidents of whatsoever kind.

If the members of the League think that an assurance attachment to the parent body a good thing, they can have it by means of voting for same at a Constitutional Convention, but it must be understood that such a branch means extra expense, as with the present clerical force of the Secretary's office, the necessary work could not be accomplished.

WE cannot but commend the selection by President Kirkpatrick of Mr. Charles S. Davol, of Providence, R. I., as Chairman of the Racing Board. Mr. Davol has taken hold of the duties imposed by this important office in a way that promises well for the future of racing under the auspices of the League. The new Chairman is evidently awake as to the importance of revising the pre ent rules which have been shown to be weak or inefficient. We hear that the country will be divided into districts (six, we believe), and that a handicapper will be appointed in each district.

We hope the knotty question of how to prevent loafing will take the careful attention of the Board. Many of the highest authorities have expressed themselves as to the best methods.



Mr. Hillier, who is among the very first in such matters, sticks to "handicaps first and last." Still this same authority is willing to try the lap racing scheme as set forth by Mr. H. H. Griffin of the N. C. U., a higher authority than whom does not exist. In a recent interview Mr. Griffin says:

"I regard these waiting tactics as the greatest curse that has ever fallen on any sport. This cankerworm is sucking up the very life's blood of the sport. Our best men have become dishonest dawdlers, whose sole aim seems to be—I refer to scratch races—to cheat each other by a smart finish and cozen the club out of the prize by false pretences. Suppose the race is ostensibly for five miles, the actual distance when there is any struggle is about a quarter of a mile or 600 yards. Such conduct would not be tolerated for a moment in any other branch of sport, not even in professional running. And what would be said at Henley in the final of the Grand if all the crews paddled down the course until 100 yards from the finish, when they indulged in a mad spurt? I have recently had two suggestions made to me in the weekly press; both, if slightly amplified, could be made to work wonders. The first is due to the London correspondent of the Irish World. Shortly, it is, that only the three fastest time-makers in the trial heats should be allowed in the final, as a man who can do his mile in 2m. 32s. has a much better right to be champion than the one who can do it in 2m. 55s. The second suggestion came from a Frenchman, but it wants enlarging and reforming; it would mean that if there were six starters in a five-mile race the positions of each one would be recorded at the end of every lap—the first man past would score one, the second two, and so on, as in the cross-country championship, and the lowest scorer would be winner. If this were tacked on to a time limit—to prevent loafing between the lap finishes—I defy the most expert dawdler to play his game. Unless stringent steps are taken, the little interest left in scratch races will disappear."

The last sentence of Mr. Griffin's will find an echo in every American rider's heart. Truly, unless something is done, some remedy found, cycle racing has seen its day.

The discussion of this topic is timely, and we trust the current of thought of the members of the Racing Board will flow strongly in this direction. To the above suggestions as to remedies we would add that of class racing in combination with time limit. It seems to us that out of these three methods something could be evolved that would result in reviving the waning interest in cycle races—more properly it might have been called "cycle processions."

MR. DUCKER advises us that the feeling in Buffalo is that we did not "give Rowe justice" in our editorial on the great fake. The same gentleman, in the same letter, reasons that Morgan played the part of the tempter. Now as to "giving Rowe justice," the term is ambiguous, perhaps we have not done him "justice." It is a pretty hard thing to mete out "justice" in such cases. We can scarce think the moral vision of our genial friend Ducker and his Buffalo friends is so obscured and biased as not to see that every man mixed up in the affair is equally guilty. What possible difference can there be between a man who proposes highway robbery and the man who says "all right we will do it and go shares." The parties to the "great combination" should now lift up their voices in earnest prayer and ask to be saved from their friends.

NEW YORK.

"HAWKSHAW."

THE average club man here has from the start been but lukewarm in his support of the Alphabetical Road Racing Association, paying but little, if any, attention to the contest, and rarely putting himself out to attend its races. The support and active factor in the organization has all along been drawn from the ranks of Brooklyn and New Jersey clubs. Hence the failure of any contest on the forthcoming election day, if heeded at all by New Yorkers, will, as a rule, be hailed as a deliverance from a practice that brings no credit to the sport of cycling, and which has resulted in the rights of the many being jeopardized for the gratification and enjoyment of those few young hot bloods in the sport, who are imbued with the natural American instinct of trying to see "how fast they can go." Road racing is illegal in its conception and dangerous in its performance, and it is but performing the natural end to such affairs when it thus kindly rids the community of its unwelcome presence by dying a natural death from inanition, rather than waiting for the violent one at the hands of the law, which it surely would have met sooner or later.

IT will not be long before some shrewd woman here will learn to ride a woman's bicycle, and seeing the future that is in it, will be smart enough to devote herself to teaching other women to ride it, and the result will be to her a good living, and to her pupils a fund of health and pleasure they never before experienced.

THE combined rivalry of an old-fashioned rain storm and an enormous democratic parade, reviewed by the President, was too much for the Berkeley Athletic Club, and they postponed the races until election day. While the repeated delays are of course aggravating, yet I think that the result will prove that the selection of election day will prove the most satisfactory date they could have secured. H.T.S

IN my notes last week I committed the error of crediting the recent illustrated article in the New York Sunday World, on city wheelmen and their doings and abodes, to Mr. Sheehan, of the Manhattan Bi. Club, when the honor really belonged to Mr. F. W. Van Sicklen, which gentleman is not only an able writer, but is a rider and racer of no mean merit. Mr. Van Sicklen is a brother, I think, of the well-known Chicago wheelman of like name.

THE rumor that floated around some time since among the clubs that an effort was to be made to induce the Harlem Wheelmen to join the Citizens Club, and while retaining their present quarters and organization to be thereafter known as the up-town branch of the Citizens, seems to have had a natural death, as it is not confirmed by any appearance of fact. Such a move, though, would be a decided gain for both parties, in fact, if a satisfactory basis of amalgamation of the chief city clubs could be arrived at, the result would be the most stupendous and richest cycling aggregation in the world, but this is too Utopian ever to happen, as the various elements in their several organizations are incapable of any assimilation under any circumstances whatsoever.

IN my last letter I intimated that trouble was likely to result from the recent competition of certain wheelmen in the "championships" given by the N. A. A. A. A., which might result in those competing there being barred from all games held under the rules of the Athletic Union. I am pleased to state, however, that such will not be the case. It appears that the N. A. A. A. A., like the A. U., have a clause in their constitution relating to wheel races, in which it virtually renounces any jurisdiction over cycling competitions, turning that branch of athletics over to the L. A. W., and endorsing the rules and regulations of that body. Hence, while it was not specifically stated so, the recent two-mile "championship" given by the N. A. A. A. A. was run under L. A. W. rules, and as a result competitors are in no wise brought under the bann for competing. Wheelmen now occupy the enviable position of being the only athletes who can compete in games given by either of these rival athletic associations without making themselves, in consequence, amenable to the rule which excludes all those who compete in the games of one of these associations from entering those held under the auspices of the other. For this very pleasant and extraordinary state of affairs they have to thank the L. A. W. and the Racing Board in particular, and yet the "woods are full" of addle-pated propounders of the query of "what good is the League, anyway?"

THERE has existed for a long time in the hearts of those high in authority in the L. A. W. an exaggerated desire for the wellfare of the poor professional that has caused these gentlemen, who shape the course of action in the League, to lean towards an abrogation of the strict amateur law, so as to admit of the entry of our professional brethren into the L. A. W. ranks, or if not that, to at least put the members of the League upon an equal footing with the professional. In view of the recent disclosures of the professional ideas of honor, it is to be hoped that these abolishionists will once and for all cease any such attempts. The contract is one entirely too large. They can neither pull down the twelve thousand members of the L. A. W. to the level of the professional, nor can they elevate the half hundred or so of that "faking" fraternity to the standard of an amateur. I do not desire "to rattle the dry bones" of this family skeleton, nor to resurrect the mummified corpse of the amateur law, so that I may have the oft-repeated pleasure of wafting the gentle breeze of discussion through its hoary whiskers, but the recent expose is so germane to this issue that I hope I will merit forgiveness for this last look at the face of the "late lamented" issue, and I trust that my example of making it a farewell view of the corpse will be followed by the opponents of the amateur clause, so that henceforth this beneficial law may be allowed to sleep the sleep of the just, for just it is, beyond any and all question.

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

"LINNEUS" says he would like to see Percy Stone race Windle. I admire your nerve, "Linneus," but hadn't you better have Percy try Lumsden again before going for the scalp of Windle? There is plenty of money here in Chicago that says Lumsden can beat Stone and do it easy.

ARE we to have a hare and hounds chase this year or not?

WE are having our Indian summer here now, and wheels are numerous in all directions.

GARDEN tells me there is to be a great sand hill-climbing contest in Lincoln Park on election day, and watch the safeties get there.

THE Lincoln Club have formed a dancing class among their members, and it bids fair to be a very successful feature of the winter months.

THE new club propose to celebrate their consolidation by giving "something way up, clear up, awfully up," and that is all I can find out about it at present.

DICK FORREST now sports a medal won in a tug-of-war pull at Milwaukee recently. Whether in a bicycle race or anything else "Richard" always manages to get there.

HOSFORD, Randall and a few others are having an exciting contest for the monthly mileage record. Randall is working hard and Hosford says nothing, but smiles, and that smile of his means a good deal generally.

HARMON, at one time the fastest amateur in the city, has ceased to ride except semi-occasionally, and is now devoting all his spare time to amateur photography. Harmon is quite a genius and made his own camera complete. He already has an interesting collection of shadows.

THE Fort Dearborns gave another of their delightful Thursday night entertainments last week in the shape of a German: there were between forty and fifty couple present. A "smoker" is announced for Tuesday eve next, and a first-class time is looked for and all the old veterans will be there. As Mead says, "those who don't dance will have an inning."

WELL, the Chicagos held there meeting the 25th Oct., and voted to consolidate with the Fort Dearborns on the same terms as the Dearborn boys did, and now both clubs are hustling to pay off their old indebtedness and form one club, with no debt to hold them back, while the Englewood Club is already knocking for admittance at the door of the new Chicago Cycling Club.

IT is still a close race between the New Jersey Division and the Illinois Division, as to who shall have the most members in the League, with Illinois slightly in the lead, and I understand that our Chief Consul has written a personal letter to all our representatives asking them to make a special effort to have all eligible wheelmen in their district join, and that at once in order to increase our lead over New Jersey.

I SEE the genial "Thistle" has an ad. in this week's Referee on the mileage records for the season, and all made with one exception on his brand of wheel. Noticing Randall's name as one who rode the same, and knowing that Randall used to ride another make, I asked him about it, and he said he noticed it, and if it were any one but Garden there would be a suit for libel at once, but as it was the "genial Bob" it would only cost him a "champagne dinner."

EVERYBODY is after records here in this burg at present. The twenty-four-hour record is catching it right and left, and Lord knows when it will stop. First, Mason of the I. C. C. tried it, then Spooner of the Lincolns took a whack at it, making 231 miles, beating Mason some seven miles. Then Frank Riggs, after waiting for some time for a favorable opportunity, takes a hand in with the result of beating Spooner, and a record of 240 1-2 miles. Then on the same day Riggs finishes, Mason, not to be bluffed, starts in for another whirl: result, the record is 277 miles. Johnny gets off his wheel, pins up his record, and with that comical look of his says, next? But I think John will hold the record for this season, although Tom Roe says if, etc., "I would knock that silly." But we all know "Tom."

PORKOPOLIS NOTES.

"STAR."

THE social feature of a bicycle club being paramount, the character of each applicant for membership should be carefully scrutinized, as not every rider of a wheel will make a desirable companion. The mere act of buying a mount by no means transforms a rowdy into a gentleman, and if the bars are let down to admit every Tom, Dick and Harry that is able to pay the club dues, the respectable element will soon become disgusted and join some other club where the standard is higher, whilst the hoodlums that remain will not be long in making the club an eyesore to the community.

"TOOT" HIGH says he knows the reason why Amor Hall so seldom uses his wheel.

SIXTH street is now paved with granite from Broadway to Millcreek bridge, a distance of over two miles.

THERE may be nothing in a name, but it seems very strange that it should rain every time Captain Galway calls a run to Venice, O.

FROM the frequency with which Dr. Kempton, of Cumminsville, has lately been practicing on that Mt. Airy hill it is presumed that he is after Alsup's scalp.

AIR-BRAKE NORTON says that it is not an air-brake that he is experimenting with, but a compressed air motor that is intended to afford relief to the rider while climbing grades.

A FEW Sundays ago, while spurting on Race street, Teddy Alsup ran over a hair-pin, and—some of his most intimate friends are still able to recognize him, but he is not quite as handsome as he used to be.

SPEAKING of wheelmen's appetites, Mr. Chambers, of Miamitown, said he believed he could eat as much as any bicycler, but his wife suggested that he wouldn't talk that way if he had ever seen Captain Galway eat chicken.

WHILE climbing a hill, Billy Miles, whose guileless face and hitherto irreproachable conduct have been the pride of his fellow-wheelmen, was detected in the act of shying his cap into the middle of the road as an excuse for dismounting. Who would have thought it?

IT by no means follows that the married state and cycling are incompatible, for if the wheel is good for the bachelor it is equally good for the benedict. To one who is confined in an office six days in the week the club run on Sunday is of incalculable benefit; he has the advantage not only of the fresh air but of the glorious sunshine, without which any form of exercise is of little or no benefit, for man, like plants, does not thrive in the dark, and it is for this reason that the use of the wheel at night is so unsatisfactory. Any sensible woman, therefore, on considering the extent to which her future welfare depends on the health and wellbeing of her husband cannot, or rather should not, object to these occasional excursions.

IT is rumored that the C. B. C. intend during the coming winter, to get up a sort of dime museum in order to raise money with which to furnish their new quarters. The programme is not out yet, but the following are believed to be some of the freaks that will be on exhibition: "Toot" High, the Living Skeleton; Nash, the Fat Woman; Nelson, Charley Ross; Miller, the Snake Charmer; Bennett and Norton, the Long Haired Sisters; the "Duke," an Egyptian Mummy; Charley Allen, the Wild Man of Borneo; Ralph Taylor, Tom Thumb; Piper, Captain Bates; Schultz, the Bearded Woman; Pigman (who takes everything he sees), Door-keeper; Longley and Dr. Green, the Albino Children; Dr. Kempton (if he lets those whiskers grow again), Jo-Jo; Galway, the $10,000 Beauty; Webster (who will not run), Casabianca; Walk Hall and Joe Hosea, the Glass Blowers; Miles, the Mascot; Littleford, Heidkamp and Irwin, the Three Graces; and Strobel, Sitting Bull.

ST. LOUIS.

"LINNEUS."

C. C. HILDEBRAND, Lieutenant of the Missouris, made an attempt to break the existing 24-hour record Saturday, Oct. 20. Unlike most people who make such records in parks or on asphaltum streets, he made his on the Manchester road, and although he only covered 100 miles it must be put down as a remarkable performance, as the distance was ridden on a cold, raw night, in twelve hours, and in the face of a strong wind. The night was dark, and the continued strain on his eyes in watching the road inflamed them so that he could not distinguish objects. This was the only reason for not finishing 200 miles as intended. He started at 8 P. M. The first thirty miles were ridden in 3h. 25m.; fifty miles in 5h. 30m.; twenty miles in 1h. 50m. Actual time for 100 miles, 10h. 45m.

THE "Cycle's" 100-mile run is set for Sunday, Nov. 18.

W. H. BARRON will soon again start his classes in the Missouri Bi. Club gymnasium, which proved so eminently successful last year.

OUR mileage friends have been getting in their work in great shape lately. Up to date Geo. E. Tivy leads them with 5020 miles; Tom Newman, with 4480 miles is second, and Ed Smith, with 3900 miles, is third.

MANNY and Randolph Daniels, of the Missouris, will shortly locate at Sedalia. This will make a loss of seven active men to the club inside of a few months, and some sharp recruiting will have to be done to make up.

SUNDAY, Oct. 14, the Missouris gave a well attended run in honor of President Kirkpatrick, to Fenton, distanced twenty-one miles on the Gravois road, where, contrary to expectations, a good dinner was had. The roads were in elegant shape, and the weather was perfect.

THE Cycle Club is corresponding with the wheelmen of Quincy, Hannibal, Louisiana and Clarksville with the intention of having a grand reunion at the latter place Sunday, Nov. 4. I hope to see the idea carried out as a large number of our riders intend going upon that day.

THE Missouris transferred a number of riders from the active to the associate list at their last meeting, among them being Sam Hatch, Tom Lynch and Jones Irvine, three members who had taken a lively interest in the club but have forsaken the wheel. This is not as it should be.

LOOKING over the wheelmen's register at the Western Hotel, Baldwin, I find that up to Sunday, Oct. 21, 306 wheelmen had registered there since the opening of the season, of which 166 were Missouri Club members, 151 Cycle Club members, 8 members of the Eurotas, and 81 were unattached.

THE Cycle Club made a diversion from the usual order of runs last Sunday by running out to Baden, a suburb eight miles north of town, and then taking a cross-road to Fergerson, where dinner was had, and come back by the Natural Bridge road. This is a new route, and is about thirty-five miles long.

THE wheelmen of the city lost a good friend in Mr. Jno. W. Turner, who resigned as Street Commissioner last week. His successor is Mr. Frank Burnet, a well-known civil engineer. He will no doubt be well disposed towards cyclists as I notice that Mr. Willi Brown, a prominent member of the Missouris is one of his bondsmen.

THE Cycle Club gave a smoker Saturday, Oct. 13, at which President Kirkpatrick and Treasurer Brewster were present by invitation. The guests were received by President Lucas, and introduced, after which the prizes won at the club races on Oct. 6 were distributed. Supper was served at 10.30, and the balance of the evening was given up to boxing, singing and chatting.

THE first entertainment of the winter series was given by the Missouri Bicycle Club Wednesday evening, Oct. 24. Seventy-five couple attended. Dancing began at 8.30 and was kept up to a late hour. Supper was served at the usual time. The Entertainment Committee, consisting of Geo. K. Andrews, E. B. Kidson and Jones Irvine, have every reason to feel proud for the successful termination of the affair.

CAPTAIN SANDERS, Julius Hart and W. H. Carlin, of the Cycle Club, trained it down to Springfield, Mo., a week ago with the intention of spending Sunday in that town. They rode their wheels from the depot, and being seen by an over zealous Associate Press reporter, a special was sent over the wires stating that they "were riding from St. Louis to San Francisco, using the centre of the railroad track." This caused a loud laugh, which was increased when they claimed the 24-hour record.

A. L. JORDAN and Dick Hurck started from the Cycle Club house at 4 A. M. Sunday to establish a 100-mile road record. The distance measured by cyclometer was as follows: Cyclometer at start, 343 1-2 miles. After riding over the Manchester road until cyclometer showed 370 1-2 miles, they turned and rode back to Des Peris without a dismount, arriving at 7.35 A. M. Left at 8.05, arrived home at 9.35; cyclometer registering 398 1-2 miles. Left at 10.40, arrived in Ballwin at 12.33; cyclometer, 420 miles. Left Ballwin at 2.15, arrived at club house at 4.28 P. M.; cyclometer, 445 1-2 miles. Total distance ridden, 102 miles; actual riding time, 9h. 11m.

PENNSYLVANIA.

"ARIEL."

HOWARD L. PYLE, of Wilmington, claims the local 100-mile record, according to the Wheel of Oct. 19, having run it in 8h 25m. 26s., actual riding time. Now I beg to take exception to any claim of this sort. This gentleman started in the morning, stopped off for dinner, and then resumed his ride; counting, as stated above, actual riding time. If I know anything of records, they must be made in one continuous ride for it would be perfectly ridiculous to permit a man to drop out for the purpose of refreshment or rest and then throw all that time out of the count, nor is this allowed in record riding.

"DID you ever hear of Wilson (Chas., Jr.)?" No? Then apply at South End Club house for full particulars.

CAPTAIN FONTAINE, Dr. Roy and Mr. Fisher of the Citizens' Bicycle Club of New York City, spent Sunday, Oct. 21st, in this city as guests of the Pennsylvania Bicycle Club. A run out to the Pike, in the teeth of a tremendous northwest gale, with a substantial dinner at the end of it (the run, not the gale) filled in the day.

FOUR of the South End—C. W. Kolb, E. G. Kolb, C. A. Dinion and James Edwards—last Sunday broke the club record by covering 106 miles, to Coatesville, Overbrook, Haverford and back to the city. Mr. J. R. L. Edwards, of the same club, took a trip a-tandem to Chester, with a feminine cycler on the front seat, returning in time for luncheon.

THE Philadelphia Driving Park Association make a most liberal offer to the South End Wheelmen. They propose to allow the club the use of their fine track at all times, with sundry other priviledges, and will erect a shed for the storage of wheels; in return for which the club is to give bicycle races during the Association's meet. Rather what you'd call a "snap"! Final arrangements are not yet completed.

DRAPER, who won the race for the 5-mile Challenge Cup of the Pennsylvania Bicycle Club, last Saturday, will bear watching. I put him down as one of the coming flyers. He is also a member of the South End Wheelmen and intended entering for their annual ten-mile road race, but supposed it would be postponed on account of the rain. The next Saturday he rode over the course and beat Kolp, the winner's time by four minutes, covering the ten miles in 38 minutes.

FOUR of the Pennsylvanias report figures ranging over twenty-five hundred miles to date. They are: Draper, 3070; Leisen, 2812; Halsted, 2768; Merrihew, 2733. Six others have run over two thousand miles. I have endeavored to get the Century's figures for some time, but to no purpose. I say, Captain W. T., it's time for you to come home from Ohio, now; you've had enough shooting, and your first and second lieutenants are terribly demoralized. What's the matter with Mac and Bobby, anyhow?

COMPLAINT is made by the Athlete that our local wheelmen do not support the Associated Cycling Clubs as they should. It occurs to me that the boot is on the other leg. Why does not the Association get up inter-club runs, or something of that sort? Captain Supplee proposed one and was promptly sat upon. A sad mistake, gentlemen. Try it for Thanksgiving Day—an inter-club run, a dinner, and, to relieve the enthusiasm of the scorching element, a team road race—and see if you don't secure the largest turnout of the season. I have felt the local pulse on this question and know.

THE Press, which has always been doing up the the local cycling news very completely, has made a change and Mr. Collins, who attended to that branch of the sporting column has severed his connection with the paper. Whether this change was in the interest of economy or not I do not know, but this much is certain—their cycling notes are now composed almost entirely of clippings, with some little local news sandwiched in. This is to be regretted for the Press has always made a great point of its complete sporting news, and contrasted with the Times, its cycling notes now make but a poor showing. The latter journal's cycling column is the most complete and accurate of any of the city papers.

NEW ORLEANS.

"NOKOMIS."

LAST Monday morning about half past seven four of the Louisiana Cycling Club could have been seen wending their way through a drenching rain towards the Mississippi Valley Railroad depot. They were Betts, Frederic, Hathorn and Renaud, on their way to Baton Rouge to attend the bicycle races given in conjunction with the State Fair being held in that city. Of course when they reached Baton Rouge the rain was still pouring down, and they were greeted at the depot with the cheerful news that "the races were postponed until next Thursday." They were taken in tow by the boys in Baton Rouge and escorted up to the hotel, where Hathorn and Frederic demolished a hasty dinner and took the next train for New Orleans. Renaud and Betts stayed over night, and painted the experiences of their stay in glowing colors when they returned. Baton Rouge has six wheels in the town, and there is talk of forming a club there.

LIEUTENANT GRAHAM now rides a "Goat," and is willing to bet that he can go faster on it than he could on his ordinary. Strange!

A FEW Sundays ago twelve members of the L. C. C. took a thirty-five mile run up the river and visited the sugar plantations along the route, and in their language, "had a royal time."

MR. P. R. BATSON, an enthusiastic member of the L. C. C., has offered a handsome medal to be run for under similar conditions of the Renaud medal, which medal has been won by E. W. Graham, the first race taking place on the first Sunday in December. This will keep the interest up all through the winter, and will keep the racing men of the L. C. C. in condition.

CLUB runs to the sugar plantations above and below the city are all the go now, and many a pleasant Sunday has been spent among the immense fields of sugar cane and in the sugar houses of the hospitable planters, who always exert themselves to make the stay of their visitors as pleasant as possible. How would some of you boys that have snow and ice now like to come down and go on these runs with us?

C. C. HODGSON has called a meeting for Saturday evening, 27 October, in order to formulate plans for a monster lantern parade to take place during Mardi-Gras week here. This would be a splendid chance for you Northern wheelmen to come down here and see the Mardi-Gras sights, and partake of the hospitalities of the Southern wheelmen. There is not a day in winter, except when it rains, that is too cold to ride a wheel.

BUFFALO.

"ALI BABA."

IT was in the tenth month of this year and in the full moon thereof, when a certain youth did gird up his loins and looked unto the heavens,—and behold he saw a clear patch of sky about a yard wide, and he was exceedingly glad—for there had been twenty-one days of consecutive rain—and he said unto himself, "I will take my wheel and go forth even unto the end of many asphalt streets, for I must make five thousand miles this season, and I am yet three hundred and ninety-nine miles arrears." And he went forth even as his inclinations led him, for that patch of clear sky grew bigger and his joy kept pace therewith. And he met yet another fellow of the wheel, who likewise did desire to round out three thousand miles, and the latter had only twenty and one half miles unto his finish, but their joy was mutual and complete, for that patch did increase in size yet more. And on that same day there were many Philistines abroad, for they had been cooped up unto the end of endurance. And they did ride in different vehicles, in dog carts, in four-in-hands, in victorias and phaetons, but the sun shone upon the just and the unjust alike, and their joy was even mutual and complete, for that patch grew unto enormous proportions yet more and more. And the wheelmen did ride through many streets, and as they drew nigh unto the park the latter wheelman spied two fair women whom he knew, riding in a dog cart afar off, and he said, "there go the maidens Fairweather, let us haste unto them." And they did spurt, but there were many vehicles, so they did follow close behind a swift-going carriage; but lo, the carriage suddenly slowed up and they were compelled to turn aside, for their momentum was great. And it came to pass at that moment that the two fair maidens who were in a phaeton came up with speed as of the wind, and the latter wheelman lacked but ten miles of his finish. His heart was filled with joy for a period of just two seconds by the clock, for at that moment, behold, his wheel collided with that of a stranger's vehicle, and his body was hurled with much force into the carriage and on to the pedal extremities of two fair but astonished occupants. Then behold the air was filled with lamentation and laughter, and the cycle kid was sore hurt in mind and body. And also the maidens Fairweather did snicker and giggle most unseemingly. The cycle kid waxeth much wroth if the affair is now spoken of.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

THROUGH the courtesy of Mr. R. D. Garden we are in receipt of photographs showing the start of the Pullman road race on last Decoration Day. This was the race in which there were seventy starters, the largest field ever started in America. We also received from the same source a photo. of the Hotel Florence, taken after the finish of the great race. They are both works of art, and interesting in the fact that they picture phases of one of the most important road races ever held in this country.

MR. G. S. ATWATER, Consul D. C. Division, made application to the Washington authorities to have the regulation relative to lamps repealed. The Commissioners refused to accede to the request.

A RICHMOND (VA.) exchange remarks that Crocker is in splendid trim and that "Rowe and Temple will have hard work to beat him"!! Evidently the "great news" has not reached Richmond yet. "On to Richmond!"

A COPY of the splendid photograph of the meet at Buffalo in September has been received from the artists, Hall & Co., of Buffalo. It is a wonderfully clear picture, the features of the most remote individual being distinct.

A REMARKABLE report appears in the Inquirer of Philadelphia. It is to the effect that four gentlemen of the Century Wheelmen succeeded in climbing Ford's Hill, Philadelphia, on forty-eight stars. That is exactly twelve stars to each man!!

WE hear that Mr. C. Richards Dodge and Mr. C. T. Chapman, artist, have been writing and sketching the historical points of interest between Gloucester, Mass., and Portsmouth, N. H., the results of which will shortly appear in print.

The Coventry Machinists' Co., Ld., Boston, Mass.:

Dear Sirs---Lately I have been out riding on the "SWIFT," and it has been seen and examined by nearly all the wheelmen in the city; they all had to try it (as a matter of course), and the result is that two of the boys wanted to trade their American Champions for a SWIFT Safety.

I must say that without exception every one that tried it pronounced it a perfect machine, easy running, light and very rigid; the chain adjustment, and hinges on mudguards, diamond frame, and the lamp, all strike the fancy of every one. None found any fault with it, something that is very unusual here, for whenever a new wheel makes its "debut" here it is at once pulled to pieces by criticism. Yours truly, W. H. RENAND, JR.

TAUNTON, Mass., Oct. 9th, 1888.

MESSRS. W. B. EVERETT & CO., Boston, Mass.:

Gentlemen—The Apollo Bicycle that I have ridden the last two years has been satisfactory to me in every respect. I consider, and have every reason to believe, it is the finest running, most reliable, easily adjusted, and contains more good qualities than any BICYCLE IN THE MARKET. In the last two years I have ridden in nineteen races, winning a prize in every race—twelve being firsts—including the Championship of Bristol County for 1887 and 1888. In that time it has not been repaired in the least, and I have had many long, tough rides, and used it daily about my business. When we see riders sending their wheels and parts of them to the repair shops, and often lose weeks of good riding, it makes the Apollo wheelmen in this city feel proud of their mount. Last week I had the bearings of my Apollo taken out and cleaned, and you could not wish for a better set. In regard to the words of Mr. Doane about the Apollo bicycle, I heartily indorse them all, for I know by experience with my wheel that he is speaking the truth.

Yours respectfully, E. C. ANTHONY, Taunton Bicycle Club.

IN the death of Charles C. Isaacs, of Baltimore, Md., which occurred last week, the League of American Wheelmen loses an earnest worker and a valuable member, while the Baltimore Club, whose Secretary he was, is deprived of the services of one of the most valuable officers it ever possessed.

A CORRESPONDENT, writing from Wichita, Kas., says: "This is the largest city in the State, and the Wichita Wheel Club is the largest in the State. Hereabouts at this season of the year the roads are almost perfect: we can ride twenty, thirty, or even fifty miles without a dismount being necessary. Those are the kind of roads we have."

"Good old" Wheeling is very much puffed up because, forsooth, the results of the Rowe Temple, so called, races have proved Rowe the better man and "Wheeling always insisted that it was so"!! We wonder what good old W. will say when they read of the cold and noxious fraud that has been perpetrated on us all? Alas, where will be their "I told you so" then?

CYCLISTS in this vicinity should be interested to know that Col. T. W. Higginson, late President of the Massachusetts Bicycle Club, is the candidate of the Democrats and Independents of the Fifth Mass. District, which includes the West End of Boston, Cambridge, Watertown, Waltham, Arlington, Lexington, Woburn, Somerville and Belmont; and besides being a cyclist, is a man who will be an honor to State, in Washington, where here and ah! men are needed.

ON Thursday evening, Oct. 25, the Milwaukee Wheelmen gave a lantern parade. A notable feature in the parade was a Japanese umbrella fully twelve feet in diameter with lanterns suspended at the ends of each rib. After the street show the club repaired to the club rooms and indulged in light refreshments. [We fear our Milwaukee friend intended the last sentence as a pun.—ED.] On Nov. 6, this same club will hold an open to all handicap road race over the Whitefield Bay Road.

THE Scranton (Pa.) Bicycle Club realizing that a home is the most substantial means of permanent existence, have purchased the lot No. 545 Washington avenue, and have entered into a contract for the erection of a building for a club house. The cost will be about $12,000, and for the purpose of raising funds to assist in paying for the property they have concluded to hold a fair in the Armory Building, commencing Monday, Nov. 26th, 1888, continuing during the week, under general management of Hon. R. H. McKune. F. H. Clemons, No. 422 Lackawanna avenue, Scranton, Pa., is Chairman.

A CURIOUS suit has been brought by Mrs. T. P. Heathe, of Saco, Me., against that city, for $5000 damages, on the following grounds: Some four weeks ago Mrs. Heathe was walking along Main street, Saco, and while on the sidewalk of that street was run into and knocked down by a young man from Ohio, who was visiting his brother in Saco, the Rev. O. W. Waldron. She claims that she received injuries from which she will never fully recover. The city will raise the defence that the claim for damages should be made against the rider, and we think the city of Saco is correct, and if we are advised correctly that Waldron was on the sidewalk, we hope he will be made to suffer the consequences.

FROM Memphis, Tenn., a correspondent writes: "We are rather slow in this section of the country, but we propose to have lots of fun and keep up the wheeling interest here all winter by giving a series of road races every two or three weeks. The first prize is to be a handsome medal, and must be won three times before it becomes the property of any one man. Other prizes will be given for the second man in each race. The entrance fee is to be 50 cents for each event. We have eight good roads leading out of Memphis and the leading ten-mile pike is especially good for road racing. If our experiment of short races awakens sufficient interest we will give a thirty or a fifty mile road race before the winter season is past."

DR. FRED L. JOHNSON has presented a gold badge or medal to the Wichita (Kas.) Wheelmen to be contested for each year by the members of the club. The contest consists of a one-mile race, winner to wear medal for one year, and if won by any member three consecutive times it becomes his personal property. The medal was designed by Dr. Johnson, and is quite unique. It consists of a scroll with "champion" written upon it; pendant from this is an oxidized silver handle-bar, from which hangs a monogram, "W. W.," hanging also from the handle-bar is a sunflower, the centre of which is of gold with a very dark alloy, while the petals are bright yellow gold. The pin, with the exception of the silver handle-bar, is solid gold.

POSTPONEMENT BERKELEY CLUB RACES.

OWING to heavy rains and great counter-attractions in the city of New York last Saturday, the management postponed the races which were to be held at Morris Dock Oval Oct. 27th to Nov. 6th, election day, at 2.30 sharp.

TANDEM BICYCLE RECORD BY THE BANKER BROS.

THE Banker brothers, of Pittsburg, lately made an excellent record for the mile on a tandem bicycle. The course is on the Forbes street road, and the distance, it is claimed, has been measured three or four times. [We would like to know by what means it was measured.—ED.] Several watches were held on them and they gave the time at 2.41 1-5. The best previous time is 2.44 1-4, made by Davis and Crist at Hartford.

SAFETY RECORDS.

S. G. WHITTAKER went for the fifty-mile safety record a couple of weeks ago on the Coventry track, but cramps took him at 29 miles, and he had to stop. The only records he succeeded in capturing were as follows:

20 miles - - - - - -	1.15.28 2-5
27 miles - - - - - -	1.48.58 1-5
28 miles - - - - - -	1.22.26 3-5

Henry Sturmey held the watch.

SAFETY TANDEM ROAD RECORD.

On Saturday afternoon, Oct 13, two successful attempts to lower existing records for fifty miles were made on the Great North Road, the course being from near Peterborough, via Kate's Cabin, to Hitchin. The riders were Messrs. Dan Albone, of the North Road Club, and E. E. Glover, of the Bath Road Club, on an "Ivel" tandem safety bicycle, and Mr. R. Tingey, of the North Road Club, on an "Ivel" tricycle. Favored by the north wind, the tandem crew completed the fifty miles in 2h. 52m. 3s., thus beating the record made by Albone and Tingey the previous Tuesday by 7m. 35s. On the same date the went. Tingey demolished Syd. Lee's long-standing tricycle record by making the distance in 3h. 2m. 44. The times were taken by Mr. A. J. Wilson, president of the North Road Club.

ROAD RACE AT PHILADELPHIA.

THE long impending ten mile road race, between W. Charles Furnelton and Harry Mayer, of the Pennsylvania Bicycle Club, was run yesterday afternoon (28 ult.) over the course on the Lancaster Pike, from Wayne to the new toll gate, in rain and mud; but despite the fact that the road was heavy, the contestants made good time. From Wayne to Villa Nova the two stayed well together, but there Furnelton pulled out, and paced by Jos. Learnan he came into the finish in 39 1-5 minutes, Mayer crossing the line in 42 4-5 minutes. Furnelton thus wins the $25 gold medal, and established his claim as to being the faster man of the two. The racers were a sight on their return to the club house, being streaked with mud from top to toe. Both rode safeties. ARIEL.

CHAMPIONSHIP BICYCLE RACING AT QUEENS, N. Y.

THE bicycle races for the championship of Queens, under the auspices of the Queens Amateur Athletic Club, Brooklyn, N. Y., came to a close on the last day of this month. The conditions were that contestants reside within one mile of the Queens bicycle track and be members of the Amateur Athletic Club. The prizes are: Gold medal to first, silver (or bronze) to second, and bronze to third. Distance one-half mile, flying start. Some good work has been done by the contestants, as the following record shows: September 29, C. H. Alliger, Queens A. A. C., 1.38 1-5; September 22, G. T. Boyce, Creedmoor, 1.43 3-5; September 29, J. M. Kissam, Queens A. A. C., 1.45; October 22, L. L. Doughty, Jr., Creedmoor, 1.45 3-5; September 29, R. A. Kissam, Queens, 1.45; October 15, John F. Klien, Creedmoor, 1.58 1-2.

A NOVEL RACE.

WHAT is probably the first race of its kind on record will be contested on Thanksgiving Day, at the Annual Fall Games and Burlesque Exhibitions of the Prospect Harriers, on the club grounds, Washington Park, So. Brooklyn. The contestants in the race will be Messrs. J. H. Mellor, (wheelman); S. T. Freeth, (runner) and O. E. Paynter, (walker). The distance will be four miles for the wheelman, three miles for the runner and two miles for the walker, the man finishing first wins the race and a valuable gold medal. Among other events on the programme is a two mile bicycle race, handicap, under L. A. W. laws, the prizes are handsome gold and silver medals. Entries, which must be accompanied by a fee of fifty cents, will be received by J. J. Schoeffer, Brooklyn B. C., or the Secretary, Geo. Paynter, 332 First street, Brooklyn, on the Saturday preceding Thanksgiving.

The Prospect Harriers have lately leased the grounds and track formerly occupied by the defunct Nassau A. C., and will spare no expense to make their quarter mile cinder track the finest in the vicinity.

ANOTHER TIE.

THE second attempt to decide the Eastern Road Club race last Thursday proved abortive, and the question as to which club must hold the cup until next season is still an open question. According to mutual agreement, and in consequence of the sad death of McCombie, the Dorchester and Cambridgeport men decided to run the tie off with two men each of the original teams. Referee Emery therefore ordered the teams to be on hand at 2.30 Thursday, Oct. 25, at the Faneuil House, Brighton, and ride over the same course. The teams presented by the clubs were: Cambridgeport—F. E. Carman, C. E. Fay; Dorchester—J. P. Clark, A. P. Benson.

At precisely 2.40 the word "go" was given the men, and Carman began to race away, but the others hung on to him in great shape until Newton Centre was reached, and there Fay took a header. He turned to come back but his friends urged him to continue, which he did, finishing some fifty minutes behind the others.

In the meantime Carman, Clark and Benson stuck together until Clark took a header, and through this mishap Carman got a lead of nearly a quarter of a mile. Clark's handle-bar was bent and it interfered with his leg every time the pedal came up, but notwithstanding this fact he managed to give Carmen a good race, so that the latter had all he wanted to hold his lead. Clark led Benson, who was riding a plucky race on a Swift safety.

The result was: Carmen, first, 1.37; Clark, second, 1.37 3-4; Benson, third, 1.38; Fay, fourth, 2.20. Thus it proved a tie again, each club scoring five points.

SAFETY TANDEM RECORDS.

AT Paddington Recreation Grounds, on Monday afternoon, Oct. 15, Dan Albone and E. E. Glover made a successful attempt to reduce records up to 20 miles, on a tandem safety bicycle, the previous record being 1h. 5min. 55s., made by Albone and Mills on the same track last May. Mr. A. J. Wilson was the timekeeper, and the machine ridden was the same light roadster "Ivel" upon which Albone and Glover had beaten the 50 miles road-record the previous Saturday. In the result, the previous 20 miles record was lowered by 3m. 38 2-5s., the mile times will all stand as records for tandem bicycles:

"PIG ALLEY HILL."

NOT a euphonious name by any means, but it is a good "companion piece" to Murder Lane Hill, and so we rest content. Now the hill-climbing fiend is never so happy as when he has discovered a hill that no fellow can ride, and so the Springfield, Mass., men are elated over the fact that "Pig Alley" has never been surmounted. We learn from the Union that:

"A survey of the hill has been made by F. H. Smith of the city engineer's office and these are the figures. The climbing distance is 275 feet and for the first 100 feet the rise averages six feet in 100. The ascent then becomes a very steep one, the rise averaging one foot in every five. This makes the hill one of the steepest in the country, and whoever surmounts it will win an enviable record as a hill climber."

EASTERN ROAD CLUB TIE.

THE tie in the race of the Eastern Road Club, between the Dorchester and Cambridgeport Clubs, is hereby ordered to be run off on Thursday, Nov. 8th, 1888, start from Faneuil House at 2.30 P. M., sharp, over same course as before. L. A. W. rules to govern, as far as they apply to road racing. Time limit of 30 minutes between the finish of the first and last man. WM. H. EMERY, Referee.

REMOVAL OF THE SPRINGFIELD BICYCLE CO'S HEADQUARTERS AND FACTORY.

THE factory of this firm has been removed from Worcester, Mass., to Highlandville, Mass. It will be our pleasant duty to visit the Springfield Bicycle Co. in their new quarters at Highlandville, and we will tell our readers what we find. The office of this same firm has also been removed from No. 9 Cornhill to 178 Columbus avenue, Boston, Mass.

MR. JUSTICE'S CHALLENGE.

Editor Bicycling World: I challenge any resident bicyclist of the Eastern Shores of Maryland and Virginia to compete in the bicycle races, to be held under the auspices of the Pocomoke Fair Association, at Pocomoke City, Md., November 9th, 1888, best two out of three, mile heats, for the championship of the Eastern Shores of Maryland and Virginia. I shall ride on said occasion, and, if victorious, shall claim that honor. JOHN H. JUSTICE.

CONINGSBY RODE AN "ORDINARY ROAD WHEEL."

Editor Bicycling World: In your issue of the 26th inst. you quote Mr. Wells as saying that the machine with which I made my record on Eagle Rock Hill had 8 5-16-inch cranks. In order to correct this misstatement, and in justice to myself and the machine, I beg to inform you that my mount was a regular stock Victor safety, weighing 51 pounds, geared to 48 inches, and having regular cranks with 6 to 6 3-4 inch throw. This wheel is the same that I have been riding all this year, and it has been ridden up Eagle Rock Hill a total of forty-seven times. Yours truly. FRED CONINGSBY.

"STOP THIEF."

Editor Bicycling World: Last Monday evening a young man called at the club house of the Washington Cycle Club and introduced himself as a member of the Ramblers Club of Buffalo, stating that he had been the guest of the Ramblers Club of Baltimore, from which city he had just arrived. He gave his name as Crocker, and claimed to be a League member. The usual courtesies were extended, and as he said that he expected to be in the city for a few days he was invited to make the club house his headquarters. He called at the club house several times during the week, and yesterday (Oct. 25) went to the wheel room and stole a safety bicycle belonging to Mr. W. G. Kent, one of the members. He also broke into several of the lockers and secured a number of articles, among them a valuable violin and a cornet. Since then nothing has been seen of him. The machine stolen was a "Psycho" safety, nearly new, finished in black enamel and striped in blue. The following is a description of the thief: About five feet ten or eleven inches tall, heavy build; round, smooth face; hair, light color, short and kinky; eyes, small and light blue or grey; weight, about 180 pounds. He wore light clothing (grey), light flannel shirt with blue crossed stripes, and a "cigarette" hat. He also gave the name of Mackie to his landlady. Wheelmen and dealers are requested to be on the lookout for the thief, and if anything is learned of his whereabouts to immediately communicate with the undersigned.

GEORGE S. ATWATER,
Chief Consul D. C. Division L. A. W.
1206 Penns. Ave., Washington, Oct. 26th, 1888.

[This evidently is the same festive youth who has been making free with other people's property at Buffalo, N. Y., Bradford, Pa., and other places, as reported in our last issue. Look out for him. Later advices also state that he victimized the Ramblers Club, of Baltimore, in the "usual way." We hear that the safety stolen from the Washington men has been found at a pawnshop, where the gay thief had put it up for $25.—ED.]

HE ACKNOWLEDGES COURTESY.

Editor Bicycling World: Will you kindly permit me to acknowledge through the WORLD, my obligations to Consul Taber and the wheelmen of Pawling, for their courteous treatment during my summer sojurn here. In a region seldom visited by wheelmen and meagrely described in road books, you need the guiding experience of a veteran like Consul Taber to make riding enjoyable.

The tendency seems now to complain of the League, but I affirm that if the League offered no other advantages, the Consuls' aid and experience would more than repay the trifling expense of membership. Respectfully, J. M. A., L. A. W. 17808.
Pawling, N. Y., Oct. 8, 1888.

RHYMES WRITTEN ON THE OCCASION OF A RIDER'S MISFORTUNE.

TO "F. C."

"WHILE riding with several friends, a few days since, I was run into by a cycler and thrown from my wheel, the result being that that part of my uniform, which is at times hidden by the saddle, was torn into shreds.

Now the above, though an accident, was, fortunately, more laughable than serious. A friend hearing of the disaster, composed the following lines and sent same to me, together with a piece of cloth. The lines are as follows:"

We all have read of famous rides,
How men won honor, fame and brides,
Another's added to the list,
But here no gain: a part is missed.

With wishes kind accept this patch,
Sincerely hoping it will match,
And help you walk with careless grace,
No anxious look upon your face.

If this insert, with stitches neat,
Again you'll nimbly use your feet,
And turn the wheels of fortune fickle,
That tried to turn you from your Cycle.

[Our poetical friend raises cain with the pronunciation of "cycle," but making a large allowance for poetical license, we let it pass.—ED.]

PENNSYLVANIA SIGN BOARDS AND PHILADELPHIA STREETS.

Editor Bicycling World: I have a few little items which may interest some of our members, so send them herewith.

On paying a short visit to Bucks County, Pennsylvania (at New Hope on the Delaware), I was much pleased to see the style of sign boards that county has adopted. They are of iron, with the name of the place in raised letters, and a finger at one end indicating direction. Between the name and the finger a slot is provided so that the proper figure for the distance may be slid in. By this means a number of signs may be made exactly alike, the numbers being put in afterwards, thus saving much expense. They are very durable, and the people are much pleased with them. The letters are painted white and the balance of the sign is black, so that even on a dark night the name can be easily read. The invention is patented by a Bucks County (Pa.) man. I was unable to learn his name, but will endeavor to find out and let you know, as I think they should be generally introduced.

Gradual improvements are being made in the roads in this section of the country. Work will be begun next spring on the new Telford road from Philadelphia to Media, which will be a great boon to cyclists. I hope the intention is to continue it to West Chester. If possible I think it should be so arranged with the management that no toll shall be charged for cycles.

Passing through Chester, Pa., yesterday over our good friend, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, I noticed that Madison street, from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad station down toward the river, has been paved with asphalt blocks. Another street parallel is being paved with Belgian block, so it looks as if the howling wilderness of cobbles, with which Chester abounds, is at last to be replaced with good pavements.

Philadelphia is slowly taking up the cobblestones, and has passed an ordinance that no new streets shall be paved with them. Twenty-first street has been laid with sheet asphalt from South street to Arch, a distance of nine squares, and another square or so of asphalt has been put down on North Broad street, making a stretch of eight squares. But what we need is an asphalt pavement south of this on Broad street, from Columbia avenue to Market street and the City Hall. The Associated Clubs of Philadelphia were supposed to have been pushing this scheme through City Councils, but they seem to have been singularly inactive about it. This pavement on Broad street would do more than anything else to create a boom in cycling here, as people could then ride to the heart of the city from the suburbs, instead of having to go a round-about route via Fairmount Park, Twenty-second street and Filbert street. The number of cyclists in the city would also be largely increased by the asphalt on Broad street.

I am glad to notice that you are devoting more space to accounts of tours and runs than to racing. It seems to me that touring and the improvement of the roads are the real aims and work of the L. A. W., and our paper should be devoted chiefly to these objects.
Philadelphia. No. 3403 L. A. W.

AT the risk of being thought tedious, I am going to call attention once more to that monument of labor, "XM. Miles on a Bicycle," by Karl Kron. He has just issued a pamphlet containing the newspaper criticisms of his book, and this pamphlet is a curiosity in its way. He does not sort out the tally from the notices and keep back the rest. On the contrary he flings in everything, the vinegar along with the sugar, the worst kind of "sass" along with the most fulsome praise, and the result is worth the attention of all wheelmen. You can get a copy of this pamphlet by writing for it, and it will help you pass away a spare hour and interest you. As for the book itself, I think the author has not received the encouragement from wheelmen that he should have. As a work of reference and a history of the cycling movement it is invaluable, and the information it gives can hardly be obtained from any other source. The price, $2, ought not to be grudged by any wheelman who cares to know about the beginnings that have made ours the sport it is.

BICYCLING IN BELGIUM.—I.
BY CLERICUS.

IT seemed like an indignity to my gentle-footed Facile to see her crated like an ordinary brute and lowered so into the hold of the Waesland, while steaming out of New York Bay. She was none the worse, however, for her thirteen days' passage through purgatory, and it must have seemed to her only the necessary road to paradise, for when she set foot again on terra firma it was in the floral quadrangle of the Hotel San Antoine, at Antwerp. If so, her illusion was doomed to bitter disappointment, for this old city is no paradise for either cycles or cyclers. Belgium is paved from circumference to centre with the omnipresent Belgian blocks, and the books of the Cyclist Touring Club of England describe them as unrideable. American riders, however, are less exacting in their demands for good roads, and I was determined I would ride the Belgian highways or know the reason why.

The law of compensation is well illustrated in the benefit of even these roads, in the extraordinary weather prevailing here as well as elsewhere on the continent. While still in Mid Atlantic we entered the rain area, in which rain has fallen daily for the last three months. We landed in Antwerp at night in the rain; we slept and waked and still it rained; for two days and nights more I have waited in vain for a rainless sky. But between hours the Belgian block streets have been a ready thoroughfare, and after a few minutes' pounding I reached the asphalt boulevards that belt the city with their semi-circle on the line of its former ramparts. I have thus been able to see Antwerp, the old and the new city, in a way that nothing but my wheel would enable me to do. Only by roving to and fro and exploring both its wide and elegant boulevards and close, narrow streets, more crooked than those of Boston, can one appreciate alike its rare antiquity and its wondrous growth of two hundred thousand in fifty years.

My enforced leisure gave me opportunity for studying the road maps forwarded me through the courtesy of S. A. Stead, Chief Consul of the Foreign Division of the C. T. C., and also for exploring more thoroughly this queer and quaint old Flemish fortress. After visiting the many points of interest to tourists, I climbed the spiral stairway of the grand old Cathedral spire. It was like toiling upward in the night, but it brought me out as near to heaven as one cares to be while still in the flesh. There in the narrow gallery, where the last pinnacle shoots upward with graceful flight, I was joined by several American chemical students from the Boston Polytechnic, on their way to Munich for a supplementary course. By means of my glasses we viewed together the grand panorama which they declared was worth crossing the Atlantic only to behold it. Far to the north, at the mouth of the river Schelde, which stretched in serpentine coils from our feet to the far off sea, we had glimpses of the spires of Flushing, sixty miles away by water, lifted like fingers to say the city was there. There far to the southward the bold tower of the cathedral at Malines loomed up in the mist like a giant, waiting with his mace to shatter the poor cyclers who might come his way. Underneath us was spread out the city, divided by its twelve miles of green ramparts from the rich meadow lands of the broad campaign, with its red roofed farmhouses, its fields of varying green, from vivid to dark, and its straight, far-reaching rows of linden and poplar trees, indicating the course of the canals. A more beautiful landscape, imagination cannot conceive.

From this lofty vantage ground we identified the several places within the city already visited. Yonder were the Museum Galleries, the ancient and the modern, made especially resplendant in the one case by the genius of Reubens and Van Dyck in this, the home of their works, and in the other by many masterpieces of modern artists. To the eastward was the unfinished tower of the church of St. Jacques, with its rich windows and splendid interior garnishing. Nearer was the new Bourse, where an hour before, the hum of the crowds of brokers, that blackened its marble area, rose to the galleries above like the roar of breakers from the sea. The suggestion is apt, for doubtless many a wreck is made in that seething sea of speculation. Further away was the fine Zoological Garden, open only to its members and to visiting strangers, while below it a little way, was the small but beautiful Parc, with its drives, walks, lakes, fountains and flowers. Quite near at hand, amid the red and gray tiled roofs and stepped gables of the older part of the town, was the Morelus-Plantain Museum, that "Paradise of printers," illustrated so appreciatively in the June number of the Century magazine. Just underneath us, at the river front, on the west, were the new quays, a wide swathe of the old city being cut away to make room for them. The only building left in this merciless path of modern improvement is the ragged old Inquisition Building, now a Museum of Antiquities, with its dark, damp dungeons sunk lower than the river bed.

Being near the hour of three we waited there on the spire to hear the chimes of the ninety-nine bells in the belfry below us. Bending over the balustrade and looking downward from the dizzy height, suddenly the peals of music broke forth, and we had the novel experience of having it to rise and fill our ears with the ravishing strains to which we had listened so often in the streets underneath. So great was our height that even the huge body of the cathedral was dwarfed to the dimensions of a music box set going to amuse us. What wonder the citizens of Antwerp love these chimes so dearly, now for centuries falling in ever recurring streams of music, like airs from the choir of heaven. Not even for the one greatest masterpiece of Reubens' adorning the interior of the Cathedral, "The Descent From the Cross," would the Antwerpians exchange their beloved bells. With a farewell view of city and country, not failing to mark the gray line of the road southward toward Malines, which is to be my course of travel on the morrow, I descended from the sky to the ground once more, and soon was lost again in the labyrinths of the queer, quaint and crooked old streets of this mediæval city.

A MONTH ago John Mason, of the Illinois Cycle Club, who rides a Veloce Columbia, made a go at the 24-hour record, and scored, without great effort, 218 miles. A week later F. E. Spooner, of the Lincoln Cycle Club, on a Victor bicycle, raised the peg to 231 miles. On Wednesday, the 24th of October, Frank Riggs, of Chicago, on a 51-inch Columbia Light Roadster, finished with 240 1-2 miles to his credit; on the 25th Oct. John Mason made the second attempt, covering 277 miles within 24 hours. The bicycle which was ridden by Mr. Mason at both attempts has been ridden by him over 6500 miles, including nearly a dozen centuries.

LEAGUE HEADQUARTERS:

12 Pearl Street, - - - - Room 27.

ABBOT BASSETT, Secretary.

INDICATIONS point to an assault on the Liberty Bill by the horsemen of New York. "Wheelmen are a nuisance in Central Park," says Joe Howard, and he voices the opinion of those who drive fast horses. The League must work to keep what it has gained, no less hard than it worked to gain it. And it should be a part of the League's duty to regulate the action of these thoughtless wheelmen who call forth by their thoughtlessness such remarks as that made by Joe Howard. If wheelmen do not make "nuisances" of themselves, the fact can readily be shown to the Legislature, but one reckless wheelmen can do much to prejudice the cause by putting weapons into the hands of the enemy. Let it be known that hoodlums awheel incur penalties from the League, and even the horsemen will have respect for our organization.

THE Rowe-Temple fraud suggests the the need of some regulation for professional cycling. Had there been some strong organization behind professionals, with the power to enforce penalties, it is not likely that the fraud would have been perpetrated, and in the event of its occurence some punishment would have been meted out that would be more effective than the clamor which is now going up, for the public is fickle and both parties to the fraud will be reinstated in the popular affection after a few months have buried their wrong-doing. The League has no power over professionals, and it is not inclined to assume it. It may, however, shut them out from amateur race meetings, or it may let only those come in who can be depended upon for fair dealing. It will be better for the sport when professional racing is managed with as strong a hand as base ball now is. It is not for the League to do this. Had the A. C. U. been properly managed here it would have found a good field to work in, and it would have been successful.

OUR friend, the editor, he who sits at the other end of this sheet, had an honest word of condemnation lately for those who announce that races will be run under L. A. W. racing rules and then change the rules to suit their own whims or convenience. The criticism is a just one because there is no necessity for the practice. The racing rules are made for the common good of manager and contestant. It is well to have the terms of any contract down in black and white, for then there can be no disagreement that cannot be settled by an appeal to the document. When races are announced to be run under L. A. W. rules there can be no legal nor moral right to change them except in the manner made and provided by the rules themselves. If the managers of the Buffalo tournament made a change in the rule which defines a novice it was certainly not a novice race. If it was called so the contestants had a legal and a moral right to claim that it should be run under the League rule relating thereto. If the terms of the rule were changed then the race should have been called by another name, and the managers should have complied with Rule 33, which reads: "Any club that places upon its lists of events a race of different nomenclature than those given above, must print upon the programme of the day a rule to define the race, that the officials and the contestants may clearly understand the conditions of the contest." To our mind the prize in the second novice race at Buffalo was improperly awarded.

Maryland Lamp Movement.

At the regular meeting of the R. C. C. held October 13th, 1888, the following resolution was passed and I was instructed to send you a copy of same for publication in the L. A. W. Bulletin:

"Resolved: That this club heartily endorses the action of the Board of Officers and the circular of the Chief Consul of the Maryland Division L. A. W. in reference to the carrying of lamps at night and pledges its support in this movement."

Michigan Division Board of Officers Meeting.

At the September meeting of the Board of Officers of the Michigan Division Mr. Junius E. Beal of Ann Arbor, was elected Delegate to the National Assembly, Mr. Wm. Scarlett, Saginaw, was elected Auditor for the ensuing year. Fraternally,

A. B. RICHMOND, Chief Consul.

To Members of Michigan Division.

The revised Constitution of the L. A. W. changes the time of expiration of membership tickets from Dec. 31st to June 30th. This will cause a period of six months, from January 1st to July 1st, 1889, to elapse during which the national body will receive no revenue from its members, while they continue to enjoy the privileges of membership.

To carry on an organization of the magnitude of the League requires considerable funds, and to allow a period of six months to elapse without revenue would materially cripple its resources. The Board of Officers have not ordered an assessment, but have left the matter to the intelligence and generosity of the individual members. Several of the Divisions have already contributed 50 cents per member, and it now remains for the Michigan Division members to fall in line and show that they can be equally generous.

Remittances postage stamps accepted) should be made to the undersigned before October 31st, as the committee wish to make their report to the Treasurer of the L. A. W. on that date. Yours fraternally,

P. N. JACOBSEN,
Chairman.

APPLICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP.

The following is a list of applications for membership received up to date, and published in accordance with Article III. of the Constitution, which is as follows:

"Any amateur wheelman, in good standing, eighteen years of age or over, shall, with the indorsement of two League members in good standing, or of three reputable citizens of the United States or Canada, be eligible to membership in this League upon payment of an initiation fee of one dollar, and such dues for the year as may be provided for in the By-Laws. Upon the approval of the Board of Officers, or a committee thereof, two weeks after the publication of the name in a list of candidates in the official organ of the League, the applicant shall become a member."

Tickets will be issued seventeen days after the publication of names.

Candidates will please notice if their names and addresses are correct.

Members are requested to examine carefully these lists as they are published, and to report errors and omissions to the Secretary. In order that no objectionable person may unite with the League, members are given the right to protest, but such protest must be received by the Secretary within two weeks from the date of publication, and contain specific charges so far as it is possible to make them. All such communications will be considered confidential.

The application list is closed at 12 M. on the Monday preceding day of publication. All applications received after that hour must go over to the list of the following week.

We didn't lend these bicycles. The riders bought them to win on.

Yes, 21 is a large percentage of the events, but what we call your attention is that the bicycles were the same as we sell to riders; not racers, made to win races, and entirely different from roadsters. If you want a racer buy it or borrow it of those who make racers. We make Roadsters, and make them to "get there." Racing bicycles bear little relation to roadsters.

MEDINA, N. Y., Oct. 5th, 1888.
SPRINGFIELD BICYCLE MFG. CO., Boston, Mass.:

Dear Sirs—In May last I purchased a Springfield Roadster, and since that time I have ridden as many miles as any rider in the country, and over every kind of road. I have ridden up sandy hills and down steep stony ones. I have ridden over rails and off of curbings; in short, my Springfield Roadster will take me almost anywhere in safety. It takes but little effort to propel it.

Respectfully, NEIL F. POSSON,

"I know from experience that for comfort and ease, long distance riding, over good or rough roads, it is the best bicycle made." C. D. MCINTOSH, Salem, Ind.

"My wheel works very nicely and has never got out of order." JOHN S. COFF, Coldwater, Mich.

BOSTON, 9 NOVEMBER, 1888.

NOTICE TO BOSTON WHEELMEN.

IT has come to our knowledge that the Superintendent of the Boston reservoir is seriously considering the advisability of forbidding the drives of the reservoir to wheelmen. The reason given is that certain habitues of that part of the reservoir known as the rendezvous have been complained of by decent people for using insulting remarks on and in the hearing of passers by. We have had occasion heretofore to call attention to the disgraceful actions of certain individuals in human form, who have brought shame on the name of cycler by insulting respectable people who have had the misfortune to pass the "rendezvous" when the aforesaid brutes have been in attendance there.

Now we know that these disgraces to human nature do not read the WORLD or any other decent paper, and we therefore know that the probable consequences of their low horse play will not be made apparent to them through the columns of any paper. We therefore urge on our readers the necessity of keeping a sharp look out for these creatures, and we hope every decent wheelman will feel called upon to enter a vigorous protest in case they hear or see anything coming from these animals that is likely to offend decent people. If the protest takes the form of physical chastisement we should not weep. This much we want to say: that if the reservoir is closed to wheelmen it will be a lasting and humiliating disgrace to the sport and to Boston wheelmen.

THE English cycling press is unanimous in their condemnation of the Rowe-Temple fake. It is a rehash of what has already appeared in these columns, spiced with a few personal comments on the affair. Wheeling directs its heaviest artillery at Morgan, while Bi. News thumps Rowe with the heaviest end of the club. Now that the "last county" has been heard from let us bury the unclean body and tread down firmly the earth that covers the coffin of professionalism.

THE SCORCHER.

CHARM'D by the sweet and melodious notes
Pour'd from a score of feather'd throats,
Breathing the hay's delicious scent
As through the fields my course I bent:
Far down the road I chanc'd to spy
A man, on a wheel that seemed to fly.
As past where I stood, like a rocket he went,
I saw on his face a look so intent:
A look full of pain and anxious haste,
That seem'd to say, "no time must I waste."
For, blind and deaf to nature's display,
With downcast eyes he sped on his way.
"It must be a case of life and death,"
I said to myself, with bated breath:
"At the door of Death some dear one's laid,
And he doth haste for medical aid.
Oh fly thou wheel, with the wings of the wind,
That he that aid may speedily find,
And again to health that lov'd one restore
Hasten, I pray thee, beg and implore!"

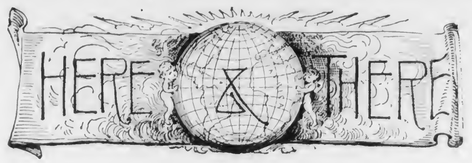
* * * * * * * * * * *

Alas my friends, 'twas all a mistake,
He was only trying a record to break,
He rode like a fool, and never once stopp'd
Till, his heart giving out, from his wheel he dropp'd,
And gave up the ghost on the ground where he lay.
But he beat Pa. 'n and three seconds, they say!

WILLIAM D. KEMPTON.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

IN the Common Pleas Court at Providence, R. I., last week, State, Benj. H. Child, complainant, vs. Patrick H. Collins, the jury returned a verdict of guilty. This is the case in which Mr. Wm. M. Leavitt, a bicycle rider of Providence, is interested. While riding on his machine on his proper side of the road he was run down by Collins, who was driving an express wagon, overthrown, his wrist injured so that he was incapacitated for work for some time, and his wheel slightly damaged. In the Sixth District Court, Collins, who had no case, as far as his act went, was fined $5 and costs, and appealed. In the Common Pleas Court the acting City Solicitor was unprepared to furnish full precedents of decisions made in this country as to the claim by a bicycle to be considered a vehicle with corresponding right on the highway, Judge Wilbur, however, gave a pro forma decision that a bicycle is a vehicle, and the case proceeded, the jury readily finding Collins guilty. Sentence is deferred pending decision of the Supreme Court on the main points involved.



BICYCLE RACING AND ITS EFFECTS.

IT is very generally admitted, and by the highest authorities, that the bicycle properly used is not only one of the most delightful means of exercise but conducive to good health, which, of course, means good digestion, good spirits, healthy, sound sleep, strong, well developed muscles, good appetite, and in fact everything that goes to compose a first-class bodily make-up, all of which tends to make physical and mental life happy and desirable.

Is it not to be deplored by every lover of the wheel that this most exhilarating sport should be brought down to such a degrading level as racing? As an enthusiastic lover of and rider of the bicycle, I have been (not an interested spectator) a witness to the coarse and profane talk at the so-called "tournaments" and "races." I have known of the "put up jobs" in the way of betting, and other unbecoming conduct that has stamped this whole business of racing as of the vilest. I have yet to learn that the "best rider" is he who goes the fastest. I have frequently heard some wheelmen boast of the large number of "nasty headers" they took in a certain race; others glory in a sprained ankle or a broken collar bone, or may be a mashed head. These things may suit a certain class of hoodlum wheelmen, but I am not accustomed to associate such in my mind with fine riders, however rapid they may ride or what their "record" may be. There is altogether too much "crookedness" connected with these racing events, too much bitter feeling engendered, and last, but by no means least, too utter disregard for life and health to commend such doings to the better class of wheelmen.

WM. B. STOCKWELL,
Millbury, Mass. L. A. W. No. 17,102.

WILL the lady "scorchers" kindly send in their records for 1888? We have one as a starter, Miss Maggie Kirkwood claims 1800 miles as her record so far this season. Next, if you please!!

NEW YORK.

"HAWKSHAW."

THE trouble with most of the puritanical class of club reformers is their misunderstanding of the basis of all club laws, which is formulated as being that which accomplishes "the greatest good for the greatest number." The error of the reformers is that their egotism causes them always to believe that their greatest number is number one, and they proceed to legislate and reform for their own convenience, while at the same time they fill the air with lamentations at the iniquity of their fellow club men, which they declare, with the tears of sanctity in their eyes, to be the sole cause of their restrictive and hide-bound reformatory enactments. Some day there will be an explosion, and somebody will get hurt, as a result of the maudlin rule that is now seeking to run things in this back century style in our oldest city wheel club, and when it does come I have an idea that those real, real wicked, young club men, who are the especial antipathy of the old woman brigade, will know something about the cause of the explosion, and will not be among the injured when the smoke of conflict clears away. Old women, unlike young ones, seldom take hints, and I suppose these cycling grannies do not differ in this respect from their aged prototypes elsewhere, so that this jeremiad is, in all probability, wasted upon their antique brains, but it's true for all that, and in the near future perhaps it may be proven to be prophetic too.

"WHAT'S all this Liberty Bill about, anyway?" asked the new member at the club the other evening, after an unusually flattering testimonial, regarding its benefits, on the part of one of the "old guard." "Why, don't you know?" queried the o. g. man. "No, I don't," answered the new member. "Well," replied the o. g. man, "it simply allows us to pedal in the park without a license, that's all," and with a wail like the gruesome graik of the jabberwock, or the soulful song of the spotsome frog, the club cat fled through the open door, and the wail of his wimpled woe re-echoed through ghoulsome gloom of the coal hole.

ON Monday night the New York Club held their semi-annual meeting. Being the first official gathering in their new quarters it was made quite a gala event. The Building Committee formally turned over the club house to the club, after which ceremony the House Committee endeared themselves to all by inviting the members to a spread. The newly enlarged club orchestra, under the leadership of Oscar Lee Moses, sent sweet strains of harmony throughout the cosy house, in a manner that would have caused Amelie Rives to say, was "like unto the swaling swirl of the soughful wind, as the gust goes glooring by," or something or other like that, equally expressive of her ideas of tuneful melody, well rendered.

UNDER the promise of the strictest secrecy, which promise I am now proceeding to keep inviolate, I was, a few days since, shown a corset especially adapted for ladies who go in for athletic work and, as in the case of cycling, desire to retain their natty appearance without a complete sacrifice of form. It was very short, very shapely, yellow in color, all bound with pinkings of scarlet leather, and has, so the young saleswoman who exhibited it informed me, only five steels—one in front, one on each hip and one each side of the lacing in the back. I hope I have got these technical details all correct, as I am sure that this was the way she explained them to me. By some peculiar process the leather is exquisitely moulded and shaped, whereby the need of seams is avoided, and yet it is so pliable and adjustable as to make it particularly adapted to the use of athletically inclined ladies, and it is from this fact that I am induced to betray the confidence bestowed upon me, and have concluded to make my knowledge public property in this column, for the benefit of such as it may concern.

IT is given out on first-class authority that Mrs. Langtry will adopt the woman's bicycle as a means of gaining health and advertisement, while at the same time it brings her a loss of weight. It seems very strange that in this, like many other advancements of a radical order, that the women of America should calmly wait until some far-seeing sister of theirs, often a theatrical one too, as in the present case, less careful of the mutterings of Mrs. Grundy than themselves, breaks loose from the leash of conventionalism, and adopts some new, and hence apparently startling, fad or fashion, and then, when having served the purposes of these pioneers, it is thrown away, then rush in and fight for the honor of adopting it. I suppose it will be this way with the woman's bicycle. After Miss Hall and Mrs. Langtry have exhausted it as a medium for calling to themselves the attention of the public, and having, therefore, no further use for it, will have supplanted it for something newer and more startling, that then, and not till then, will the Miss Prudes and Miss Prims of society here, who the whole time have been eyeing the performance with envy from afar, consent to step down and take it up as a find of their own, completely ignoring all knowledge of the performances of its fair discoverers, because, forsooth, they were actresses, or some other equally brilliant argument of a society woman. Till all of this has happened I do not look for any material increase in the use of the bicycle here by those women who claim to hold tickets of membership in Ward McAllister's four hundred.

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

THE Fort Dearborn Club gave a very enjoyable smoker at their club house Tuesday evening as a sort of a final wind up under the old name and colors under which they have won so much glory the past season. Hereafter it will be the "Chicago Cycling Club," the three C's, and what a club that should be with such men as Thorne, Cyres, Schmidt, Ingall, Conklin, and others of the C. Bi. C. and Randall, Corey, Skinkle, Seig etc. of the Fort Dearborns, for they are all hustlers and have virtually made the two clubs what they are to-day and with their united efforts in the interests of one club, the three C's should be the most successful club in the country.

I HAVE heard nothing new in regard to the Englewood Club joining the new combination but understood that an effort is being made to bring in the Englewood Club in a body.

THE Lincoln Club I understand, are also on the point of consolidating with the Chicago Cycling Club not being able to bring about consolidation with the Illinois club on favorable terms.

JOE CRENNAN has moved to the South Side, and has made application for membership in the C. C. C.

GREENLAT, who recently broke the one-half mile record at Cambridge is a Fort Dearborn man and one of their racing team until he left for college.

THE Illinois Club are engaged in the throes of another raffle, an elegant chair having been presented them for that purpose by their President, Mr. Sloan.

THE Referee displays commendable (?) energy and zeal in its account of the 24-hour record of John Mason's by rushing in a cut of one of the "four alleged" as a correct likeness of Mason.

IT came hard to the Chicagos to drop out of the League. This was the greatest concession they made to the Fort Dearborn Club. Dr. Ellis still mourns for the loss of the name of the C. Bi. C.

THE Lincoln Club has gotten up a very neat programme of their entertainments for the winter season.

TWO thirds of the C. C. C. Club have made arrangements to attend the Casino gymnasium the coming season, and visions of the next Pullman road race inspire some of them to attend, no doubt.

THE Fort Dearborn boys have been electioneering the past week for one of their members, Mr. Carlson, who is a candidate for County Surveyor, and I have been presented with posters by a dozen different members and told that I ought to vote for him, no matter what my politics were, and I—did so.

TOM ROE gets the medal for the greatest number of miles ridden during the season, presented by the Fort Dearborn members. His record is 8000 miles, from April 1st to Nov. 1st. Randall gets the medal for the monthly record, his mileage being 1604 for the month of October. Some of the knowing ones think these records are rather fishy.

IT is rumored that Van Sicklen and Roe are to form a partnership and engage in the bicycle business next season and are trying to get the agency for the Star here but I doubt if they will be able to do that as the present agent has done so much toward making the machine with the little wheel in front popular with the wheelmen here that it will be hard to take the agency from him.

WHO will be the officers in the consolidated club next year? I understand that Randall and Thorne will both run for the office of President, and that Cory, who has had a first mortgage on the Treasuryship in the past, is in the field again with three or four other candidates. Wire pulling and fine work has already begun for the spoils to an alarming extent, o I am told, while the other clubs are looking on and waiting to see the club split up into factions and go to pieces on the subject of officers.

PITTSBURG and VICINITY.

"DUQUESNE."

"'Duquesne,' of Pittsburg, says in the BICYCLING WORLD, in relation to John Wells' hill-climbing visit to the city: 'There is considerable discussion out here about his cranks, which are partially quartered.' What ignorance! Quartered, indeed. Why, the driving axle was twisted, and consequently the cranks were not in alignment. Common sense should tell 'Duquesne' that with quartered cranks the entire machine would have to travel forward by its momentum till the driving sprocket had turned a full quarter of a revolution, which in Wells' case would mean an advance of three feet of the hill, and if the cranks were quartered this would still be true proportionately. If this blatant error had been made in the daily press by some non-cycling scribe, with what a smile of derision 'Duquesne' would have greeted it."—Sporting Life. As a sample of intellectual imbecility the above is good, very good for a small boy; a man would not utter such inane drivellings. When I wrote that "quartered cranks" sentence I thought that some imbecile might think I meant cranks placed at an angle of ninety degrees, so I prefixed the word "partially," making it "partially quartered cranks," then this fresh youth deliberately says that "partially quartered cranks" would mean a dead centre of one fourth of a revolution. As to the driving axle being twisted, I will not venture an opinion as to whether they were twisted or purposely constructed that way. As it is immaterial, however, as an item of news, I will say that a first-class machinist, who has worked for years in a bicycle manufactory, after an examination of the axle, said that the axle was not twisted, but that the cranks were put on that way originally. His last sentence is a specimen of the mutterings of a diseased mind, tempered with ignorance, nerve and gall. If the editor of Sporting Life wishes to run a first-class wheel column he should get a practical wheelman to edit it.

WHEN a man can ride a wheel as well as Jno. A. Wells he is injured rather than aided by such vaporings as the "Philadelphia Kid" gives to the public. Mr. Wells is a good rider, and can stand on his merits.

POKKOPOLIS NOTES.

"STAR."

TALK about large heads! Captain Galway has about the largest head of any wheelman in this vicinity. Six times this season has he been obliged, on account of rain, to postpone runs to Venice, O., but nothing daunted by these repeated failures he was determined to get there this year or—! so he had recourse to a strategem. The run called for the next Sunday was to Florence, Ky., but when the club wheeled into Race street from Eighth, they were surprised to see their leader turn north instead of south, and it was not till they had crossed the canal bridge that it began to dawn upon them that they were going to Venice, and that the calling of the run to Florence was simply a blind to outwit the clerk of the weather. The day was fair and the air cool and bracing; the richness, brilliancy and variety of the coloring of the forest foliage would have delighted the eye of a Titian or a Rubens; and the luscious apples! did the boys appropriate any? Oh no! Each one enjoyed himself as much as possible, for, the camera fiends having for once left their internal machines at home, the boys were relieved from the intense strain of trying to look intelligent.

ON Oct. 28 the C. B. C. took a run to Florence, Ky. The day was bright and clear, but oh the wind! it was so strong that coasting was out of the question, and when the club reached their destination they were indeed a weary looking set. After dinner, however, they revived and set about amusing themselves. Hosea tortured the guitar, Marque wrestled with a mouth harp, the ingenious Norton presided at the piano, surprising his fellow wheelmen with his exquisite rendition of several selections from "Freischuetz," "Darling Chloe" was sung with so much feeling by the silent Nelson that there was not a dry eye in the house, and Charley Galway, well, he just astonished the natives; but best of all was the inimitable imitation of the calls of various birds by an ex-wheelman, H. G. Collins. Each and every one, however, seemed to regret the unaccountable absence of the "meticerous" Walk Hall, as Florence was believed to be his favorite run.

THE brevity of the parade on wheelmen's day at the Centennial, though a disappointment to many, was the result of natural causes. The time—three days—was too short to enable a number of business and professional men to make arrangements that would permit them to participate, and then the idea of riding behind a "Kazoo" band was not relished by certain cyclists who are nothing if not dignified; but perhaps the most potent cause was the fact that during this year Cincinnatians have been so surfeited with parades of butchers, bakers, barbers, brewers, militia, secret societies, trades unions, etc., etc., etc., that now a brass band attracts about as much attention as the mid-summer buzzing of a blue bottled fly. In the evening the "Kazoo" band covered themselves with glory, Millholland's painful efforts on the trombone being rewarded by the presentation, in lieu of a boquet, of a large and ripe cabbage. Andy Hanauer's exhibition of trick riding, on the stage of Music Hall was so marvellous that we now no longer doubt the assertion that he is able to ride a machine that has neither perch, forks nor wheels.

BERT KITCHELL recently had a very thrilling adventure. While riding through Carthage, O., a mischievous imp through a stick at his machine that was carried up into the fork, checking the wheel but not the rider. In an instant Bert was on his feet and, without waiting to dig the mud out of his eyes, started in pursuit of the wily little villain, who, dashing into a house near by, slammed the door in the face of his pursuer. Bert, whose temperature by this time was about 700 degrees in the shade, jerked the door open just in time to see the little fiend dash into the next room and slam the door. He jerked this open also, only to see his tormentor disappear through the next, slamming it as he went. Through five rooms he pursued him, and as he bounced into the sixth he narrowly escaped landing in a tub of boiling water, and before he could look about him he was accosted by a fiery Amazon, who said: "Ye dhurty, murdtherin' blag-gyard, git out o' here this minnit or I'll impty this b'iler o' hot suds over ye!" On hearing this gentle voice, Bert, who a moment before was ready to kill the little rascal, cooled down considerably, and, suddenly recollecting that he had a very urgent appointment at Elmwood, wheeled about and beat the record in getting to the front door and mounting his wheel.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

WE saw three bad accidents out at the reservoir last Sunday, within about fifteen minutes. The first and most serious was that of Henry Quinn, of East Cambridge, who came to grief by running over a dog; result—a broken arm. Another was a collision between two bikes; result—a ruined machine and a few bruises. Number three was a header near the rendezvous; result—a very badly cut and bruised face.

THE Kodak is the wheelman's camera, see their advt. on another page.

THE Wilkesbarre Club will celebrate Thanksgiving by giving a grand ball in the evening.

THE Lawrence, Mass., authorities are urged to put a stop to the use of sidewalks by cyclists.

WE call attention to our great premium offer. We can only hold this offer open for a few weeks.

NOTICE our great premium offer for new subscribers on page 19. This offer only good to January 31st, 1889.

MR. C. F. STOKES, the Chicago representative of the Springfield Roadster Co., was in Boston this week; he made us a hasty call.

THE Universal Club, of Brooklyn, N. Y., have had their rooms thoroughly renovated. The Universal is one of the most active clubs in the Empire State.

W. M. WOODSIDE declares he has retired from cycle racing as a profession for all time. He will sail for Europe on the 15th of this month, and will return to the United States in about three months.

AFTER January first ladies will be admitted to membership in the Hudson County (Pa.) Wheelmen. The club will soon begin the erection of a fine club house, and will also lay out an eight-lap track and two tennis courts.

MR. JOSEPH HELMORE, of Rutland, Vt., is now perfecting an ice bicycle. By the time the water congeals he expects to have it ready. His first trial will be on Lake Bomoseen, and then if it pans out well, he will give it a trial on the Hudson River.

THE Boston Club temporary headquarters during Tuesday, election day, and the following Wednesday, was Room No. 1, Parker House. The Club is about evenly divided as to politics, so the fun waxed hot and furious as the returns began to come in.

THERE has been quite a rivalry between the States of Illinois and

New Jersey, as to who would lead in L. A. W. membership. At this writing these two States are tied, with a membership of 710 each. Now, New Jersey, whoop her up. Now, Illinois, let 'er go!!

THE Chicago Referee is getting out an annual which will be ready for distribution December 15. It will contain a review of the season's work in athletes, cycling, etc., tables of records, stories and miscellaneous information, also the portraits of 250 celebrated athletes.

SOME burglars through Eastern, Mass., stole a railroad bicycle, and used that vehicle as a means of quick transit from one scene of their operations to another. We sincerely hope that the cycle in any of its many forms may not become in general use for such purposes.

THE Harvard Bicycle Club has challenged the Institute of Technology Club to a road race for a banner, to be presented by the lo ing club. The challenge has been accepted, and the following committee chosen to complete arrangements for Harvard: K. Brown, '91; G. H. Merrill, '90; and E. A. Bailey, '91. The Harvard team will be composed of the winners in Thursday's road race.

OUR friend who has been victimizing confiding wheelmen in Reading, Buffalo, Washington and Baltimore is an old offender, so says a valued correspondent from Rochester, N. Y. It seems he stole a bicycle in Canandaigua, N. Y., was captured, lodged in jail, and after a short confinement he escaped. He operated under the name of Carlisle, and seems to have a penchant for despoiling wheelmen.

"WE know of an Englishman who is anxious for an American editor to settle a little bill for wires," &c. It's not American, you know—or we hope it isn't—to keep men waiting over long for money due," so says Bi. News. We rather object to this "blanket" charge of neglect to pay bills. If Bi. News wants to make a charge, it should be more specific. As "an American editor" we deny owing an Englishman anything for "wires, etc." Now, then Bi. News, who is the man?

W. H. HUNTLY, of Newton, while riding over the Milldam a short time ago, was run into by an individual in a tip-cart. Mr. Huntly was on the extreme left of the road, and the aforesaid driver deliberately ran into Huntly, threw him down and came within an inch of driving the cart wheel over his head. Mr. Huntly is still suffering from the result of the accident. He has placed the case in the hands of his attorney, Mr. N. S. Stocumb, and intends to push the affair to the bitter end.

HERE'S a how-de-do, and it is an indication of how hot things have been in Indiana politically. Certain members of the Terre Haute Club are staunch Republicans, and they thought they would parade on bikes as such. In comes the Democratic wing of the club and vows it will resign in a body if those misguided youths insist on parading. A good deal of back talk has been indulged in, but at the present writing we cannot say what was done and who was hurt. We must wait until the smoke of battle clears away, and then we can attend to the wounded and bury the dead.

MR. A. J. HENLY accepts Mr. Geo. W. Schoenhut's challenge, which appeared in the WORLD of Oct. 26. Mr. H. prefers to ride the match on a track, but in case Mr. Schoenhut demurs, and insists on riding the race on the road, Mr. Henly avers he is ready to ride the match "over bricks, stones or mud." Mr. Henly objects to the medal costing over $50, because the L. A. W. puts the maximum cost of prizes at $50. We would suggest to Mr. Henly that the L. A. W. does not recognize road racing, and so the prize may be $5000 for all the L. A. W. would object.

A CORRESPONDENT from Rome, N. Y., writes as follows: "The Ramblers Bicycle Club, of Rome, N. Y., are talking very strongly about laying a quarter-mile bicycle track at Riverside Park. The surface will either be of cinders or clay and the corners raised. It will lay immediately inside of the east end of the horse track, and some two feet above it. We are at a loss to know the cost of such a track. There will be a little grading to be done, and we propose to make it twenty-five feet wide on the home stretch and twelve on the back stretch. Can you give us any information on the subject? Can anyone give us the grade of Murder Lane Hill?" To our correspondent's first question as to cost of building a track, we should advise him to go to a regular contractor and have him give an estimate. There is no fixed rule as to figuring cost of building a track, because the nature of the ground on which it is to be built, the amount of grading, the cost of material to build, all vary in different localities. The average grade of Murder Lane hill is 1 in 9 7-10. The total length is 3827 feet.

THE news that Mr. H. D. Corey has retired from the cycle trade will be received with surprise by his many friends. From what we hear from Mr. Corey we hope that the retirement may not be permanent, but the reasons for his present action are good and sufficient, and are given in the daily papers as follows: "In 1883 he became connected with the house of Stoddard, Lovering & Co., and for four years managed their cycling department, during which time he became one of the most prominent cyclers in the country, and gained an enviable reputation as an amateur racer. About a year ago he accepted a responsible position with the Pope Mfg. Co., and since then he has travelled all over the country, visiting agents of the Pope Co. Mr. Corey was married about four months ago, and shortly before his wedding the death of his father placed important private business matters in his hands. He was very loath to leave the cycle trade, and would not have done so had not private business matters demanded his attention, and his dislike to be continually on the road."

TANDEM BICYCLE RECORD.

ONE-HUNDRED-MILE TRICYCLE ROAD RECORD.

MR. G. P. MILLS, the great record capturer, has had a whack at the 100-mile tricycle record. E. Hale has held this record since September, 1887, in 7h. 11m. 6s. Mills rode an Ivel trike, weighing 35 pounds, and established the record at 6h. 58m. 54s. A. J. Wilson did the timing. Mills was well paced and checked.

A TWENTY-FOUR HOUR RECORD.

MR. PERCY NIX, on a geared Facile, recently put the 24-hour English record at 298 1-4 miles, thus beating Mills' record by about three miles. The last 76 miles were ridden without a dismount. His Facile weighed 36 pounds. The record is for all class of machines. He was well paced by reliable men. A. J. Wilson doing the timing.

THE 100-MILE PHILADELPHIA ROAD RACE.

WE are in receipt of the results of the 100-mile road race run at Philadelphia last Tuesday, Nov. 6. This proved another victory for that great road rider, F. M. Dampman, of the Wilmington Wheel Club, who rode the distance in 7.20.17; his club mate, B. F. McDaniel, running a close second, and finishing in 7.20.48; C. A. Dimon, of the South End Wheelmen, Philadelphia, stopping at 80 miles, and W. G. Spier, of the Century Club, stopped at 70 miles. There were thirteen starters, and the other nine not accounted for got tired and stopped at various stages of the race. The course was over the Lancaster pike, city line and Montgomery avenue. Dampman and McDaniel rode Victor Light Roadsters.

EAGLE ROCK HILL TWICE ON AN ORDINARY BICYCLE.

ON Sunday last, Nov. 4, Mr. Jno. V. L. Pierson accomplished the feat of riding up and down Eagle Rock Hill on a Light Champion bicycle, with 5 1-2 inch cranks. The climbs were made between 3.30 and 4 P. M., and were witnessed by Mr. Charles Coggeshall of Bloomfield and two members of the Manhattan Bicycle Club, besides some twenty other New York and Brooklyn wheelmen who were at the hill at the time and witnessed different parts of the performance. This is claimed as record for the ordinary. Mr. Pierson is President of the Bloomfield Cyclers. The hill has never been ridden by an ordinary more than once, and was also done by members of the Bloomfields'.

THE third annual tournament of the "Dallas Wheel Club," under rules of the L. A. Second race, half mile, hands off. H. J. Blakeney, first, time, 3.30; O. P. Haney, second.

WHITTAKER VS. LEES.

THE ten-mile match on safeties between S. G. Whittaker and Jack Lees, in England, has been the topic of conversation among those interested in professional racing for the past two weeks. The event took place two weeks ago, and resulted in a victory for the Yankee boy. It was a hot race, and the last quarter was done in 35 2-5 seconds.

The leaders and times for the separate miles and full distances were as follows:

Miles.	Leader.	Time. M. S.
1	Lee	2 46
2	Lee	5 48 4-5
3	Lee	8 54 1-5
4	Whittaker	11 59 4-5

THE TWENTY-MILE ROAD RACE WON BY WILMINGTON CLUB.

THE team of the Wilmington Wheel Club went up to Reading Saturday morning, Nov. 3, and when they left in the afternoon they carried with them the prize medal, which they won in the match race with the team of the Reading Bicycle Club.

The Wilmington men were, Merrihew, 156 lbs.; Dampman, 142 lbs.; McDaniel, 144 lbs.; Steward, 152 lbs. The latter, who is quite a youth, was selected as late as Thursday evening as a substitute. Elliott, the fourth man of the team, being laid up with sickness, and Pyle and Jefferies being unable to get away. Had it not been for this fact the Wilmingtonians would probably have finished all together, as Elliott is as good a man as any of the others, while Steward, although he rode a plucky race, has had no experience, and pulled through by sheer grit.

Reading's representatives were Wilhelm, 163 lbs.; Scheele, 159 lbs.; Douglass, 145 lbs.; and Kohler, 130 lbs.

THE RACE.

The men left Reading on the 11.45 A. M. train for Myerstown, accompanied by the referee, A. M. Schefley, of Pottstown; the judge, W. I Grubb, of same place; Frank Heilman and John Crawford, timers; and the starters and checkers. The course was from Myerstown to Reading, straight down the Harrisburg pike, a distance of about twenty-one miles. From the start Wilhelm and Dampman rushed ahead, closely followed by Merrihew, McDaniel and Steward, and this order was maintained for eighteen miles, when Steward began to weaken, and was finally passed by Douglass, Scheele and Kohler. McDaniel and Merrihew kept within sight of the two leaders until near the finish, and the eight men rode in remarkably close to each other.

Spectators gathered along the route to witness the contest, and at the finish, just west of the Harrisburg bridge at Reading, there was a throng of upwards of two thousand people. Just beyond this point the road bends and winds up a steep hill, called Eckert's, which is about three eighths of a mile in length. On striking this hill Wilhelm spurted down at top speed, and Dampman, losing his pedals, was unable to hold him. Around the turn he shot, and as he came across the finish the crowd cheered enthusiastically. While the cheers were yet ringing Dampman came up with a rush, and he crossed just twelve seconds later. Then a short but anxious wait, for all knew that the issue of the race hung upon the next men around the turn. There! two more gray uniforms on crank wheels, and Merrihew and McDaniel swept in, with six seconds separating them. No cheering encouraged them, however.

Less than a minute afterward came Douglass, Scheele and Kohler, closely following one another, with Steward bringing up the rear. Following is the time:

Name.	Club.	Time.	Mount.
Wilhelm, Reading		1.15.28	Star
Dampman, Wilmington		1.15.40	Victor
Merrihew, Wilmington		1.18.44	Victor
McDaniel, Wilmington		1.18.50	Victor
Douglas, Reading		1.19.20	Star
Scheele, Reading		1.19.50	Star
Kohler, Reading		1.19.59	Star
Steward, Wilmington		1.22.38	Springfield Roadster

The course is claimed to be 21 miles, and if this is correct the time of Wilhelm and Dampman is American record.

The timers and judges returned to Reading by train, after starting the racers, and met them at them at the finish. Checkers were stationed at Womelsdorf, Robesonia, Wernersville and Sinking Spring. The Reading men also had members of their club stationed along the route, who took them up and paced them at intervals.

The Wilmington men left for Honeybrook at five o'clock, riding to Wilmington yesterday (Sunday). They are anxious to receive a challenge from the Reading Bicycle Club for another race, and hope to have Elliott in condition to take part in the same if it comes off.

Philadelphia, Nov. 5, 1888. "ARIEL."

[Our correspondent is correct, and while we have no record for 21 miles we find that Kluge, Baggott and Bradley, in the last inter-State race in New Jersey, rode the distance (21 miles) in about 1.15.06, or at about a 3.34 gait. If the distance of the Reading course can be verified we of course hold that the claim for record for that distance must go to W. I. Wilhelm.—ED.]

SAM STERLING ON COREY HILL.

MR. SAM STERLING, of Bridgeport, Conn., is a gentleman 45 years of age. Mr. Sterling spends much of his time a-wheel, and is an enthusiast of the first water. It has always been his pet desire to make a record on Corey Hill, and for that purpose he journeyed to Boston last week, and for a practice spin he went up and down six times without a dismount. On Thursday, Nov. 1, he went out to the hill in company with Mr. McCune and Dr. Emery, and there

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 20th, 1888.

Coventry Machinists' Co., 239 Columbus Ave., Boston:

Dear Sirs—In reply to yours of Oct. 16th, inquiring as to the safe arrival and appreciation of the SWIFT No. 1 you sent me Sept. 20th, will say am sorry to have delayed so long, but waited until I could give the machine a fair trial, as I have done in the last month. When the machine came here it was criticised and an attempt to run it down, on account of its lightness, all being afraid it would not stand our rough and bad roads, as we have some of the worst roads in Ohio. All I said was, "Wait and see." We waited, and I am now ready to report. I find that as it name implies, it is Swift-er than any other machine of its kind, runs easier, nicer build, lighter, and as strong as any other machine made. It stands as hard usage as any, as I have not spared it anything: it goes wherever any other kind of machine can go, and is not stumped at anything. I am acknowledged to be as hard on a machine, and harder, than most riders here. The machine now, after one month's hard work, not only by myself, but by my friends who have borrowed it daily, is as good as when I took it out of the crate. I have not touched a tool of any kind to tighten it yet. It is the favorite machine of the kind in this city. One friend is about to sell an 1888 pattern Special Star, and another one an 1888 Rudge Bicyclette, to get the SWIFT No. 1: You will see their orders in a few days. I am in love with the little machine. I hope my report may be satisfactory to you, and expect an early answer I am, yours respectfully, E. J. DOUHET.

in the presence of these gentlemen together with some half a dozen other cyclists, he went up and down eleven times without a dismount. This is once more than Mr. Shurman's record, and considering the gentleman's age (53) is really a marvellous performance. He did not ride for time, and therefore the time was not taken. His mount was a regular stock Springfield Roadster. We heard it rumored that Mr. Sterling was thrown off the second time up, but so far we have been unable to verify the rumor, in fact those who saw the performance state that the rumor has no foundation. Even if it is true Mr. Sterling's feat of nine times will stand as record for a man of his years for many a day to come. But as it is we will investigate the matter and report in our next whether Mr. Sterling is entitled to the nine times or the eleven.

THE BERKELEY OVAL.

IN connection with the races held at the Berkeley Oval, Morris Dock, New York, we think that a few words of description, helped by some cuts, will be of interest. The cuts are reproductions of those appearing in Harper's Young People of Oct. 30.

The Oval is situated at Morris Dock, on the Harlem, at 150 to 155 streets, and is situated at a high elevation above the Harlem River. The grounds are over an eighth of a mile square, and contain ample room for tennis, foot ball, base ball, cricket, Badminton, and in fact all out-door games. The track is what is of special interest to the cyclist. This is a four-lap cinder path carefully built, and scientifically banked corners. The grand stand has accommodations for some 3000 people. Grand old trees and beautiful lawns abound: in fact it is an ideal athletic ground. The club house will be a feature more prominent when the snow flies, and when the club has its proposed toboggan slide in running order.

THE CLUB-HOUSE

THE RACES.

Election day in New York City opened fair, and the prospects of good gate and good races at Berkeley Oval were good. The attendance was quite fair, and the mild weather had the effect of bringing out many ladies. There were over 500 wheelmen who passed the gate on their wheels. As the day waxed old a cold fog set in, and by the time the last race was run it was quite dark, and difficult to see. The consolation race was run off before the final heat of the two mile handicap, and in a driving finish W. H. Caldwell swerved and struck W. D. Edwards, the starter, knocking him senseless and taking a header. Luckily the damage was not serious. Below we give the RESULTS.

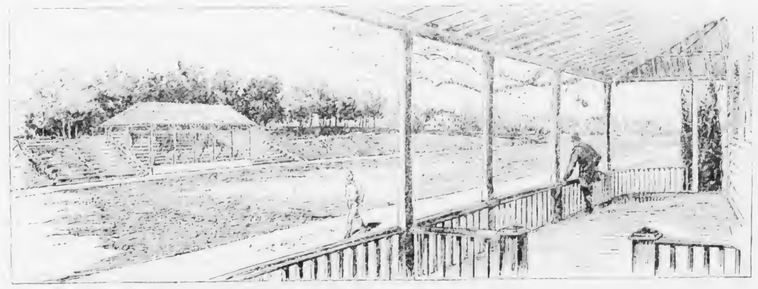
One mile handicap—It was generally intended to run it in heats, but for some reason it was run in one. There were fifteen starters in this race, altogether too many for the size of the track. This was proven by the fact that a collision took place and six men fell in a heap, luckily no one seriously hurt. J. W. Schoeler, 0 yards, first: J. H. Hanson, 130 yards, second: F. B. Monell, 150 yards, third. Time, 2.53 3-5.

One-mile novice—F. J. Gubleman, first: C. P. Lockwood, second: W. H. Hall, third. Time, 3.25.



One-mile interscholastic—L. L. Clark, first: J. Low, Jr., second: Geo. C. Rand, third. Time, 3.42 1-2.

Half-mile open—W. Windle, first: L. L. Halsted, second: K. Brown, third. Time, 1.25.

One-mile, rear drivers—R. H. Davis, first: L. L. Halsted, second: W. G. F. Class, third. Time, 3.24.

Two-mile inter-collegiate—Kenneth Brown, first: R. H. Davis, Harvard, second: W. B. Greenleaf, Harvard, third. Time, 6.49 4-5.

One-mile tricycle handicap—R. H. Davis, scratch, first: S. B. Bowman, 0 yards, second: L. L. Halsted, 30 yards, third. Time, 3.45.

RICHMOND, VA.

"BEFORE the walls of Richmond"—and indeed, behind and all around them—was your irrepressible cyclist on Oct. 29th and 30th, on which occasion the Virginia L. A. W. Division, held their third annual meet.

I arrived in Richmond Sunday noon. A delegation of "the boys," otherwise members of the "Old Dominion Wheelmen," of Richmond, met me, and their cosy club house, on Main and Second, was soon reached. A pleasant Sunday evening, in company with some forty others of the club and visitors, was put in, and retiring on Sunday night to my couch at the St. Clair I could quite understand how many Northerners love the men and women of the sunny South—the famous (?) Libby Prison, Jefferson Davis' Parliament Building, and many places of interest, not forgetting the charming Virginia State Exposition and the splendid vocalism of the "cullered" brethren, who can sing quite as well as they can make tobacco in marketable shape. Some of the sweetest music I ever heard was the songs from ten tobacco smokers here this week. I'll have to go into quarantine before leaving here, if the fumes of the "weed" are to be entirely got rid of, for fumigation is the only remedy in my case. The weather is beautiful here, rather too warm to-day. Receiving a wire to-day from a New York paper to "interview prominent Democrats on the outlook," I will close my preface to the results by saying the O. D. W. treated visitors right royally, and Messrs. A. H. Meyer, A. K. Schaap and others of the committee deserve thanks.

The meeting from an attendance point of view was barely successful, but the racing was good, considering the high wind and soft track through rains on the 27th and 28th. S. T. Clark, of Baltimore, made an acceptable referee; but for his connection with the trade I could heartily endorse Mr. Clark, as his decisions on one or two knotty points were eminently fair. The brothers O'Neil of the Norfolk Bicycle Club, and Downing of the Portsmouth, and Long and Lucy of the O. D. Wheelmen, are undoubtedly the best men of "Tobacco State." The track was a half-mile, of clay, and when in condition would be fast. The fastest time was the last half mile of the three-mile professional, in 1.20, Kingsland, that sterling Baltimore amateur, doing 1.25 in the half-mile open. This young man from Baltimore is a speedy one and will bear watching: with good care he would make a champion, and no mistake. This is the young man who rode away with the greatest race of the Buffalo meeting, defeating the largest field that started. Lucy, the Richmond boy, is made of rare metal, and will be heard from.

I penned the above in Richmond and place the results here in Atlanta, after one of the most miserable 26-hour journeys of my life, over the Piedmont Air Line. Two accidents happened. The second and last was near sending the passengers to a happier land. It was not enough for our piston rod to break and knock out the cylinder head, delaying us an hour, but fifty miles further on, near Kings Mountain, S. C., we ran swiftly into a freight train which was being side-tracked, pitching Crocker and self and some fifty others into each others' shoulders, shaking us up considerably, and knocking three freight cars into match wood. The long journey and an attack of malaria has fitted me for the hospital.

READING (PA.) CLUB TO "ARIEL."

Editor Bicycling World: In your issue of 26th Oct., 1888, on page 496, one of your correspondents, signing himself "Ariel," wilfully and libelously misrepresents the Reading Bi. Club.

Many false statements about us have been made by him in the past, which have been ignored by us, but the present instance is so malicious, and so entirely false that we feel it a duty to ourselves to show you the way in which your excellent journal is made use of by "Ariel," to vent his spite on a club the character of whose membership is far above his level. Five falsehoods are stated by him in the article mentioned, viz:

First—The Reading team would not consent to a neutral course.

Second—The Reading Bi. Club insisted on the Harrisburg Pike.

Third—The Wilmington men wanted the Lancaster Pike selected.

Fourth—The road is a poor one, being hilly and stony, and Fifth—The hills are specially rough and stony, and a crank machine cannot be ridden down them at speed.

Now, Mr. Editor, in refutation of the first falsehood, we beg to hand you enclosed a copy of our letter of the 17th Oct., 1888, to Mr. J. H. Wells, containing stake money, and naming the Harrisburg Pike as the place for the race.

(Being the challenged parties we had the right to select the course, and did so knowing that our opponents were riders, who could hustle on any road.) Also letter to Merrihew, of Oct. 23, informing him of the arrangements made with Mr. Wells; also Mr. Merrihew's acceptance of selection of road, etc., dated Oct. 26. From these letters you will see that we were not asked to consent to a neutral course.

The challenge from the Wilmington Club read: "To be run on the Lancaster pike, or any other suitable road."

Several circumstances combined to influence us in favor of this road, viz:

a. Information from several Philadelphia cyclists that unless the matter were kept very secret we would be prohibited from racing on the Lancaster pike, and the difficulty in getting a twenty-mile straight away course on the Lancaster pike.

b. We are reasonably certain of not being molested on the Harrisburg Pike.

c. We can have the use of five telephones along the course, with four others at the finish, a very important consideration.

With regard to the second falsehood, the above mentioned letters will show that there was absolutely no insistance on our part, nor occasion for any.

In reply to the third falsehood, the Wilmington men may have wanted the Lancaster pike, but as Merrihew's letter will show, have not expressed any preference.

The fourth falsehood is particularly malicious, the Harrisburg pike is under control of the Berks and Dauphin Turnpike Co., and is one of the best, if not the best in this State. Every bit of it is in good condition and a great deal of it is better than any part of the Lancaster pike. "Ariel" is well aware of this himself, he having been a Reading man and having often gone over it. There are of course hills on the course, as it is impossible to get twenty miles of road in this State without them.

In denial of falsehood number five we enclose statements made and signed by different crank riders who have made speed on this course and portions of it, which will prove to any fair minded man that the road must be good.

We also beg to refer to Mr. Hickok, of the Pope Mfg. Co., who made the run from Harrisburg to Reading, 58 miles, in 5 hours on a large machine.

We quote from the L. A. W. Pensylvania Road Book, New Jersey and Maryland points on route 25 as follows: "Via Sinking Springs (5 miles), hilly; Robesonia (11 miles), rolling; Womelsdorf (14 miles), all fair; remainder direct, via Myerstown (22 miles), level and good." We also refer to the Owen brothers, of Washington, D. C.

The Reading Bi. Club can point with pride to its past record, and we defy any one to prove that we have ever been guilty of any dishonorable action, in any race contested by us.

We sincerely hope that you will give the matter a full investigation and take such steps as will insure us from being subject to attacks deliberately calculated to injure us in the opinion of the cycling fraternity.

Since writing the above we are in receipt of the enclosed letter from Mr. Merrihew, dated Oct. 31st, which will speak volumes in refutation of "Ariel's" lies.

We also enclose a letter from "Ariel" to one of our club members, which we think will go far to prove our claim that he is not a fair-minded, disinterested correspondent.

You are at liberty to publish any and all of the enclosed letters if you see fit, with the exception of "Ariel's" letter to Mr. Schmidt.

For the Reading Bicycle Club:
W. I. WILHELM, Capt.
C. C. GRAEFF, Pres.
L. D. DOUGLASS, Sec.

The letters referred to above we have in hand, from Messrs. H. B. Swartz, J. C. Schmidt and C. G. Wellson, all riders of cranks, who speak in high terms of the route selected.

Under date 17th Oct., W. I. Wilhelm writes Mr. Wells, enclosing the $25, and says: "I also name Nov. 3 as date for said race, and race to take place on Harrisburg pike, from Myerstown to Reading. This is a twenty-mile stretch, straight away, of good pike."

Under date Oct. 23, Mr. Wilhelm writes Mr. Merrihew, and uses practically the same language as to date and route of race as to Mr. Wells.

Under date Oct. 26, Mr. Merrihew answers Mr. Wilhelm, and says: "Mr. Wells has advised me of the date and course selected by you of the road race, and although we had supposed that a neutral course had been selected still we are satisfied with the one you have chosen." Mr. Merrihew then continues and asks that the Reading men make the necessary arrangements as to time keepers, checkers, etc.

Under date of Oct. 31, Mr. Merrihew further states in answer to letter from Mr. Wilhelm: "Much obliged for your remarks concerning the road from Myerstown. Our Mr. Dampman was over it last week, and speaks in high terms of its surface. 'Ariel' is evidently mistaken as to its present condition."

We present to our readers the above letters and facts.—ED.

BICYCLING IN BELGIUM.—II.

BY CLERICUS.

FOR the first time in many dull days the sun shone clear at noon in this weltering, old Flemish town. The spell of bad weather seemed to be broken at last, and I made ready to avail myself of it. I had already arranged for a box of supplies at Brussels, so a little after three o'clock I mounted my wheel and set off on my projected tour. Just as I emerged from the archway under the ramparts that make Antwerp one of the strongest fortresses of the world, out of what I thought was a clear sky there burst a single thunder peal, like the explosion of a columbiad on the ramparts above me. I thought it was the latter for a moment, but the illusion passed, and I saw I had before me a battle with the elements.

I was not to be deterred, however, and I only sped on the faster to gain as much ground as possible. The first peal was soon followed by a second attended with premonitary drops, like the signal guns before the onset. The thunder continued like an intermittent battery of artillery, but the rain was insignificant for quite a season. It looked like a retreat on the part of the enemy, and so I pursued with unslacking speed. At last I overtook what seemed the main body, and the abundant small shot of the musketry of rain proved more formidable than the harmless great guns from the cloudy ramparts overhead.

As the battle was on I had to prepare for it. I alighted at a peasant's cottage, and let him see me draw out my gossamer suit and encase myself in it. When his wonder had subsided sufficiently he stooped to help me button on my leggings. He earned an American ten-cent piece of which I wished to be rid, and he was studying it with stupid fascination when I mounted and rode off again in the rain.

Sheathed in my suit from head to foot I felt like a mediæval knight clothed and rivetted in his armor. Just then a huge towered windmill brandished its great arms in the distance in front of me, and I could not but smile at my own expense. To many a person my riding after this storm would seem no whit wiser than Don Quixote on his Rosinante charging on the phantom form of his windy challenger. Let every such person at least hope and pray with me that I may be spared the ignominious header that would complete my likeness to that worsted knight errant. A fall on Belgian blocks would make my knight errantry indeed "A Fool's Errand."

I still pressed on in what seemed to be pursuit of a flying enemy, but it was only a Parthian flight, and soon I was made to feel that I was both near the main body and all its reserves. I was battered by big drops which my suit turned aside harmlessly, but as discretion is the better part of valor I thought it best to seek shelter in friendly fortifications. Like Wellington at Waterloo, I would then need only to wait on the enemy on chosen ground. This I did several times, pressing on again at every lull. Did not McClellan lose his laurels as "the young Napoleon" because he failed to follow the enemy at once to the last ditch? The excessively cautious are the fatally slow. Forward!

Compensation again! I took shelter under the eaves of a cottage. Presently I was at the doorstep, then I was inside, then I drew my steed in so far as to shelter the saddle. The good Flemish family of mother and several children, one of them a young man and another a blue-eyed Gretchen, all seemed friendly. I bestowed a half franc on one of the little ones, and explained that I was "Englay." Then I tried to say "English, no! Americain! Americain!" and I poked myself with my thumb just over my heart. I may not have made it very clear, but then I lit it up with a luminous smile. The light may still have been a minus quantity, but there was no doubt about its sweetness. It kindled kindred smiles in them all, and where ignorance was bliss it were folly to be otherwise.

When in a moment of inspiration I found the word "wassar." Gretchen ran right out in the rain and brought in a brimming pitcher of water. I nearly drained it to show the extent of my gratitude for such kindness.

While here in this friendly shelter the allies of the rain came down, like the Prussians upon the French, in the shape of thunder and lightning and a shower of hail. The wonder of it! Hail on the first day of August! But being such a fire eater I gathered several of the hail shot as large as marbles and ate them. The urchins acted on the hint and gathered me a handful, and I churned them up and swallowed them with as much relish as if they had been so much ice water.

Just before I started there was a serious confabulation in the family. What it all meant I knew not, but presently the good housewife advanced to me with the coin I had given and put it again in my hand. Plain as English her look and action said, "Take money of an American stranger driven under the roof by the storm! Might mother and brood be all houseless first!" Then I tried to bestow it again, despite her expostulations, on the smallest of the group. Not a mother's child of them would accept it. They smiled, put their hands behind them and backed away. They were too many for me, and I surrendered at discretion, and could only get away by leaving all my heart in hostage. Love is the only full equivalent for kindness.

The stone-block road did me good service from here onward. The side paths, however, were made of tough clay and sod, which were but little softened by the rain. The clouds and all their armaments were gone beyond pursuit when I rode over the stone bridge into the old city of Malines, the ancient Mechlin, so famous for its lace. It was pleasant to be received here to the tune of "The Conquering Hero Comes." No one need question it; I made the music myself. I am an indifferently good whistler. Onward I rode through the stony streets, until I reached the Place St. Rombold, where I alighted just at the foot of the cathedral tower that I had seen from the spire at Antwerp. A sweeter music than mine presently greeted my ears, for the chimes in the old tower broke out in what seemed to me sweeter strains than I had yet heard from any belfry. It was a pleasant ending of the first stage of my wanderings in the Netherlands.

WE have had a very large demand for Mr. Porter's article on "Macadam Roads," and in order that we may supply it we reproduce the article in this issue. We shall have printed slips struck off and will send them on application to any member who may wish to send the article to the local road committee or have it reproduced in the local paper.

MACADAM ROADS.

HOW TO MAKE AND KEEP THEM.

Compiled by L. H. Porter, of the Orange Wanderers. (Reproduced from Bulletin of August 26, 1887.)

MCADAM'S SYSTEM.

McAdam's plan was to thoroughly drain the road bed; properly shape it, sloping it each way from the centre, so as to discharge water, and not crowning it by a greater thickness of stone in the middle.

On this bed is placed, on a dry day, a coating of three inches of clean broken stone. A roller is then used, or traffic allowed upon it, until well packed. If traffic is admitted, men must be on hand to rake in all ruts as soon as formed. The second coating of three inches is added at a wet time, as moisture helps the consolidation. This coating is treated as before, and a third coating is then added, and finally a fourth, if necessary.

The stone is to be clean, nothing being laid on for so-called "binding." Clean, broken stone will combine by its own angles into a solid surface.

A heavy roller will help the consolidation. One made of a hollow cylinder, with several chambers, which can be filled with sand, and so increase its weight as the road becomes packed, is most excellent.

A road just completed requires careful attention for some time, and all ruts and ridges must be removed as soon as formed, until the materials become thoroughly consolidated.

TELFORD'S SYSTEM.

Telford's plan differed somewhat from McAdam's, and was as follows:

He prepared a level bed, and set in it a layer of medium-sized stones. These rested on their broadest edges, and lay lengthwise across the road. They were to be seven inches high in the centre and to slope off to three inches at the sides. The interstices were to be firmly packed by a light hammer by hand with stone chips.

Four inches of small broken stone, like McAdam's were then to be put on, and be worked in by traffic, care being taken to keep men removing ruts, and to keep the surface smooth. Then, a final coating of two inches of the same stone was to be put on and treated in the same way. Care, however, was to be exercised not to make these last coatings as thick at the edges as in the centre, so that the final convexity of the road would be six inches. The whole was to be covered with an inch and a half of clean gravel.

Neither one of these systems is literally followed in this country, but the principal features of Telford's are generally adopted.

KEEP, OR REPAIR OF THE ROAD.

A road which is kept in proper condition by means of constant little attentions seldom requires elaborate repairs; but this system is almost never followed. The almost universal method is to leave a road alone until the surface is covered with holes and ruts and then cover it for a long distance with several inches of stone, coated with earth.

To keep roads in repair requires a permanent corps of men, working under competent orders. One man can keep in repair from three to four miles of well made and well drained road. The roads once being in good shape, it is the duty of this corps to keep them so. To accomplish this, it is necessary:

I. To have in progress a daily removal of the dust, mud and other wear and accumulations from the surface. This can be best done by means of wooden hoes and birch brooms.

II. The application of new materials, which must be kept in depots, not far apart, so that they can be conveniently brought to any required spot in wheelbarrows. They will unite most readily when applied after a rain. This division of the subject will now be examined more in detail.

The proper system of repair is this:

I. Put down where wanted, and not elsewhere, hard stones broken as nearly as possible to an even size of one and a half inches in the largest dimensions.

II. Mix no earth or sand with them, but let them be worked in by pressure, so that they fit together by their own angles into a solid mass, like the pieces of a puzzle or mosaic.

McAdam always attached the greatest importance to the small size of stones which he used, and made his surveyors use a two-inch iron ring, with which to try the largest stones in a heap, to see that they would go through the ring in any direction, so that the largest stones in a heap would be less than two inches in their greatest dimensions. He also made the stone-breakers test the size of the stones by putting them into their mouths, any stone that would not go into a man's mouth, or would not go through the two-inch ring every way, was to be broken again. All the authorities agree with McAdam in recommending this small size of stone and McAdam himself, though he allowed the use of a two-inch ring to save the expense of breaking the stone smaller, yet says, "every piece of stone put into a road, which exceed an inch in any of its dimensions is mischievous." Telford agreed with McAdam as to the size of stones to be used for surface repair, however much he may have differed from him about the foundations of a new road.

The neglect of this principle is the main cause of the badness and costliness of most of the macadamized roads of the present day. Small stones, broken to the proper size, viz., one and a half inches in their largest dimensions, fit much tighter together, work in much quicker, make a much smoother road, and wear much better than the stones such as are usually put down.

It is easy to see that a large stone working in among smaller ones, will project and cause a roughness of the road and also that the interstices between stones of one and a half inch will be less than between those of three or four inches. Stones of this large size, besides making a rough road and greatly increasing the labor of the horses, are very slow to work in and either involve the expense of a steam roller, or remain on a surface, to the great annoyance of all who use the road. Moreover, a cubic yard of stone broken to an inch and a half gauge will cover six or seven times as much surface of road as it would if only broken to four inches and as three-quarters of an inch of consolidated road is admitted to be as much as a highway usually loses in thickness in a year, even under heavy traffic, it is evident that to put down a greater thickness of stone is a mere waste of material. All the authorities agree that the slight extra cost of breaking the stones to the proper size is repaid many times over by the amount of material saved, and by the superior smoothness and consequent reduction in the wear of the roads. Macadam roads are very frequently "repaired" by covering the surface with about an inch of screenings. This material is completely pulverized by the passing vehicles, and becomes, in a week or two, a fine powder, very disagreeable to ride over, easily removed by wind or rain, and of no value for repairs. The alleged object of "protecting the surface" is, of course, not secured.

McAdam's next point is that the stones are to unite by their own angles into a solid mass, and that no earth, screening, or other so-called "binding material" should be mixed with them. Cohesion is the first thing to be aimed at in a road. If the stones unite properly by their own angles the result will always be a smooth, economical road, with but little need of repair. The traffic will always provide more mud and dust than will be sufficient to cover the surface of the stones, and to fill up the very small interstices which will be left when they have been properly bound together. Yet there is no point on which greater wastefulness is exhibited in the repair of roads. Large sums are used in providing earth to throw over the newly-laid stones. The authorities seem to think that all this is necessary to "bind the stones together," ignoring the cardinal principle that the stones must unite by their own angles, and being unable to see that if earth is placed on a road it becomes muddy, or if screenings, then dusty; or to understand that the public does not desire to pay for either of these luxuries.

Stones are frequently laid down three or even four thick and over the whole surface of the roads for hundreds of yards at a time, to the extreme discomfort of all travellers. And this is done where the roads, though full probably of holes, puddles and ruts, have ample strength and thickness and only need to have the surface rendered smooth. All that is needed in such a case is simply to fill up the ruts and puddles with properly broken stone, and if this be enough, it will obviously save a great deal of cost in material and labor, to say nothing of the great convenience to the users of the road in having fewer stones to go over. If the middle of the road really requires to be raised, the puddles and ruts should still be filled up a week or two before the stone is spread over all the middle of road, otherwise the new stones will sink more quickly into the ruts and puddles than elsewhere, and the same holes will reappear just where they were before. Stones should never be laid down more than one deep, otherwise, they are much slower about working in, and great waste of material ensues from the grinding of one loose stone against another. Yet it is the rule rather than the exception to put down stones two or three deep. Three quarters of an inch of wear is quite as much as usually takes place in a year, even on a much-frequented road; the wastefulness, therefore, of putting down two or three inches of stone is self-evident; the annoyance to travellers is also extreme.

The proper drainage of roads is also of the greatest importance for their maintenance in good condition, and a road cannot be properly drained unless it preserves a smooth and slightly convex surface. Water should never be allowed to stand in ruts and puddles, and a road should always be patched up as soon as the puddle appears. "The stone in time saves nine" in road repairing as much as the proverbial stitch but repairers usually wait till the state of things has become intolerable, and then spread four or five inches of stone over the whole road. Long wide patches of stones should never be put down; vehicles will avoid them, and will go on the path or by a longer road to do so; or, if they cannot be avoided, the ruts will very soon appear in the middle of the road, which will become concave instead of convex. A rake should be constantly used to lift up the mud among scattered stones back to their places. Patches should seldom be more than from two to four yards long. A patch of stones twenty or thirty yards long on a country road, where there is no steam roller to work it in, is an expensive mistake. Patches should not be square, but should vary according to the shape of the hollow they are intended to fill, i. e., usually round or oval, and should be so arranged that vehicles can go by with only one wheel on the stone.

Mud should always be removed entirely before putting down the stone; it is not wanted on roads, and it means extra labor to horses and increased wear of the road. Yet this is very generally lost sight of, and most repairers actually spread earth on the top of the stones.

The importance of using a good hard material which will wear well is very great. Flint, granite and the igneous rocks generally, and some few of the harder sandstone, will make an excellent road if properly broken and spread; but oolites, limestones and the softer sandstones will never make a good road, for the simple reason that they are not hard enough, and that they wear quickly into ruts. Besides, they suffer far more from frost than harder stones. Granite will, if properly broken and spread, pay very well in spite of its extra first cost. But flint has no superior except for roads where the traffic is excessive.

To sum up the matter in a few words, the points to be insisted upon are these:

I. The stones broken must be small; i. e., one and a half inches in their largest dimension.

II. Hard material, flint where obtainable, or granite should be employed.

III. No earth, screenings, sand, or so-called "binding material" must be used, but the stones must unite by their own angles into a solid mass.

IV. Economy of material must be promoted by filling up holes at once, and by never putting down stones more than one thick; also by spreading small patches of stones where wanted, instead of large ones whether wanted or not.

V. All mud must be removed.

VI. Attention must be paid to drainage, especially by filling up puddles at once, and keeping them so filled by the use of the rake.

The adoption of this, the only proper system of repair, will diminish the road rates and will conduce to the comfort of every one. In short, much less should be spent on materials, and rather more on skilled labor and superintendence. The majority of the present road repairers and highway authorites must alter their system or they will assuredly have to give way to more competent men.

APPLICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP.

The following is a list of applications for membership received up to date, and published in accordance with Article III. of the Constitution, which is as follows:

"Any amateur wheelman, in good standing, eighteen years of age or over, shall, with the indorsement of two League members in good standing, or of three reputable citizens of the United States or Canada, be eligible to membership in this League upon payment of an initiation fee of one dollar, and such dues for the year as may be provided for in the By Laws. Upon the approval of the Board or Officers, or committee thereof, two weeks after the publication of the name in a list of candidates in the official organ of the League, the applicant shall become a member."

Tickets will be issued seventeen days after the publication of names.

Candidates will please notice if their names and address are correct.

Members are requested to examine carefully these lists as they are published, and to report errors and omissions to the Secretary. In order that no objectionable person may unite with the League, members are given the right to protest, but such protest must be received by the Secretary within two weeks from the date of publication, and contain specific charges so far as it is possible to make them. All such communications will be considered confidential.

The application list is closed at 10 A. M. on the Monday preceding day of publication. All applications received after that hour must go over to the list of the following week.

A Man Who Has Ridden 10,000 Miles.

Mr. E. Irving Halsted, Captain of Harlem Wheelmen, has travelled 10,000 miles, and consequently has had numerous experiences and frequent opportunities to look upon cycling in all its varied phases, both in touring and racing. He says that those who are of the opinion that riding benefits the legs only make a grand mistake; let a man who is unaccustomed to long rides take a fifty or sixty mile ride and he will feel at the end of the day that he is tired, not only in his legs, but all over his body, proving that all muscles are brought into action.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

again, and we are obliged to step modestly forward and gather in another laurel leaf for the VICTOR.

This time it was at Philadelphia, and the occasion was the

SPORTING LIFE 100 MILE ROAD RACE.

There were thirteen to start, but only two to finish, and both of these rode VICTORS. The course was a hard one, being profusely ornamented with hills, but notwithstanding this, both these men broke the American amateur record, which, by the way, already belonged to the VICTOR.

No, we don't think it is fate that gives the VICTOR its success in road racing. It is a fact that they are made of the best of everything, and built to be winners.

More and better road races have been won on VICTORS than on any other machine in the market, and we submit this fact as very good evidence that they are stronger, lighter running and more reliable than any others. Ask VICTOR riders.

EDITORS:
C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 16th NOVEMBER, 1888.

THAT Mr. Luscomb has raised particularly Cain in the L. A. W. ranks by the issuance of an official circular calling for the votes of members for Gov. Hill is an undoubted fact. To say the least of it the action of Mr. Luscomb was ill-advised. We have heard sundry excuses and reasons given, but we cannot ignore the fact that the introduction of politics into any non-political association by the method pursued by Mr. Luscomb is fraught with the greatest danger to said organization. We fully appreciate the feeling of gratitude that all riders should have for Gov. Hill, and as individual cyclists we have a perfect right to urge upon our brother riders the claims that Gov. Hill has upon our suffrages. The official action of Chairman Luscomb was unfortunate, but we trust it will have no ill effects.

IT can be now said that the season of 1888, from a cyclist's standpoint, is at an end. From the manufacturers and importers we have the most cheering news. The year of 1887 was a splendid season for the dealers and the past season of 1888 is reported as being fully equal if not in excess of the previous year.

In the matter of machines the safety has steadily advanced in popularity and general use. In fact it can be said that the demand has been in excess of the supply in some localities. The WORLD has always held that the rear driver had come to stay, but we are not of the radical wing, which asserts that the ordinary is doomed. Both machines will be in demand, and with this view of the matter manufacturers and importers will do well to stock up accordingly.

The introduction of the safety has had a depressing effect on the sale of tricycles, for in the later forms of the dwarf, ladies can ride, after having once mastered the narrow gauge they have no further use for the three-wheeler.

To the increasing family of manufacturers in this country we have to welcome only one addition during the year 1888, and that is the Warwick Cycle Co., of Springfield, Mass. Several other companies are forming but as yet they are embryotic and cannot be classed among our "active" makers.

From the rider's point of view as a whole the season has been a good one.

Racing managers and clubs are not as happy as they might be, and in every case except the Hartford tournament we are told that financial loss was entailed. The cause of this is patent on the face of it, and many times before have we called attention to the fact that people will not flock to see processions and loafing matches.

We will not dwell on the remedies; we have hopes for the future, as the present racing board is full of life and energy, and will, if such a thing is humanly possible, devise some means to give the long-suffering public "sport as is sport."

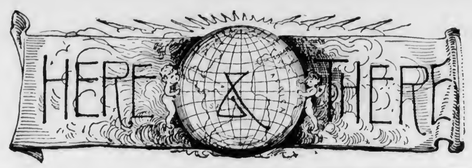
England has been quite prolific in the way of new records, both on the path and on the road. America in this respect has been comparatively barren of new results.

We shall be satisfied if the year of 1889 pans out as well generally as the present year has so far done. We shall not complain, however, if the coming shows an improvement on the past.

THE CAMBRIDGEPORT BI. CLUB HOUSE WARMING.

ONE of the most active cycling clubs in Massachusetts is the Cambridgeport Club. The members are all cyclers in the full sense of the word. The organization is an off-shoot of the Christian Association, and was formed in the summer of 1886. Last Tuesday night the club formally moved into and opened its new quarters, No. 555 Main street, Cambridgeport, and they made this the occasion of a celebration to which prominent cyclists of this vicinity were invited. The quarters now occupied by the club consist of a recreation room, a parlor, billiard room and lavatory. There is no regular wheel room. The rooms are tastefully furnished, and the club is to be congratulated on having such a pleasant home.

The exercises of the evening consisted of music and recitations. Captain Roopacted the master of ceremonies acceptably, and he was ably supported in his endeavors to entertain the members and guests by Messrs. Cutting, Fay, Hacket, Rodie and others.



The Cambridgeport Club has about fifty names on the membership rolls. The present officers are: President, J. S. Sanborn; Captain, W. T. Roop; First Lieutenant, F. E. Carmen; Second Lieutenant, C. E. Leach; Treasurer, G. D. Mason; Secretary, E. P. Craig; Standard Bearer, J. E. Holmes; Bugler, J. R. Jacobs.

FROM WORCESTER, MASS.

THINGS bicycular in this "Heart of the Commonwealth" are by no means dead, though we seldom make ourselves heard in the papers. Cycling has changed its character considerably within a very few years in this place, and I presume has done so in many other cities. A few years ago none but the well-to-do thought they could afford a wheel, now there are so many cheap, second-hand machines to be had that a man is poor indeed who cannot afford one; consequently, or coincidently, there are quite a number of riders to be seen about, whose education in gentlemenly conduct has been slightly neglected. This is to be expected, and must be met in some way. [Can it be that some of our Reservoir rowdies have gone to Worcester?—ED.] Thus far we have been permitted to have our own way pretty thoroughly, the authorities putting little or no restriction upon us. This may not always last.

The ladies of this burg have not taken to wheeling with a grand rush, in fact our town is inclined to be a little conservative in the matter, but gradually the truth seems dawning upon them that there is health as well as fun in it. So cautiously, oh so carefully, a few of our school teachers have this past season hired a friendly boy to ride the tricycle over to Park avenue, our favorite pleasure drive. There the aforesaid schoolma'am would take charge of the machine, and so hidden from the cold, unfeeling gaze of Mother Grundy, and while the slowly sinking sun shed its golden glories with a rich effulgence through the autumn foliage, and the song of the robin and wren mingled with that of the cricket, these dainty dames would disport themselves, and drink in the joys of a ride a-wheel. And so the leaven is working. L. A. W. 2178.

EX-CAPTAIN ELMER G. WHITNEY is at present in New Orleans. He is expected home shortly, and it is said the city of Boston will be his permanent home. As Whitney says, New Mexico is an excellent country—for those that like it.

NOTES BY THE "CAVILER."

HAVE just returned to Boston; I went home to vote. You could easily tell which side I voted on if you only saw my face. But to the point; as my home is in ——, N. Y., I naturally made it convenient to stop over in New York and attend the Berkeley Club races. I arrived in New York at 10 A. M. Tuesday, and, by agreement, met a friend, also a wheelman. We lunched at a down-town restaurant, and as we sat quietly at the table awaiting the provender, a very much excited individual accosted my friend and at once launched into the bitterest tirade against the political circular issued by Chairman Luscomb, asking for wheelmen's votes in support of Gov. Hill. During the day we met many League members of both parties, and while the supporters of Miller were rampageous the supporters of Hill chuckled, but the most of them admitted that Luscomb's official appeal was rather bad taste. The Executive Committee, however, have the matter under discussion, and the decision arrived at will be waited for by New Yorkers with bated breath.

I WENT up to the Oval to see the races, and my friend C—— acted as cicerone. I am not acquainted with New York wheelmen, or cycling celebs. of Gotham, and so naturally I wanted to have some of them pointed out to me. "There, do you see that aristocratic looking blonde over there?" said C——, and when my optics rested on the object pointed out I was told that was George Bidwell, the Chief Consul of New York. There are few cyclists in the country who have not seen Mr. Bidwell, but poor I, had never seen the gentleman before. I was honored with an introduction. The gentleman was suavity itself, and is apparently the embodiment of composure and good breeding.

I HAD never seen Prial, and as I had recently read his spicy compliments to ex-Referee Merrill, of Springfield, whose peppery letter to Prial had in turn called for the New Yorkers red hot reply, I of course was anxious to see ye editor of the Wheel. A slight, wiry, nervous, dark-haired gentleman, wearing "specs," was pointed out as Prial. His every gesture showed alertness and push. If I had never read his writings I should have put him down as a man of impulse. He has "wide awake" written all over him. I was anxious to meet the gentleman, but opportunity did not offer, and so I am the loser, and Prial will never appreciate the narrow escape he had from meeting face to face one of the WORLD'S most honored contributors.

REALLY I am writing myself down as an absolute nonenity in averring that Bidwell and Prial were never seen by your contributor until election day, but what will your readers think when I write myself down further as being a man unfit to write for a cycling paper, when I say that on the Oval I saw young Windle for the first time. I do not claim to be a judge of an athlete, but what little I do know of anatomy is sufficient to convince me that Windle's successes are not "accidents," or, as your sporting men would say, "flukes." I will not tire you with telling you about all the celebrities I saw for the first time and how I longed to be on familiar terms with them. At the present stage of my connection with the cycling press the cycling celeb. is a "Little Tin God." I wonder if "familiarity will breed despise." I almost dread to put this query to the test. The desire to hob-nob with all the cycling lights at present consumes me, however.

THE little P. S. in your last note to "find out on what ground certain members of the Chelsea, Mass., Club objected to the Dorchester Club taking the E. R. C. Cup on default of the Cambridgeport Club to appear at the appointed time," rather staggered me, but like a faithful servant I obeyed orders, and found out—nothing! That is, I found out that a few of the members of the Chelsea Club very unwisely took exception to the Dorchester Club taking the cup on a walk-over. Why should they object? I give it up. The Cambridgeport Club notified the referee that they could not race the tie off, and so that ended it, and the Dorchester team rode over the course and took the cup, and very properly too. I further found out that the sentiment of the club was not in accord with that of the aforesaid few members.

NEW YORK.

"HAWKSHAW."

ANOTHER proof of the truth of my statement made, not long ago, in this column, that New York wheelmen are, as a rule, opposed to road racing, is shown in the recent action of the New York Bicycle Club at their semi-annual meeting on Monday, at which the delegates of that club to the Alphabetical Association were instructed to vote for the disbandment of the Association, as the New York Club disapproved of road racing. Should the delegates not be able to accomplish the disbandment as above, they were instructed to resign their membership in the Alphabetical, giving as the reason therefor the disapproval of the New York Club of road racing. This is a move in the right direction I have long wished to see, and at last puts this prominent club on record in the right position regarding a practice that they have too long sanctioned nominally by allowing the club to remain a member of an association that the unanimous vote of withdrawal shows they were not in accord with.

DID you ever notice in club affairs that as soon as some energetic member gets lifted from the ranks to the elevation of some petty office, how, as a rule, he at once imagines he is a Grand Mogul, a Maharajah, a Tycoon and an Ahkood of Swat, rolled into one, to be reverenced by all and amenable to none? If you didn't, it's evident you never belonged to a bicycle club, or that it was not a New York City one if you did.

DO you know where the wheel appears as a prominent feature in the construction of a god? Of course you don't! Neither did I, until I came across an account recently of a collection of Northern antiquities in the museum at Berlin, among which are the idols from which sprung the names of the days of the week. From the idol of the sun comes Sunday. This idol is represented with his face like the sun, holding a burning wheel, with both hands on his breast. The "new member" says that he has looked this subject up, and finds in the above fact the explanation of the heretofore undiscoverable reason of a wheelman's desire to always run up his mileage to such an extent on Sunday, and that the idol was the product of a pre-historic cycler, who has therein shown the way that the ancient sun took his header, etiquette then demanding that in doing so he should save his wheel by retaining it against his chest protector. I have been trying to see the "Old Vet," Pitman, concerning this, as you know he is personally acquainted with every cycler since Adam, but since the election the whereabouts of Pitman have been a mystery.

OFTEN in my feeble attempts at proselytism in favor of women adopting cycling as a pastime or as an exercise, I am met with the argument that to do so is both unfeminine and unfashionable. How idiotic these statements are, any thinking person well knows. As to the first, any impartial observer will admit that cycling is more modest and more graceful than horseback. Did cycling entail upon its fair devotees one half the display of form and figure that modern horseback riding by women does, I would blush to encourage its adoption by any woman. As to the second count, "it is not being fashionable;" perhaps it is not, nor is horseback riding. Riding schools have taken the place of roller skating, the ring naturally succeeds the rink, in fact the latter has been altered into the former in most cases. Women claim to ride to reduce weight, improve their figure, or a thousand other feminine evasions of the fact that they do so in most cases because they now meet the same lot of young women and sappy young men at the riding schools that they formerly did at the rinks. They will ride any sort of a horse, or spend a hundred dollars for a riding habit, without turning a hair, but adopt cycling, never! All because their feeble brain causes them to think riding to be an aristocratic and swell sort of entertainment, while cycling is not. Sometimes riding is fashionable, but not always, especially, not always.

THE games of the Berkeley Athletic Club brought forth an unusually fine crop of seekers after cheap notoriety, in the shape of individuals who accept positions at race meets and then fail to assume any of the labors attached to same, being satisfied to let others do the work, so long as their names appear upon the programme in some official capacity. One of the most flagrant examples of this unworthy course of action, was in the case of the scorer, a well-known wheelman accepting the position and then, instead of appearing to do the work, he grandly reviewed the races from a seat in the grand-stand, allowing all of the labor to fall upon his club mate, Mr. Shaw, which gentleman, by the by, deserves the thanks of every one for the able way he performed his onerous task. It is time that race meet managers make a black list of these incompetent and untrustworthy acceptors of official positions when once they have acted as above, so that afterward they can be entirely ignored. The success or failure of a race meet depends more upon the track officials than upon the racers themselves, as even a poor entry list, if well managed by competent officials, will present a good day's sport, whereas the finest field of flyers results in failure when the track officials are incompetent, or shirk their share of the labor necessary for a success. I am a believer that to those alone, who are competent and willing to act as officials, should the barren honor of their names appearing upon the programme be given. A man who accepts a position which he does not fill neither honors himself nor is deserving of honor from others. Strong words perhaps, but just ones at that.

ST. LOUIS.

"LINNEUS."

THE Clarksville trip, which was taken last Sunday by a number of wheelmen, will long linger in the minds of the participants as being one of the most enjoyable affairs that they have had in a long time. The party left Saturday night and arrived at Clarksville at 11.20 P. M. They repaired to the Carroll House, where accommodations had been secured by telegraph. Sunday morning was spent in running over the fine gravel roads of Pike County, a party going to Eolia and another circling around the Belt road. The trip to Eolia was much enjoyed, particularly the one-mile coast on the return. Dinner was had at 12.30; the afternoon was spent in making the usual trip around the Belt, and taking in the numerous fine coasts on the road leading into town from the South. Hal. Greenwood climbed Crank Hill, grade one foot in eight in some places, twice in succession on his Star, and Dick Hurck performed the same feat once on a Springfield Roadster. Pomarade had the misfortune to take a free bath in trying to coast through a creek, coming from Paynesville. Apples, milk and cider were had in profusion at each stopping place, and were given with the usual Pike County liberality.

THE Cycle Club races at Forest Park take place on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 29.

W. H. BARRON has had his crayon drawing, "After Regnault," which was exhibited at the Exposition, hung in the Missouri's reception room, where it adorns the West wall and is pointed out as the piece de resistance of the club house.

BOB GERWING, the Denver crack, was in town a week ago, the guest of the Cycle Club. He is a whole-souled, generous wheelman and a rider from away back. Your correspondent is indebted to him for an account of the Denver riding district.

H. C. CAKE, of Clarksville, deserves and should receive the thanks of all St. Louis wheelmen for the manner in which he took care of them while at that place Sunday. He was with the visitors from morn till night, and even went to the extreme of seeing them off on the 2.30 A. M. train.

THE wheelmen from Quincy to the number of ten came down to Clarksville Sunday and took in the runs with the St. Louis delegates. A number of them were mounted on safeties. The intended trip to Louisiana was abandoned on account of the swollen condition of Buffalo creek.

"MENTOR" stated in one of his letters that Nelson C. Haynes, of Kansas City, could beat any of St. Louis' riders, barring Stone. Harry Gordon and Jno. Hodgen authorize me to state that they are willing to race him any distance from one to fifty miles, for a $25 medal. So there, now!

ED. SELLS, the "Kamera Krank" of the Missouris, has a number of views taken by the Kodak camera. The pictures are small but very fine, and are easily developed. He states that this little instrument is just the thing for cyclers, and will largely increase the amateur photographers among them.

THROUGH the efforts of President Brewster full election returns were received at the Missouri's club house on Tuesday, by special wire, and after being transcribed were shown on a screen in front of the club house by a stereoptican, which was in charge of Messrs. Christianson and Louderman. Between the returns views of cycling adventures, taken at various places, were shown, and were loudly praised.

I AGREE perfectly with "Ariel" in his statement that a 50 or a 100 mile record has to be made in continuous riding, total elapsed time to count and not the actual riding time. This leaves C. C. Hildebrand's record of 100 miles in twelve hours still the local record for the distance. This was made at night, and all subsequent attempts have been made in full daylight, but the elapsed time was greater in every instance.

PRESIDENT LUCAS, of the Cycle Club, while coasting the long grade into Rockford on the Clarksville Belt road, forgot that he had to make a short turn at the toll gate and came down the hill brakes off. But for the warning of a number of cyclists he would have been treated to a free bath in the creek at the bottom of the hill. H. G. Wolzendorf thought "the road was as level as a floor," and was in the same fix.

GEO. E. TIVY and Frank Mehlig, who claims to have ridden 100 miles in 9h. 3m. last Sunday, will ride a 100-mile road race Sunday, starting from the Missouri Club's house to the 25-mile house and return, for a $25 medal. The race is the outcome of a discussion relative to Mehlig's claim of having done the distance in the time mentioned above. The race will be for blood, as both contestants are determined to win.

SUNDAY, Oct. 28, the Missouris had a very enjoyable run to Kirkwood, via Stringtown, Sappington, Tesson Ferry, Gravois and Denny roads. The roads were all in fine condition, particularly the Tesson Ferry, which resembled asphaltum more than a gravel road. Dinner had been ordered in advance at Kirkwood, but to the dismay of the Missouri lads the Cycle Club was noticed leaving the restaurant just before they got there. An investigation followed, and it was shown that the landlord had mistaken the Cycle boys for Missouris, and given them the latter's dinner. This also accounts for the Cycle's surprise on being told dinner was waiting for them.

PERCY STONE states, in reply to the "Stroller," that he is willing to race Lumsden any distance up to 100 miles, on track or road, for a $100 medal. He states further that he never made the remark to the Quincy lady in regard to not having to train for the Quincy races, which the "Stroller" claims he did. Stone won two out of four races with Lumsden when he was entirely out of trim, and claims he can beat him again, and St. Louis money will back him in the assertion. Still, he does not under-estimate Lumsden, and says that he is one of the best third class men he ever met. By the way, "Stroller," what has become of that promised Chicago-St.-Louis road race that Bob. Garden wrote to Brewster was to be arranged upon his return from the Buffalo meet?

KANSAS CITY.

"MENTOR."

THE United Wheelmen will be housed Dec. 1, in a handsome three story, brick house, located on Broadway, the best West Side street in the city. The building is an imposing one, and the move will prove conclusively the strong hold wheeling has on Kansas City. The building is of an antique design, something on the order of a medieval baronial castle, with its turreted roof and general appearance. The first floor will have the parlor, reading room, billiard room and lavatory, while the pool table room will be on the next floor. The remainder of the club will be furnished and rented exclusively to club members. The rooms will all be elegantly furnished and new billiard and pool tables will be put in. The club will be more of a social organization, and application for membership will be closely scrutinized. A number of entertainments will be given this winter, chief of which will be a grand full dress ball. Besides, a number of social affairs will be given. A committee on revision of constitution and by-laws has been appointed, and it will report Tuesday, Nov. 6. The club will incorporate under the laws of the State. The dues and initiation fee will be raised commensurate with its increased comforts. The club is in very prosperous condition, and it is destined to prove a very strong organization. It is stated that the United Wheelmen will have a club house built to their requirements and plans a year hence. Among the members of the United Wheelmen is one whose wealth is rated at least $500,000.

A NUMBER of ladies' bicycles will be seen on our streets next season. The asphalt paved streets are well adapted for riding.

HARRY G. STUART, for four years closely identified with wheeling and bicycle clubs here, leaves about Dec. 15 for Los Angeles, Cal., where he will take a position on a morning newspaper there. He has for years furnished the morning papers here with gossipy cycle notes.

C. H. LEIG, a well-known professional trick rider, formerly of this city, in the employ of C. B. Ellis, but now of Omaha, Neb., was in this city a short time since, and had a week's engagement at a local variety theatre. Quite a delegation of cyclers attended one evening and gave him a rousing send-off.

SOME of our riders have got on to a new mount, which is the most graceful of all. It consists of running alongside of wheel and jumping on the pedal and rising with it into the seat. It is very similar to the pedal mount, only instead of putting foot on pedal you jump from ground to pedal, and rise gracefully into the saddle. It is easily accomplished, with no danger of fall.

PORKOPOLIS NOTES.

"STAR."

The following item has been going the rounds of the press: "A new idea in tricycling has been invented by an Englishman, who has been travelling with his wife through France on a machine fitted with a bamboo mast, on which a sail can be hoisted. The wind has sometimes kept him moving, even on up-grades, without using the pedals." This might be practicable in France, but here, where the winds are almost always head winds, it would certainly prove a dismal failure.

Levi and the Centrals don't speak as they pass by.

Wonder why Marqua is so anxious for Helen to get the ax.

It is whispered that Greenwood and Milholland are to fight a duel.

The streets of Newport, Ky., like the life of a hod-carrier, are full of ups and downs.

A. A. Bennett has been elected President of the "Veloce" Club. Now look out for some lively road riding.

It is reported that Meyers said something on colliding with Wendt. Wonder what it could have been.

On the way to Alexandria "Toot" High cut loose that infernal chorus of his, to the great consternation of the natives, who thought a gyranicus or some other horrible monster had escaped from the "Zoo."

The Secretary of the Cincinnati Bicycle Club is in search of information concerning laws regulating the width of tires on the wheels of vehicles used on the public highways, and will consider it an especial favor if Consuls in localities where such laws are in force will correspond with and give him the needed information. Address, Dr. Wm. D. Kempton, 550 Freemsn avenue.

The reason for E. R. Webster's persistent refusal to attend a club run is at last apparent. He is the possesser of one of those cameras with which 100 pictures can be taken without its being reloaded, and has taken over 1700 views this season. He has become so addicted to its use that he carries it with him wherever he goes, and as he has a mortal dread of being guyed, he always goes out by himself.

The consolidation of the Dearborn and Chicago Bicycle Clubs recalls a similar effort made in this city, in the early spring of last year, by several broad-minded and enthusiastic wheelmen, who thought one large organization would exert a much greater influence on the authorities and the public, and consequ ntly advance the interests of cycling to a greater degree than the divided efforts of several smaller clubs. This scheme, however, did not meet with favor; but even if it had, the ages, tastes, habits, dispositions and capabilities of our wheelmen differ so widely that the organization would in all probability have had about as much cohesion as a rope of sand.

The Alexandria run of the C. B. C. on Nov. 4 abounded in mishaps. While climbing Metcalf's hill Dr. Kempton broke one of the levers of his "Star" and was obliged to return. Captain Galway mashed one of his fingers while monkeying with Longley's "Swallow." Norton lost one of the valves of his air-brake. Nelson, on discovering that there were thirteen at the table, left the room and refused to eat. While coasting a long hill, on their return, the tire of the rear wheel of Nelson's goat came out, and becoming entangled in the gearing had to be cut out, obliging him to leave his wheel to be brought in on the bus and to take passage in a private conveyance that fortunately happened to be coming to the city. Two of the Newport Club, Meyers and Wendt, in attempting to pass the Cincinnati boys collided with each other, and came to grief directly in front of Captain Galway, who, to avoid running over them, made a sudden backward spring, but, the little wheel flying up, the step came so violently in contact with his reinforcement that he had to be hung over a fence while the damage was repaired with pins and adhesive tire tape.

NEW ORLEANS.

"NOKOMIS."

The last monthly meeting of the Louisiana Cycling Club was held at the residence of its Vice President, Mr. C. M. Fairchild. When the roll was called fourteen members were found to be present. After the usual routine of business two applications for membership were read, and voted favorably upon, and three members were "fired." A bountiful supply of lemonade and cake was passed around by Mrs. Fairchild, and Miss Fairchild enlivened the evening (and the boys) by singing several songs, which of course was highly appreciated, and the meeting was voted as the most enjoyable ever held by the club. It is said the way the cake and lemonade disappeared in the locality where "Polly" was, was a sight. His storage capacity is immense. Watermelons and sugar cane fared the same way.

Hathorn, the club's champion, went to the State Fair at Baton Rouge again and captured everything. The Louisiana Cycling Club is the only club which has sent members out of New Orleans and taken prizes in a strange city.

Captain A. M. Hill has returned home after an extended trip North and East, and says Buffalo is the greatest cycling city in the country.

The first race for the Batson medal will probably take place in the early part of December, and as the races are to be all road races and none less than five miles in the length, the winner will have to do some hard work.

The wheelmen on the various committees of the lantern parade are working hard, and there is every indication that we will have it. Those wheelmen of the North who have snow and ice in February and March, who are thinking about a trip to this city to see the Mardi-Gras festivities, would do well to bring their wheels with them, for they will be sure to want them, and then they can take parade, which would be highly appreciated by the local cyclists. One of the mystic organizations has kindly offered the wheelmen the use of its costumes, or such ones as will be of any service to them, to represent the characters they wish, which will probably be the characters in Mother Goose's Melodies, and as for novelty, this will undoubtedly take the palm. Imagine Mother Goose on a bicycle, surrounded by Chinese lanterns.

TERRE HAUTE.

"WABASH."

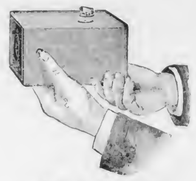
Wheeling has been very quiet for the past few weeks. The hill-climbing craze has taken a hold here. This the fact that J. F. Probst, on a Star, climbed Probst Hill four times, and A. Hulman, on an ordinary, mounted it five times. A few days later Probst went out to the hill and broke the record by riding it ten times. Probst Hill is about 800 feet long, and has a rise of about one foot in three. It is not a very tough hill, but there are some of the boys who have not been able to surmount it.

Silas Lynn, who had his arm broken from a bad header on Oct. 7, is rapidly improving, and will be on his wheel in the spring with the crowd. He is one of the fellows that is not easily bluffed.

A nice little rumpus has been kicked up among the ranks of the T. H. B. Club. At the beginning of the campaign some one spoke of organizing a political club on wheels, but it was thought that it might cause ill feeling, so it was agreed that neither side would turn out and the agreement was kept up to last Tuesday, when the the Republicans had a big turn out. Certain of the T. H. Club men announced in the Republican organ of this city that they would turn out as the T. H. B. C. It was spoken of in the club room the night before the parade that they would turn out as the Terre Haute Club. The Democratic members present were righteously indignant, and threatened to resign if the Republican members carried out their programme. The Republican organ came out the next morning and advised the Republican wheelmen to pay no attention to it, saying it was only another case of "Democratic bluff." About fifteen turned out, and the consequence is that some of the members are going to resign.

A great many members agree that the club should not take part in political demonstrations as a club. In all probability the outcome of the whole affair will be the organization of another club. If this should be the case it will benefit wheeling in this locality, as it will cause rivalry, and consequently more interest.

By the way, what has become of the Referee's six-day race? Did it come off? We have heard nothing of it. [No, it will not "come off;" it was "declared off."—Ed.]



Mason's ride was a creditable one, but do not think it can be taken as record, for it was made on a course less than fifty miles long. Nevertheless it is a ride to be proud of. [Twenty miles is the standard adopted by this paper.—Ed.]

SYRACUSE.

"SALINA."

At the last club meeting held recently, an appropriation of one hundred dollars ($100) dollars was made, with which to furnish our new rooms. Our club is on the boom, and with a few more active members and the forthcoming piasters, we will most certainly make a creditable showing for so young an organization.

SINGER CYCLES

We had the pleasure of trying one of the Singer Safeties the other day, and we can bear witness to the excellence of its running qualities. We soon mastered the steering so that we could run it without hands. Although the machine was geared up to 57, we found no difficulty at all in driving it up good stiff hills.—From Bicycling World and L. A. W. Bulletin, Oct. 26, 1888.

On election night the club rooms were full—only the rooms. One of our members, of journalistic fame, took fiendish delight in coming in at stated intervals and making reports very dampening to our ardor, and also very disasterous to the game of pool then being played. However, he paid for his fun later.

Now there lived in those days a certain youth, and he was called "Bill" Nye, and he said, "come unto me all ye that are heavy laden with cash, and bet therewith on election." "Then did the people exclaim, "What indeed is the matter with Bill?" "Verily, he is all righ!" "Who is all right? Bill Nye" And the people spat on their hands and made a joyful noise on the fish horn and on the swing bridge. Then Bill did arise and say, "Behold, I will lift my voice 'steen times, if my man is elected. And you, my people, must celebrate with a hump. Bring forth the dish pan, the potato masher, and other musical instruments, and let us eat, drink and be merry." And it came to pass that before many moons Bill was defeated. Then he and his young men and maidens did betake themselves into a far off place, where they did not celebrate for many days. And those men who held the "other end" of Bill's bets rejoiced among themselves and said, "Come back, thou chump, and set 'em up!" And he came and sat, and they did whoop her up for many days, and did hoot and howl till Bill was sick unto death.

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

The Directors of the Fort Dearborn and Chicago Bicycle Clubs have sent out a stirring circular to the present members and ex-members, setting forth the advantages offered by the new combination. Both club houses will be maintained, and the dues are the ridiculously low sum of $1.50 per month. Among other things the circular says. "You will find the average social and mental rank of the C. C. C. fully equal to any of our large purely social clubs. You will find that you are in the company of men fully as able and intellligent and of as high standing as you are. Let none think himself above the associations of the new club. A little attention to club matters or the contrary will either make or unmake its future."

Once more I would ask, where is that report of our Constitution Committee, Mr. Chief Consul?

Van Sickles and Roe are already advertising in the Referee. See "Alabama's" notes last week.

The Illinois Club raffle, for the chair given them by their President, Mr. Sloan, netted them about two hundred dollars I am told.

Garden is practicing daily at pool playing, and says his highest ambition is to be able to beat "Verax," his bosom friend, at the above game. Success to you, Garden.

I understand that a full dress ball is to be given by the C. C. C. on or about Dec. 15th, to celebrate the consolidation in an appropriate manner. Particulars are not given as yet.

Weather permitting the three Cs Club will have a "follow my leader" run Thanksgiving Day, with Mr. W. C. Thorne as leader. What a run he will give them. Excuse me from trying to catch William on a rough road.

Our Indian summer fled with the election of Harrison and Morton, and wheels are being put away for the winter day by day, and only the most courageous of our wheelmen are to be seen now spinning along on the wheel.

The Chicago wheelmen worked hard for their fellow wheelman on election day, Mr. Carlson, who, although defeated, ran way ahead of the rest of his ticket. Mr. Carlson was a candidate for County Surveyor on the Democratic ticket, and was only defeated by a small plurality.

The ladies will have charge of affairs Thursday evening, the 22d inst. (Ladies' Night), at the Chicago Cycling Club's Lake avenue club house, and they promise to surprise the members on that

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 20th, 1888.

Coventry Machinists' Co., 239 Columbus Ave., Boston:

Dear Sirs—In reply to yours of Oct. 16th, inquiring as to the safe arrival and appreciation of the SWIFT No. 1 you sent me Sept. 20th, will say am sorry to have delayed so long, but waited until I could give the machine a fair trial, as I have done in the last month. When the machine came here it was criticised and an attempt to run it down, on account of its lightness, all being afraid it would not stand our rough and bad roads, as we have some of the worst roads in Ohio. All I said was, "Wait and see." We waited, and I am now ready to report. I find that as it name implies, it is Swift-er than any other machine of its kind, runs easier, nicer build, lighter, and as strong as any other machine made. It stands as hard usage as any, as I have not spared it anything; it goes wherever any other kind of machine can go, and is not stumped at anything. I am acknowledged to be as hard on a machine, and harder, than most riders here. The machine now, after one month's hard work, not only by myself, but by my friends who have borrowed it daily, is as good as when I took it out of the crate. I have not touched a tool of any kind to tighten it yet. It is the favorite machine of the kind in this city. One friend is about to sell an 1888 pattern Special Star, and another one an 1888 Rudge Bicyclette, to get the SWIFT No. 1; You will see their orders in a few days. I am in love with the little machine. I hope my report may be satisfactory to you, and expect an early answer. I am, yours respectfully, E. J. DOUHET.

SECOND VOLUME NOW READY, AND COMPLETION OF

THOMAS STEVENS'S GREAT WORK

AROUND THE WORLD ON A BICYCLE.

WITH OVER 200 ILLUSTRATIONS AND COLORED FRONTISPIECE of AUTHOR in VOL. I.
IN TWO VOLUMES, 8vo, $8.00; SINGLE VOLUMES, $4.00.

WITH the publication of the second volume, this unique and the most moumental work of its kind ever published, is completed. It is a work that should be placed foremost in the library of every bicyclist, or any one interested in a journey never before equalled for its daring exploits and heroic courage. The work constitutes a library in itself, and has been conceded to be the most remarkable book published for many years.

Covering the most dangerous portions of the daring bicyclist's journey, this second volume is even more interesting than the first. The pages are alive with thrilling adventures.

"It completes one of the most attractive narratives ever put in type."—Buffalo News.

"Rich in incident and adventure, sometimes highly amusing, and always crisp and frank in the telling."—Boston Gazette.

"Whether read for pleasure or information, it will well pay perusal."—N. Y. Times.

"From first to last, the book is intensely interesting. Never egotistical, always terse and picturesque, it is a valuable contribution to the literature of travel."—Philadelphia Record.

"It is a most entertaining book. We admire the pluck and manliness of the author, his intelligence and resources. His descriptions of people and places are fresh and vivid. The 'wheel' draws to itself a crowd in every village. It introduces its owner to men and women whom another tourist would never meet, and it makes him welcome and at home in the greatest variety of company."—N. Y. Observer.

THEY say Skinkle is a candidate for the position of Club Liar, and many and various are the yarns they credit to him to prove their assertions. But I shall claim the title for him from a statement made the day of the election, and that was that he voted the "Prohibition ticket." Think of Skinkle voting that ticket and then say he is not entitled to the honorable title of Club Liar.

PENNSYLVANIA.

"ARIEL."

DIMON, of the South End Club, carried the new badge of the club—a wheel cleft by an arrow—in the 100-mile road race last Tuesday, the first time it has been borne in a contest, although it is not likely to be the last, with such men as Bradley, Becktold, Dimon and L. J. and E. G. Kolb to wear it.

THE Haverford College Athletic Association last Wednesday held their Fall sports, among which was a half mile bicycle race, won by Stokes, '89, in 1.56; Rhoads, '91, second. Bicycle races are getting to be one of the regular cards at all of the school sports here.

THERE are now four of the Psycho tandem bicycles in this city, owned by Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Brown, Mr. Cope, the young banker, and Mr. Tucker, of Germantown. They are going to be great factors in introducing bicycular locomotion to the fair sex.

COMING home from the run of the Century Wheelmen, out the Lancaster Pike, last Sunday, Kirk Brown and A. G. McGlathery scorched in on the former's Psycho tandem bicycle, from General Wayne hotel, to the club house on Broad street, a distance of nine and a quarter miles, in thirty-five minutes. W. G. Speir rode in on his Star in thirty-nine.

LAST Friday night the street cars were brought to a halt and the pedestrians stopped to gaze in front of the Pennsylvania Club House on Girard avenue, the occasion being a jollification on the head of the result of the Presidential election; and small wonder. The passers-by evidently though bedlam had broken loose. Capt. Supplee had donned a long swallow tail coat, made of American flags, ornamented with tin buttons the size of dinner plates and presented quite a gorgeous spectacle. The defeated politicians were quite willing to eat crow but they objected to having it rubbed in on them and consequently when the Captain's demonstrations of delight began to be too exuberant they quietly laid for him, and catching him in the hall, immediately mobbed him, tearing his patriotic garment off his back in a trice. In truth, Mr. Supplee presented a rather dilapidated appearance when he emerged from the melee and his vigorous shouts of "To the rescue, Republicans!" brought dozens to the scene; when for a while it would be well to draw a curtain over the picture. When the smoke of conflict had cleared away and comparative quiet had been restored, the Democracy set out doughnuts by the dozen and tapped a barrel of cider, which was most thoroughly enjoyed. Singing and music, winding up with an old-fashioned Virginia reel, soon spun out the evening, and with many wishes for another election the party broke up; but the broken hats, torn cuffs and collars and dilapidated shirts which were carried home, evidently made the family at home set the club house down as a very lame excuse.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

HARRY COREY met with a painful accident on election day. He was riding his safety over to the polls to vote; the wheels got into the car track and he received a heavy side throw, sustaining a severe sprain of the ankle, and while he managed to continue riding until he reached the polling place he had to be taken home in a carriage. Mr. Corey, we hear, is still confined to his bed in consequence.

"Is cycling a failure?" asks a worthy contemporary, and the response comes back quickly. "In the rain, yes, most decidedly."

EDITOR PRIAL, of the Wheel, paid Boston a flying visit on Monday last. "We met by chance," etc.

PHILADELPHIA next to Washington has probably the largest number of lady riders of any city in the Union.

"ARIEL" sends us a reply to the Reading, Pa., Club, which reached us too late for this issue. It will appear in our next.

CYCLERS in need of any sporting goods, guns, pistols, or in fact any goods needed by a sportsman should notice W. Read & Sons advertisement on another page. Send for catalogue and please mention this paper.

MRS. L. H. JOHNSON of Orange, N. J., holds the American long distance road record for ladies, she having ridden 150 1-2 miles in one day with her husband on a tandem tricycle.

THE Marlboro, Mass., riders are requested by a local paper to bear in mind that the law forbids them running their bicycles on the sidewalks, especially in the evening. Several ladies have complained of their nearness to an accident on dark nights.

ENTRIES for the two mile bicycle handicap, to be given Thanksgiving Day at the Fall Games and Burlesque Exhibitions of the Prospect Harriers of Brooklyn, N. Y., close on Saturday, the 24th. All entries should be sent to J. W. Schoefler, Brooklyn Bicycle Club, or Geo. Paynter, 332 1st. street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE date of the handicap race to be given by C. P. Daniels is fixed at Saturday, Nov. 24, at 2 P. M.; distance about 1 1-6 miles, and the limit will be 200 yards. Entrance fee, $1, for medals. Entries close Thursday, Nov. 22d, and should be made to C. P. Daniels, B. Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium, Boylston and Berkeley streets, Boston.

IT is gratifying to wheelmen to hear the name of W. S. Slocum mentioned in connection with the Speakership of the Massachusetts Legislature. That this gentleman stands so high in the estimation of his colleagues, as to command attention for the honor named, is not surprising to those of us who are personally acquainted with the gentleman.

MR. DUCKER has already begun to lay pipes for the next year's tournament at Buffalo. By the fall of 1889 the track, which during the late tournament was, to put it mildly, "away off," will no doubt be in excellent shape. We doubt if Mr. Ducker will make the fatal mistake of leaving such an important matter as track building to an incompetent third party hereafter. The great tournament projector will no doubt give the track his personal attention next year.

MR. HILLIER, in last issue of Bi. News, has a scathing article on so called English hospitality. He cites example of the way the wholesouled Irishman, the fair haired Dane and the hardy Norwegian, show the kindest attentions to the strangers within their gates, and then compares certain exhibitions of downright rudeness strangers have experienced in England. The article will raise a howl of condemnation from those who hate the truth always.

A PRACTICAL amateur photographer said to us the other day: "I had always been dubious as to the merits of the Kodak as a practical machine, but lately I have given the wonderful little instrument a full trial, and I am more than delighted with the exquisite results." We have been constantly asked the cost of developing, etc., and for our readers' benefit we state that the developing of 100 negatives, the printing of 100 pictures, and the furnishing or reloading camera ready for 100 more pictures, costs in all the ridiculous sum of $10. No cycler can afford to be without one.

RIGHT in line with what we have preached privately and in print is the following, taken from Bi. News. The old theory of vertical tread has by experience been completely busted, but it is astonishing how many safety riders persist in this old style riding. "The mania for riding at too great a stretch is as prevalent with them as with ordinary riders. Nineteen out of twenty safeties sit too far forward, and too high, and what is more, you cannot get them to see their error. Scientific pedalling is out of the question when the rider is posed in such a style, steering is more difficult, the machine is more prone to sideslipping, and the work increased twofold. The saddle of a safety, like any other machine, should be put well back (some six or more inches behind a perpendicular drawn through the crank-axle), and the rider should be able to easily circle the pedals with his instep."

DORCHESTER TAKES THE E. R. CLUB CUP.

REFEREE EMERY notified the Dorchester and the Cambridgeport Clubs that the tie for the Eastern Road Club cup would be run off, starting at 2.30 from the Faneuil House, Brighton, Thursday, November 8th.

The Cambridgeport Club sent in word that its team would not start, and therefore, as the Dorchester Club turned up at the appointed time, Referee Emery ordered Clark and Benson to ride over the course, which they proceeded to do, and thus the race and the cup become the property of the Dorchester Club until next year. Clark finished first in the excellent time of 1.34.45. A. P. Benson established a safety record for 25 miles in the time of 1h. 35m. 25s.

This club has now won the cup twice, and by the terms of agreement it will become this club's permanent property if won the third time.

SCRANTON, PENNSYLVANIA.

NEW CLUB HOUSE.

I OBSERVE by the WORLD this week that we, the Scranton Bicycle Club, have entered into a compact for a twelve thousand dollar club house and now to prove to you that we are pushing it we send you a small wood cut showing how it now appears to the passer-by. We expect to have it finished and furnished by the holidays and then have our house warming.

But we see you are also "on to" our Fair. Well, that is taking up the attention of everybody in this town. It is not an every day undertaking but one of those mammoth conceptions where we beg something of everybody from Dan to Beersheba, and take anything we can get from a one to a fifty dollar contribution, cash, merchandise or live stock. If this article strikes the eye of any one who has not sent in a contribution, they will, of course, see their duty clearly at once.

Our city armory has been laid out in booths for everything and in one department we expect to make quite an exhibit of cycles and sundries contributed by our brother wheelmen and dealers.

If the Fair turns out the success we anticipate and the State municipal law is declared constitutional so we can have a few more miles of asphalt pavements next spring, I think we shall have to invite the League to meet here with us in 1889. You see when some people get a good slice of the surface they are not satisfied until they get the whole earth.

I will not try and give you our discription of our club house but close with a clipping from the Scranton Republican of Oct. 15.

"Among the many new and fine structures rising on Washington avenue, there is one on the corner of Olive street that is attracting no little attention by reason of its unique order of architecture. This is the first club house, designed and erected as such, in the city. Some surprise is manifested because such an enterprise has not been before undertaken. The conception embodies the club feature admirably in all its details, and its arrangement for banquet and reception occasions is quite complete. The basement—all above ground—contains the wheeling department, with its wheel-room, bath-room and dressing rooms. The first floor is so arranged that, although it contains several apartments, it can be thrown into one spacious hall for large receptions. The second floor is divided into a reading room, smoking room, pool room, bath room and secretary's room or office. The third and top floor contains the janitor's apartments, with a kitchen complete in every detail, dining room, living room, dormitories and all the conveniences of a residence or apartment house. The building is not finished, by any means, but will be ready for occupancy about the first of December, when its opening will afford a much better opportunity to set forth the features of this enterprise more fully. It is believed that the Scranton Bicycle Club is about to have a home such as no other club in the State can boast, notwithstanding that there has been no ostentatious proclaiming of this enterprising fact on the part of the club.

IS THE TIME MADE IN THE WILMINGTON-READING RACE A RECORD?

CHIEF CONSUL MERRITHEW, of Delaware, who was one of the Wilmington team in the recent Reading-Wilmington road race, informed me, a day or two since, that according to his cyclometer—which he considers accurate—the distance traversed in the race was but a little over 20 1-2 miles. If this be so, then I presume the claim for record, as made in my report of the race, cannot stand. He also states, that contrary to the information I had received relative to the course, the road was in excellent condition, with the exception of some rough places on the hills. In fact, he says it is better than the Lancaster Pike in some places. The spalling which my informant found on traversing the road two months back, had all been beaten down smoothly by the heavy rains and traffic over the road. All the same you wouldn't catch me racing down some of those hills, and he says it was only their determination to win or break their necks which induced them to do it.

ARIEL.

[We would very much like to have an accurate survey of the above course. Unless the distance claimed, 21 miles, is verified, we cannot of course allow the record.—ED.]

ELIZABETH WHEELMEN.

THE ten-mile handicap race held by the Elizabeth Wheelmen on election day, resulted in a victory for F. C. Gilbert, (5 minutes), with H. McNiece, (10 minutes), second; L. B. Bonnett, (4 minutes) third. L. B. Bonnett's actual time was 39m. 45 sec.; F. C. Gilbert's time, 40m. W. H. Caldwell, the only scratch man, did not start, as he had some engagements at the Berkeley Oval on the same day.

THE ONE-HUNDRED-MILE AMERICAN ROAD RECORD IN COMPETITION.

IN our report of the Sporting Life's 100-mile road race at Philadelphia, on election day, we omitted to state that the times made by Dampman, 7h. 20m. 17s., and McDaniel, 7h. 20m. 18s., both beat the American record in competition. The best previous has been held by W. S. Doane, in 7h. 24m. 3s. Before putting this record away for good we must ask our worthy Philadelphia contemporary what was the length of the course ridden?

FIFTY-MILE TRICYCLE ROAD RECORD.

ON Thursday, 25 Oct., Mr. G. P. Mills made the onslaught on the fifty-mile road record for a tricycle. The whole journey was made at an even pace; indeed, the second half was exactly 1m. faster than the first, whilst the last 12 1-2 miles was done in 38 1-2m., the 50 miles being done in the grand time of 2h. 53m. 25s. Mr. A. J. Wilson, of the North Road C. C., timed and checked him at Kate's Cabin, Mr. A. J. Hills, of the Biggleswade C. C., checking at Biggleswade en route.

KINGS COUNTY WHEELMEN'S TWENTY-FIVE-MILE HANDICAP RACE.

THE Irvington-Milburn course was selected to settle the club race of the Kings County Wheelmen. The following members with handicaps started: H. J. Hall, scratch; T. J. Hall, Jr., 3 minutes; Beasly, 5; Marion, 7; Stevens, 10; Moorhouse, 11; W. Murphy, 14; Jones, 15; King, 18; Barnes, 20; Bensinger, 26; C. Murphy, 28; Wardill, 30. The race was won by W. E. Murphy, in the actual time of 1.39.35; Bensinger, second. T. J. Hall, Jr., made the fastest time, 1.35.

MASON'S GREAT RIDE.

FURTHER advices received in regard to John Mason's ride against time lead us to state that we cannot accept the performance as a road record. Our reason for thus refusing to accept this remarkable performance as a road record is because the course travelled was largely up and down some street. In fact, during the night Mr. Mason rode up and down Ashland avenue, a distance of about a mile, and during this time, and in fact during the whole ride, it does not appear that he was properly checked.

We do not doubt but that Mr. Mason really rode the 277 miles, as claimed, but for the reason that the course selected was not at least twenty miles straight away, and for the reason that checkers or pace makers did not watch him all the time, we cannot allow the claim as a road record.

Mr. Mason's ride will be looked on as a remarkable feat of endurance. He rode a Veloce Columbia, the same machine on which he has ridden over 6000 miles.

HARVARD BICYCLE CLUB ROAD RACE.

THE annual fall road race of the Harvard Bicycle Club was held November 8th, over the nine-mile course, beginning near Harvard square and extending up North avenue, Day street and Broadway to Arlington. The course is about the roughest that could have been chosen, and was very hard on Davis and Brown, who have trained entirely on the track this year. The latter dropped out, and the former was distanced and came in a number of minutes behind the others. The times of the first six men were taken, who finished as follows:

	Start.	Actual Time.
	M.	M. S.
1—Barron, '91,	7	38 45
2—Greenleaf, '92,	3	35
3—Holmes, '92,	7	39 05
4—Bailey, '91,	2 1-2	34 45
5—Rogers, '90,	6	38 30
6—Kelley, L. S.,	6	38 45

The Institute of Technology Bi. Club has accepted the challenge of the Harvard Bi. Club to a road race, which will be conducted on a somewhat original plan. The Tech. does not know who its best riders are, so each club may enter as many men as it chooses, but only the first five men from each club shall count. The race will take place Saturday, the 31st of November, over a course including the reservoir and Massachusetts avenue. The Harvard Club will probably be represented by Davis, Brown, Bailey, Greenleaf, Rogers, Kelley and Barron.

CAUTION.

THE St. George's Engineering Co., makers of the "New Rapid" cycles, ask us to caution our readers against buying machines, except from their duly authorized agents, as some unscrupulous maker in England is not only making an inferior imitation of the celebrated New Rapid safety, but has also imitated as near as possible their trade mark, which is registered in all countries where cycles are used. We regret we have not a block of their trade mark for insertion in our columns, but have asked for one, and will insert it in a later edition.

A. A. MCCURDY WANTED.
REWARD OFFERED.

THE following letter from the commanding officer of the Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, sets at rest any doubt as to whether A. A. McCurdy is the man who assaulted his keeper. The letter is dated Jefferson Barracks, Mo., Nov. 11, 1888, and is as follows:

Mr. W. W. Stall, Boston, Mass.:

Sir: In reply to your letter of the 29th Oct., I have the honor to state, the records of this office show that Alfred A. McCurdy enlisted at this Depot July 28, 1888, and was placed in confinement on Oct. 3, 1888, on a charge of theft, but escaped from sentinel Oct. 20, 1888, and is still at large.

The description given by you, corresponds with that on file at this Depot.

A reward of $30 will be given upon apprehension and delivery of this man to the military authorities.

(Signed) GEO. H. SANDS,
First Lieutenant Sixth Cavalry, Depot Adjutant.

McCurdy is also wanted by the Civil authorities in several places, on the charge of theft, forgery and several other nice little criminal counts. After the United States army authorities get through with McCurdy we think the Civil authorities will not have much more than a body to work on.

PRESIDENT SHRIVER OF THE NEW YORK CLUB PROTESTS.

Editor Bicycling World: I regret to see that you have allowed your correspondent from this city to recommence the amusement of disparaging the New York Bicycle Club, so much in vogue among a certain class of writers for the cycling press a few years ago. The club's internal regulations, discussed by him with so much freedom, are the club's private affairs, with which the public have nothing to do, and the statements made by him are altogether incorrect. To set the matter straight and stop this unwarranted gossip, I will say that the question of card-playing in our new club house has never been considered by any one in the club from the standpoint of regulating individuals' morals, as he has tried to represent. We do not consider that it is our function to look after the morals of our members, young or old. Opposition arose to card playing, on the ground that it might injure the club standing by giving the impressions that it was a gambling club. The Board of Trustees respected both sides of the question and submitted the matter without prejudice, to a meeting of the whole club, which voted to allow card playing but to prohibit all kinds of gambling, not on moral grounds but simply because public opinion—rightly or wrongly—frowns on gambling, and all respectable clubs have subsequently found it necessary to restrict it. Yours truly, EDWARD J. SHRIVER.

New York, Nov. 11, 1888. President New York Bi. Club.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION AT NEW ORLEANS.

A CIVIL suit of some little interest to the outside cycling world was decided last week in one of our local courts. It appears that for years back the New Orleans Bicycle Club has been accepting resignations provided the member was "square on the books" at the date of his resignation, and not the slightest question had ever been raised until recently, when resignations became all too plentiful, and with a high-priced club house on hand the club found itself nearing a "nine hole," and "the faithful," discerning in the dim future a not-over-pleasing going-down-in-the-pocket performance, it was speedily decided that something must be done. The Constitution and By-laws were read and re-read, and studied and re-studied, with the result that a lawyer was consulted, and on his advice all resignations were rejected and the parties notified that unless a year's dues were forthcoming suit would be instituted for the amount. Naturally, a commotion followed. Some paid, some didn't. Mr. E. W. Hunter was amongst the latter, and he politely informed the club that he stood ready to face the music. They sued and the case has just been decided in favor of the club, the Judge ruling that an organization can interpret its laws as it pleases. The question, it seems, hinged very considerably upon the interpretation of the clause in the club's Constitution stating that "the annual dues shall be $18, payable quarterly," or something to that effect.

Mr. Hunter's attorney made a masterly argument, and scored point after point, and when he finished things looked so blue for the club that the Court's decision was very much of a surprise to all concerned. The amount involved was but $13, too small to carry the case to a higher court, which would surely be done were it possible.

Mr. Hunter was one of the organizers, and at one time President of the N. O. B. C. He worked hard and faithfully for its interest in its early days, and naturally feels sore that his former comrades-in-arms should have pursued such an unfraternal course.

The matter has been the source of some little comment, and it looks much like a case of driving nails in one's own coffin on the part of the New Orleans Club, however, the "powers that be" doubtless knew what they were about, and it is their funeral, not mine.

BI.

BICYCLING IN BELGIUM.—III.
BY CLERICUS.

THE storm had so delayed me that I was not able to ride through to Brussels as I had aimed to do. This gave me more leisure at Malines and so I determined to see more of the latter. While still standing at the foot of the old cathedral tower, huge in itself, but disproportioned by the gigantic face of the clock on its spireless head, I got out my city map and pocket compass to take my bearings. Already I was surrounded by a crowd of excited youngsters, eyeing me with open mouths, but the compass set them wild with curiosity, and they bumped their heads together about mine in their eagerness to see it. Several of the heads, too, belonged to old shoulders.

Then mounting once more, and still clothed in my rubber suit, an extra gossamer sheet, pinned on like a talma, floating and shimmering in the wind, I was certainly a very novel figure. As I rode down through the centre of the city one expression I heard so often that at last it dawned upon me, "Priest! Priest!" No wonder! My sable suit resembled the black robes so common in this land of priests. There was doubtless a shade of humor in the term, but certainly it was more complementary than the endless iteration that one hears, for instance, in like circumstances in the streets of the Quaker City—"Devil, on two wheels!"

Of course I had an escort from one side of the city to the other. It was at an hour of the evening when work was ended and the people were at their doorsteps. The women and girls especially, bare headed and knitting, were out in numbers, looking and laughing, and exchanging their merry quips at the expense of their black, ghostly visitor gliding by on his spider webs. In one narrow street an excited old frou ran ahead of me screeching for her neighbors to turn out, and out they turned. The clatter of the wooden sabots of my body guard of boys would itself have drawn a crowd. In their eagerness to keep up some of them pulled off their sabots and ran along in their stocking feet. One small, bare-footed musician had a pair of "bones" in the fingers of one hand, which he rattled away as he ran, challenging me with his eyes for my admiration.

Seeing my chance I sped away quite to the outskirts, and there alighted alone on one of the many bridges of the lazy rivers and canals of this sleepy old city. It was just at the sunset hour, and the wide canal stretched its long mirror, like a pier glass, in unbroken lines, until lost in the perspective of the dim distance. Both sides of it were bordered interminally with splendid rows of linden trees, and between their dark trunks, on the far horizon, shone the great declining orb of day. Weltering in his own red blood, grandly he sank to his rest, like a warrior on the field of his glory.

Standing there on that old bridge I be-thought me of Browning's stirring stanzas on the ride from "Ghent to Aix." Across this bridge, in harmony with the poet's conception, might the three couriers have galloped at their break-neck pace to carry the "good news" in time. It made my blood flow quicker as I remembered the lines:

"Behind shut the postern, the lights sank to rest,
And into the midnight we galloped abreast.
Not a word to each other: we kept the great pace
Neck by neck, stride by stride, never changing our place.

'Twas moonset at starting, but while we drew near Lokeran, the cocks crew and twilight dawned clear;
And from Mechlin church tower we heard the half chime,
So Joris broke silence with, 'Yet there is time!'

* * * * * * * * * * *

Then I cast loose my buff coat, each ulster let fall,
Shook off both my jack-boots, let go belt and all,
Stood up in the stirrup, leaned, patted his ear,
Called my Roland his pet name, my horse without peer!

And all I remember is, friends flocking round
As I sat with his head 'wixt my knees on the ground,
And no voice but was praising this Roland of mine,
As I poured down his throat the last measure of wine."

I could hardly refrain from hugging my own Rosinante, who like Roland, his rider, had borne me so well and so far through the storm to-day. I had still hoped, however, to ride a few miles further to the village of Villevarde, in homage to the memory of John Tyndale, the Bible translator, who was there strangled and burned, and his ashes thrown into the river; not, however, before his work was done, for in the following year his prescribed translation was given to England by royal license, and ever after to the English speaking world. Forgoing my pilgrimage to this shrine I made my way to the railway station, where after luncheon I shipped my wheel to Brussels. It went by the same train with me, and after being detained in the baggage room all night I heard the familiar tinkle of its bell, as sweet to my ear as the neighing of his steed to a Bedouin of the desert. It rose from the hotel courtyard early next morning as it was being safely delivered by a railway porter without further charge. Arriving in Brussels in the early evening there was yet time, after a thorough change of clothing, for a promenade along the gay boulevards of the petite Paris. My rest after this most eventful day of my cycling in Belgium was like the sleep of "Araby the Blest."

ABBOT BASSETT, Secretary.

"IN order to reduce our stock, we will offer great bargains," is a familiar saying as the year draws to a close and the desire for a good showing on the books of account. We are reminded that we have a surplus stock of bound volumes. These should be on the shelves of club libraries. In order to reduce our stock we will sell the volumes at $1.00 each, which is about the price paid for binding. Please send in your orders. In years to come, these bound volumes will be valuable possessions.

Texas Appointment.

I take pleasure in hereby appointing Hugh J. Blakeney, of Dallas, as Chief Consul for Texas.

T. J. KIRKPATRICK,
President.

ROAD IMPROVEMENT.

A theoretically perfect road is one that connects by the easiest possible gradients, and by the most direct lines, the points between which it is desirable to effect communication. It should be well grounded on a solid foundation that effectually isolates the road crust from the subsoil; it should be efficiently drained, and provided with proper watercourses and side channels; its tranverse section should be approximate to the arc of a circle or ellipse; it should be free from ruts and all inequalities; and should theoretically present to the traffic a surface like a solid slab of stone, free from mud, dust, and all shifting detritus.

Such a road offers far less resistance to the passage of vehicles over its surface than does the road usually met with, while the cost of maintaining it in this condition will be more than counterbalanced by the saving in horseflesh and the ensuing cheaper transit of merchandise. Upon this point all road authorities are practically agreed, for it is an admitted axiom that efficiency and cost are invariably in inverse ratio

A number of experiments made by Prof. J. W. Sanborn, of the Missouri Agricultural College, show that on a moist dirt road a force equal to 487 pounds was necessary to move a load of 3,665 pounds, or 57 per cent more than was needed to move the same load on a gravel road having a grade of one foot in twenty-eight. On a level gravel road, the force needed was only one fourth as much as on the dirt, and on a plank floor but one seventh as much power was required as was needed in moving the load over the dirt road. This made no allowance for energy wasted by the horse in pulling his feet from the mud and in lifting them over the little elevations always before them on a muddy road. These facts suggest a few calculations that may not be entirely without interest to those who have to haul loads in town or in country.

Supposing that the highways on each alternate section line be well made of gravel or other equally good material at a cost of, say, $2,080 per mile, and that this cost be equally divided between the sections adjoining the improved highways, the annual interest to be paid by each section of land at six per cent will be $124, or 19.5 cents per acre per year. Can farmers afford to pay this tax for the sake of having well-graded, hard, smooth roads every day in the year from their doors to the market town? How many loads must each haul to save enough in the time and wear of men, horses, harness and wagons to equal the interest, assuming that a fair day's work should average fifteen miles of hauling and be worth $3 per load of whatever weight, could be safely hauled over dirt roads. According to the conclusions reached through the experiments mentioned, forty-two loads on the dirt road, twenty-seven loads on a well-gravelled road having an incline of one foot in twenty-eight, and ten and a half loads on a level, well-gravelled road would equal the interest, on the above basis of $3 per day. If wagons strong enough to bear the burden were used, the number of loads on smooth and level macadam might be reduced to six. The pay would practically be, for hauling loads over the several kinds of roads, equal to $3 on dirt, $4.67 on inclined gravelled, and $12 on leveled gravelled roads respectively, per load, while on level, smooth macadam it would be equal to $21 per load.

These figures are all based upon a comparison between the forces necessary to move a specific weight over a dirt road only slightly moist and those required for moving the same weight over the other descriptions of roads. The advantages of the improved over the dirt roads would not fully appear until wet weather or spring or a mild winter should come to make channels of deep mud of the highways through districts where the soil is rich like that of the fertile bottom lands of the unctous prairies of the West. At such times, work with teams becomes extremely difficult, if not quite impossible, so far as the roads are concerned: and in the fields no hauling should be done for reasons that will appear to any good farmer. In such seasons, horses and men lie idle, thus wasting time and food that, with better highways, might be made to bring profit to the farmer. With hard and level roads, good use could be made of those days when work with teams could not be done in fields without cutting up their surface and over-working their horses.

HINTS ABOUT ROAD BUILDING.

A road bed of clay is good in dry weather, and one of sand is tolerable in a wet time and the latter is but slightly affected by the frost but we need one that is good in all seasons.

Not being able to make the surface "water tight," there must be a substratum that will carry the water from above, and that from below, as quickly as possible to the drains. Whatever may be used for this under layer, stones greater than an inch in diameter should not be placed within ten inches of the surface, for otherwise when there is a compact foundation, they are sure to work up, from the downward pressure of gravel, forcing itself beneath them. Clean gravel, rejecting stones above an inch diameter, put on in successive layers of three to four inches, to the depth of ten inches, each layer being well worked down with a heavy roller, assisted by the daily travel, with a small admixture of finer gravel or loam upon the top in some cases will make as good a surface as one can expect for the majority of our country roads.

Pebbles, about an inch in diameter to two or three inches placed upon the surface, will not pack together on account of their hardness and smooth, round surface. It should be understood that McAdam and Telford roads are made of broken stone—angular fragments.

A pure sand road is improved by a topping of clay or loam; and it may be six inches in thickness, or more, according to the depth of the sand.

Quite passable roads have been made in a region where a vegetable mould and loam lay upon pure clay and no sand or gravel was at hand, by leaving the surface as nearly as possible in its natural state and flanking with deep ditches, throwing the excavations from them out, and not upon the road bed.

A very good use of stones, if they are abundant, is to place them in a slough that must be crossed. But if it is deep, a better method is to use poles or brush in alternate layers first across and then lengthwise covering the whole with not less than two feet of the best material at hand.

A thoroughly under-drained road-surface will not be seriously affected by the heavings of frost, will dry up speedily after rains, and will be passable at all seasons of the year by the average load, though the material composing it may be of an inferior character, i. e., more depends upon the drainage than upon the materials of surface. By drainage, we mean, of course, not the crowning of the road and the digging of a ditch for surface water, but the laying of proper drains under the road itself so as to keep the ground free from moisture with which the frost works its mischief. By proper drains we mean the broken stone of various degrees of coarseness with which a road bed is made permeable by water below and smooth on the surface.

The vicinity of a road should be kept clear of trees and bushes as they obstruct the sun and wind and prevent evaporation. Hence shade-trees set along the margins for beauty and comfort to the traveller, should not be placed too frequently and only in dry and exposed places.

HINTS ABOUT REPAIRS.

After a road has been properly rolled and the surface made compact and smooth it should always be maintained in that condition no matter how great is the amount of travel on it. "A stitch in time saves nine," here as elsewhere. The tendency is to produce ruts: these gather water: this soaks up the road bed and spoils the whole. The problem can be put in this way. To have a good road it is necessary that there be no dust or mud on the same and that there be no ruts: therefore, remove the dust and mud as fast as they are formed and fill up the ruts as fast as they are made. The whole matter is here in a nutshell. It may be thought, at the first view, that this is too expensive a system, its principal beauty lies, however, in the fact that it costs less per mile of road kept one year than the pernicious system of annual or semi-annual repairs as will be shown and proved. The above two rules—sweep off the mud and dust as fast as they appear—are all that is necessary to be carried out in order that there be continually a good road. Without continual repairs, there can be no such thing as a constantly good road, a proposition that cannot too often be repeated. By repairing a road annually, or twice a year, it matters not which, the result is, strictly speaking, a good road at no time during the whole year. The road is wretched just after repairs; it becomes passable after a while and deteriorates from that day forward until it is again made wretched; and so on ad infinitum according to the present only too commonly followed system. By the other method is offered us a road as smooth as a floor, year in, year out, and let it not be forgotten at a less expense.

A little mud on the surface causes ruts and much mud softens up the whole road-surface. The mud should be raked up in heaps alongside the road, there left to dry and then carted off. To hinder as much as possible the formation of any mud, the surface drainage must remain unimpaired; should it be out of order, the water standing on the road is to be swept off.

Dust and mud should never be allowed to remain, both will entail infinitely more inconvenience and damage than the cost of removal would amount to, while in the case of the latter it serves as a wet blanket and keeps the highway in a disgraceful condition long after the effects of a rainy day should have entirely disappeared. A road kept free from dust in dry weather will seldom be impassable to foot passengers in the wet season and it will be a source of pleasure and profit instead of annoyance and loss to the tradesmen whose houses of business lie en route. Dust should always be removed before the road is watered, instead of being left on the road to become a sea of mud as soon as the water cart passes or rain appears.

Road scrapings, consisting of dead leaves, horse droppings, etc., together with sods of grass and the debris from the gutters should under no circumstances be put back on to the road. The practise we condemn is as common as it is detrimental to the maintenance of the highway in a clean and efficient condition for all the rubbish thus laid on the new coating has sooner or later to be removed, either as mud or dust.

Repairs are best made in damp weather. Should it, however, become absolutely necessary to repair a piece of road in dry weather, the place where the new material is to be deposited must be loosened up with a pick, then the new covering put on and a solid top formed by the judicious use of stone dust or other binding material and sprinkling with water and pounding down with the shovel or by what may be called "puddling" until the whole be solid. Should a frost or very dry weather occur immediately after material has been put on the road in wet weather so that the same will not join on the rest of the road surface, the whole must be removed cleaned and returned to the storage heaps for future use.

It is cheaper to have a few men to watch for the beginnings of any wear upon the roads and to mend a defect when it first appears than it is to wait until the trouble becomes serious and then set a large force at work. One man, with a shovelful of broken stone, can prevent when it may require half a dozen, with a team, to cure after a few months' neglect.

America is behind all civilized nations in the art of road making but she is moving forward and soon we may join with the Highlanders in singing:

"Had you seen these roads before they were made,
You would hold up your hands and bless Marshall Wade"

AN OPEN LETTER.

I have ridden a Columbia Light Roadster for the past two years, over all kinds of roads and am frank to say that I would not mount any other. It is to-day just as good as the day I purchased it; and other than a broken spoke I have not expended a cent for repairs. In fact it is a Jewel that occupies a prominent position in my heart's affections. I have that satisfaction when starting out on a long trip that I am going to be brought home without any breakdowns. I find my steel steed to be an almost indispensable requisite in my business. *E. HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF again, and we are obliged to step modestly forward and gather in another laurel leaf for the VICTOR.

This time it was at Philadelphia, and the occasion was the

SPORTING LIFE 100 MILE ROAD RACE.

There were thirteen to start, but only two to finish, and both of these rode VICTORS. The course was a hard one, being profusely ornamented with hills, but notwithstanding this, both these men broke the American amateur record, which, by the way, already belonged to the VICTOR.

No, we don't think it is fate that gives the VICTOR its success in road racing. It is a fact that they are made of the best of everything, and built to be winners.

More and better road races have been won on VICTORS than on any other machine in the market, and we submit this fact as very good evidence that they are stronger, lighter running and more reliable than any others. Ask VICTOR riders.

BUT WE DO WANT THE HILL CLIMBING RECORDS.

Read the following, and then draw your own inference as to where the records are held, also jot down in your diary where these practical hill climbers and speedy wheels can be purchased.

Eagle Rock Hill, Newark, N. J., November 19th, 1888, by J. Harry Shurman, on a Springfield Roadster, 24 times without a dismount, breaking all former records for speed for 13 times, and placing 11 times additional to our credit, and for our competitors to practice on.

Corey Hill, Boston, 11 times without a dismount, by Samuel B. Sterling, of Bridgeport, Ct. (age 45 years.) Stickney Hill, Lynn, Mass., 4 times without a dismount.

These hill records, together with the fastest quarter mile ever ridden and the fastest half mile in competition by J. Fred Midgley at Rochester, N. Y., August 30th, 1888, we think should convince the most skeptical regarding the qualities of the Springfield Roadster on the track, road and hill.

We solicit the investigation of those who anticipate purchasing, and to those who are not pleased with their mounts, we would say, TRY THE SPRINGFIELD ROADSTER. Watch for 1889 Catalogue Jan. 15th. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

WE wonder if the day will ever come when the average wheelman will not be looked on, or desire to be considered as a separate and distinct specimen of the genus homo? Unfortunately for the sport, the original desire to appear conspicuous, that obtained when cycling was in its infancy, still clings to many of our later day riders.

In the "good old times," when the art of balancing on one wheel was looked on as something only within the capacity of a comparatively few, we cannot wonder that the riders liked to be considered as beings endowed with more than ordinary skill, and that the onlooker was inclined to view the cycler in somewhat the same light. In those days it was natural that the cycler should look on himself as rather a remarkable individual, and one to be admired and wondered at by that large class of humanity who depended on "shanks' mare" or the slow plodding horse as a means of locomotion. In fact the tendency of public opinion in the early history of cycling was to make the cycler feel rather "sot up," and to arrogate to himself certain privileges that the dear walking and driving public submitted to with a good natured grace.

When the bicycle first appeared on the highways of the country the rider first took unto himself the privilege of riding on the sidewalks at full speed, and yelling or blowing a whistle to warn the grovelling pedestrian from his path. In those days the good-natured ped. would stand aside, and as the flying wheelman whirled past, he or she would remark "how wonderful, how graceful!" and the modern feather-weight Juggernaut would go scooting on his way, yelling or whistling warnings for other plodders to make way for him and his wonderful wheel to pass. Now that was all right and natural, but it seems that the wheelman in a good many places still considers that the public must "make way" for him as of yore. In this the wheelman is different from the dear public: the old wonder has ceased to move non-riders when they see a bicycler, and when the noisy, and in some cases insolent, demand for room is made, the old-time admiration and expressions, have given place to "deep drawn curses" and imprecations on the head of the cycling nuisance. The same general tenor of remarks also applies to the old and new relations as existing between cycler and horseman.

Let us try and get down from the pedestal built in the year 1879. The false exaltation of those days is now obsolete. Let us try and be natural on the wheel, and not do and expect things when riding a cycle any different than if we were mere commonplace plodders, and above all let us strive to dispel the notion that cyclers are, as a class, a nuisance, to be avoided and sat upon.

IMPORTANT DECISION IN ENGLAND ON THE BOWN BEARING PATENT CASE.

IN the great suit of Wm. Bown vs. Sansome, Teale & Co., of Birmingham, Eng., for infringement of the Bown ball bearing patent, the defendant on the eve of going to trial admitted the validity of the Bown patent, paid the claims of Wm. Bown and took a license for the use of the patent. This suit is remarkable, as several companies had banded together to test the validity of the patent, and presented a very bold front up to the time of trial.

Mr. Bown has been uniformly successful in maintaining this patent, and will now, in all probability, enjoy a peaceful posession of his rights.

VICE PRESIDENT HAYES WILL DEPART FOR BRAZIL.

THE members of the League and those more closely connected with Mr. H. W. Hayes, of Boston, will learn with regret that the active Vice President of the L. A. W. has accepted the responsible position as manager of the Brazilian branch of a large Boston commission house, and that he will leave for the land of Dom Pedro about the first of January next. Mr. Hayes will have his office in Para, the great entry port of Brazil and the river Amazon. Mr. Hayes' engagement covers a term of five years, during which time it is not probable that he will visit this country.

We do not wish to dwell on the loss of Mr. Hayes' services in the councils of the L. A. W. Conservative, clear headed and active, the Vice President's advise and help will be sadly missed in the councils of the Executive Committee.

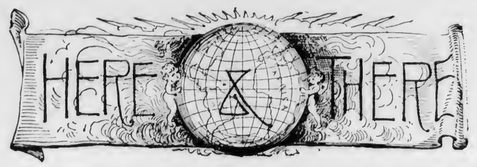
All members of the League, and all others who personally know Mr. Hayes, will join us in wishing him the greatest success and happiness under the new conditions and in his new home on the equator.

A EUROPEAN CYCLE TOUR.

MR. F. A. ELWELL, of Portland, Me., issues a very attractive and comprehensive circular on his proposed European cyclists' excursion to start from this country in May next.

After much careful consideration the following route has been selected:

IRELAND—Cork, Fermoy, Clonmel, Kilkenny, Carlow, Dublin. ENGLAND—Liverpool, Chester, Birmingham, Coventry, Warwick, Stratford-on-Avon, Oxford, London, Brighton, New Haven. FRANCE—Dieppe, Rouen, Versailles, Paris, Fontainebleau, Melun, Joigny, Montbard, Dijon, Auxonne, Dole, Poligny. SWITZERLAND—Geneva, up Lake Geneva to Villeneuve, Aigle, Gesseny, Thun, Berne, Lucerne, up Lake Lucerne (make trip to top of Rigi), Brunnen, Zug, Wadenschwyl, Wesen, Rapperschwyl, Zurich, Schaffhausen, Basel. GERMANY—Strasbourge, Baden-Baden, Heidelberg, Mayence, Coblenz, Cologne; from here steamer will be taken part or whole of distance to Rotterdam, where the tour proper will end, leaving members free to carry out any private scheme of travel. Steamer can be taken here for England (six hours) and rail to Belgium, France or Northern Germany.



The pace will be an easy one, and made with a view so that ample time will be given for sight seeing. It is expected the party will reach home about the first of September, and the cost of the trip will be about $400 per capita.

Safeties are recommended as the proper wheel to use, and one with good luggage carrying capacity should be selected.

It is also suggested that members of the party join the C. T. C., of which Mr. F. W. Weston, of Savin Hill, is Chief Consul for the United States.

The party will be limited to twenty-five in all. For further particulars address, F. A. Elwell, 152 Pearl street, Portland, Me.

NOTES BY

THE "CAVILER."

From my perch over the transom of Room No. 6, Parker House, I had an excellent opportunity to witness the effect of the very unexpected and consequently dramatic entrance of ex-Captain Whitney into that room, during the special meeting of the Boston Bicycle Club on last Tuesday evening. It was a wonder to your faithful henchman that the little Captain was not torn limb from limb, so enthusiastic, so demonstrative were his friends. The New Mexican stood the hand shaking and the hauling like a good sheep ranchman that he is. it was refreshing to see the stately Josiah S. Dean beam down from his six feet of altitude on to the five feet five of the returned wanderer. I do not know if tears of joy dimmed the specs of the present worthy Captain Kendall, but I noticed that he wiped his glasses in a suspiciously frequent manner. A great many of the gentlemen present were strangers to me, but there was one other than those already mentioned, who attracted my attention from the whole-souled, hearty, unctious manner with which he greeted Whitney. This gentleman was tall and rotund, and the very quintessence of good nature, if I am a judge of face , but just before I had to descend from my coign of observation I heard Whitney address him by the familiar title of "Dick." Yes, "Dick;" but Dick who! Can any one answer the groping Caviler?

You will remark that I hinted at a sudden descent from my perch. Well, yes, I did have to beat a hasty retreat, and I am afraid undignified retreat, but with my usual good luck I escaped detection. I, however, waited downstairs until the meeting adjourned, and then hung round to see if I could pick up some points as to Whitney's reason for coming home. I did not get much satisfaction, but judging from the fragmentary remarks I heard from Whitney I think that New Mexico and he are not congenial.

It is very pleasant to get postals and letters from prominent wheelmen that my notes are missed when material is lacking, and I fail to send in copy. As my work is sedentary and of a character that accumulates when I am away, I found lots to do on my return last week from New York, hence I have been unable to get around much.

What is in the air, and is it a fact that a cycle club on a large scale in Boston cannot be made a success? My query is made because of the late action of the Massachusetts Club. When I came to Boston three years ago, the club was on the very top notch, and now to see it "dying, dying" is a very sad comment on the condition of bicycle clubdom in the hub. While walking along Washington street the other day I noticed Peck and two other men who I took to be Massachusetts men standing on the corner talking. Now I am opposed to eavesdropping, but as I passed I heard enough to convince me that Peck was talking "cause and effect" pretty strongly. The question as to whether a strictly bicycle club on the splendid lines of the Massachusetts Club can be run successfully in Boston has been pretty (un)satisfactorily answered by pointing to this case. The management of the Boston Bi. Club called a halt last summer and until now have been without headquarters. I hear that steps have been taken to secure proper headquarters, and that the club will not be much longer without a home. This club, however, acknowledges that the social element has strengthened the backbone of that organization greatly. I am inclined to believe that purely bicycle clubs with expensive houses will prove a losing venture in other places besides Boston.

With the departure of our well-beloved and much-esteemed Chief Consul H. W. Hayes for Brazil the question has already been broached as to a fitting successor. I heard the name of a certain "Jack" Seward mentioned, and why not? "Jack" is a good fellow and level headed withal. Another name I heard bruited was that of Doctor Kendall. Well, there are two good nominations by the Caviler; if there are any better, name 'em! Hayes has been a good Chief Consul, and any one less active and efficient will scarcely fill the bill. There is the right man in Massachusetts now who can name better names than I.

"STAR."

A series of races next season, it is believed by many, would intensify the interest in cycling and increase the number of the knights of the wheel. Several spasmodic efforts in that direction have been made during this year. Early in the season a road race was run for a medal offered by Mr. A. A. Bennett. Later several races were run in connection with the Carthage Fair. Even if we had the right to drive our wheels along the public highways at the rate of seventeen miles an hour, the only one at all suited to the purpose is the Carthage, Glendale and Hamilton pike, but it abounds in ruts and is always heavy. The only track to which we have access is the one in the Carthage Fair Grounds, but it is over nine miles from the heart of the city, and is never in the best condition. If we expect to make track racing a success we must have a course nearer the heart of the city in order to give prospective contestants abundant opportunities to practice. The following are some of the locations suggested where a track might be built: The Athletic Club's grounds, the Cincinnati Ball Park and the Zoological Gardens. The two former are objectionable for obvious reasons, but the latter has much to commend it; still it will depend on whether the corporation controlling that resort can be made to see that it would pay. If those interested expect to do anything towards securing a track for next season, now is the time to begin.

The "Veloce" Club now have a library and gymnasium, and both well patronized.

As several members of the C. B. C. were ploughing through the mud in the streets of Lockland, O., on the Sunday after the presidential election, they were asked if they were out paying election bets.

The Kenton Club who are determined not to be outdone by the C. B. C. in providing amusements for the winter, are organizing a "Kazoo" band, with guitar, banjo and violin accompaniment. Now look out for a rapid depreciation in the value of real estate in that neighborhood.

From the frequent and continued rains it begins to look as if the riding season, as far as the outside of the city are concerned, is about at an end. But when the boys gather about the Thanksgiving board next Thursday to masticate the juicy turkey they will no doubt recall much for which they should be thankful; there were but two Sundays prior to Oct. 1 when the rain at all interfered with riding, and then the crop of spring chickens—my!

The squabble in the Terre Haute Club, referred to in the News and Comments in the Bicycling World and L. A. W. Bulletin of Nov. 9, only emphasizes the folly of permitting either political or religious discussions to disturb the harmony of a bicycle club. While it is extremely doubtful if they are ever the cause of any one changing his belief, it is absolutely certain that they are productive of enmities and hard feelings that will sooner or later result in a disruption of the organization.

NEW YORK.

"HAWKSHAW."

To show what concerted action can do to influence those in power, the following is an example: On Wednesday fifteen members of the Fordham Club, a small, social organization, appeared before the Park Board and asked that ten feet on each side of Jerome avenue, from Kingsbridge road to Fleetwood park, be macadamized. They represented that the avenue became impassable in wet weather on account of the mud, a statement that I am sure can be certified to by every wheelman, and that in such cases the macadamized strips became a necessity. The Board promised to do as requested, and the result will be hailed with gratitude by every rider here, be he a horse or cycle one. See what organization does. Will anyone say that the same number of citizens of an equal status would have had the same effect? No, decidedly not. It was the name of an organization that these petitioners claimed to represent that carried the weight with their request.

The New York Club now proposes to make things particularly lively in their new house this winter. The appointment of the well-known writer of things theatrical, John Reginald Blake, as Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, at once sets the seal of success upon the New Yorks' social aspirations, and we shall now see what we shall see.

Of late years there has grown up in wheel clubs a custom of bedecking their members with medalistic mementoes of miles measured, or to express the idea less alliteratively, the bestowing of prizes for various riding feats of the members. The excuse given for this numismatic system of reward, on the part of its supporters, is that riding must be encouraged in the clubs, and that this means is best reached by the offering of these glittering incentives to the members. I am of the opinion that the idea and the practice are both wrong. When a man becomes a member of a wheel club he does so, as a rule, to receive the companionship of his fellow members, and to secure at the same time the comforts and conveniences of a club. The club man is usually supposed to be a rider who rides for sport, seeking as a reward for so doing only the pleasure and health that must at all times result from any indulgence of cycling in moderation. This at least is the theoretical position he occupies and is the one that should be encouraged. Now the medal maniac occupies no such logical or sensible position, either in club or wheel world, and is an excrescence upon the body cycling that should be lopped off and extirpated by the diseçting knife of censure. The offspring of this medal-giving plan of encouraging cycling is that particularly unpleasant individual, or machine, known as a "mileage crank," who views the rising or the setting of the sun simply upon the basis of how many miles old Sol has travelled in the journey, who states his astronomical distances by a figuration of how many years it would take him to ride the distance between earth and planet. In fact he resolves everything in life into a question of miles and machine. The product is not a credit to cycling, and should not be encouraged. To the mileage fiend everything is sacrificed that in the end he may wear a medal advertising the fact that he has been idiot enough to cast aside the comfort, health and pleasure of riding to gain a given number of miles during the year. Really I do not think this picture is over colored, it is unfortunately but too correct to suit those who recognize this evil. Cycling, like virtue, should be its own reward, and not a seek-to-be the recipient of any unworthy encouragement in the above shape. Any rider who, belonging to a club, can find no other encouragement to ride than in being awarded a medal to do so, had better be given a nice pleasant nook in the club room and allowed to sit there undisturbed, till accumulated dust of years has dimmed his incipient insanity and produced a sane rider out of him. I do not think these riders "for revenue only" are a success.

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

The programme for Thanksgiving Day has been slightly changed, and instead of a "follow-my-leader" chase there will be a grand hill-climbing contest in Lincoln Park, weather permitting. This will be under the management of the "Chicagos," and all wheelmen are invited to enter the contest. There will be three prizes—i. e., a first, second and third—all medals. This ought to be well worth seeing, and will probably bring out a goodly field of contestants, although I look upon Will Thorne as a sure winner of first prize.

Carlson says he is not going to resign or anything of the kind from the C. C. C. I am glad to hear it: he is too valuable a man to lose.

Randall says he is not in the field for the Presidency, or any office, next year. What's the matter with Thorne? Can they get a better one? I think not.

Jim Sidebottom says it is pretty hard to be mentioned in the Reforce at all, but when they drop into poetry over him, why that is more than human nature can stand, and now he is looking for gore, and not Chapin & Gore either.

The three "Cs" will give a turkey raffle Wednesday evening, the 28th, and from the amount of fun that was gotten out of the one last year there will probably be a full attendance at this one. All wheelmen are to be invited, and a jolly time is promised.

A pool tournament, between teams from the Lincolns, Illinois and Chicagos, is a fixture for the near future. Just imagine Oliver, W. A. Davis, C. C., and Garden engaged in a loving game of pool, with Tom Roe as referee. What a game that would be.

Stevens and Whitgreave had a good joke on the Fort Dearborn men. As soon as consolidation seemed to be an assured fact they hastened to join the Chicagos, and are now full-fledged members of the C. C. C., much to the surprise of the Fort Dearborn fellows.

The Douglass Cycling Club, a promising West Side organization, gave their opening reception and ball Thursday evening last, and it was a very pleasing affair. John M. Stout, the trick rider, gave an exhibition of his skill on the "Star." Dancing until the "wee small hours" concluded the entertainment. They are a jolly set of men, those Douglass Club boys, and may the club live long and prosper.

"Alabama" says the "Thursday nights" at the Chicagos' Lake avenue club house have fallen into the hands of a certain clique of ladies who run things entirely to the exclusion of the others. This may be so, but the only cliques I have been able to discover are two, the stay-at-home clique and the clique composed of the ladies who are there ladies' nights. Bring your wife around, "Alabama," and after one evening I will guarantee she will leave the stay-at-home clique and join the other at once.

Heavens! but how the poor "Stroller" caught it this week: all on account of saying that some wheelmen regarded those Roe-Randall records with a slight grain of suspicion. Roe is out with a challenge of a thousand dollars as to what he can ride next year, from April 1st to Nov. 1st, and refuses to wear the medal given by the club, while Randall says they can say what they please but he is going to wear that medal—he worked too hard to get it to give it up; and every old Fort Dearborn man seems ready to thrash the "Stroller" or the first "knowing one" he comes across, for insinuating anything about those records. In fact I have heard some of those whom I had heard speak of the records rather doubtfully now say that there is not a shadow of a doubt about the records being accurate. I myself do not doubt the records, but simply stated what I had heard.

NEWS

AND COMMENT.

The Washington Hatchet complains bitterly of the recklessness of some of the cyclists of that city. This paper says: "A couple of persons were more or less injured during the past week, by being struck by bicyclers turning corners at full speed." The Hatchet suggests a few well advised arrests as a good remedy.

Our advertisement of premium offer of Texas Siftings was crowded out this week, but the offer still holds good: (i. e.) $2.00 for the World and Siftings for one year to new subscribers, and $1.25 for Texas Siftings for one year to League members and present subscribers. Send in your order: postage stamps not received.

The Brookline (Mass.) Cycle Club are discussing the advisability of moving into larger quarters.

Chief Consul Bidwell of New York was in town last week, for a day, on League business.

Remember that Wm. Read & Sons deal in all kinds of sporting goods. See their advertisement and send for a catalogue.

Elmer G. Whitney has returned from the land of the Zuni and is glad enough to get back to the effete East. We are glad to see him.

Have you sent for a catalogue of the Kodak? This little instrument is creating a great furor among cyclists. To see one is to buy.

Vice President H. W. Hayes leaves for Para, Brazil, January 1st., under a few years' engagement with a large Boston Commission house.

The Massachusetts Club vacates the premises occupied by them on Newbury street. The matter of new and more modest headquarters is under discussion.

The Springfield (Mass.) Club management is making preparations for the winter. Additional boxing gloves, foils and home trainers are being put in stock.

A correspondent writes us that Terre Haute is pronounced Terre Hot, and that the name is very appropriate as the earth is very hot round there since the political split in the bicycle club.

"Senator" Morgan has been quite ill with a fever at Fort Valley, Ga. He writes that he fell into the hands of some good samaritans, otherwise he might have had to go to the hospital.

The bicycle has been a very prominent feature in the parades during the late campaign. One of the most successful of these bicycular-political organizations, was that of the Fostoria, Ohio, Club.

The town of Wakefield, Mass., is about to make purchases of road making machinery, and the riders of that town are consequently happy over the prospective improvements of the highways.

The articles on road making just completed in the official part of this paper are being put into pamphlet form, and will be distributed by the L. A. W. free of charge to those who can use them to good advantage.

A Brooklyn exchange, in describing a race, says "the riders quickly donned thin racing suits and geared their wheels!!" The aforesaid paper had better employ a cyclist to do its reporting of cycle events.

W. S. MALTBY, the professional trick rider, has issued a challenge, through the New York Clipper, to all the world. He has made a deposit of $50 with that paper and is anxious to have it covered. Who will meet Maltby and contest for the trick riding championship of the world?

THE local championship of the city of New Bedford, Mass., was lately decided in a match race between H. E. Sisson and F. Clark. The distance was about 4 1-8 miles, and the race was won by Sisson in 16m. 50s.; Clark ten seconds later.

"IT is a safe bet that Seneca Falls can boast of the worst roads than any other place in the United States." As the above item is taken from an Auburn, (N. Y.) paper, this statement must of course be swallowed with a grain of salt.

RICHARD GOLDEN, who is an actor as well as a cycler, has written a play with the bucolic title of Jed Prouty, which, if his bicycle does not give him a fatal "header," he will inflict on the public in futurity and personate Jed himself.

Bl. News does not think any great shakes of Windle because he is only five feet six inches, and rides a 53-inch wheel. "He is not big enough." Has our worthy English contemporary forgotten that Temple was just about Windle's size? Was he "big enough?"

A COMPANION WANTED—"I would be pleased to know of one or more wheelmen contemplating a twenty or thirty mile 'spin' in this vicinity (weather permitting) whom I might accompany Thanksgiving, Nov. 29th. Wm. Stanton Macomb, 45 Saunders avenue, W. Philadelphia, Pa."

MR. AND MRS. J. S. DEAN received at their home in South Boston last week Wednesday. The affair was a brilliant one, and many of Mr. Dean's friends in the cycling world were in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Dean will reside at 935 Broadway, South Boston, the residence of Hon. Benj. Dean.

IT has been held by an English magistrate that ten miles an hour is riding or driving at a furious pace. It is the hope of many London riders that the N. C. U. will bring the matter before the proper authorities so that a rule establishing the lawful pace of a rider in the Metropolitan district will be made.

ERRATA.—L. A. W. No. 13425 quotes from our Terre Haute correspondent, "Wabash," the item that states Probst and Hulman climbed Probst hill four and five times respectively without a dismount, and that Probst hill is 800 feet long and has a rise of about one in three. L. A. W. 13425 then very properly says, "I don't believe a hill 800 feet long with a rise of one in three can be ridden by any living man." The gentleman is correct; the copy stated one in thirteen, our types got it one in three, which was incorrect.

A FUNNY incident is told by an English paper—that is, funny to all but the person most interested—happened to an Irish safety rider some time back. He was on his way down hill, when he came across and rode over the iron hoop off a cask. This threw him somewhat heavily, and as it was after dark he was unable to understand the reason of his fall. Imagine his surprise, therefore, when a bystander came running up with the said hoop, remarking that the bicyclist had dropped part of his machine on the road. Where the iron had come from he did not attempt to explain, but no doubt he thought it one of the wheels.

WITH the splendid roads France boasts of it is curious that cycling and touring among the French is not more popular. An exchange, speaking of a tour made by Mr. Joseph Pennell from Dieppe to Marseilles, states that during his ride of some one thousand miles he did not meet a single cycler. Mr. Pennell states that his daily expenses averaged about 7f., or $1.40. He adds: "Not only can you ride all the way down hill from Lyons to Marseilles with the minstrel, the north wind, at your back, but by climbing up to Alais, on your return, you come down by the valley of the Allier all the way to Nevers with the south wind. This round trip is one of the most wonderful in the world, the return journey being through the Cevennes."

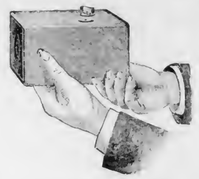
IT is very amusing to notice in our English exchanges the solemn way with which the champions of the ordinary vs. safety keep up their discussion. Ever since the dwarf cycle came into prominence the wordy war has waned and waxed, but never entirely stopped. Such discussions are to a certain extent very interesting and must be of inestimable value to the manufacturer. But taken from a purely rider's point of view, what Mr. A. and Mr. B. says to the effect that the safety is a craze, a fad, or that the ordinary is doomed, is absolutely of no value as an opinion. The safety is not a fad, a temporary craze, and the ordinary will prove a very active factor in the cycle business for many years to come. As we before have applied a homely saying to this subject and to the disputants, "Both are wrong and both are right, and both are very impolite."

BEFORE election ten Republican members of the Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) Bicycle Club made a wager with ten Democratic members of the same organization that Harrison would be elected, the losers to draw the winners in a wagon from the club rooms in Catharine street to the Post Office and return, and also to pay for a supper. Of course the Democrats were beaten, and paid the bet like men, on Thursday evening. The weather was rainy and the walking in terrible condition. There were nine Democrats attached to the wagon, while nine Republicans rode inside. In the wagon was a transparency bearing these words: "It is no more than we expected." Fireworks were discharged at intervals from the wagon. There was a large crowd gathered on the street, and at all points the paraders were saluted with fire works and bonfires. The march from first to last was an enthusiastic one and attracted much attention.

GEORGE B. THAYER, in the New York World, writes that he took his first "European" header as follows: That afternoon, just before reaching Montelimar, I took the first fall of the whole trip of over two thousand three hundred miles. I was riding along at a twelve-mile-an-hour gait when a long-haired, miserable-looking dog ran out of a house to accompany me for half mile or so. There was nothing uncommon about that, nor did I mind it much, for the dogs are so thick in Southern France that it was nothing unusual to have three or four at once barking at me as I rode along through the more thickly settled portions of the country. But this dog, singly and alone, brought me to the dust after a ride so long without a tumble. Whether the dog got careless and ran too close to the front wheel or whether, in turning slightly, I bore down upon him, I shall never know; but I do know that, going at the high rate of speed I was, I suddenly struck, full length, on my stomach, in the road, 'way head of the machine, dog and everything. I could not at first realize what had happened, but when I saw the dog running for home, with a reproachful look in his face, I knew I had done something to, at least, hurt his feelings.

IF the following modest claim and request should chance to meet the eye of the President-elect and come to the notice of the Republican members in the National Senate and Congress, we have no doubt but that gratitude will so swell their individual "buzzums" that each and every one of them will make it his personal business to see that our correspondent's suggestion is at once carried out. We quote: "Now that the smoke of battle has cleared away, and we find that the G. O. P. has made a clean sweep, and that a continuation of high tariff is thereby assured, the question arises, what shall we do with the surplus? I would suggest that, as the G. O. P. owes their success to the wheelmen of this country for furnishing them with their campaign cry ("he's all right"), they should appropriate as a starter, well, we would be satisfied with a hundred million dollars, to be divided among the different States of the Union, to be expended in grading and hardening a line of highways between all large cities, no grade to exceed one in fifteen. This would serve a triple purpose. First, it would set the surplus afloat in the hands of the poorer classes; second, it would give our unemployed labor work; third, and greater than all, it would give us roads that would not be (as they are now) a national disgrace."

FROM PITTSBURG, PA.



MR. W. D. BANKER, of Pittsburg, Pa., paid us a very pleasant call last Tuesday, and from him we learned many points of interest from the black country.

In the matter of distance over which Messrs. Banker Brothers made their famous record, on a Swift tandem bicycle, we have been promised a survey of the road, showing the grades and the exact distance, from the hands of the City Engineer. We understand that the survey shows that the finishing point is some three feet above the point of starting. In making the record it seems that five watches were held, and the time claimed, 2.38, was the highest any of the watches showed, some of them giving as low as 2.37 3-5.

A great six-day bicycle race between nine female riders is to be started next Monday, Nov. 26. All the contestants are new hands, that is, none of them ever mounted or rode a bicycle until some few weeks ago. Mr. Banker says that some of the girls have developed a wonderful power of speed and endurance, and that a close and interesting race may be looked for. Pittsburg is all agog, and very much interested in the coming race.

A big effort is being made to consolidate the bicycle clubs of Pittsburg, and Mr. Banker has hopes that this end will be attained.

WE had the pleasure of trying one of the Singer Safeties the other day, and we can bear witness to the excellence of its running qualities. We soon mastered the steering so that we could run it without hands. Although the machine was geared up to 57, we found no difficulty at all in driving it up good stiff hills.—From Bicycling World and L. A. W. Bulletin, Oct. 26, 1888.

MFG. CO. SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

We were told that the Pittsburg men were very anxious to have a go at the celebrated Wilmington road team. It seems that the affair was talked over at Buffalo, but naught has come of it. The team that the Pittsburg men would put up against the hitherto invincible Wilmington aggregation would be the Banker brothers and F. G. Lenz. It is now so late in the season that the idea of a race for this season at least has been abandoned.

WON'T THIS RECORD STAND A WHILE?

EAGLE ROCK RIDDEN TWENTY-FOUR TIMES.

J. H. SHURMAN, of Lynn, quietly waited until all the record fiends had taken their fill of tackling Eagle Rock hill, and then he took the train for Orange, N. J., and proceeded to just knock the spots off all previous attempts. On Sunday last a large number of riders started out to Eagle Rock because they had heard that Shurman was to make an attempt on the record. New York, Brooklyn, the Oranges and Newark were well represented. The weather was cold, too cold for excessive athletics out of doors, and the wind blew strong from the northwest. Shurman dressed warm, and with a silk handkerchief about his throat, mounted his Springfield Roadster and at precisely 8.50 was given the word go.

The length of Eagle Rock is placed at 4650 feet; average grade, 8 in 100. For 1400 feet the grade is from 7 to 11 in 100. The easiest grade in 7 in 100, and the heaviest 12 1-2 in 100. The altitude of hill is 185 feet 4 inches.

According to the above figures Mr. Shurman travelled about 42 1-5 miles in accomplishing this wonderful feat, and really many of the spectators grew tired, through sympathy, watching Mr. S. in his grind up hill and down.

The times per round trip and for the total distance are given below:

Start, 8.50.

* Beats Coningsby's round trip time.

It will be seen by the above that Shurman beat Coningsby's record for 13 trips by 12m. 57s. Coningsby's time was 3.17.57, while Shurman did the 13 trips in 3h. 5m. The finish was made at 3.14.15 P. M., and Shurman's riding time was 6.24.15.

The timers were E. J. Desker, F. Brock, F. P. Prial.

His mount was the Springfield Roadster, and we doubt if this record established by Mr. Shurman will be beaten for many moons to come. Certainly 1888 will not see it bettered.

BLOOMFIELD (N. J.) CYCLERS ON EAGLE ROCK.

On the morning of Nov. 13th Mr. Wm. Van Wagoner broke all previous records for speed on Eagle Rock. His feat was timed by Mr. John Shurman, of Lynn, Mass., Mr. Howard A. Smith and friend of Newark and Mr. John V. L. Pierson of Bloomfield. Mr. Van Wagoner rode his 39-inch Star safety, and started from the willow tree at 10.55 A. M., and passed the summit at the sign, "No trespassing," at 11.01.47. This is fifty seconds under Greenwood's record, made on July 26th last.

At 4.17.20 on the afternoon of Nov. 13th Mr. John V. L. Pierson started on his attempt to beat his own record of two round trips, made last week.

Mr. Pierson's ride was witnessed by Mr. Philip Young, Mr. Wendall M. Strong and Mr. Wm. Lamson, all of Montclair; Mr. John Shurman, of Lynn, Mass.; Mr. Raymond Ball, of Orange; Mr. George Oakes, of Bloomfield; Mr. Fred Coningsby, of Brooklyn; and Mr. Wm. Van Wagoner, of Newport, Rhode Island. Dr. Gray, of Orange, was also present a part of the time.

The first up trip was finished at 4.26.56, making 9m. 36s. for the climb. On the second trip the summit was reached at 4.44.25; the third, at 5.04.56; the fourth, at 5.27. (Time of start was 4.17.20; time finish, 5.37.20.; elapsed time, 1h. 20m.)

The Bloomfield Cyclers boast the membership of both Mr. Van Wagoner and Mr. Pierson. The wheel ridden in this climb was a 52-inch Light Champion, with cranks at 5 1-2 inches.

CONINGSBY HAS A GO AT THE "ORDINARY" RECORD.

DURING the time that Shurman was making his great ride, Fred Coningsby made a successful attempt on the ordinary bicycle record, which was held by J. L. V. Pierson, in 1h. 20m. for four times. He mounted the hill and down again four times in succession, in 55m. 55s., thus beating Pierson's time by 9m. 45s. Coningsby rode a Victor Light Roadster, and he was timed by F. J. Desker and F. P. Prial.

EAGLE ROCK AND THE BLOOMFIELD CLUB.

I HAVE noticed in your paper an advertisement and an account of Eagle Rock Hill having been climbed on a crank wheel lately for the first time.

Several years ago R. D. Mead, on an old wheel, climbed this hill, and about a year since Dave Oakies was successful in an attempt; these men both on cranks of an old pattern, and with the same saddles and cranks used by them in daily riding.

To-day, at Irvington, the Bloomfield Cyclers and Elizabeth Wheelmen had a twenty-five-mile hare and hound run or paper chase, it being something novel in contests in this county I mention it; the Bloomfield Cyclers running as hounds, and winning the contest. T. D. P.

MEHLIG WINS THE 100-MILE ROAD RACE AT ST. LOUIS.

FRANK MEHLIG won the 100-mile match race with Geo. E. Tivy last week Sunday. It was a terrific strain on both men; the roads were very heavy and the hills told on the riders, as will be appreciated when we say that the 100 miles took 12 hours to cover. The course lay between the Missouri Club house and the Twenty-five-mile House. Mehlig showed the worst condition on the completion of the first round trip, and it took all manner of coaxing to get him to continue. Tivy showed up tired, but in fair condition. Percy Stone took Mehlig in hand and paced him on the second trip so well that he overtook Tivy at Bartold's. Mehlig was so used up that when he stopped for refreshments they dared not let him dismount. At the eleven-mile house Tivy was taken with cramps and quit, thus giving the race to Mehlig. It was cruel to start the men when the roads were in such a horrible condition. The men rode to the point of exhaustion.

KINGS CO., BROOKLYN, N. Y., CENTURY RUN.

CAPTAIN L. M. BRIDGMAN, Harry Hall, Jr., John Bensinger, Robert Hipson, and three others, of the Kings County Wheelmen, started on Sunday, at 6 A. M., to cover 100 miles. They had selected a course at Orange, N. J., which was seven and three-quarters miles roundabout, and they proposed to make the circuit of this as many times as possible. Harry Hall, Jr., had some trouble with his machine and had to give it up.

The roads were only in fair condition. John Bensinger did the best work of the day. He not only made his 100 miles, but his total score was 102 5-8. The last 16 miles he made in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, finishing at 8.30 P. M. It was not known at the Wheelmen's club house Sunday night whether any of the others had completed their 100 miles or not, but when Bensinger left Orange Captain Bridgman was still at work, and was determined to complete his run if it took until midnight.

SOME GOOD ROAD RIDING AT PHILADELPHIA.

THIS afternoon an attempt on the Lancaster pike ten-mile record was made by S. W. Merrihew, B. F. McDaniel and Victor R. Pyle, over the course from Wayne in to the first toll gate. The day was cold and raw, and a tremendous head wind made fast time an impossibility, but the men stuck gamely to it, and gradually Merrihew and McDaniel drew away from Pyle, who was accompanied by Jno. A. Wells, on a safety, and finished neck and neck, with a rattling spurt, in 38m. 36s.; Pyle and Wells came in two minutes later. The record for ordinaries was made by Frank Kahler, of the Pennsylvania Club, in 1886, 34.10, and Hill and Fuller, on their tandem bicycle, lowered it to 30.44 2-5 this summer. Both Merrihew and McDaniel are confident of their ability to cut down these figures on a favorable occasion. They rode Victor Light Roadsters, and Pyle rode a Springfield. Hall, of the Kings County, and Wilhelm, of Reading, were expected to ride, having written to that effect, but neither showed up. "ARIEL."

MR. W. H. CALDWELL DID NOT SWERVE.

Editor Bicycling World: In your issue of Nov. 9th, "No Name," writing an account of the Berkeley tournament, speaks of my swerving in a driving finish and striking Mr. Edwards, the starter, knocking him senseless, and taking a header. I desire to correct the above mistake.

Mr. Edwards was leaning forward and standing out quite a distance in the track, at least three or four feet from the rope.

Mr. Bowman barely escaped him, and as I was riding slightly at Bowman's right, my right handle-bar struck him on the upper jaw. I think that the accident was due entirely to Mr. Edward's carelessness and not to my swerving, as your correspondent states.

Yours, W. H. CALDWELL.

New York, Nov. 12th, 1888.

HERE'S richness from the Bi. News: "When Abbot Bassett compares the work done by himself and his two clerks on behalf of the 1,200 members of the L. A. W., and the small portion of the BICYCLING WORLD devoted to its interests, with that done by E. R. Shipton and his thirteen clerks for the 21,000 members of the C. T. C., we can only remark 'bosh.'" It is remarkable what awful mistakes the intelligent Englishman makes when commenting on things American. The italics are ours, and are intended to emphasize the fact that Bi. News is only 10,200 wrong in its statement as to the membership of the L. A. W. With Bi. News, we can truly exclaim "bosh!"

"ARIEL" TO THE MESSRS. WILHELM, GRAEFF AND DOUGLAS.

Editor Bicycling World: "Oh, that mine enemy would write a book!" has been so often paraphrased into "Oh, that mine enemy would write a letter," that I can only express my thanks to Messrs. Wilhelm, Graeff and Douglas for the opportunity thus afforded me, premising that their letter in your issue of Nov. 9th is a tissue of distorted facts from first to last.

Imprimis: They state that I have wilfully and maliciously misrepresented the Reading Bicycle Club, and continue, "Many false statements about us have been made by him in the past, which have been ignored by us. * * * We feel it a duty to ourselves to show you the way in which your excellent journal is made use of by 'Ariel' to vent his spite on a club, the character of whose membership is far above his level." Now I simply give below every word referring to the Reading Bicycle Club which has appeared in my letters since I have been your correspondent, the dates appended being those on which the WORLD was issued:

April 4—"The Wilmington Wheel Club's racing team has challenged the Reading Club to a road race on the Lancaster pike, and intimate that the Pennsylvania Club will be likely to hear from them on the same subject. * * * With Wilhelm, Schmidt, Schwartz and Scheele to represent Reading it would take four good men and fast, to capture first prize from them."

May 25—"Reading wheelmen have been invited to 'ake part in the hill-climbing contest for the medal offered by Kirk Brown, and when Wilhelm, Schwartz and Scheele—to say nothing of Schmidt—get to kicking the pedals up grade some one has got to climb pretty lively if that medal is to stay in Philadelphia."

Aug. 24—"Four big men, in a boat is the latest development of the Reading Bi. Club, Scheele, Wilhelm, Roland and ———, and they are ready to take odds that no cycling club in the country can beat them on water. They row in the Columbia regatta next week." "Reading is doing well in cycling this season. I ran up to that city over Sunday and dropped in at the rooms of the Reading Bicycle Club, which are on Penn street above Fourth, and are as nicely arranged and furnished as any club rooms I have seen for a long while." "* * * * and as the Reading Club has almost entirely given up club runs I had to wheel it alone."

Sept. 7—"Reading also was dropped from representativeship, while Wilkes-Barre and Scranton have four between them."

Sept. 21—"* * * the Wilmingtonians say that if the Reading Club will only come out and name a date for the race, they will endeavor to prove to them that they can ride down here as well as at Buffalo."

Oct. 5—"The long-delayed road race between the Wilmington and Reading Clubs is also being arranged for, and will come off in the near future. Schwartz will not run on the Reading team; neither will Schmidt."

Respectfully presented as a specimen of the manner in which "Ariel" "vents his spite" on the Reading Bicycle Club! Comment is needless.

The only very lame leg they have stand on is in regard to the condition of the course from Myerstown to Reading, about which they have spent a great amount of space in the endeavor to prove my "falsehoods." Had they spared themselves the trouble they would have seen my own correcting comments on this subject in the next issue. Truly, a correspondent's life is not a happy one. Tom, Dick and Harry expect the latest information, and the most accurate, in regard to size, shape, etcetera, whether it be of roads, machines, or their own sweet selves. Ubiquitous, as I endeavor to be, it is manifestly impossible for me to personally see everything, and I have to take the most reliable hearsay evidence I can procure. Now with regard to the Harrisburg pike from Lebanon down: I have often gone over it, and can truly say that I seldom did so without cussing the stony road, as all my old clubmates will witness; and although at times, after rains, it has been in good condition, it never was the equal of the Lancaster pike. I speak now of the seasons during which I rode over it, and as I had not been on it this year at all I asked for information as to its then condition from a League man in our office here, who toured over it as late as September. His reply was: "From Lebanon down the road is in good condition in places, but it has been newly metaled in many parts, and is very rough and stony. Several of the hills were absolutely unrideable, and I had to walk my wheel down." This tallying with my own knowledge of the road, I supposed it to be correct. So it was, at that time, but the heavy rains and the traffic over the road have beaten down the spalling, and McDaniel told me day before yesterday, in speaking of the race, that the road bed was as good in stretches as the Lancaster pike, but that on some of the steep hills the large, knobby stones projecting through the upper surface made rushing them at speed a risky affair. In fact, on Eckett's Hill, at the finish, the three men, Dampman, Merrihew and McDaniel all lost their pedals, through striking those stones, and rode in that perilous position for some distance.

However, the point lay, not in the surface of the road, so much as in the hilly course. The greater portion of it is nothing but a succession of steep hills, and I said then, and say now, that a crank wheel cannot be safely ridden down them at speed (these gentlemen, in quoting me, very conveniently forgot to insert the word "safely"), and neither Messrs. Schwartz, Schmidt, Willson, or any other rider will dare to say that the ordinary bicycle can be rushed down at full speed, without danger to the rider. And what is more, every crank rider who has been on that road knows it. Mr. Tucker, President of the Associated Cycling Clubs of this city, characterized the Womelsdorf hill as being like the side of a house, in speaking at a board meeting of the Division of the incorrectness of that very report in the Road Book, which they have quoted so glibly; and tourists of the Philadelphia Club, as well as dozens of wheelmen here, will beat me out in these opinions of the road. To all of which the documentary evidence can be forthcoming.

They go on to say: "Information from several Philadelphia cyclists that unless the matter were kept very secret we would be prohibited from racing on the Lancaster pike." Pshaw! There have been dozens of races on the pike this season, and I have yet to learn of an attempt to prohibit one. Only last Tuesday the 100-mile road race was run, with thirteen starters, after being heralded through all the city papers.

The whole truth (which the writers are not men enough to come out and acknowledge) is that the course was selected because its natural features were advantageous to the Star as a "down grade machine." The opinion has long prevailed in Reading that the Star was the only wheel, and public expression has been made time and again by Wilhelm and other Star riders that the crank wheel was "no good in Reading, and never would be; Star riders could lay riders of the ordinary out every time on the road, etc., etc." Now I, in common with about ninety-nine out of every hundred wheelmen in the country, have a quiet preference for the crank machine, or if I wanted to ride a safety, have always advocated one that was safe in fact as well as in name; but I see no reason why a Star man should feel it his duty to treat me as an enemy on that account. In my own club here, all manner of fun is poked at the Star riders, but none of them take offence.

I say that I wanted to see the ordinaries win in this race, and as none of the men of the Wilmington team, except Dampman, had ever been over the course, I wrote the letter to Schmidt, to which the gentleman refer in their last clause, and which they request should not be published. As they do not publish it, permit me to supply the omission. I advised Mr. S. that Mr. McDaniel would be in Reading a day or two prior to the race, in order to go over the course, and requested him, as a favor to me (and also to the Wilmington Club, who had shown him some kindness last summer) to coach McDaniel over the road and give him what points he could, stating that I wanted the Wilmington Club's machines to knock out the Stars. And for this I am termed "not fair minded or disinterested. Heavens and earth! When I think of the rot we used to hear about Stars, it makes me tired. I wrote this letter to one whom I always considered a warm, true friend; and I can only say that I present to the consideration of every honorable, high-minded man, the "character" so highly vaunted which could thus, through treachery, obtain the use of a private, confidential letter, only to publish a garbled inuendo of the same.

My private character needs no vindication with my friends, and I merely beg leave to say that if I am again attacked by personal abuse for exercising to the best of my ability my capacity as general newsgatherer, I shall simply publish to the cycling world at large, not only a couple of inside facts about this very road race, but also Mr. Wilhelm's interview with a Reading Herald representative, as published in that paper, giving his verbatim remarks on the Wilmington Wheel Club; and I rather think that the gentlemen among the Reading Bicycle Club will hesitate somewhat before appearing before the wheelmen of the country as endorsing said actions. Certainly I never yet heard any gentlemen express himself in such a manner, in public print, of an honorable competitor. Query: Wonder if he thinks the Wilmington team can race "a little bit" on their crank wheels now?

One more point and I have done. It has pleased them to refer to the character of their membership as being far above my level. The gentlemen of the club—and I take pleasure in stating that there are many such, some of whom are my personal friends—can best appreciate this comparison; and the Philadelphia wheelmen who attended the Tioga meet, Sept. 29th, and whose comments on the characteristic behavior of several of the Reading contingent, whom Wilhelm brought along to cheer him on to the victories he didn't win, were very much to the point, will also see the joke.

Only the letters of the past fortnight or so are quoted by them, Mr. Wilhelm conveniently ignoring all that passed during the summer. It would take too much space to reply severally; nor is it all necessary. I can prove by the Wilmington men that the understanding was that the race should come off on the Lancaster Pike; that they did want that course selected as being neutral and fair to both parties, etc.; but what's the use? It's only a tempest in a teapot after all. Truly yours,

Philadelphia, Nov. 10, 1888. H. CROWTHER.

THE ELLIOTT SAFETY BICYCLE.

(Sterling Cycle Co., Newton, Mass.)

WE present to our readers this week a cut and description of the Elliott safety, wooden bicycle, which, as will be seen by the cut, is made for either sex to ride. In connection with the fact that the above is a lady's bicycle, Mr. Elliott informed us that some four years ago he conceived the idea of building a safety on the present general lines, but, that on presenting the idea to some of his lady friends, they scouted the scheme as being worthless, as "ladies never would consent to ride a bicycle, no matter in what form it was made." The point of the story is that the very ladies who were loudest in their condemnation of the lady's bike, are now enthusiastic converts and riders of the narrow gauge machine.

The wheel under discussion is wooden in every part except the bearings, the saddle post, front forks, the head, steering post, handle-bars, the gear wheels, the cranks, pedals, and the front part of back bone; the forks on the rear wheels are wood, as also are the mud and chain guards.

SPECIFICATION.

Driving wheel 30 inches in diameter, geared to 53 inches. Steering wheel 24 inches diameter. Rubber tire to both wheels 3-4 in. in diameter. Length between centres, 45 inches.

The frame is "composite," so to speak, that is, the front part, steering, forks, and the backbone down to the forks of the rear wheel are of steel, and the back wheel forks are second growth hickory.

The wheels are made of second growth hickory, and are constructed the same as on the quadricycle of this firm's make.

Tires are of rubber, and are attached in the same manner as already described in these columns, and it is claimed that they cannot come loose.

The chain is of hardened steel and self oiling.

The brake is applied to rim of rear wheel by a grip lever in front of right steering handle, through the medium of a steel chain passing entirely inside the tubular frame, leaving the outside of the frame smooth and free from levers, rods, etc.

The handle-bar is adjustable, and may be turned so as to stand parallel with the frame to facilitate storing.

The backbone is so shaped as to make mounting and dismounting a very easy matter, and also admits of the machine being ridden by ladies, many of whom are now availing themselves of the pleasures of bicycling.

The weight of machine, it is claimed, will not exceed 39 pounds, "all on."

We have been invited to try this machine on the road, and we shall avail ourselves of the offer at the earliest opportunity.

For further information apply to Sterling Cycle Co., Newton, Mass.

THE St. George's Engineering Co. advise us that the 1889 patterns of New Rapid cycles are ready for the market. The patterns include a tandem tricycle and an elegant ladies' safety, light, and as usual with cycles made by the St. George's Engineering Co., strong.

THE AMERICAN RAILWAY EQUIPMENT CO. of New York, have removed their office from 45 Broadway to 66 John street, and they will represent the Crosby Steam Gage Co. of Boston, as managers of the New York branch.

CHIEF CONSUL CLARKE, of Greenville, Miss., thus writes us: "Yellow fever and bicycles will not run together, we've tried it; hence our seeming luke-warmness. Our roads have never been finer, and we have certainly enjoyed the proffered treat. On Monday last we had the pleasure of entertaining Mr. T. C. Setree, of Tennessee Division, Nashville, Tenn. Our club furnished him a wheel, and we took him for a spin around Fish Lake, and he said it was one of the most enjoyable rides he has ever taken. This is our first year as a League club; we have ten members here, also a member L. A. W. in Natchez, and we are hopeful of large additions during coming year. So let our brother wheelmen all over the States give us a helping hand and a hurrah for the Mississippi Division. We trust all L. A. W. members who visit here or Natchez will make themselves known, and give us a chance to prove to you that we are still the 'hospitable South.'"

BICYCLING IN BELGIUM.—IV.

BY CLERICUS.

THE next morning after arriving in Brussels the air was again full of great guns, but my war-like mood was still on, and I determined to press on to Waterloo and leave Brussels to be seen afterwards. Only turning aside to see the old Hotel de Ville, where, if I mistake not, the Duchess of Richmond gave the famous military ball on the night before the battle. Of course Byron's lines rose fresh to remembrance, spoken so often by successive generations of schoolboys. But the familiar lines regained something of their original fervor when standing on such a spot:

"There was a sound of revelry by night,
And Belgium's Capital had gathered then
Her beauty and her chivalry; and when
Music arose with its voluptuous swell,
Soft eyes looked love to eyes which spoke again,
And all went well as a marriage bell;
But hush! hark! a deep sound strikes like a rising knell!"

The whole scene as limned by the poet's genius starts into life again. The kindred dance in that "high hall;" the heavy sound once more, "and nearer, clearer, deadlier than before." And then the hurrying to and fro, and "gathering tears and tremblings of distress;" and then the rushing in hot haste, the steed, the clattering car, the mustering squadron pouring forward with impetuous speed. The thought of it all impelled me to mount my wheel again in nervous haste, as if to join in that rapid flight to the field of Waterloo. More slowly perhaps, and yet in the very tracks of the English and their allies, I rode southward over the hills to meet the French, and fought over again the great conflict that wrought a change of front in the nations of Europe. No trooper could have had a harder ride than I had down that stony thoroughfare, but the contagion of sympathy with those soldier flyers who sped this way more than seventy years ago sustained and bore me onward. The falling rain for a part of the way was not the slightest impediment.

Arriving at Waterloo one realizes forcibly that the name of the battle is a misnomer, for the battle-field is still three miles further southward. There, after luncheon, I visited the house which was Wellington's headquarters after the battle, and also the village church, which is adorned with a marble bust of the hero and many tablets in memory of those who fell. I here accepted of the services of a guide, a curious Frenchman, who lost his natural height by his legs making a right angle with each other from the knees downward. I objected to his apparent inability to walk, whereupon he cut up and down the road before me at a convincing pace. As he was bright and full of information, I told him he might follow me.

On the way down to the village of St Jean of course I left my guide far behind me, but I had an escort part of the way in the persons of a bevy of children who ran along by my side, and cried in metrical chorus, "Charite! Charite!" with emphasis on the last sylable. I managed to fillip some pennies to the girls, but the boys had to send a long way before they got their reward. One little girl still followed, unable to claim her own from her ungallant competitors. There was no help for it but to get off and put the penny in her palm and then press on at a speed that defied pursuit.

Arriving at the Hotel des Colonnes, I there waited for my guide, and meanwhile examined the curious pictures on the wall, illustative of the persons and incidents of the battle. I did not fail to remember that it was in this hostelry Victor Hugo completed his "Les Miserables," and that he penned his immortal description of the battle, here on the field. I was shown his working room which is the one adorned with the cheap illustrations. The landlady did her best of course to sell me some "relics," but I steadfastly declined her persistent importunities. I would not take even a bullet that may have pierced the heart of some dead hero—who knows! Seeing I would not buy she smote me hardest of all, if she had only known it, when she said as her final words, "Americans very good to the French."

My guide coming up, I ran away from him again on the way to the Lion Monument. I turned in at what was the sunken road to Chain, and although its high banks were gone I could not but feel that I was rolling over the dust of those fated Frenchmen who poured headlong into this dreadful ditch of death, and filled its twenty feet to the level with their bodies, to be a bridge for their no less luckless comrades who crossed that bloody chasm to hurl themselves in vain against the solid squares of the English. The splatter of blood-red poppies along the roadside did not render the suggestions of the scene any less vivid.

Arriving at the Hotel du Musee at the foot of the mammoth, cone-shaped mound, two hundred feet high, made of earth taken from the battle-field, and so deforming the ground it was designed to glorify, I alighted and examind the collection of many interesting and authentic relics. Some of them were too ghastly to bear description; others, however, give one a most lively impression of the personality of those historic heroes who took part in this famous victory and defeat. It is particularly rich in the pictures both of survivors and of those who fell. Two of the mementoes especially impressed me. One of them was a brief memorandum and drawing of a road and its bridges, in the hand of Napoleon, and made by him during his Italian campaign, and the other was a pair of spurs with his capital "N" stamped on them, and found in his carriage that was captured on the evening after the battle. The contemplation of these and of the myriad other relics and mementoes of the stupendous struggle at Waterloo was a stirring preparation for a survey of the field.

TIRES FOR '89.

The value of a bicycle tire is determined by its elasticity, durability and adhesion to the felloe, and in comparing the Columbia tires with any others in use, they will be found well to the front in all of these essentials. The Pope Mfg. Co. does not claim that the Columbia tires never get loose, but it does not hesitate to affirm that very gratifying results have been obtained by its method of cementing the tires, and rarely has any complaint of loosening been submitted. This method has been still further improved upon, and by the new process of cementing, the Columbia tires of 1889 will adhere to the felloe firmer than ever, and the percentage of loose tires be reduced to the minimum.

again, and we are obliged to step modestly forward and gather in another laurel leaf for the VICTOR.

This time it was at Philadelphia, and the occasion was the

SPORTING LIFE 100 MILE ROAD RACE.

There were thirteen to start, but only two to finish, and both of these rode VICTORS. The course was a hard one, being profusely ornamented with hills, but notwithstanding this, both these men broke the American amateur record, which, by the way, already belonged to the VICTOR.

No, we don't think it is fate that gives the VICTOR its success in road racing. It is a fact that they are made of the best of everything, and built to be winners.

More and better road races have been won on VICTORS than on any other machine in the market, and we submit this fact as very good evidence that they are stronger, lighter running and more reliable than any others. Ask VICTOR riders.

MEDINA, N. Y., Oct. 5th, 1888.

SPRINGFIELD BICYCLE MFG. CO., Boston, Mass.:

Dear Sirs—In May last I purchased a Springfield Roadster, and since that time I have ridden as many miles as any rider in the country, and over every kind of road. I have ridden up sandy hills and down steep stony ones. I have ridden over rails and off of curbings; in short, my Springfield Roadster will take me almost anywhere in safety. It takes but little effort to propel it.

Respectfully, NEIL F. POSSON,
Teacher 4th Grade Medina Free Academy.

"I believe the Springfield Roadster is the best wheel manufactured for all around use." F. E. EASTLACK,
Crawfordsville, Ind.

"I would ride no other." JONATHAN KOLB, M. D.,
Oxford, Ind.

"The most practical Roadster on the market."
W. H. GARDINER, Fairfield, Neb.

"Too much in favor of the Springfield Roadster cannot be said. As an all around machine it has no equal."
C. L. ROBERTS, Dunlap, Iowa.

"My No. 2 wheel runs like grease. It is the easiest running wheel I was ever on." F. M. MILLER, Coldwater, Mich.

"I know from experience that for comfort and ease, long distance riding, over good or rough roads, it is the best bicycle made." C. D. MCINTOSH, Salem, Ind.

"My wheel works very nicely and has never got out of order." JOHN S. COPE, Coldwater, Mich.

"There is no doubt in my mind that it is the most serviceable all around wheel in the market." C. E. WALKER,
Secy. Pastime Cycling and Athletic Club, Chicago.

"I am very much pleased with the Springfield Roadster."
P. H. SERCOMBE, Milwaukee, Wis.

"It is far ahead of any wheel in the market for safety, durability and general road use. For bad roads and hill climbing it has no equal." ROTTMAN & PUGH, Terre Haute, Ind.

"It is the wheel of all wheels." CHAS. HEWITT, Arcola, Ill.

"The Springfield Roadster took the lead here early last spring and has held its own ever since. Twelve wheels were sold, over double the number of any other make. The boys all want them just as soon as they can dispose of their crank wheels."
A. LEROY, Springfield, Ill.

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 30 NOVEMBER, 1888.

TENNESSEE has arrived at the dignity of a full fledged Division. The new Chief Consul is a worker and he has given the State a position it never before attained. A committee on the Improvement of Highways has been appointed and another committee is getting out a Road Book. Now let us hear from some of the other States that have never made themselves felt in League work.

THE retirement of H. W. Hayes as Chief Consul of Massachusetts will leave Dr. W. H. Emery, one of the most popular and energetic wheelmen in the country, to carry on the good work inaugurated by Mr. Hayes. Dr. Emery, by virtue of the office he holds as Vice Consul, will step into the shoes of the retiring Consul, which position he will hold until next July. We congratulate the Massachusetts Division that in the office of Chief Consul it is to have such a man in control as Dr. Emery. We do not for a moment doubt but that in the July election the doctor will be returned by a large majority for the office for another year. We have not heard who Dr. Emery is likely to name as his Vice Consul: we believe, however, that the selection will be a wise one.

THAT the belief in cycling racing and that the sport can be made an interesting one to the general public, is evinced by the fact that through our correspondents and through the columns of our exchanges we notice that the matter of establishing bicycle tracks is receiving warm support and attention at the hands of a good many cycle clubs in different parts of the Union. It is a significant fact, however, that these evidences of enterprise almost unanimously come from sections west and south of New York and the New England States. From Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Maryland, and in fact all the states outside New York and the New England States, where the cycle is now established in popularity, we have advices of activity in the matter of building special bicycle tracks. When we put New York down as one of the States wherein cycle racing has seemingly lost its hold on the public fancy, we are aware we may bring down upon our devoted head the wrath of friend Ducker, and a denial from the management of the Berkely Athletic Association. As for Buffalo, circumstances are yet fresh in the memory of most of our readers, proving that the great Buffalo Tournament was not that howling success that our national pride and anxiety for the good of the sport could have wished. The great and chief cause of dissatisfaction, the miserable track, will no doubt show up in fine shape next spring, and if the Buffalo Fair people decide to give Ducker another trial we have no doubt but that much that was wrong in 1888 will be remedied and made satisfactory in 1889. It must be remembered, however, that the crowd which witnessed the Buffalo races was largely made up of people who had come to visit the Exhibition.

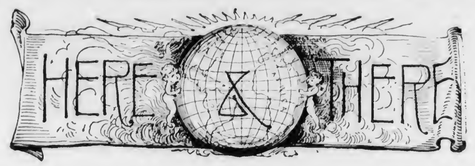
As to the Berkeley Athletic Association, we can only congratulate Gothamites on the fact that this association has added to its many attractions that of a scientifically constructed track on which bicycle races can be run. It must be borne in mind that this fine athletic association takes in cycling as an adjunct only.

What the future of racing in the East will be depends largely on what can be done by our savants of the Racing Board toward putting the present very shaky skeleton on its feet, and fill out the bone frame-work with a good substance that will recall to our minds the robust condition of the racing interests of "Auld Lang Syne."

SPEAKING of the racing days of years agone, it has rather a depressing effect on the average cyclist to visit the grass-grown surfaces of Springfield, Lynn and the old Beacon Park tracks. The latter was the first track ever built in this country specially for bicycle races. Our memory involuntarily goes back to the early days of cycling when we speak of the Beacon Park track. Frye, Stall, Dean, Claflin, Clark, Edmands and Morris were then the bright, particular stars of local fame. It was here that the Boston and Massachusetts Clubs used to send their best men and true to ride for club honors.

It was on this track that George Hendee, then an amateur, beat the then invincible Lewis Frye and Victor Place for the L. A. W. championship, and all the cycling world was agog with amazement at the feat of the wonderful Springfield boy.

It is difficult now to distinguish where the once smooth surface was as the weeds and grass have nearly obliterated all traces of the once famous track. We have personal and kindly (?) remembrances of the track, because on it we rode our one and only track race. Modesty forbids us to relate the details of that brilliant event.



THE RESERVOIR NUISANCE.

Editor Bicycling World: I was very glad to read your article in reference to the Reservoir, as I think it is high time some action is taken to stop the rowdyism of the place. Three or four years ago the Reservoir was a resort for very much larger numbers of wheelmen than at present, and a class of men that no one need be ashamed of associating with. But lately the "hoodlum" element of our sport has acted so disgracefully that, while there are no doubt some decent cyclists seen there, the largest part of the gentlemen wheelmen consider the Reservoir a place to keep away from, if they have any regard for their reputation.

I have heard other wheelmen speak of this a great many times, and it seems too bad that a few low-minded and insulting loafers should not only drive away the better element of cycling but finally deprive all wheelmen of the use of the splendid drives of this beautiful park.

I can think of no suggestions to prevent the evil, but I write to show that your efforts for the cause are appreciated by at least one rider, and that the disgraceful actions of the scum of cycling have been noticed by others, and that anything that can be done to stop it will be appreciated by yours, very truly, "NEWTON."

A COPY of the BICYCLING WORLD AND L. A. W. BULLETIN of the issue of 23 November, will find a resting place underneath the corner stone of the new Boston Library.

THIS AND THAT.

I SEE that a "mannikin" writes to one of the cycling papers about a "nice vertical tread" for safeties. I should suppose he does not know what he is talking about, because if there is one thing in the world that makes a "safety" an absolute horror, it is having a saddle placed directly over the centre of the pedalling. A saddle placed well back is conducive to extra comfort, ease in steering and lesser liability to slipping on greasy surfaces. I am at present riding a "Referee" with 26 inch wheels (both) with 7-8 rubber to the rear wheel and 5-8 rubber to the front. The saddle is placed nearly over the centre of the rear wheel and I have never slipped, even while riding through crowded thoroughfares in London. Take Fleet street on a wet day and if you do not slip about considerably then your machine has little the matter with it. Although the saddle is placed upon the saddle pillar without springs of any kind there is little or no jar by reason of the large rubbers. But I should not advise any one to get wheels smaller than 30 inch front and 28 inch rear, as with the 26 inch wheels there is a decided tendency to bound or bounce about on a rough or uneven road, that is not a little trying at first and besides the steering is more difficult. The machine only weighs 28 pounds with everp thing included, and is practically unbreakable though I have run over no less than five dogs; a collie, a retriever, a fox terrier, a bull terrier and another fox terrier, the same being in the order of my meeting them. Once I tried to get under the wheels of a hansom in Piccadilly Circus but escaped with my life and the machine was but little hurt.

I HAVE had my machine geared up to 68 inches with seven and a half inch cranks and find no trouble in riding the Scotch hills, though it rather took it out of one's thigh muscles at first. But on the "other side" of the hill, you can just lie down and spurt your fill. For American "roads," I think about the same gear as a man would ride in an ordinary is about right. Say a man rides a 52 inch ordinary let him have his safety geared to 52 inches. This may look like an old woman's rule, but try it, and you'll find, that, unless a man is a very strong rider, or has a machine of about 30 to 35 pounds in weight, he will do better with a very moderate gear. But if your machine is high geared (say over 58 inches) then look out for "heavy slogging" in rough or muddy roads. Whew! man, but it is terrible. Then the moderate gear comes in handy.

The ordinaries seem to be dying an undeserved death here. Remember me, when I say, that they take a lot of beating. In a few years, unless a reaction in public sentiment sets, there will be very few men who either care to or "dare" ride an ordinary. Now I do claim that, on a very good road, the safety is far ahead in point of speed to the ordinary, especially if there are hills to "rush," but on a muddy, stony road, with a difficult path to pick, give me my old 52 inch. Give me my old butterfly ordinary, keep your "bally beetle" of a safety.

ONE thing which has made the safety appear to be "the fast" machine, is the fact that "the fastest" riders of the ordinary were about the first to take to the safety, while the novices for the most part, clung to the tall brother. On the road to-day, one rarely sees a man who can ride an ordinary decently.

I HAVE not heard of the Ripley Road Club, or of the "Wild Earth Manneries," or the "Freddy Cooperies," or the "Whoopee Whoopperies" for some time, and I trust they are all right. Nor yet have I heard from "the land where the whangdoodle mourns for its first born on the mountains of Hipsidam and the lion roars and the monkey smokes his pipe." Not a word, not a line. Nor have I lately heard of the gay and giddy Tommy Moore, he of the society for the prevention of "trade weeklies." When I last saw him he was in the "Criterion" bar reading me some of his little gems of thought. Here was one of them: "And, as the pale, silvery moonlight glinted through the lattice casement, it cast the cold, remorseless shadow of Murrill's last year's steel spring bustle upon the old man's ash heap, and naught was heard save the flopping of the screech-owl's wings, as she ground her beak against the cold potato which little Tommy had been using as a plug for his corn cob pipe." After this, what's the matter with American humor. Il n'y a pas des mouches sur, M. Tommy Moore.

IN the BICYCLING WORLD I notice that one "Hawkshaw" is in a great frame of skull to know what has become of "the very erratic individual of the hyphenized cognomen, J. Parvis-Bruce," and with rare humor, and appreciation of a choice jest, likens me to a sort of "sky-rocket performance:" thinks it about time to look for the stick, etc. Strange that a "Hawkshaw should not be able to ferret out information, or is he only an amateur detective with a big brass star. And he is looking for the stick, is he? Well, I hope he may get it. "A bridle for the ass, and a rod (or stick) for the fool's back." In answer to Mr. Hawkshaw, I may say that fishing and shooting has been my occupation of late, and after a long tramp on Scotch moors one does not feel "very fit" (F. E. Belden?) for writing "slush" for newspapers. In Scotland I have been among well-bred people, who mind their own business.

I WONDER how the "Senator" is getting along, and if he still has a big bank account. If he comes soon to "the Cape of Good Hope" he may see me there, for thither I go for a time.

I HAVE had many letters of late from American wheelmen, and those from J. R. Stockdale of Minneapolis, "Ratchet" of Newark, F. Belden of Hartford, and others will receive attention as soon as possible.

KANSAS CITY.

"MENTOR."

THE WORLD of this week contains an account of the United Wheelmen's new club house, but at the very last moment, the owner of the house refused to rent the house for club purposes. However, nothing daunted, the club members in the Western vernacular, "got a hustle on them," and leased a two-story brick house, only a few blocks below the other house, 1117 Broadway, and, in all probability, when this letter is read, the United Wheelmen will be comfortably located in their new quarters. The house now secured is specially adapted for club purposes, the rooms being large. Entering from Broadway, you pass through a wide hall into the reception room and parlor, practically one, the two rooms occupying the whole first floor. The floors will be finely carpeted with rich and luxurious velvet moquette. The furniture will be as equally fine. The pool table room will be in the semi-basement. The floor is specially adapted for the purpose, being alternate strips of red and white hard wood. The billiard room will be in the second story. A room in the basement will be utilized for a wheel room. The remainder of the house will be rented to club members exclusively, for private sleeping apartments. In the rear are two large verandas, where light refreshments can be served in summer time, or where a Havanna can be quietly smoked, or where a quiet tete-a-tete can be held with some dear creature. In the third story the janitor and wife will have their rooms. The parlor will be provided with an upright grand piano, the billiard room with a brand new table, the pool room with a new table also. The reading room will have a handsome book case, for the reception of books, and newspaper files. The house will be heated by a furnace, and in addition, all the rooms are provided with grates and handsome mantels. The social season will open in a few weeks. The ladies, friends of members, are taking a lively interest in the club, and they will add to the growth and success of the same. Ladies will be elected honorary members of the club. Provision has been made for non-resident members, whereby wheelmen in cities surrounding Kansas City can become members. This is a good scheme, as wheelmen throughout Kansas and Missouri who visit this city can have a club where they can spend their leisure time while in town. The fee will be nominal.

THE annual business meeting of the United Wheelmen will be held Dec. 4. It is altogether probable that a full list of new officers will be elected. The present officers are anxious to retire and give the new members an opportunity to manage the club.

D. B. THOMAS resigned from the club last Tuesday. He sails next week for England, where he will visit relatives, and then sail for Buenos Ayres, Brazil, his future residence. He will purchase an English wheel in Great Britain and take it with him to his new South American home. He was elected an honorary member of the club. His host of friends wish him unbounded prosperity in his new home.

AT last word comes from St. Louis, through "Linneus'" letter to the WORLD this week, that either J. M. Hodgen or Harry Gordon will race Nelson Haynes of this city for a $25 medal. Kansas City wheelmen are extremely sorry that the season is so far advanced that a race this season is impossible, but next season, if all parties are willing, no doubt a race can be arranged, and Kansas City will be there.

REED SPRINGS, near Liberty, fourteen miles from this city, will be a great resort for wheelmen next season. A boulevard will be constructed, and the ride will be fine. L. A. C. Ladish is financially interested in this summer resort, and promises a delightful place to spend Sunday. A fine hotel is being built, and a number of mineral springs are near. Mr. Ladish is a member of the United Wheelmen.

PENNSYLVANIA.

"ARIEL."

THANKS for the compliment, Sporting Life. Self laudation, quotha? And a blunder in grammar? Ten to one you can't point it out. And the local cycling news in the Times is more complete than that in any other city paper, not excepting Sporting Life, and such being the case I believe in giving the journal credit for it. Self laudation? Rats! It is nothing to a correspondent's credit that a great daily has shown its recognition of our sport. The object was solely and simply to induce local wheelmen to patronize the paper which best catered to their wants; just as I have always advocated. And if Sporting Life wishes to become popular among cyclers its correspondent should restrain its caustic criticisms on wheel writers, otherwise he will have his hands full. Take, for example, his fling at "Duquesne" in a late issue, for which the latter gave him a flaying. A little raillery is enjoyable all round, but uncalled for rudeness only reacts on the party who so far forgets himself as to use it. The Wheel, too, must needs comment. Is this for cause? There is quite a large-sized African in the latter woodpile, on which "Cycle" could perhaps throw some light.

MUCH obliged for your suspersion of judgment, "Westfield." The article referred to, however, was of itself such direct testimony to the truth of my remarks—to those who could read between the lines—that I was advised by a number of my friends to pay no attention to it whatever. This, of course, I could not do, as I owed it to the readers of the WORLD, at large, who do not know me personally, to set myself right with them. That I am perfectly able to do this let those testify who have in the past made the mistake of rushing into print without any ground to stand on. I can, on a pinch, dip a pretty lively pen when I am put on my defense.

"PENNSY" intends giving a grand ball in the near future, which is to be the event of the winter, and are also arranging for a series of suitable entertainments to be held at the club house during the season. The Philadelphia Club have already inaugurated a series of informal dances at the club house on Saturday evenings, and they have been a great success, while the Century "smoker," No. 1, will soon come off.

THE South End Wheelmen were unable to make satisfactory arrangements with their new landlord in regard to their present quarters, so they will remove, bag and baggage, to No. 1726 South Broad street, just below the old house, during this week. As their second anniversary occurs on December 4th, they intend having their house warming on that day.

"VISITED the Philadelphia Bicycle Club, Nov. 22d, a young man about 25, well dressed, light complexion, about five feet six." Above is a copy of a notice sent to the city clubs by Mr. Osborne, as a warning against a would-be thief, who endeavored to get away with a bicycle at that club. He represented himself as a League man to the janitor, but his actions aroused the latter's suspicions, and he headed off Mr. Thief.

THE Centurions will have a hare and hounds chase Thanksgiving Day, starting at 9.30, with Chestnut Hill as the objective point. Kirk Brown and another member, on a tandem bicycle, will be the hares. Assemble at Chestnut Hill at 12.30, noon, thence home for dinner.

CAPTAIN LE CATO, and Mr. Candy, of the Maryland Bicycle Club, ran over from Baltimore last Sunday, and were the guests of the Pennsylvania Club.

AT the Century, on Monday evening, I ran against Captain Fleming, and right glad I was to meet the genial Captain after his months' absence. He has been out in the West shooting.

BOTH the Century and the Pennsylvania Republicans enjoyed a good dinner at the expense of their unfortunate Democratic club members. Two of the latter club's affairs have come off. Poor Semple rashly bet a dinner for fifteen with mine host at Paoli, and he set 'em up last week; while on Thursday night, thirty-eight of the "Pennsy" men sat down to a menu at the Colonnade Hotel that would have tempted an anchorite. From half-past eight to twelve o'clock they discussed the good things, and when at length the party broke up, election bets were unanimously voted a great success—by the Republican contingent.

NEW YORK.

"HAWKSHAW."

AS much as I dislike to put my Hawkshawian ability to so ignoble a use, as an attempt to discover the personality of one of your correspondents, I cannot refrain from doing so in the case of the mysterious "Caviler." The letter by this writer, which is at all times so well written a one, has caused some inquiry here as to the identity of its writer, that as a matter of course I have felt obligated to undertake to meet this demand on the part of the readers of that individual's letter and my scribblings by exposing it. A careful scrutiny of the construction of "Caviler's" writings, especially of the recent letter dealing with New York subjects and individuals, convinces me of one thing. The sex of the writer might admit of the author being a "caviler," but never of being a cavalier, and that any vote that "Caviler' may have come to New York to cast went most likely to Belva Lockwood, through sympathy. In other words, I think "Caviler" is a lady. The very way that "Caviler" writes up "handsome George" Bidwell convinces me of this, as no male writer would have described him as "that aristocratic looking blonde." We are all well aware of our Chief Consul's good looks, and we are proud of them, but then as men we are not prone to praise them in print, so that I am of the opinion that "Caviler," if a rider, has as a mount either a tricycle or a lady's bicycle. I may be wrong but I don't think I am, and even if I am mistaken I hope that "Caviler" will not fail to accept the proffer of my most distinguished consideration and admiration.

To again refer to your correspondents in the same issue, being though in this case a seeker after information, rather than a giver thereof, as in the foregoing paragraph. Might I ask "Mentor," of Kansas City, to inform me what he calls the "pedal mount" if the "new one" he describes as follows is not it? "It consists of running along side of wheel and jumping on the pedal and rising with it into the seat." Here in the effete East we of the wheel are at all times watching the wild, woolly West for novelties, and to our benighted brains the above seems to be an old friend, the pedal mount of full ten years standing, and yet can it be that during all of that time that what we thought was the pedal mount, was really something "new," and we didn't get on to it? Only one thing makes me think that we must be unacquainted with "Mentor's" "new mount," and that is his statement that "it is easily accomplished, with no danger of fall." Any one who has tackled the pedal mount, as we know it, is but too well aware that in learning, it is often dangerous of accomplishment and easy of fall, being thus, in its initial stages, exactly opposite to the new Western discovery.

TO sit in the club during a boasting match of the "old guard," and hear those veterans relate, with many a laugh, of the accidents they have suffered upon road and path, has often caused me to think that in one respect, at least, headers are like love affairs, they are both good jokes after they are over.

THAT terrible disease, Presidentolatry, continues to spread under the invigorating influence and example of the recent political upheaval, and the earliest victim to it, in the cycling world, is Editor Prial. In a recent issue of the Wheel he proceeds to place upon their appropriate pedestals the various idols for Presidential honors in the L. A. W. They are all the "favorite sons" of States strong in the political arena of the League, and one and all present strong claims for their elevation to the position. "Fierce," however, "is the light that beats upon a throne," and not mild is the one which sheds its calcium effects upon L. A. W. candidates, however, "you pays your money and you takes your choice," so proceed, gentlemen of the L. A. W., to become either worshipers or inconoclasts as you may see fit, and whatever the result may be, and to whichever candidate you may award the prize, rest assured that we of humble ten thousand will not fail to throw up our caps and hail your selection with the time-honored cry of the populace, "Le roi est mort: vive le roi!"

HOW often does one hear the remark made, regarding the appearance of a racing man after he has distinguished himself by some notable performance upon the wheel, that "he is the last person, one would judge from his appearance, to be a racing man, etc.," and how very untrue in most cases this statement is. Even among those who should know better there seems to be the belief that a successful racing man should be large of limb and great of mould, displaying a mass of giant muscles like unto a blacksmith or a prize-fighter, whereas a little retrospection of their experience, if they have any, and otherwise they should make no such statement as the one quoted, will at once show them that with rare exceptions the lady with the bugle has failed to toot over the deeds of any racing man who showed, either in his heighth of stature or preponderance of muscle, any difference from the ordinary rider, when viewed by the unpracticed eye of the casual observer. In many respects the racing man in his "points" differs not greatly from his competitor for racing honors, the thoroughbred horse. He must be lean of flank, deep of chest, clear of eye, strong of will, and capable of standing punishment when a bruising finish is demanded of him. All these points must be found in a successful racer, be he horse or man. What would be thought of a critic, who, being shown a herd of horses, and upon being requested to select therefrom a horse he thought from appearances was the most fitted for a racer, should choose one of those great Clydesdale brutes, simply because they were endowed with enormous strength and large frame? He would be accused of being a fool, and would deserve the title, and yet constantly is this same principle unconsciously endorsed by unthinking critics when referring to the personal appearance of such riders as have become famous through their performances a-wheel, when they say that the racer shows no physical cause for his success, simply because he is not built upon the Clydesdale model of strength of limb and magnitude of frame. As a sample of how even those whose position in wheel matters should cause them to avoid this error and yet fail to do so, the recent article in the Bi. News, which declares that Windle will not amount to much as a rider, because he can boast of but five feet six inches in heighth, is an excellent example. In the entire range of athletics, excepting such sports as are entirely a question of physical strength, such as putting the shot, throwing the hammer, etc., my experience has proven to me that almost in every case record has been made and held by those whose heighth will range between five feet five inches and five feet nine inches. Only in rare instances do those of greater stature receive even a smile from that hard-hearted old dame, Fame, or her twin sister, Record.

THE Berkeley Athletic Club, from whose kindly interest in wheeling much good is expected, has taken a new step in athletics that will benefit cycling in a new and much desired direction. Under the Berkeley's auspices there has been organized the Ladies' Athletic Club, which will be for women, what the New York Athletic and the Berkeley are for men, a first-class and perfectly appointed association for physical development. A club house adjoining the Berkeley will be built in 45th street, and a portion of the club house and grounds at Berkeley Oval set apart for these fair athletes, and every convenience and encouragement will be given the sweet girls. It will be safe to safe to say that Chief Consul George R. Bidwell, the Captain of bicycling in the Berkeley Club, will not fail to see that his branch of sport is properly brought before the ladies, and here at last seems to be the opening which will result in making cycling popular with society, an end most devotedly wished for by those who desire the welfare and elevation of wheeling.

"STAR."

TEDDY ALLSUP, the leading spirit of the Crescents, says in regard to scorching: "We believe in scorching. Our club is made up of tough and hardened young men that work. We like to ride. That's all that keeps our club together. We've got eight members. We don't take any new members in till we've had them out on a run with us to see whether they can stand the pace or not. We don't make any stops when we're on a run and so we don't want anybody in our club that can't keep up. We take our longest runs in the summer when the weather is nice, leaving the short runs till the time when the weather is bad. In that way we get to see a great many more places during the year than if we only took short runs, and don't get so tired of seeing the same places so often. Why what's a wheel made for if it isn't to hustle on? That's why I bought one. The fellow that sold it to me told me that I could ride 200 miles a day on it. The first ride I took on it was to Middletown (?) but I didn't get back till 11 o'clock that night and was done up for three weeks." (80 miles the round trip).

THE "Duke," in speaking of racing, said: "Yes we need a track. It would give the young men and the scorchers a chance to work off some of their surplus energy. Even men of your age would no doubt like to try their speed (imagine your correspondent in a race.) The "Zoo" would be a good place for a track as all the entertainments given there have been elevated in tone and that is what we desire. It would be very unfortunate indeed if cycling should ever get mixed up with either base ball or horse racing. Still the "Zoo" is a little bit out of the way. Perhaps a track might be built in the old base ball grounds now leased by the Order of Cincinnatus."

CHARLEY HANAUER, in discussing the racing question, said: "What we need to make racing in this locality a success is class races. Wheelmen, on seeing such men as Burroughs, Croninger, Perin and Dr. Green entered for a race, will say to themselves: 'I've no business in a race with such men,' and will refuse to enter. Now, if such men could be barred from certain races, and all races be for short distances, they would be more interesting, for after all, it is the finish that the public are interested in, and, if that is close and exciting, it doesn't matter so much about the rest."

BARNEY KLUM, the newly elected president of the Centrals, says that the report that they are to disband is a mistake, for they intend to make their club a greater success than ever.

FRANK G. WARNER, of the Hartford Wheel Club, was in our city on Nov. 19. He was the guest of Air-Brake Norton, in whose invention he is very much interested.

THE "Veloce" Club have an extensive library and a well appointed gymnasium.

THE C. B. C., not to be outdone by the "Veloce" Club, are also forming the nucleus of a library. Their collection at present comprises: Two bicycle catalogues for '84; one number each of BICYCLING WORLD, 1885; Outing, 1885; the Wheel, 1887; The Wheelman's Record, 1885; The L. A. W. Bulletin, 1885; and The Cyclist, 1885; the City Directory for '63; one well thumbed copy of Bludan T. Hunder's "Blue-eyed Billy, the Bucktown Bully, or Virtue its own reward"; one fire alarm card; and three fly specked patent medicine almanacs, of pre-historic periods.

TWO attempts have recently been made to get up another combined run. This time it was to the "Zoo," but it was twice postponed on account of the weather, the second time indefinitely. It is perhaps fortunate that the elements interferred to prevent what might have been a "fizzle." Two of the clubs that were expected to attend, called runs on that day to other points. Then there were others who did not approve of a bicycle parade through the city on Sunday, no matter how quietly it might be conducted.

MR. ASHER, of Eaton, O., who made his phenomenal debut as a flyer, at the L. A. W. meet at Cleveland, in 1884, paid our city a visit some two weeks ago.

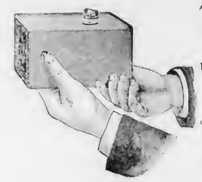
"LINNEUS."

THE Cycle Club's races have at last been arranged and the following events will be contested at Forest Park on Thanksgiving Day: Half-mile novice, half-mile handicap, 100 yards slow race, half-mile club, half-mile ride and run, one-mile handicap, half-mile consolation. The races will be started at 10 A. M. sharp, and the following will officiate: Referee, R. E. Lee; judges, J. S. Kuhn, W. H. Wylis, H. Wheeler; starter, G. M. Wilder; handicappers, E. N. Sanders, W. H. Wylis, J. S. Kuhn; clerk of coure, F. W. Segar. In case of inclement weather the races will be held at the Natatorium. The prizes consist of gold and silver medals, silk umbrella, cane, pair of silk suspenders and a turkey. But two of the events, one-half-mile and mile handicap are open. The understanding was that all but two of the events should be open. This will cause some talk.

R. N. BOWDEN having resigned as Consul at Brookfield, E. N. Shepherd was appointed by Chief Consul Brewster to fill the vacancy, and he at once began his official career by sending a very full report of Linn County.



THE Cycle Club will give a musicale at their club house to-night. The talent will all be furnished by the members of the club and an enjoyable time is guaranteed all that attend. After the entertainment refreshments will be served. These entertainments are stag affairs, and all the guests have a great time.

THE Missouri's gymnasium classes, under the guidance of Billy Barron, are again flourishing, and are attended by a large number of the club's members. In spite of the inclement weather, fifteen attended last Monday night, and were put through their paces in great shape. The "horse" and rings are the usual programme for Mondays, and parallel bars, jumping and pullies for Thursday evening.

R. A. NEILSON is sojourning at Hot Springs, Ark., and is engaged in one of the hotels there as bar keeper, so Percy Stone tells me. A number of wheels all tagged for him have recently arrived at the St. Louis Wheel Co., and were reshipped to him to be used for renting purposes in that town. Unless the visitors to that place have changed a good deal, Bobby will find that this business is not a gold mine.

E. B. KIDSON is at work on a circular which will soon be mailed to the members of the Missouri Bi. Club, which states that no more

MY CYCLING LOG BOOK. By "Papa" Weston. The transitory pleasures of cycling can be made as permanent as its physical benefits, by jotting down in a well devised log book, the distances and incidents of one's various journeys. Knowing that such a record is a most pleasant thing to have, and believing that the keeping of such should be encouraged, as tending to the permanent good of cycling in more ways than can be referred to here. The Log Book is handsomely and strongly bound in red leather, will last for years of constant use, and is the best arranged book of its kind ever yet devised. It fills a want often felt by the cyclist who values records of interest for future reference. Price, post paid, $1.25 For sale by Bicycling World Co., 12 Pearl st., Boston.

entertainments will be given in future unless the club members subscribe a sum sufficient to cover all expenses. The entertainments of this club are given on a very lavish scale, and in the past a sum of nearly $200 had to be paid out of the club's treasury each year to make up the deficit.

STREET improvements are still going on here. The Board of Public Improvements has let the contract for the work on the Forest Park boulevard for $39,931.50 for the entire work. The plan, in brief, is to lay out the boulevard with a twenty-foot walk on either side, two driveways of thirty feet each, and a park or lawn of fifty feet down the centre between the two drives. The road bed will be the same as Lindell avenue. Cyclers will gladly welcome this as a big acquisition to our fine streets.

THE necessity of a good track to hold bicycle and athletic events on has been much felt during the past, and I understand a company is being formed that will build one at a point in the Florrisant Valley, distanced about ten miles from town. The matter, as projected by Mr. L. C. Buckley, who is the architect for the syndicate, contemplates the erection of a large hotel to be used as a summer resort, artificial lake a mile long for aquatic sports, and a one half or one third mile track, with the necessary grand stand, bath rooms, etc., to hold bicycle and foot races on. The whole scheme is an embryo as yet, but it is the earnest wish of every cycler that it be pushed through as soon as possible.

COLUMBIA, MO., boasts of the finest universities in the Union, but it students have had no chance whatever to take part in athletic sports, there being no facilities for them. The directors have at last awakened to some sort of an improvement, and last week called Prof. Muegge, of the West St. Louis Turnverein, who spent part of the week there, and drew up plans for a gymnasium and athletic grounds to cost $15,000, for which Dr. Ross, President of the University, will ask an appropriation for, at the next meeting of the Legislature. This will give Missouri another track to hold races on. Prof. Penn is consul at Columbia and a number of the students are enthusiastic wheelmen and will be glad to see the track built.

MR. M. H. CAHOON writes from Fredericktown: "Deaths and removals have caused the dwindling in numbers among the wheelmen here. Since all my old chums have died or removed, and I am about the last survivor, I cannot feel the full charm of riding as I once did. I still ride and will take your suggestions and renew my membership in the League. It makes me feel badly now to ride alone where I used to have from ten to twelve companions. It takes all the edge off the sport. Still I shall never give up the wheel absolutely, unless I contract such severe rheumatism that I cannot mount, and then I will try a safety." Fredricktown lies in Jim Neill's old district, and is surrounded by a riding district similar to Clarksville, but smaller.

TERRE HAUTE. "WABASH."

ON Thursday, Nov. 16th, the Terre Haute Bi. Club held its regular monthly meeting. The main issue of the evening was the trouble which was caused by the part taken in the campaign by some of its members. An effort was made to smooth the matter over, but the offended members were obstinate and twenty-two of them handed in their resignation, two of them were Republicans. The prospects are favorable for the formation of a new club in the spring, which if organized will be a league club in every sense of the word. This would be a good thing as there are upwards of a hundred wheelmen in the city, and only about twenty-six of them are league members.

IF the weather is favorable the club will make a run on Thanksgiving which will be the longest of the season. We are having pretty weather and some of the boys are running up their mileage.

I SEE by our daily paper that Governor elect Hovey among other laws which he proposes to change, is one of great importance to Indiana Wheelmen, and he should be encouraged in it. Heretofore a certain amount of the state tax went to the school fund. Mr. Hovey proposes to abolish this fund and turn the aforesaid tax into a gravel road fund. If he makes this law, Indiana will be one of the finest cycling states in the Union, as certain sections of Indiana are already famous for their gravel roads and pikes. I would advise the division to look into this matter.

SAD news of a fatal accident comes to us from Gainesville, Texas. Mr. H. C. Hyman, a gentleman whose home is in Kentucky, was thrown from his bicycle and instanly killed. The details are not at hand.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

WE stated last week that the L. A. W. would furnish the valuable little handbook on "Roads and Road Improvement" free of cost to those who needed them. We were too generous in our statement, as the fact is that the League will furnish them at cost to those who may desire them for distribution. A supply should be in the hands of every League Division to be used in the missionary work of awakening the average cyclers to the importance of good roads and hints as how to make them.

MR. GARDEN, the Chicago manager of the Pope Mfg. Co., was in town for a few days last week. Speaking of a prospective match between Lumsden and Stone, Mr. Garden was very sanguine as to the Chicago man's chances.

THE Brookline (Mass.) Club held their annual dinner at the U. S. Hotel in Boston last week Thursday. The new officers of the club are F. H. Young, president; F. M. Seamans, vice presipent; D. F. Beede, treasurer; E. W. Baker, secretary; George Forsythe, William James, club committee.

AS between the two great colleges of America there is no doubt but that the students of Harvard lead the way and show more interest in cycling than do those of Yale. Harvard, in the possession of R. H. Davis, the Cambridge college has the fastest amateur rider of the rear driver in the country. Kenneth Brown is also a good one on the ordinary. He made his debut as a novice at Buffalo and Rochester.

THE New Haven (Conn.) Bicycle Club presented an excellent programme for their minstrel entertainment of last Wednesday. The first part, "A Club run" was well sustained by the participants. Messrs. White Larom, Bennett, Langdale, Durand, Bowman and Soltan individually distinguished themselves. While the Abt quartett, the New Haven Banjo Club and W. S. Maltby, trick rider, added much to the success of the affair.

THE action of the Directors of the Gentlemen's Driving Park, St. Louis, Mo., in refusing to allow the Cycle Club to run their races there on Thanksgiving Day, has been very unfavorably commented on on all sides. No horses are at present being worked on the track. A number of wheelmen would like to know by what right they are ruled off the track, as the same lies entirely within the confines of Forest Park, every inch of which is public property.

A CORRESPONDENT from California, Mo., writes us as follows: "W. D. Sheriff is a deaf mute 21 years of age and is greatly interested in cycling. Last April he issued a challenge to any man similarly affected to ride for the deaf mute championship of the U. S., distance from one to one-hundred miles. As the challenge was not taken up Mr. Sheriff claims the championship of America. He states that he will go to England next year and issue the same challenge. Mr. Sheriff in practice did the mile in 2.44 1-2."

Wheeling describes a contrivance which it claims is a great aid to hill climbing when applied to safeties. "It consists of a light strong, sleeveless jacket, in the front of which is a bowbar, which stretches across the rider's waist loosely enough to prevent the jacket from binding on the sides. From the centre of this bar a chain extends to the nearest rigid part of the particular safety in use. The effect of this invention, it is claimed, is firstly directed against the "bicycle back." The tendency of the rider is to sit up and pull against the chain attachment from the strongest part of his back, thus not only giving him a better appearance but giving him wonderful leverage for hill work or in battling against a head wind.

THOMAS STEVENS gave an illustrated lecture at Worcester, Nov. 22. The hall was crowded, and Mr. Stevens' lecture was one that gave undoubted pleasure and satisfaction. The Telegram of Worcester says: "From the first Mr. Stevens delighted his audience. His 'lecture' was not of the usual kind; it was, rather, a delightful series of anecdotes and comments upon the ways of Eastern people, and Mr. Stevens did not say 'I' during the whole evening, preferring to refer to his exploits as of those of 'our 'cycler.' He skipped about from place to place, not attempting to read his diary by the way, and the result was entirely satisfactory. A stereopticon was used to throw the pictures upon the screen, and among them were many readily recognizable as coming from the pages of Outing, in which Mr. Stevens published the whole delightful story of his tour."

A DECISION lately rendered in England is of interest to renters of cycles. It seems that a Mr. Raybould hired a "Demon" safety from a dealer by the name of Paine. The dealer represented the Demon as being in perfect condition. On this representation Raybould took the machine and paid the required deposit of £2. He had not ridden it long before the chain broke, and the consequent repairs necessitating the taking of machine apart disclosed the fact that "one of the cogs on the driving wheel was broken, the gearing wheel had been broken and a patch brazed on the inner side. The left hand cone of the crank axle, which should have been in one piece, was entirely worn away and severed into two, so that there was no bearing or smooth surface for the balls, on which the speed and easy running of the machine depended, to rest upon. The right hand cone was cracked, indented and chipped, and only seventeen balls out of twenty-four were whole, the remaining seven having been crushed and churned up into swarf. There were small, loose pieces of foreign metal in the bearings, which were clogged with swarf and dirty in the extreme." Paine admitted that he represented that the wheel was in "perfect condition" when he let it to Raybould and he so believed it. The Judge thereupon gave judgment in favor of the plaintiff for the £2 deposit, £1 10s. paid for repairs, two days' hotel expenses, and sundry other items of expense for railway fares, telegrams, etc., amounting in all to £5 5s., and £5 11s. 6d. for costs.

HAGERSTOWN (MD.) NOTES.

THE Hagerstown Bicycle Club is not a thing of the past (not by a jugful). We have just as many men in line, and consequently as many incidents and accidents, as ever (I'll have to take back accidents, as the safety is now the wheel of our awkward squad). Every good day sees a number of wheels upon the streets, some for business, others enjoying a social spin in and around the country. Seldom comes a good Sunday but our worthy Tourmaster Scotty (Bomberger) gathers his traps and wanders aimlessly to the country especially in returning after dark, after several doses of what he calls good, fresh country milk, only to show to his anxious friends how great a mistake the turnpike man made when he put several piles of rocks in the middle of the road (that were not there when he went) just to see if he could, really, ride a steeple-chase and come out whole. Scotty says "it can't be done".

We intend to give a two days' race meet on July 4th, next year, and are beginning to "whoop it up" already, when we expect to exhibit our flyers ("they come high but we must have them"): some who have made good road time want a chance to try their nerve on the track.

It is a deplorable fact that as soon as winter sets in our fellows devote more time to social than athletic training. At our "Thursday evening socials" each man vies with his neighbor to do the handsome with the dear girls present, but as matters matrimonial have not been concluded the crowd—girls, boys and all—have mutually agreed to abandon the social scheme, and will try their hand on the drama. I am not so well informed as to give the name of the Dramatic Club, suffice it to say it will be strictly amateur. They are to make their debut to a select crowd on Thursday evening, the 22d, when our President will deliver an oration, subject, "Psychological Aspects of Wheeling." Captain Updegraff appears in his favorite role, "the only living female bass singer," whilst our surgeon, Dr. Wareham, enjoys the celebrity of character, "the bearded child of the Andes." Many and various will be the attractions. Free admission—though none but the appreciative will be admitted. They are to give a regular pay entertainment in the "Academy" here later on.

DOANE'S 100 MILE RECORD STILL INTACT.

THE record made in competition by W. S. Doane over a 50 mile course in Oct. 1886, of 7.24.03 will still hold good for this country. The time made by Dampman of 7.20.17 at Philadelphia on election day can not be accepted by this paper as the course over which it was ridden is a trifle over seven miles. This decision is in compliance with our Editorial of October 21, 1887, in which we state that long distance road records must be made sn open competition and over a route not less than 20 miles in length.

ANOTHER "CLAIM."

THE following taken from the Chicago Herald, of November 22, has led us to write Mr. Meyers for particulars, as to route, measurement, timers, checker, etc., and we await reply:

"Bert Meyers, a member of the Peoria Bicycle Club, finished a twenty-four-hour ride yesterday and received the congratulations of his friends on having beaten the Chicago and American amateur record. He completed 289 miles in twenty-four hours."

THE RESERVOIR RECORD FROM A STANDING START.

As per announcement in these columns a handicap race was held round the lower basin of the Chestnut Hill reservoir last Saturday. The principal aim of the promoter of this race, Mr. C. P. Daniels, the well known trainer and general athlete, was to see if a record from a standing start could not be established for a bicycle.

In September, 1888, P. J. Berlo, of South Boston, and J. P. Clarke, of Dorchester, on a tandem tricycle, did the distance from a standstill in 3.11 3-4. But to the event under report. At precisely 2.15 Davis, the great Harvard safety rider, was sent away from scratch, with P. J. Berlo, 50 yards, A. F. Klaus, 150 yards, and W. Thomas, 200 yards handicap. The handicaps were quickly cut down by Davis, and at the half distance the Harvard man was in the lead, with Berlo a close second. Davis was running fast, too fast for Berlo, who could not catch him, although the South Bostonese tried very hard to get in first. Davis made the excellent time of 3.19, which will stand as the bicycle record for the distance from a standing start. Davis rode a light Swift safety.

W. B. Greenleaf made an attempt to better this time, but the best he could do was 3.28 2-5.

MISS PAULINE HALL CAPTURES CHICAGO.

"PAULINE HALL on a bicycle! Etelka, queen of Hungary, and Pauline, queen of opera bouffe artists, on a little leather seat, whirling along the boulevards, precariously balanced on two shining steel wheels! Unique idea, isn't it? But nevertheless, astonishing as it may seem, pretty Pauline does ride a bicycle, and ride it well, too. Pauline is not airy nor fairy. Her figure is rounded and plump, but the fair prima donna of the 'Nadjy' company can get on to one of these queer inventions, a lady's safety bicycle, and howl along the boulevards with the best of them.

Since the opening of the 'Nadjy' engagement at the Grand, Miss Hall has been bicycling all over Chicago with the members of one or two swell clubs, notably the Illinois and the Douglas. The masculer-limbed young men who have attended her, haven't had to "go easy," either, in their jaunts about the suburbs. Pauline skims the gravel with the best of them, and the boys are proud of her. The stories of the Illinois club's short tours with Pauline Hall will go down to generations of wheelmen at the club house of the organization. To show their admiration, the wheelmen have planned a novel presentation for to-night. The Illinois Club with their invited guests of the Douglas Club have taken a good section of the orchestra at the Grand, and will attend in a body. When Pauline sings her best solo a beautiful bicycle of flowers, a triumph of the florists' art, will be brought down the aisle and presented to her in token of the bon comraderie, the fellowship existing between all lovers of the exhilarating sport, without regard to sex or degree."

The above, taken from last night's paper, has become an accomplished fact, we were there 70 strong, and such a time! Oh! my. Pauline and Francis Wilson both wore our colors, Pauline's being fastened with the club pin of one of the bicycle clubs within a thousand miles of Boston.

The presentation to Miss Hall of a floral emblem was a club pin, being worked out with fine effect.

Wilson's attempt to ride an ordinary across the stage brought down the house, and owing to the fact of his wonderful control (?) over the wheel we immediately issue a challenge to him to ride 100 yards, HANDS OFF.

I. C. C.

"INF"—A COINCIDENCE.

BY THE SECRETARY.

IT was on one of the closing days of the month of June, in the year—really, I've forgotten the year. It doesn't matter much: but I haven't forgotten a remark he made to me, on that day, relative to dates and time. It was: "Well, what does it signify when or where anything transpired in the life of a man whose life is a perfect blank?"

No matter what some dates are in every man's life, and in mine no matter what that one was.

Anyhow, it was when the new-mown hay was soft and flexible to the touch and so redolent with perfume that my nostrils almost sickened with the inhalations, and I was not the old, withered, sap-deserted, time-dried, age-wrinkled stem that I am now.

I was touring through a strange country on that particular morning. I had dismounted on reaching the brow of a hill, leaned my bike against the fence and stretched myself on the wayside grass, in the shade of a large tree.

It has always been a mooted question whether it is best for a man to be born energetic or lazy. True it is that the energetic man is the man who wins fame and renown, accumulates and accomplishes things, but is it not the lazy man who enjoys them?

Yonder energetic farmer over in the field, gathering the golden-haired wheat, see how he toils; I, the lazy drone, under the tree watching him. 'Tis he who produces what I consume; 'twas he, doubtless, who planted this tree under which I rest, and he it was who placed the stones around the wayside spring and left the cup from which to drink. I warrant no lazy man did it.

My reverie was interrupted by the sound of some one singing that old air, "Auld Lang Syne." Who ever it was, came trudging up the hill, singing as he came. His voice was not one that a bird would long for, nor would it have obtained him fame on the operatic stage, but the harshest sound is melody to some ear attuned for it, so his voice was pleasant to hear, although it seemed as auld lang syney as his song.

He and his bicycle came in sight together, and stopped on the brow of the hill, and then he drew forth his handkerchief and wiped his face.

There was a plaintive, old-timey look both about his features and his costume, yet one instinctively knew that, no matter how careless he would dress, how disheveled his appearance would be, the gentleman would always show through in spite of his disguises. His wheel was just as untidy, being in that indistinct condition that you could never tell whether it was nickel-plated, enameled, hand decorated or machine painted.

Presently he saw me.

"Hello!" said he.

"Well!" I answered. "What number?"

"What number?" he asked in evident amazement.

"Yes," I replied. "What number?"

"1842," he responded. "What's yours?"

"Oh," I exclaimed, laughing, "it was merely a joke. You said 'hello' so much in the stereotype way that I at once thought of the telephone girl, so spoke as I did. My League number is—let me see—well, really I don't remember. But that doesn't matter. Are you a stranger here?"

"Yes and no," he hesitatingly replied. "If you mean as far as one's acquaintance with men is concerned, yes, I am a stranger, but when one turns to one's familiarity with nature hereabouts, then I am not a stranger. One who knows the trees, the birds, the grass and the rocks, the sky and the earth east, knows them also north, south and west?"

"Then you know nature?" I questioned.

"Yes," he replied, "and when one is a comrade of nature's he is rarely a companion of man. The two don't seem to go together; it's the old story of birds of a feather, I suppose."

"You love nature?" I ventured.

"Love her!" he exclaimed. He raised his right foot, and placing it on the step of his machine, crossed his arms over the saddle, then resting his chin on his hands, gazed in a "philo-meditative" way beyond me, far across the field of yellow stalked wheat waving their plumed heads to the drifting clouds.

"Love her," he repeated, "why shouldn't I, why shouldn't everybody? Who is more beautiful, who is more attractive, who is more unaffected? And what's more, she is never false."

"Aha," mused I, "it's the old story; there's a woman in the case."

"Are you fond of music?" he abruptly asked.

"You seem to be," I answered, thinking of his song.

"Yes," he said, "but not the cultivated music of man. Give me the lullabies of the brooks, the pastorals of the streams, the love songs of the zephyrs, the lyrics of the wind, the war songs of the tempests, but take from me the songs of woman."

"You are prejudiced," I cried. "Did you ever hear Patti or—"

"No," he answered, interrupting me, "I never heard but one woman sing. I want not to hear another."

"Tell me of her," I asked.

He took his toot from the step, raised his hand, and as he spoke examined the various nuts, the pedals and the wheels.

"There is not much to tell. 'Tis enacted every day. There was a beautiful bird: I sang love to her and she sang love to me. We started to build our nest. When half completed she flew away with another. I had sung to her of the simple pleasures of a country home, he sang to her of the enchanting gaieties of the city. 'Twas but natural, I suppose, that she should prefer a life of bright cave in a gilded cage to one of dull labor in a nest of logs."

He stopped.

"And you?" asked I.

He replied, "There are some things in a man's career that are like the clouds in the sky, they drift across his life, big for the moment, but gradually dissolve and pass away; then there are others, they are like the stars, they never fade or pass away, but shine brightly, steadily, until the grave."

"And after the grave?" I asked.

"All such stars set forever, for there is nothing earthy then—But I must move on; which way go you?"

"Down to the village," I responded, rising.

"I'll go a little way with you," he said.

We rode in silence, he a little way behind. Thus we continued, until I heard a soft "good-bye." It was as faint as an echo. I looked around, my companion had disappeared. There was an unobtrusive wayside lane to the right, and through its entrance I saw the trail of his wheels.

He had gone back to his nature. I kept on to the haunts of man.

Some time afterwards I was off on a short run through the upper part of Maryland. Whilst riding along the highway there suddenly came in my mind, as such things sometimes do, thoughts of "1842." I thought of him and of his sad story, and fell to wondering where he was and if he still rode among the wayside lanes with his loved nature and yet shunned the haunts of men. With my head bent forward and my brain pondering over his words, I left the machine to go pretty much as it pleased, and when I was aroused from my study by a leaf brushing across my face, I found it had left the main road and turned down a by-path. The road bed was of cool, dark loam, the trees clasped hands over head, a tiny st eam ran gurgling along one side, and from its grass plated banks slender ferns gracefully saluted me.

I hesitated, but fate, chance or accident impelled me forward, and forward I went.

Presently the little stream laughed "good-bye" to the path as it sprawled in foamy outlines over a large stone and then ran away from view, through a tunnel of bushes.

A little further on, I came to the remains of a wicket gate, still "impelled" I dismounted and passed through it, on through a hallway of saplings to emerge on an open green.

Before me the path was crossed by the stream, over which stretched an unfinished rustic bridge. Beyond it the path and garden were over-run by weeds and grasses, and there in their midst stood a half-completed cottage. The stone chimney stood up like a tomb stone guarding a corpse. Here and there in the weeds lay the remainder of the lumber and other building material. From the house time and the weather had torn a board off here, and rotted a joist there. Bats flew in and out the doorway she was to brighten. On the fast decaying porch lay a dead bird, above were the torn remnants of its ravaged nest.

As I looked, the truth suddenly came to me. Unconsciously I spoke aloud: "It is the half-completed nest of—"

"Yes," said a low voice, close behind me. Startled, I turned and looked on the sad, gentle face of "1842."

WILL SOME ONE ANSWER THE CONUNDRUM?

Editor Bicycling World: In a conversation recently an experienced and intelligent wheelman asserted that in taking a header the large wheel invariably turned backwards after the rider had passed a line perpendicular through the hub of the wheel.

He claimed that this is an invariable law, and without exceptions, when the header is taken pivoting, not from the ground with brake on, but from the hub of the large wheel. I disagreed, believing that certain conditions, high speed for instance, would interfere with the operation of this so-called law; but all others present were of the contrary belief.

If no trouble, would you give your opinion, and oblige,

L. A. W. 10,389.

[On the first thought, we should say that No. 10389 was correct, but the proposition is rather a new one and perhaps our readers would like to give the answer.—ED.]

THE McCOMBIE FUND.

Editor Bicycling World: I desire to acknowledge through your paper the receipt of $144.50, in all, in aid of the widow of Robt. S. McCombie, which stands to the credit of the following parties: Amount raised by J. C. Kerrison, $45; Chelsea Cycle Club, $14; Chelsea friend, $1; Chas. Haley, $2; Massachusetts Bi. Club, $15; Newton Bi. Club, $25; Rovers Cycle Club, Charlestown, $10. Cambridgeport Bi. Club, $12; Somerville Cycle Club, $10; Suffolk Wheel Club, $5.50; BICYCLING WORLD Co., $5; total, $144.50. This is independent of the sums turned over to Mrs. McCombie by Mr. W. H. Forbes, previous to his leaving for the South.

Respectfully yours, J. B. SEWARD.

A BOON TO SMOKERS.

IN another column will be found a cut and advertisement of Hoop's Lighter. A study of the cut shows the modus. The wire is kept in the tube when not in use, and when a light is desired it is drawn out and simply passed lightly over the top of the long fuse and it immediately ignites, wind having the effect to make it blaze more instead of extinguishing it. The composition which covers the igniting wire will last from six to nine months according to the usage it receives. The Hoop's Lighter is an imported article and already there are several imitations on the market in this country. If you want the best, then apply to to J. Goodman of Hartford, as per advertisement, who has the exclusive right to sell the "Hoops."

A NOVEL SUGGESTION OF HOW TO PREVENT LOAFING.

Editor Bicycling World: Noticed the remarks in a late issue, in regard to "loafing" or hanging back in races, especially "scratch races," until within a few hundred feet from the finish, and would suggest another plan, in addition to those proposed, to eradicate this evil. For illustration take a race with say five starters. Let each man draw his number (from one to five); then start off No. 1, and say ten seconds after start No. 2, and ten seconds later start No. 3, and so on until all are away, the one making the fastest time being the winner. This would compel each man to try and make the mile (or whatever distance the race happened to be) in less time than his competitors, and not merely to finish a few feet ahead of the others. The time between the starters could be varied according to the number of entries, etc. Fraternally,

BICYCLING IN BELGIUM.—V.

BY CLERICUS.

WITH my French guide still in pursuit I climbed the two hundred and twenty-five steps of the great Monumental Mound, which rises at what was the centre of the first line of the British and the allies, and which is surmounted by the colossal Lion of Waterloo. There on the granite steps of its pedestal, the whole battle-field was spread out before me in one comprehensive panorama. Calm and peaceful as were the harvest fields, hiding under their beautiful verdure all the remaining vestiges of that day of carnage when fifty thousand men soaked it with their blood, yet the division of the fields into lines and parallelograms, containing the crops with their various hues, serves to suggest so many corps and regiments in their alloted places over the battle ground.

As my guide was intelligent and accurate on the points in which I could test him, I felt that I might suffer him to unfold his tale. And this he did, with umbrella in hand, now drawing a diagram with its point on the ground, and then pointing to the field itself and indicating the various places of interest, along the lines of the allies on the near side and of the French on the far side. He waxed eloquent as he talked. His Gallic blood was up; his eyes flashed fire; there was mimic thunder in his voice. The fit was on him and I let him fight. My sympathetic interest seemed to inflame him more and more. Swaying his body about on his ridiculous legs and whirling his warlike umbrella, now it was Ney in one of his terrible onsets, and then it was Wellington shouting "Up, Guards, and at them!" Now it was the Iron Duke in his extremity, crying out, at yonder cross-roads, "Would God night or Blucher would come!" and then it was the last remnant of "the Old Guard" down there in the valley, defying death with the dying shout, "The Old Guard dies but never surrenders."

And so we fought the battle over again, taking and re-taking La Haye Sainte on the left with desperate slaughter, and resisting with heroic ardor and endurance all the assaults of the French on the garrison of the old Chateau of Hugomont. In one of the lulls of the battle I got out my glasses and descried in the rear and to the north the great dome of the new Palace of Justice in Brussels, twelve miles away, and then I surveyed more critically the various strategic points of the field. A glance is sufficient to show, even to unprofessional eyes, how tremendously strong were the natural advantages of Wellington. It was genius to seize upon it but it was Providence that had it ready for him. More to spare the legs of my panting Frenchman I did not visit the farmhouse of La Haye Sainte, but I took him down with me to the old ruin of Hugomont. Just as we got opposite the long brick wall of the garden, with the port holes still piercing it all along, there was suddenly a premonitory roll of thunder, the rain began to fall again, and presently there fell also a shower of hail, as on the day before. While it fell and battered us, he under his umbrella and I under my rubber suit, my Frenchman showed me how the British behind the brick wall mowed down fifteen hundred of his compatriots through the merciless port-holes. One could not but remember that if those clouds overhead had only withheld their rain the night before the battle Napoleon would have begun the battle earlier and the French would have been the victors and not the vanquished. The genius of Napoleon was still at its zenith at forty-six, but he fought that day against One who could as readily nullify it as use it.

Then we went around to the front postern of the old Chateau, and knocked at the gate which the French tried all day in vain to open. It swung open to us, and we entered to inspect the little chapel that was the only remnant of the chateau not burned over the heads of its brave defenders. There on the wall above the door of entrance still hangs the partially charred image of the Savoir that miraculously stayed the flames that day; and yonder, too, was the wall of the old well into which three hundred bodies were thrown for their burial after the battle.

The sight of it brought on me a feeling of revulsion. Bidding the Frenchman good-bye, and putting away "the relics" pressed on me, I mounted my wheel and rode away toward La Braine l'Allend. Mounting a high hill before reaching it, I paused there and took a farewell view of the battle-field. I was ashamed of myself that my sympathies were not more with the "Iron Duke" and his allies. I knew they ought to have been, but I could not but take a long, lingering look toward Belle Alliance, the headquarters of Napoleon. There, by yonder cottage standing, the man of destiny stood at noon that day, never more confident that he and "fate" were still agreed. Training my glasses on the spot, I could almost fancy the figure of "the Little Corporal" still there, and that I might gaze down the tubes of his own field-piece into those deep grey eyes, troubled at last with premonitions of the overthrow which Wellington and Blucher and night and the god of battles would bring him. While I condemned, I could not but admire and pity "the scamp Jupiter." In him intellect and will were truly one, and their union seemed more terrible in strength because unmodified by a human heart. Had he had the heart of a Washington there had been no need of a Wellington, and Napoleon had been to-day the idol of the world.

Massachusetts Guide Boards.

As guide posts next to good roads are of the utmost importance to wheelmen and in order that we may take the most advantage possible from the law of this state which compels towns and cities to erect guide posts at the intersection of all roads leading to adjoining cities and towns, every cyclist who knows of any place where guide posts are required or where towns are negligent in complying with this law is requested to at once notify the undersigned that the matter may be brought to the attention of the town authorities prior to the regular town meeting in March. Let every wheelman give this matter his attention and save many a dismount as well as the trouble and annoyance of inquiring as to route.

In your notices specify exactly where guide posts should be located and what should be on the guide board if possible.

TIRES FOR '89.

The value of a bicycle tire is determined by its elasticity, durability and adhesion to the felloe, and in comparing the Columbia tires with any others in use, they will be found well to the front in all of these essentials. The Pope Mfg. Co. does not claim that the Columbia tires never get loose, but it does not hesitate to affirm that very gratifying results have been obtained by its method of cementing the tires, and rarely has any complaint of loosening been submitted. This method has been still further improved upon, and by the new process of cementing, the Columbia tires of 1889 will adhere to the felloe firmer than ever, and the percentage of loose tires be reduced to the minimum.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

again, and we are obliged to step modestly forward and gather in another laurel leaf for the VICTOR.

This time it was at Philadelphia, and the occasion was the

SPORTING LIFE 100 MILE ROAD RACE.

There were thirteen to start, but only two to finish, and both of these rode VICTORS. The course was a hard one, being profusely ornamented with hills, but notwithstanding this, both these men broke the American amateur record, which, by the way, already belonged to the VICTOR.

No, we don't think it is fate that gives the VICTOR its success in road racing. It is a fact that they are made of the best of everything, and built to be winners.

More and better road races have been won on VICTORS than on any other machine in the market, and we submit this fact as very good evidence that they are stronger, lighter running and more reliable than any others. Ask VICTOR riders.

MEDINA, N. Y., Oct. 5th, 1888.

SPRINGFIELD BICYCLE MFG. CO., Boston, Mass.:

Dear Sirs—In May last I purchased a Springfield Roadster, and since that time I have ridden as many miles as any rider in the country, and over every kind of road. I have ridden up sandy hills and down steep stony ones. I have ridden over rails and off of curbings; in short, my Springfield Roadster will take me almost anywhere in safety. It takes but little effort to propel it.

Respectfully, NEIL F. POSSON,
Teacher 4th Grade Medina Free Academy.

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 7 DECEMBER, 1888.

THE rather unsatisfactory manner in which certain well-meaning gentlemen have been piling up so-called road records lately, turns our thoughts once again to the necessity of having some sort of an organization to pass on and control this branch of the sport.

It is now one year ago that we took a decided stand on this matter of road records, and we took that position in self-defence and because we believed that it was for the best interests of the sport, and finally because there was not any organization in this country which controlled road racing. It is very certain that the League will not take any cognizance of this branch of cycling, and while we deplore the fact we cannot but think this refusal is consistent with the motives and objects of the national organization. We do not care to arrogate to ourselves the position of censor and absolute judge in this matter of what shall be required in order to establish a road record, therefore, in view of the fact that there is no national organization to formulate rules and pass on claims we invite the editors of all our contemporaries to join us in formulating a set of rules which shall be guides for all those who hanker after fame of that particular kind.

Concerted action of this kind would be much better than no action. We at the present time cannot accept any road records except as laid down in our issue of a year ago, but this does not effect our contemporaries. In this we should have common cause, and we hope our proposition will meet with the approval of our readers and the support of our contemporaries.

A GENEROUS DONATION TO THE McCOMBIE FUND.

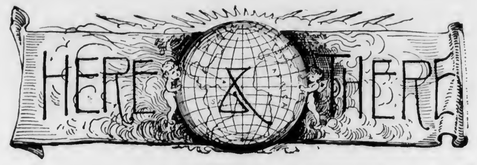
THE WORLD is in receipt of a letter, enclosing a check for $20, from Mr. Edward C. Anthony, Secretary of the Taunton (Mass.) Bicycle Club, and which he sends as a contribution from the members of the Taunton Bicycle Club. This practical expression of sympathy from an out of town club is worthy of recognition, and we should be pleased to see it duplicated many times, as the object, the relief for the widow of the late Mr. McCombie, is a worthy one.

SOME SPRINGFIELD CIVIC SPASMS.

THE Capital City Cycling Club, of Springfield, Ill., held its first "smoker" in its new club rooms, Hay Building, November 28, and it was a very gratifying success in all particulars. Although there were several counter attractions in the city, the rooms were filled with "knights of the wheel," and their friends. The smoking "materials," fruit, nuts, etc., provided, were thoroughly appreciated, the pool, chess and card tables were well patronized, and the result will be probably quite a number of new members to the club. There is some talk of having a "ladies evening" after the close of the wheeling season.

At the smoker, Captain Fogarty was particularly distinguished by his wit, his pants and his five shots on the pool table. Our worthy President, Mr. Edgar S. Barnes, and the Secretary, Mr. A. A. Billingsley, wrestled with the chess men. Mr. Billingsley got one heat in three, and says that is sufficient glory for the present, but Barnes hopes to reverse this record before the close of the winter. The "large, round" and elegant Secy.-Treasurer of the Division, Mr. Thomas F. Sheridan, contributed dignity and ethel to a game of whist. By the way, Tom is one of our hardest riders, and the fact that he did not succeed last summer in at least tying Capt. Fogarty's "century," still rankles under his "weskit." Brer Beaton was one of a very hilarious party around the pool table, and the benevolent countenance of Mr. "Joe" Ruckell, and the lugubrious visage of Standard Bearer Charley Robinson, were ubiquitous. Mr. O. M. Hatch, Jr., contributed a full-grown plug of eating tobacco, which hangs by a string close to the pool table. "Deacon" Sherwood came late, as usual, but made up for it by staying late. I had so much turkey for dinner to-day (Thanksgiving) that I can think of no more news. O. R. DINARY.

THANKSGIVING DAY IN THE QUAKER CITY.



ALTHOUGH we have many things to be thankful for, the weather is not one of them. For weeks and weeks we have had cloudy and rainy weather incessantly, and last Thursday was no exception to the general rule. It dawned raw, cold and dismal, with the roads in horrible condition, on all excepting the Lancaster Pike, where the Telford surface sheds the water. Nevertheless all the clubs were out in force, Pennsylvania sending a large contingent to Norristown, under command of Captain Supplee, while the South End and Mt. Vernon were also well represented.

The blue-coated Philadelphias had one of the social runs for which they are famous, taking some twenty-five along, a number of whom were ladies. By special invitation they stopped at the Armbruster farm, on Montgomery avenue, where Miss Armbruster, one of the members, had luncheon served, to which ample justice was done, the proverbial cycler's appetite doing itself no discredit. After pleasantly passing away a couple of hours, the party returned to the city for their Thanksgiving turkey ... and cranberry sauce.

The event of the day, in the asphalt district, where the great unattached do mostly congregate, was the hare and hounds chase of the Century Wheelmen. At 9.30 A. M. the vicinity of the club house was thronged by people to witness the start. Upwards of thirty of the gray-coated riders had assembled to join the chase, and but a few minutes after the time named, the hares—Messrs. Brown and Swayze, on a Psycho tandem—lit out at a rattling gait. They carried a bag of scent in front of the machine, but did not use this until they struck the country lanes. Two detachments of hounds were started in chase—the first after a lapse of three minutes, and the second, comprising the fastest riders, in eight minutes. After starting the second lot, Captain Fleming and Lieutenant McGlathery, hauled out a new Psycho tandem, which they had kept dark to surprise the boys with, and followed the trail, overhauling the rear guard not far out Broad street. After leaving the asphalt, north Broad street was a sea of mud and the sidewalk had to be taken in places. This, of course, prevented fast time being made, but afforded no advantage to either side. The hares made a good race, but on the York Road, near the toll gate, they were finally run to earth, the first man to overtake them being Barnett. At this point Hall took a tremendous tumble from his Star, and had to be carried home. The entire party now crossed to Chestnut Hill, and after a brief rest, the run in to the city was made at a brisk pace, reaching home in time for dinner. It was voted a great success by all hands and should be repeated.

Philadelphia, Dec. 3, 1888. "ARIEL."

THE Brookline (Mass.) Cycle Club has decided to keep "open house" every Thursday night during the winter months. This enterprising club is one of the most prominent social organizations of the town, and is continually increasing its already large membership.

NOTES BY

WELL, well, and so my identity as far as my sex is concerned is no longer a secret, and it has remained for two New York men to place me down as a member of the fair sex. This discovery simply shows how difficult it is for a woman to try and be mannish, and how utterly futile is her effort to conceal her real sex, when sharp, lynx-eyed fellows like Prial and Hawkshaw turn their attention to finding out "what's what." All I can say is that I sincerely trust that this discovery will not be the means of rendering my feeble feminine efforts in the future more unbearable than they have been heretofore. Boston perspicacity has failed to penetrate what Gothamites have accomplished. It has remained for Prial and "Hawkshaw" to clothe me in petticoats and mount me on a low-framed bicycle. As usual Boston is outdone by New York. New York shrewdness vs. Boston learning: verdict for the plaintiff. Damages, loss of reputation for acuteness by Boston. Will the defendant carry the case up and ask for a reversal of the decision?

I HAVE your note, my dear Mr. Editor, enclosing a letter from a certain "prominent wheelman," who states that he had "to smile" at my comments on the probable successor of Chief Consul Hayes. It is a great downfall to my natural pride to have you and the "P. W." show me how badly I tripped up in the matter, but can you please inform me how you, my dear preceptor, managed to overlook the awful mistake? I suppose you read the copy and revised the proof. [We are to blame in not "catching on to" the error of our valuable contributor. We never noticed the faux pas until the article was read by us in the paper, too late to correct. Dr. Emery, the present Vice Consul, will succeed H. W. Hayes as "Chief" until the next election, and the Division can not do better than to elect the Doctor to the position for the coming year.—ED.]

I NOTICE that in interviews with the Boston Herald reporter, both Captains Kendall and Peck hit right from the shoulder at the "Johnnies" of cycling. They assert that the hiring system and the cheap second-hand business has been a strong factor in precipitating the despised "Johnnie" or "Arry" into the sport of cycling. "There are two many hoodlums who do not know how to behave themselves, and they cast obliquy on the sport," says the "Doctor" and "Lonny." I admit the soft impeachment, and although I am going to take off my coat, it is not so much in defence of the "Johnnies" as it is to deal just one blow at the so-called respectable, well-to-do class of riders. Here's the blow: I aver that the most shameful breaches of good behavior I ever heard of or ever witnessed have been perpetrated by respectable (?) members of high-toned clubs, and in a good many instances League members withal. Can the two most respectable authorities quoted by the Herald gainsay me? Draw off, gentlemen; give the "Johnnies" and the "Arries" a chance, and by courteous and dignified example show these youths, whose education in the manners of polite society may have been neglected, how a gentleman should behave. The trouble is that the good example, when it should be expected, is not forthcoming, and the trouble is further that rowdyism and hoodlumism is found outside the "Johnnie" contingent. Dr. Kendall and Lonny Peck to the contrary notwithstanding.

FOR my part I rather enjoy seeing the Johnnie on his antiquated bicycle heading for out of town. The influence of nature and the sweet breath of God's pure air are much more elevating and health giving to the dweller of the South Cove or the North End than the vile influences and foul atmosphere of the gin mill of his native locale. I wish every poor boy and poor man in the city of Boston had a wheel and used it. Such general use of the wheel would do more for the cause of temperance and morality than all the societies for the suppression of vice in the country. And I make this statement with all sincere respect for the earnest humanity-loving work of the said societies.

ROWDYISM and its attendant annoying and disgusting feature is to be expected from the product of the slum, therefore, let respectable wheelmen, by their example, aim to raise the standard of the "Slummer," and not lay the charge that the "obliquy" all comes from the North End or the South Cove. It is not true. It is the "respectable loafer" that needs the tongue lashing of censure, it is he who brings "obliquy" on the sport, "obliquy" on himself, his respectable club and his respectable family and surroundings. Out on such chaps, the despised Johnnie shines with immaculate propriety in comparison with the respectable rowdy.

NEW YORK.

"HAWKSHAW."

YOUR recent editorial on the incorrectness of the position wheelmen are wont to assume in acting as though they occupied a plane in the affairs of the world that lifted them above and aloof from all the recognized laws that govern the non-wheeling community, is an evil, great in proportion and without the slightest basis of reason or fact, which should in consequence thereof be put down by a strong hand by those watchful of the welfare of the sport, if they do not desire to see the same course pursued towards it by those who are its enemies. You stated the case both clearly and logically, and as I read and approved of the article my mind wandered back to the days when wheeling as a puny infant was nursed and cared for by a few enthusiastic supporters, who to-day see the infant grown to a giant, and much inclined, in consequence of its present strength, to deride its former wet nurses, and call them "old fogies" when they attempt now, as formerly, to keep the young Samson of cycling from being shorn of some of his exuberant locks by the Delilah of public opinion. How well I remember how we who nursed this infant in our enthusiasm set about the entire disorganization of the world, and a reconstruction of it upon a purely wheeling basis. It was no longer to revolve on the plain bearings of its own axis, but was to be fitted by us with ball bearings, so as to run both easier and faster, and when that was done we even proposed to invade the celestial regions, and there equip angels with wheels as a locomotive power instead of wings.

GREAT indeed were the reforms to be accomplished, and to be a wheelman then meant to be swept away by the full tide of our enthusiasm, and to be lifted up beyond the prosaic surroundings of every-day life to a poetical and impracticable seventh heaven we had constructed for ourselves, wherein only wheelmen dwelt, and all things revolved upon wheels. From its early training thus imbibed from us therefore, has the present giant acquired that tinge of romanticism, that now in the sere and yellow leaf of our old age, do we, its nurses, attempt to take from it, for its own good and preservation, while deep in our own hearts lurks the suspicion that we are somewhat guilty of planting there. Of the many reforms and reconstructions we thus planned in the elder day how few were ever really accomplished! Perhaps the least of these changes, and the one we put some of our "best licks" in on, was the dress reformation idea, which was to result in the abolishment of "pants," through the introduction of the fashion of the every-day use of knee breeches. In this fad we were a unit, and strong in belief of an early dawning of the day that would see exhibited in dime museums the abominable "pants," as examples of the ignorance and bad taste of the world prior to the crusade of the cyclers that was to regenerate it. All over the country, especially in the cities of New York, Albany and Chicago, was the subject agitated and talked of by wheelmen, and in the case of the last two cities associations were actually formed by cyclers to push this millenium of tailoring, but the spindle-shanked and bow-legged contingent of humanity was too much for us, and seeing in the introduction of knee breeches a tearing away from them of the only means they had of hiding their physical defects they fought for "pants" and protection, and won.

I REMEMBER well how in those days we radical reformers wouldn't even have our pajamas cut other than in the most approved pattern of knee breeches. How we never walked through Central Park and viewed the cast-iron monstrosities we called statues, which purported to be the counterfeits of men great in art and letters, sciences or war, that we did not see in the fact that nearly ninety per cent. of them wore knee breeches, a clearly shown prophesy of the certainty of the accomplishment by ourselves of the dress reformation of misguided masculinity that we were then engaged in. But prophesies, and those of a cast-iron, idolatrous order, are not always to be relied upon, especially in the present case, as any one, no matter how prejudiced they may be in favor of the every-day wearing of knee breeches, must confess, when they walk Broadway and see the balloon job-cut trousers that we ourselves, like any other man, still disfigure our legs with. To-day is indeed the lowest ebb that the tide of the knee breeches boom has ever experienced, since it swept like a scourge throughout the ranks of wheeldom. But there is no ebb, no matter how low, that is not followed by a flood tide of equally as great a magnitude, and may it not be so in the case of our wrecked and shattered knee breeches boomlet?

"STRAWS show which way the wind blows," and so does the the present fashion of voluminous trousers for that matter, and a "straw" which has faintly struggled to stem the tide of the "pants" torrent, may be found in a recent article by the well-known novelist, Ouida, adversely criticising the present form of men's dress, and it has been sighted by some of the old-time knee breeches reformers, and welcomed as an omen of that turn of the tide that they have never despaired of seeing. This gifted lady, in a hundred dollar a column article in the Sunday World, says: "If Prince Edward of Wales, who has, it is said, a great desire to reform the present hideous fashions of male attire, would bring in the use of the blouse for general dress, with knickerbockers and gaiters for the day, and knee breeches and shoes for ordinary wear, and the George the Second costume, with gold and silver embroideries, for full dress at all times, he would indeed confer a benefit upon his generation and make his name dear for all time to all persons who have any artistic perceptions. * * *"

Now then, ye knights of the knee breeches, fall in behind the banner of reform thus born aloft by so fair and so well paid an advocate of freedom from the flapping trouser. Sound ye the wild bazoo of your crusade, and incarnadine the heavens of public opinion with the Roman candle of reform! Shout ye your wild hosannas, and clang lustily thy cymbals! and yet may the now-suffering man erect to thee some brazen image that future generations may worship thee as the apostle of the display of the golden calf.

POKKOPOLIS NOTES.

"STAR."

ON Sunday, November 25, the C. B. C. took their final official run for the season of 1888. Nine of the faithful, under the command of the Snake-Charmer, started in the keen frosty air and wended their way to that Mecca of all local wheelmen, Miamitown. The frozen ground had been worn smooth and the ruts were well refined and easily avoided so that the ride was a thoroughly enjoyable one; then the coasts—Oh my! On arriving at their destination they met the $10,000 beauty, the bearded lady and the mascot who had gone out the previous evening and who had some very thrilling experiences to relate. They went as far as Cheviot and waited for the moon to rise but when she came up she was only half full and consequently of so little benefit that they went on their way regardless of ruts till they reached the natural gas well where they held a war dance and the bearded lady singed off half of her beard. As the twelve hungry riders were about to sit down to the table, in came the tardy Huseman at which Charley Ross jumped up and declared he would not sit down to a table with thirteen and was only pacified by Mr. Chamber's son coming and sitting down. After dinner, Charley Ross and the fat woman began to waltz to the music of Marqua's mouth harp but they shook the building to such a degree that they were compelled to desist.

THE Fat Woman is raising such a luxuriant crop of whiskers, that even the Bearded Lady is becoming billious.

"TOOT" HIGH and Amor Hall went to Florence two weeks ago. They say they went to see "Toot's" aunt. Well, perhaps they did.

MR. A. A. BENNETT is very anxious for your correspondent to come out strong against scorching as he says that it is the most foolish and hurtful practice in which a bicycle club can indulge.

LITTLE Willie Greenwood will positively leave for Boston next Thursday with his brother. He intends to become an electrician and his friends need not be surprised if in about two months he brings back an electric bicycle with electric headlight and improved phonograph attachments that will enable him to tip his hat to passing lady friends, listen to an entertaining conversation while on a run, and coast the steepest hills on the darkest nights.

THE question of securing the next State Meet is being agitated by those who believe it would stimulate the interest in cycling. That it would have the desired effect there is not much doubt, but it is perhaps well enough to remind those who want it to be held here that it will require a good deal of time work and money on the part of those whose duty it will be to make all of the arrangements, for those of us who have pride in our city do not care to see her outshone by either Toledo or Springfield.

DR. T. L. BROWN has been delivering a series of lectures before the Veloce Club, and for the benefit of those who were unable to attend it is stated that there are quite a vartety of "Stars." For instance: The Morning Star, The Evening Star, The Star of Destiny, The Star-eyed Goddess of Reform, The Star of Empire, The Star Bicycle, The Shooting Star, The Falling Star, The Theatrical Star, The Star-route, The Star-board and The Star Chamber; but none of these, however, equal in brilliancy the myriads of multicolored stars seen by wheelmen on coming to grief.

"Caviler" in the issue of "The BICYCLING WORLD AND L. A. W. BULLETIN" for November 16, in speaking of Windle as a little "Tin God" reminds us that we also have a cycling deity in the person of our "Burroughs." One would hardly suspect on looking at him that he would be able to make any showing in a race with even third rate riders, his appearance is so deceptive that when he went to Cleveland last year he was guyed by the crowd who called him "Skinny" and other equally uncomplementary names, but when he rode right away from the crack riders and carried off first prize in every race in which he contested, they changed their tunes. His endurance is something wonderful. In the seventeen-mile road race last summer, which he easily won though pitted against the best local talent and handicapped thirteen minutes, he was apparently as fresh at the finish as at the start. It is believed by his admirers that if he would only train properly and could have proper coaching that he would make even the "Little Tin God" look to his laurels.

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

AH, "Linneus," did I step on a pet corn when I said that Stone had better try Lumsden again before making any bluffs toward Windle? So you think Percy Stone and Lumsden are only third rate men. I had rated Percy a notch higher, putting him on a par with Lumsden, but if he only considers himself third rate, why the woods are full of such men here, and he had better try Roe, Luce Fordham, and a host of others before challenging Lumsden. And I see that Percy denies telling a fair belle of Quincy that he "did not have to train for the races there; he could win all without training." Oh Percy, where is your Southern chivalry, to be so discourteous as to contradict the statement of a lady? Now, "Linneus," suppose you jog his memory by asking him if he would like to hear what the Mayor of Quincy could say on the subject. By the way, "Lin.," old boy, how did you happen to leave out the mile and a half lap race (in which Lumsden took every lap just as he pleased) in your account of the Quincy races in the WORLD of Oct. 19th? Surely Percy must have been in bad condition. Now, "Linneus," if you are really in earnest, send in your challenge for a race for a 100 or a 200 dollar medal between Stone and Lumsden, and see how quick it will be accepted. But quit bluffing, please.

HOSFORD, of the Chicagos, is one of the timers at the Casino Gymnasium this winter.

THE Lincoln Club entertainments bid fair to be one of the most successful things for the winter season.

THE past week has been perfect for wheeling, and wheels that had been laid away for winter have been suddenly put to use again.

THE ball to be given by the C. C. C., in honor of consolidation, will be at Martine's Hall, about Dec. 29th, and will be a full dress affair.

THE road race "Linneus" speaks of, fell through owing to Mr. Brewster's inability to get a team together, or so I am informed by Mr. Garden.

THE Oakland Wheel Club, a small but enthusistic body of wheelmen, are agitating the League question, and will probably join the League as a club.

DO the three Cs. expect to down the Illinois by such shabby tricks as the one just perpetrated? Good-natured rivalry is all right, but, gentlemen, I fear you have made a mistake for the once.

THE Æolus Club held their second reception Nov. 29th, Thanksgiving night, and the Æolus boys made it a most enjoyable affair for all who attended. A more social lot of young men it is hard to find.

I WAS surprised to see Randall occupying a box at the "Nadjy" performance Wednesday evening, and Skinkle also, for I have always thought that Randall and Captain Davis, of the Illinois, were the best of friends, and then to see Randall there, a participant in a shabby trick of that kind, surprised me greatly.

THE Pastime Cycling and Athletic Club had a merry time at their reception Friday evening last week. What with boxing, wrestling, songs and recitations the time fled quickly. After the supper dancing was indulged in. The Pastimes are doing a large office business in the way of new members, seventy being acted upon at their last regular meeting.

QUITE a number of the Douglass Cycling Club were present as guests of the Illinois Club at their theatre party, and rumor has it that the Douglass boys would like very much to consolidate with their enterprising neighbors the Illinois. I hope this is so. The Illinois Club is one of the strongest and most active clubs here, and as I have said before, if we can not have one club here there should be only three, one in each division of the city.

THE entertainment given by the ladies of the three Cs at the Lake avenue club house, Thursday evening last, was a leap year domino party, and was one of the most pleasing as well as successful entertainments ever given under the auspices of a cycling club here. Seventy-five couples were present in full dress, and the dancing was kept up until a late hour; a most excellent supper was served to all. Too much can not be said in praise of the committee who conceived and carried out this undertaking so successfully.

A SHABBY trick was played on the Illinois Club at their theatre party, by a few members of the three Cs., and an attempt made to take the glory of the evening from the Illinois Club to themselves. Some of the defunct Chicago Bi. Club members, hearing of the Illinois men's plans for the occasion, engaged the three lower boxes, draped them with the C. B. B. colors and badges, and with a few invited guests occupied the same, wearing the ex-C. Bi. C. colors, and after the presentation to Miss Hall, in the first act, presented Miss Jansen, in the second act, with a floral wheel, Miss Jansen wearing their club colors. It was a small piece of business, and the "Stroller" was sorry to see it.

BUFFALO.

"ALI BABA."

I HAVE scratched my pate in vain for the inspiration that never came, and the few straggling hairs that remain are sure to come out by the roots unless I take up my pen, go at it again, and write up a few Buffalo notes. The annual meeting of the Buffalo Bicycle Club occurs on Monday, Dec. 10, at which time officers are to be elected for the ensuing year. I wrote in a former communication that the voting would hereafter be by ballot—after the manner of civil elections—but when a second vote was taken at a subsequent meeting the amendment was lost. I was sorry that it did not pass, but I have strong hopes that it will be taken up next year, and will unquestionably receive a strong support.

THE Buffalo Bicycle Club gave the first of four dancing receptions at the club house last Wednesday evening. It was one of the most enjoyable and successful receptions ever given by the club, and it augurs well for the social life the coming season.

THAT young and vigorous organization, the Zigzag Bicycle Club, are domiciled at 917 Seventh street. They already number over fifty strong. They give their first public entertainment—or grand ball—at Music Concert Hall Thursday evening, Dec. 20. Tickets seventy-five cents, admitting gentleman and lady.

THE women's wheel club gave the first of a series of lectures on subjects of especial interest to devotees of physical culture, at the Buffalo club house last Monday evening. The lecturer was Miss Alice Foster, the Director of the gymnasium at the Women's Union. Dr. Julius Kohlman, of Buffalo, will lecture later in the course

THE whist, pool and billiard tournaments will be in full swing after the 15th, and there is an unusual interest taken in them this season. From present indications there will be some lively skirmishing, and many of the boys are practicing on the sly: and they can't do it any too often if they would beat Mr. R., who last week made a run of sixty-eight points.

DENVER.

"OCCASIONAL."

I AGREE with "Mentor" as to the jump-pedal mount being the most graceful and easily accomplished of them all. But as to crediting it to the Kansas City men, he is wrong. Several of the Denver riders are, and have been, using this mount continually for the last season.

THE Ramblers gave quite an enjoyable entertainment and smoker at their club rooms on the evening of Tuesday, Nov. 20th.

THE Ramblers during the last month had two short hare and hound runs and one "follow the leader" run. What is the matter with these road burners? It doesn't seem as if "they're all right," after all. You're not afraid to go out of town, are you, boys?

JOS. L. GARD, of the Denver Ramblers, has just received his new wheel from the hands of the makers, Solamon Bros., of this city. It is a marvel of lightness and strength, and is three quarters of an inch narrower in the tread than the ordinary make. His intention, I believe is to become a crack hill climber: he'd make a dandy, too.

LOOK at the record of the Social Wheel Club's Captain. He has attended every run of the club since its organization, on Jan. 18th, 1888, numbering in all forty-one. The distance covered, on club runs only, by him counts up to 2115 miles. He has never been absent from a club meeting, and always been one of the first to put himself out for the club's benefit. He can hold his own on the road and track, and is behind none when it comes to being a gentleman. The Socials can be justly proud of Captain F. N. Coleman, and I predict that they will show their appreciation of his services by an unanimous re-election.

THE Social Wheel Club's five-mile handicap road race of Sunday, Nov. 25th, was won by E. R. Pynchon, 2 minutes, in 19.03; Herbert Shaw, second, one and one third minutes, in 19.07; L. W. Marshall, third, thirty seconds, in 19.13. A strong wind, which blew right in the faces of the riders over half the course (two and a half miles with turn), accounts for the slow time made. The first prize was a handsome solid gold medal, the second a "King of the Road" lamp, donated by one of the prominent cycle dealers here. The great rivalry between the scratch men made them afraid of one another, and their sole ambition laid in their efforts to beat each other over the tape: the result was a magnificent spurt by Coleman, in which he passed the line one second ahead of Creek. Time of each, 20m. 20s., and 20m. 21s.; third scratch man fell out at three miles. If the scratch men had gone out with the intention of beating the field, instead of one another, things would have been different.

GEORGIA.

"RAMBLER."

OH, LENT on the still summer night I raise up my voice in a howl of distress at the carelessness and thoughtlessness of the journalistically-inclined Southern wheelman, who never takes the opportunity to use the columns of the WORLD to let our Northern brothers know that we aren't dead. No, not by a long shot. If my ideas are correct, about this season of the year the cyclists of the colder climes are coating their wheels in oil and flannels, and storing them away in the out-house about as sadly as a parent buries its only child. Down South—we are taking out our wheels and rubbing them up for the coming ten months of cycling weather that will not be beaten any where. It's most too hot to ride down here in July and August, but with these exceptions, our wheels are never laid away.

"SENATOR" MORGAN is down this way now. He has been taking in the State Fair here at Macon and the Expositions at Augusta and Columbus. He is riding and showing the Coventry's Swift Safety. The little wheel attracts much attention, but the native riders failed to get him to show anything like speed on it. He was quite sick while here, and was laid up for a week.

HORACE CROCKER is also paying the State another visit, and has a dozen wheels on exhibition at the Chattahoochee exposition at Columbus. He was here a month last fall, and entered several races against local men.

"BOB" BRANTLY, for some time holding the title of champion of the South, has gone and got reckless, and married, though those of the boys who have seen his better half say they don't blame him in the least. Bob's best race was made in Atlanta last fall, when he beat Crocker in a race of five miles, in 15.06, which is much better time than Rowe and Howell have made in some of their races.

LESTER E. HICKOK, one of the Pope Co.'s men, accompanied by his wife, is down here on a Columbia tandem. He, and the manager of his firm's branch house in New York, have a large display of their folks' wheels at the Augusta National Exposition. Crocker, Hickok, Morgan, Windle, and all the cycling celebrities are looked for in Macon this week.

"CENTRAL City Wheelmen" is the new name under which the old Macon Bicycle Club has been re-organized with the following officers: C. A. PERSONS, Captain; Ed Oliver, First Lieutenant; and H. B. Beatty, Secretary and Treasurer. The club members are mostly business men, and can't get off to take runs during the week, so the bright moonlight nights are being taken advantage of, and some of the runs after tea continue as late as mid-night. I'm off for one now. Wish you all were with us, but as you are not, good-bye.

NEW JERSEY NOTES.

"RATCHET."

THE jolly boys of the Hudson County Wheelmen held a very enjoyable "smoker" on Thanksgiving Eve, in their club rooms, 555 Communipaw avenue, Jersey City. The programme was a very fine one. Tobacco was used in plenty and everybody had a good time. MR. LEVY, of Hoboken, who is an excellent mimic and farcical artist, gave a number of recitations. Banjo solos and duetts by Messrs. Meyers Court and Cohank; zither and harmonicon solos by J. Court, and German dialect recitations by G. L. Bettcher were features of the evening. The bicycola was on hand and Dr. E. W. Johnson secured first prize with 2,670 points, G. H. Earl capturing second with 2,650. Other prizes were won by Messrs. Day, Demmert, Korth and Strugnell. These "smokers" are held monthly and are always looked forward to with pleasurable anticipation by the club members and their friends.

By the way, Mr. Editor, it is the Hudson County Wheelmen, of Jersey City, N. J., instead of Pennsylvania, which will admit lady members after January 1st, 1889.

THE one-mile race for the "Benedict Medal," was to have been ridden on Thanksgiving day by the members of the Hudson County Wheelmen, but on account of bad weather it was postponed. The race was to have been held on the Elizabeth boulevard.

FRANK BROCK, bookkeeper for Howard A. Smith & Co., of Newark, has been added to the list of Eagle Rock climbers, having made four round trips on that hill without a dismount on Sunday (2) his mount being a 45 inch special Star. The ride was witnessed by Harry C. Paxton of Orange, Alfred Swartout and Charles A. Silver of Newark.

THE Orange Wanderers held their closing run on November 3d. The club has decided to have a series of social events during the "off season," and Messrs. Charles W. Lindsley, Harry W. Smith and Frank P. Jewett have been appointed a committee to arrange for the same. Harry W. Smith has been elected Secretary and Treasurer, vice J. W. Gilmore, resigned.

THE Hudson County Club have arranged a mammoth theatre party for the 14th inst., and all the orchestra seats in the Academy of Music (New York) have been reserved for the party. The party will include delegations from Newark, Orange, Elizabeth, Bloomfield and Plainfield, besides the Hudson County contingent. The play to be witnessed is Hoyt's "A Hole in the Ground."

THE members of the Atalanta Wheelmen, of Newark, are keeping their muscles in trim on the bowling alleys, and practice regularly on Thursday evening of each week, in the Academy of Music. On Thursday (6th) they will roll a "pie and cider match" against the American Bowling Club, the strongest organization of the kind in the city. The Atalantas have some fine bowlers and it is hoped that they will enter a League, if one is formed amongst the cycling clubs of this vicinity.

SYRACUSE.

"SALINA."

THE time for our annual club election of officers draws near, and from all appearances the contests will be lively. The Presidential candidate is already settled upon and as he has no opposition will go in with colors flying. The other offices will no doubt be contested. However, gentlemen, whatever we do, let us think twice and make sure that there will be no mistakes in our selections. Let us elect men who will acceptably fill their respective offices during their entire term and who will always work in the club's interest.

WE would like to calmly but most forcibly ask, "Where is our photo. of the Buffalo meet?"

THE offices of Secretary and Treasurer have always been held by one man in our club. This will be changed, making two separate offices, thus lightening the burden and more equally distributing the work.

AGENTS WANTED.

Cycle dealers who are in a position to import our wheels into the States and to push the sale of them will oblige by communicating with us. At the expiration of the present year we shall require a first-class agent in each principal centre.

The name and fame of the Quadrant Tricycles abound in the States. We have now also several splendid lines to offer in Safety Bicycles of tip-top quality with important improvements and at moderate prices.

WHY is it That "Winnie" is such a shark? That Lighton is a dude? That Avery is "so funny?" That "Ted" is going to leave us? That Wiard loves prohibition? That Bill Nye bought so many suppers? Echo answers, "Why?"

THE rapidity with which some of our fellows are acquiring the arts of pool and billiards is indeed surprising. "Sharkey" Cl—excuse me—is not far behind in the race, and with a little training and coaching will pass his competitors on the last quarter.

WE don't want to be set down as a moralist or a chronic grumbler, but we do feel called upon to give a few words of advice, even though they come from one who has had little experience. The climax of our cycling club has come! And it remains with each club man, individually, to decide whether our club shall prosper or no—these decisions to be made public by each man's actions. Though our men are young in the main, nevertheless they are men, and they should so govern themselves. Gentlemen, let us have a decided change in the order of things, and hereafter carry ourselves as an organization of gentlemen should.

AS HE SEES AND COMMENTS.

ONE of the most active Cycle Clubs in the country is the Hartford Wheel Club. As a successful tournament promoting club it ranks with the Springfield in the latter's palmy days. The club at present numbers sixty members. The club has always been very liberal in the matter of prizes awarded at their tournaments both to amateurs and professionals, but it is doubtful whether professional events will ever again find a place on the programme of the Hartford Wheel Club's Tournaments. The experiences of 1888 have rather soured the Hartford men in the matter of professional racing(?)

MR. HILL, of the Coventry Machinists' Co., sailed for England on the steamer Gallia, from New York. He will be absent some two months in the interests of his company and the American agency.

WHAT nicer or more appropriate Xmas gift can you make your L. A. W. friend than a League badge? Chas. H. Lamson, of Portland, Me., keeps a splendid assortment. See his advertisement and send in your order.

THE Riverside Wheelmen, of New York, will a reception give at the West End Hall Dec. 13th. Music, both vocal and instrumental, will make up a programme that attractive will be. Riding, of the kind fancy, will also the audience amuse.

THOMAS BURKE, of Hyde Park, while out riding on his bicycle Sunday morning, was struck by an Old Colony train at the Readville crossing. He was thrown some distance and was badly injured in the back, but it is thought he will recover.

LINCOLN HOLLAND & CO., of Worcester, Mass., issue an elegantly engraved calendar for the year 1889. The scene is a cycling one. It is just the thing for a cycler, and by sending 10 cents to L. H. & Co., as per advertisement on another page, the calendar will be sent to any address.

THE news of the engagement of Elmer G. Whitney to Miss Minnie F. Dyer of Watertown, Mass., will be received by Mr. Whitney's many friends with great pleasure. We hasten to extend our sincere congratulations, and we know "our sentiments" will receive the heartiest echo at the hands of all who are favored with "good old" Elmer's acquaintance.

MR. MILES writes: "You would oblige me by informing your St. Louis correspondent that the Referee's six-day race is not off, but that arrangements are being made to hold a tournament and exhibition of cycles here next May, the six-day race being one of the features. We hope to make it a gigantic affair, and are at present negotiating with the management of the Exposition building, in which a quarter mile track can be laid with ease."

TEARS of regret dimmed our eyes when on our return from eating our Thanksgiving turkey we found the card of W. R. Pitman on our desk. Good old Pitman; we would have given a lot to have shaken him by the hand, and had a good talk of the days when the "Vet" slogged out the first American 100 mile tricycle record, and when he was a real live active wheelman. Later, our tears of sorrow were turned to peans of joy, because a second attempt of the "Vet." found us in, and a very pleasant chat over old times we had.

WHILE the Huntington (L. I.) Bicycle Club were giving a reception in their rooms last evening, a chandelier holding kerosene lamps fell, and a small fire resulted. The dresses of the Misses Emma and Florence Ritter took fire. Miss Florence was severely burned, all the skin having come off both arms. Her sister was more fortunnte, and escaped without any serious burns; her dress was destroyed, however. The chandelier was hung on a hook which had been fastened to a lath only, and not to anything solid.

IN our issue of Nov. 23 we sportively referred editorially to a certain "featherweight Juggernaut." We then wound up our article by a fear that the cycling nuisance might be "avoided and sat upon." We received the following skit, and if we could trace the authorship we fear bloodshed would ensue:

> "Your 'featherweight Juggernaut' 's a notable hit,
> But 'avoided and sat upon' 's a bull to commit:
> Thus a smoke follows after the flash of the wit." D.

LINCOLN HOLLAND & Co. of Worcester send us the following item: "A man bearing the name of W. E. Mason has received a sentence of two years in jail for embezzlement from a local house, and one year for attempting to steal a Club tricycle from us. He got the same as far as the express office, when mistrusting things were not O. K. we tracked him and found that he had marked it W. E. Cawrence, Troy, N. Y. We arrested him and convicted him. He was an old offender, as it was proved during the trial. The machine was the property of the late J. Fred Midgley."

P. W. Corbett, so long connected with the Hyde Park (Mass) Bicycle Club, lately accepted a position on the U. P. R. R., at Cheyenne, W. T. Previous to his departure the members of his club gave him a supper, about twenty members and guests being in attendance. After justice had been done to the substantials and the cigars were lighted, Mr. Fred Wood was chosen chairman, and speeches were made by President Alexander and others, all of whom expressed their high regard for their honored guest, and wished him great success. Mr. Corbett responded, thanking those present for the great pleasure which the occasion afforded him. He was then taken most of the way on the shoulders of his comrades to the depot, where he was serenaded before the departure of the train for the region of blizzards and cow-boys.

A WHEELMAN writing from Denver, Col., asks the following question: "Please inform if a wheelman goes into a race against a horse on the condition that if he wins he is to receive so much remuneration, is a professional, and can he be excluded from an amateur race, even though he shows his L. A. W. ticket? The wheelman in question is H. G. Kennedy, the one that rode the 50 miles against a horse down in New Mexico a month or so ago."

Our answer is, that this act does not make a professional of Mr. Kennedy. The race was a road race, and the League in no way recognizes road racing. Hence an amateur may ride on the road against a professional for a purse and still maintain his amateur status. Had the race been on a track, Kennedy would have forfeited his standing.

CONINGSBY IS RESTIVE UNDER SHURMAN'S RECORD.

FRED CONINGSBY made a go for a big record on Eagle Rock Hill, on a Victor 46-inch Light Roadster, on Nov. 24., but only (!) made eight round trips, his time being 1h. 53m. 47s. But one solitary cycler was present, and consequently Fred did not care to continue his attempt, preferring to have timers and witnesses. The writer was invited to be present, but other business on Saturdays prevents any trips to Eagle Rock. The machine Fred uses in these rides is taken from stock, and has 6-inch cranks and a regular style saddle. [Too bad he was not properly checked.—ED.]

Mr. Coningsby intends to try for a bigger record than Shurman's on Eagle Rock before the season closes. His mount will be a Victor Safety, and no one will be surprised if he raises the number of trips, although a few weeks ago "yours truly" was one of the many who thought that Fred's limit was about a half a dozen trips. Fred lays claim to being the first one to coast the Rock on an "ordinary," and says it's enough to make your hair stand to try it.

ST. LOUIS CYCLE CLUB RACES.

THE races of the St. Louis Cycle Club came off duly, as announced, at the Natatorium Thanksgiving Day. There was a very good crowd present to see the sport amongst which there were a number of ladies. The track measured sixteen laps to the mile with very sharp corners: this, with the slippery floor, made fast time impossible. The corners were afterwards improved by using powdered resin. The events numbered seven, and resulted as follows:

Half-mile novice race—E. Barnard, first, in 1.42; H. H. Jones, second, 1.45.

Half-mile handicap open—E. Barnard, first, in 1.40; A. A. Knight and Dick Hurck were tied for second. In the run off Hurck won in 1.36.

One hundred-yard slow race—After a number of tumbles and claims of foul the event was won by W. H. Carlin.

Harry Gordon and Jno. Stout here gave a fine exhibition of fancy and trick riding on a crank and Star.

One-mile club championship—Dick Hurck, first, in 3.21: A. A. Knight, second, in 3.22. This was the best race of the day.

The next event was a half-mile run and ride, which was won by Dick Hurck, in 2.53; Geo. Tivy, second, in 2.51.

One-mile handicap open—Dick Hurck, 5 yards, first, in 3.18: A. A. Knight, 30 yards, second, in 3.21

Half-mile consolation—J. S. Richards, first, in 2.02: Walter Tyler, second, in 2.12.

A special race between two rival club members was won by Geo. E. Tivy, in 3.38: J. R. Pomarade, second, 3.40.

The events were closed by a burlesque race, given by Julius Hart and W. H. Carlin. The contestants were dressed as clowns, and occasioned considerable laughter by their antics.

In nearly all the races there were unavoidable accidents. The falls were many, and the only wonder is that the contestants came out of the scrimmage with but a few scratches. "LINNETS."

FLYING FAIRY FORMS.

The idea of a six-days' female bicycle race has for some time been in the mind of W. B. Troy, of Pittsburg, Pa., and it has at last taken concrete form, and the results can be put down as eminently satisfactory to all concerned. The public showed that they enjoyed the novelty by generous support, the daily attendance averaging from 3000 to 5000. The racing was really excellent, the contestants showing rare grit and speed. The names of contestants are:

Names.	Years.	Height.	Weight.
Lillie Stanley - -	19	5 1 1-2	124

* By an oversight our correspondent failed to send in the Friday score.

During the second day the race for first place was very hot between Stanley, Baldwin and Allen, but the plucky little Lottie managed to keep about two miles ahead of Miss Baldwin. Miss Stanley broke her bicycle and had to ride most of the day on a smaller one.

COLUMBUS (GA.) TOURNAMENT.

The three-days' tournament, under the auspices of the Chattahoochee Exposition and the management of F. L. Ingram, at Columbus Nov. 21, 22 and 23, passed off very nicely, being the postponed races from Oct. 10, 11 and 12. The entries for the amateur events were fairly numerous, but many absentees left Mr. Ingram very short of amateur talent.

FIRST DAY.

One-mile novice—H. Thornton, first: R. L. Ross, second.

Half-mile professional—H. G. Crocker, first: J. A. Polhill, second: Morgan, third.

One-mile open—H. Kingsland, first, B. H. Polk, second.

One-mile handicap—H. Kingsland, scratch, first: Thornton, 250 yards, second. Time, 3.31 1-4.

One-mile professional handicap—J. A. Polhill, 100 yards, first: H. G. Crocker, scratch, second: W. J. Morgan, 175 yards, third. Time, 3.15.

Half-mile handicap—Thornton, 250 yards, first: Ross, second: H. Kingsland, scratch, third.

SECOND DAY.

The road race was a practical failure, as only two starters started. Mr. Ingram, barring accidents, was a sure winner.

Half-mile professional—Crocker, first: Polhill, second.

One-mile handicap—Kingsland, first: Thornton, second.

T. L. Ingram gave a good exhibition of trick and fancy riding, winning first: Polk, second.

Quarter-mile open—Kingsland, first: Polk, second.

Two-mile handicap—Won by Kingsland: Ross, second.

The five-mile Georgia championship was won by T. L. Ingram, no one entering against him.

One-mile safety handicap—Won by Kingsland: Polk, second.

Half-mile professional—Won by Crocker, Polhill, second.

The road race was started at the grand stand at 10.30. T. L. Ingram won the race—to Smith's Station and return to grand stand—a distance of twenty-three miles, in 2h. 29m.

THIRD DAY.

Half-mile professional handicap—W. J. Morgan, 90 yards, first: J. H. Polhill, 50 yards, second: H. G. Crocker, scratch, third. Time, 1.24.

Half-mile professional scratch—H. G. Crocker, first: J. H. Polhill, second. Time, 1.26.

Two-mile safety handicap—H. L. Kingsland, scratch, first: G. L. Polk, 150 yards, second. Time, 7.14

Quarter-mile handicap—H. L. Kingsland, scratch, first: G. H. Polk, 90 yards, second. Time, 39 sec.

Half-mile handicap—G. H. Polk, 200 yards, first: H. L. Kingsland, second. Time, 1.25.

Five-mile Southern championship—Walk-over for T. L. Ingram.

The handicapping of the amateur events was not of Grillin form, and 350 yards to a man over Kingsland was asking the Baltimorean to break records.

W. J. Morgan was asked to help frame the handicaps, and he handicapped the last race (quarter-mile) so successfully that Kingsland had to do 39 seconds to win, and won by a foot on the post from Polk. The races were imperfectly timed by the horsemen who acted as judges and timekeepers.

L. E. Hickok, who is in charge of the Columbia exhibit at the Augusta Exposition, made a very acceptable referee. Mr. Ingram worked hard and succeeded in giving a good programme, and should have been supported by the Georgia amateurs.

"SENATOR."

DINING WITH SINGER'S CYCLE CLUB.

The second annual dinner in connection with Singer's Cycling, Cricket, Football Clubs and the Apollo Band was held on Tuesday, 13th ult., at the Sydenham Palace Hotel, Coventry. The room was most tastefully decorated, a bone-shaker and two "Singer" safeties occupying foremost positions on the platform, whilst a prominent object on the centre table was the handsome silver cup won by the Singer Cricket Club this year. Mr. George Singer, the head of the firm in connection with the employes of which these clubs are organized, occupied the chair, Mr. J. C. Stringer and Mr. T. Macklin filling the vice-chairs, and amongst the company present we noticed Mr. S. Dugdale, Q. C., M. P.; Mr. W. Ballantine, M. P.; the Revs. G. Cuffe and H. E. Bottomley; W. I. Iliffe, H. Sturmey, Geo. Moore, S. Golder, etc.—From Cyclist.

AUGUSTA, GA., TOURNAMENT.

The Exposition Directors of Augusta, Ga., have concluded to have a two-days' bicycle tournament, and the dates decided on just at hand are December 10th and 11th. The "Senator" writes that "the Exposition equals Buffalo, and ought to draw better than it does. The Pope Mfg. Co. have a fine exhibit, in charge of Mr. Hickok. The track is A1, so the "Senator" advises us. We sincerely hope the enterprise of the Augusta management will meet with the financial success it deserves.

THE QUADRANT TRICYCLE COMPANY.

AGENTS WANTED.

On page 80 of this paper will be found an advertisement of the Quadrant Tricycle Co. calling for agents in this country. To those who have the right to import cycles into this country the above chance is a great one. The Quadrant goods have a reputation in the States second to none, and the right man in the right place ought to be able to make the business in this country profitable to himself and to the Quadrant Tricycle Co.

STEVENS AS A LECTURER.

There is not a cyclist living that has such a fund of interesting adventure to draw from as Thomas Stevens. Last season Mr. Stevens refused several invitations from different sources to lecture because he was not thoroughly satisfied as to his ability to give a satisfactory entertainment. Since then he has perfected a lecture in connection with the use of a stereopticon that is pronounced by those who have heard and seen, as being excellent and first-class in every way. Mr. Stevens is now open to engagements and should be addressed at 22 Irving Place, N. Y. See advertisement.

SCRANTON, PA.

The great bicycle fair is now a thing of the past and notwithstanding the bad weather of the week it was right well patronized. The booths were all well patronized and the various methods of getting money by games of chance drew the money from the crowd. Bauers' full band was in attendance each evening and furnished most excellent music. The prizes offered in the lottery schemes included bicycles, watches, chairs, harness, diamond studs, punch bowl, type writer. After "settling day" it is hoped the profits will show up handsomely for the Scranton Bicycle Club.

OVERMAN WHEEL COMPANY.

The annual meeting of the Overman Wheel Company was held Friday afternoon at the office of Chamberlin, White & Mills, Hartford, Conn. The officers of the company reported a very prosperous year.

The capital stock was increased from $100,000 to $125,000.

These directors were elected: A. H. Overman, E. C. Hodges, Luther White, C. E. Mitchell, George D. Seymour, Rodney Dennis and E. S. White.

At a subsequent meeting of the directors A. H. Overman was elected President, E. C. Hodges, Vice President. H. R. Mills was elected Secretary and Treasurer, and W. C. Overman, Assistant Treasurer.

THE COVENTRY MACHINISTS COMPANY.

On the occasion of the opening of the new shops of the Coventry Machinists Company at Coventry, Eng., the Cyclist states that "The new workshops were inaugurated by a supper to 600 guests, the tables being laid in the new rooms. Amongst those who sat down with the large staff the chairman of the company, Mr. Alderman Marriott, J. P., Mr. Alderman Maycock, the deputy-chairman, Mr. Joseph White, the Mayor of Coventry, Mr. Walter Browett, Mr. Alderman Banks, the Vicar of St. Michael's, Coventry, and many others.

A word or two upon the origin of this famous company may not be without interest to our readers. The concern was floated in 1863, for the benevolent purpose of providing employment for the operatives of Coventry thrown out of work by the failure of the ribbon trade, once the city's boast. In the first instance, sewing machines were the staple product, but the company being the first firm to build bicycles in England, and having the foresight to see the probable growth of the trade, the manufacture of cycles was taken up in earnest, that of sewing machines being gradually abandoned. At the date above mentioned the capital of the company was £5,000, now it stands at the respectable figure of £100,000. Many of the original shareholders are still alive, one of them being the gentleman we have already referred to as occupying the post of chairman.

THE "RECORD" MEDAL CRAZE.

Editor Bicycling World: I was much struck with the last part of the well-written article under the non de plume Hawkshaw, in the issue of the BICYCLING WORLD of November 23d, though I cannot agree with all the conclusions there drawn, for they would put a veto on all system of rewards; whether prizes gained at schools, colleges, or at any games or whatsoever trials of skill may be engaged in, and which, be it right or wrong, has had the prestige of ages for its support. Is the motive with which anything is done is what determines its moral character, so in the case referred to; if the value of the prize is the only thing regarded (and perhaps the writer of the article judges others by himself) then it might be considered wrong or unworthy of cyclists or others to offer or receive prizes for their skill, even though at other times it was the pleasure of the sport which led them to engage in it.

An athletic or cycling club, it seems to me, does not need a social element among its members—though its members should necessarily be social—especially when that leads to "working for prizes or rewards" in a perhaps much more questionable way, as in a case I have in mind while I write; but I come finally to agree with "Hawkshaw" that all workers, be they for their daily bread or for bicycle riding or amusement of any kind, who do it "for revenue only" are not "a success." NEMO.

MR. BERT MYERS' RIDE OF 289 MILES.

Editor Bicycling World: Replying to your inquiries of the 26th, will say with regard to my 24-hour ride of 289 miles, that it was run over the boulevards of Chicago, about the same course that Mason took. One part of the course was about twenty miles round through the parks, and the remainder of it on Ashland avenue.

I had pace-makers with me all the time. I used an Excelsior cyclometer, which was accurate. Mr. Frank Riggs, an officer of the Illinois Cycling Club, timed me, besides the record I kept myself; Mr. Riggs also checked my cyclometer. I made the full 289 miles, as claimed.

The start was made at 4 o'clock P. M. Tuesday, Nov. 20th, and I finished promptly at 4 o'clock P. M. of the following day. I stopped about one and one half hours for meals.

The wheel I used was a 54-inch Light Champion.

My pace-makers were Messrs. Tuttle, Mason, Riggs, M. Bowbear, Walter Bray, Arthur Taylor, Arthur Lumsden, and many others, all of Chicago. Very truly yours, BERT MYERS, Peoria Bicycle Club.

The above letter was in answer to our request for particulars in regard to "record" claimed for 289 miles. We have no doubt but that Mr. Myers covered the distance claimed, and it seems in the matter of pace makers he was more particular than Mr. Mason. Like Mr. Mason's ride, it cannot be allowed as a "record" for the road, and for the same reason that it was not all made over a properly measured route of at least 20 miles straight away.—ED.]

THE ART AND PASTIME OF CYCLING.

BY R. J. MECREDY AND G. STONEY.

We have before us a book bearing the above title and we can unhesitatingly say that it is one of the most interesting publications of the character that we have ever seen. There is much in its fifty pages that to the veteran is old but there is much more that the old timer as well as the novice would do well to "read, learn and inwardly digest."

The introductory is a well written and interesting article of some five pages on "The Origin of Cycling." Then follows chapters with the following captions, "Learning," "How to Ride," "Keeping a Cycle in Order," "Temporary repairs," "Touring," "Racing." An excellent essay on the "Pleasures and Advantages of Cycling," "Dress," "Cycling for Ladies," "Cycling Institutions," "Cycling Photography," "Choice of Machine," "General Hints."

Especially valuable are points given in the chapter of "How to Ride" and the instructions on the great advantages of ankle action are alone worth the price of the book. Again the article on "Temporary Repairs" is full of the most excellent advice and suggestions as how to deal with damages and breakages when an expert is not at hand. The other articles worthy of more than passing notice are those on "Dress" and "Touring." All in all we can unqualifiedly recommend this hand book to every rider of the cycle, it is replete with interest and information. It is without doubt the most complete and comprehensive book of this character ever published. We will take orders for "The Art and Pastime of Cycling," Price 50 cents (Postage stamps not taken.) The book is published by the Irish Cyclist and Athlete of Dublin, Ireland.

Out of eleven events at the Wilmington Wheel Club meeting yesterday, ten firsts and nine seconds were won on Victor Light Roadsters.

LEAGUE HEADQU'ARTERS:

12 Pearl Street, - - - - Room 27.

ABBOT BASSETT, Secretary.

RENEWALS.

The current League year has been extended to April 30, 1889, and all memberships will be continued beyond January 1 until that date. Under the Constitution each Division must file on or before April 1, in the office of the Secretary, a certificate stating the amount fixed as its annual dues. Until that time the Secretary cannot be certain regarding the dues and therefore he must refuse to receive any renewals before that date.

UNLIKE the December of years gone by this is a good month for recruiting. He who joins us now get a membership that lives till July 1st, and pays only the sum demanded in previous years for a term ending March 1st. Reflect and act.

OUR little leaflet on Road Improvement is being spread broadcast among road committees and highway surveyors. If it does no more than convince men that better roads are a necessity and in the interest of economy it will have done well.

THOSE who can place these little missionaries may get copies, free, from the Chief Consuls, who have been supplied from League headquarters. We have several ambitious plans for the dissemination of road literature, but they cannot yet be carried out for lack of funds.

NOW that the journals and the merchants are pointing to those things whose sale will enrich themselves as peculiarly suitable for Christmas gifts, it may not be out of place for us to suggest that a L. A. W. membership card or a ticket holder will make a good holiday gift.

CYCLING has had quite a come down the present. Riders have been coming down from the tall ordinary to the dwarf safety. It is a come down that will make the sport come up in the minds of those who have failed to take to it through timidity.

NEW ENGLAND cyclists are using very vigorous language when they speak of the weather. The Indian Summer killed by rain, and sixteen consecutive rainy Saturdays have given the fall season an unenviable record. The dealers have no words in their polite vocabulary to express their opinions. Those who have been intending to break records still behold an unshattered line of figures. Disgust reigns supreme, and the rain is responsible for its reign.

MASSACHUSETTS has lost its Chief Consul and the League will lose its Vice President. Mr. Hayes has won the esteem of cyclers in the State and the country and his loss will be keenly felt. The best wishes of all wheelmen go with him to his southern home. We nominate him for Chief Consul of Brazil. He may help us in sending a few solid chunks of hot weather northward to temper some of our biting breezes.

WE have never believed in convertible machines and yet we see a small sum of money for the man who will make a light hitch to join two safeties side by side so that they may be ridden as a double or as two singles.

THE wheelmen of Massachusetts are interested in the movement to make Mr. W. S. Slocum, Speaker of the House of Representatives. Consuls throughout the State should interview their Local Representatives and say a good word for the President of the the Massachusetts Club. It will help the cause of wheeling in the State if we have a friend at court this year.

THE Cambridge (Mass.) Club went into politics this year. Captain Perkins, a Democrat, and C. F. Sawyer and John Read of William Read & Sons, both Republicans, and all Cambridge club members, were nominated for the Legislature. The returns showed both Republicans to be elected but a recount counted Mr. Read out and elected Captains Perkins, Captain Perkins was responsible for the passage of the guide board law of the State when he was last a member of House.

WHICH State will be the first to put upon its Statutes a law compeiling towns to build good roads and levying a tax for the payment of their construction? Two State Divisions are at work to get such a bill through their respective Legislatures. Wait and see what success they meet with. Give us one bill and it will be a signal for a movement along the whole line. This thing has got to come, and it will come the sooner if wheelmen stand shoulder to shoulder in the good work.

IT is quite English, you know, to indulge in a "Tandem Quadrille" at dancing. It is not stated if the gentleman stands behind his partner. If he does, we hope Americans will hold to the side by side sociable idea. It would seem to be within the possibilities of music to portray a cycle ride with its spurts, and its lofts, its down hills and its toilful climbs. And why not tell such a tale as this in the language of the tuneful Terpsichorean toe.

THE coming woman will most certainly ride a bicycle. We do not believe the two wheeler will altogeter supplant the tricycle, for many ladies will still prefer to ride a wheel on which they can stop without dismounting, and many more will not risk the falls that are inevitable to the rider of a bicycle. And yet there are very many ladies who will enjoy a machine on which they can go faster and with less exertion than upon a three or four wheeler. The tricycle will continue to be with the great majority the first wheel and from that they will go to the bicycle.

CYCLING papers are now given over to discussion of the fashions. The average editor (of whom we are one, of course) cannot afford a dress suit and he lends himself with all the energy of a determined purpose to the banishment of it from the list of essentials at an evening party. We hope our contemporaries will take courage. There is a good time coming. We may, all of us, yet arrive at the dignity of a dress suit. Let us all pitch into the fur-lined over coat. We never can get up to that.

SHALL the League go into politics? This is a question often mooted. If we go to the home of the Pope, we must do as they do in that city. If the League goes into politics it must fight with the weapons of the politicians. There are many advantages to cycling that can come to it only through the slum of politics. There are many who will say, "the League should not soil its fingers with political dirt." They have many good arguments to bring which will sustain their view of the case, but they must remember that no public measure is carried through in the State or in the country without political trading and bargaining. Even those who advocate the moral questions find they can make no headway till they take up the weapons of the enemy. "'Tis true, 'tis pity; pity 'tis 'tis true." If the Liberty Bill is assailed in the New York Legislature the coming year the League officials of that State will have to go into politics to defend it. We say these things to bring the question of political work clearly to the minds of all. Mr. Luscomb has been assailed, right and left for the mailing of a circular during the recent campaign. It transpires that this action on his part was a natural step in the deal which led to the passage of the Liberty Bill. We think the manner and the matter of the circular open to criticism, and we do not doubt Mr. Luscomb will receive all such criticism in a friendly spirit if it is so offered. But by far the greater portion of the condemnation comes from those who believe that no "deal" should have been made or carried out. Public opinion is a mighty force. It dictates the actions of those in power. If the New York officials read public opinion, as shown by the criticisms made upon Luscomb's circular, aright and how to it, they will be slow to move in the defense of the Liberty Bill if it is attacked. If there had been no "deal" there would have been no Liberty Bill. There are always two sides to a question, and League members should consider both before committing themselves to the advocacy of either. The League may have to go into politics in the future, nay, it may even have to make a "deal." Its policy should be clearly defined that those who have to act may know just how far to go and when to pause.

Chief Consul Hayes Resigns.

To the members of the Massachusetts Division.

Owing to my departure from this country for a number of years, I am unable to further perform the duties of Chief Consul of Massachusetts and my resignation is hereby tendered.

In accordance with the laws of the Division W. H. Emery, the Vice Consul, will after this date assume the office and duties of Chief Consul for the balance of the unexpired term. Yours fraternally,

H. W. HAYES.

Chief Consul Emery.

To the members of the Massachusetts Division.

Mr. H.W. Hayes having resigned the office of Chief Consul of this Division for the reason that his business interests call him to another country, in accordance with the law of this Division the undersigned hereby assumes the duties of Chief Consul. It is with sincere regret that I make the announcement of this resignation. Called to the office at a critical moment in the history of this Division by his wise judgment he has brought harmony out of discord and promoted the success of the organization in this State. His labors in behalf of our Division deserve grateful acknowledgement. His rare executive ability combined with a pleasing and gentlemanly manner has brought recognition and honor to this Division from the National Assembly.

Every member regrets his departure and aside in wishing him success in the path which he has chosen.

Mr. Arthur W. Robinson of Boston is hereby appointed Vice Consul of this Division and will assume the duties of the office from this date.

WM. H. EMERY,
Chief Consul.

Attention, Tennessee Members.

The membership of our Division at the beginning of the past season was about sixty. Through the efforts of the Officers of the State our number has increased to over one hundred. It is extremely important to the welfare of the L. A. W. in general and of the Tennessee Division in particular that our membership be doubled within the next six months. We cannot do this unless each and every member does all in his power to bring in new men. Don't leave all the work to the officers, but let each man talk the League up and try to get at least one or two new names. If the Local Consuls can send in lists of from ten to twenty, every individual member can certainly procure one or two recruits. If each member obtains two new members within the next month or two, our membership will be increased to over three hundred. Can't we do this work? Try.

Our Division has done little or nothing for its members up to this time but we are now considering the the question of publishing a road book and have other schemes on hand for the good of of our State members. The more members we have the better able will the Board of Officers be to procure for them all the advantage given to League members. Let us all bestir ourselves and work hard for the good of our Division. Surely all members will be willing to spare a little time to League work when they will be the ones to derive good therefrom. Send all names to me of wheelmen living outside your towns, of your acquaintance.

Yours fraternally, L. B. WILSON, Jr.
Chief Consul

MY CYCLING LOG BOOK. By "Papa" Weston. The transitory pleasures of cycling can be made as permanent as its physical benefits, by jotting down in a well devised log book, the distances and incidents of one's various journeys. It fills a want often felt by the cyclist who values records of interest for future reference. Price, post paid, $1.25. For sale by Bicycling World Co., 12 Pearl st., Boston.

FACTORY REMOVED FROM WORCESTER TO HIGHLANDVILLE, MASS.

Office 178 Columbus Avenue, Boston.

MEDINA, N. Y., Oct. 5th, 1888.

SPRINGFIELD BICYCLE MFG. CO., Boston, Mass.:

Dear Sirs—In May last I purchased a Springfield Roadster, and since that time I have ridden as many miles as any rider in the country, and over every kind of road. I have ridden up sandy hills and down steep stony ones. I have ridden over rails and off of curbings; in short, my Springfield Roadster will take me almost anywhere in safety. It takes but little effort to propel it.

Respectfully, NEIL F. POSSON,
Teacher 4th Grade Medina Free Academy.

"I believe the Springfield Roadster is the best wheel manufactured for all around use." F. E. EASTLACK, Crawfordsville, Ind.

"I would ride no other." JONATHAN KOLB, M. D., Oxford, Ind.

"The most practical Roadster on the market." W. H. GARDINER, Fairfield, Neb.

"Too much in favor of the Springfield Roadster cannot be said. As an all around machine it has no equal." C. L. ROBERTS, Dunlap, Iowa.

"My No. 2 wheel runs like grease. It is the easiest running wheel I was ever on." F. M. MILLER, Coldwater, Mich.

"I know from experience that for comfort and ease, long distance riding, over good or rough roads, it is the best bicycle made." C. D. MCINTOSH, Salem, Ind.

"My wheel works very nicely and has never got out of order." JOHN S. COPP, Coldwater, Mich.

"There is no doubt in my mind that it is the most serviceable all around wheel in the market." C. E. WALKER, Secy. Pastime Cycling and Athletic Club, Chicago.

"I am very much pleased with the Springfield Roadster." P. H. SERCOMBE, Milwaukee, Wis.

"It is far ahead of any wheel in the market for safety, durability and general road use. For bad roads and hill climbing it has no equal." ROTTMAN & PUGH, Terre Haute, Ind.

"It is the wheel of all wheels." CHAS. HEWITT, Arcola, Ill.

"The Springfield Roadster took the lead here early last spring and has held its own ever since. Twelve wheels were sold, over double the number of any other make. The boys all want them just as soon as they can dispose of their crank wheels." A. LEROY, Springfield, Ill.

EDITORS:

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 14 DECEMBER, 1888.

APOLOGIES are due our correspondents, "Linneus," "Mentor," and several "occasionals," that their contributions were crowded out this issue.

"DELAWARE," the Wilmington correspondent of the Wheel, questions our rights to accept or refuse records. We retort: We want to know by what right "Delaware" has to question our right or "authority" to accept or refuse records, as we see fit? We do not for one moment question "Delaware's" right to accept records made in the moon, if he so desires, but as far as this paper is concerned, it proposes to stand by the requirements laid down a year ago. Some standard has to be maintained, and we believe that a large majority of riders will acquiesce in the position that we have assumed.

We hope, however, that our suggestion made in the last issue of this paper, will meet with the approval and acceptance at the hands of our brother editors.

OUR e. c. of Gotham differs with us because we assert that on the action of the Racing Board depends largely the future of racing in the East. We quote:

"We disagree with our e. c. The Racing Board, in our opinion, has but little or nothing to do with the decline of racing. The Board can only legislate for the sport: it cannot create it. If club committees run sharp, short, snappy events, and run off the programmes in as good time as possible, race meets will become popular."

It is true that the Board "can only legislate for the sport," but we assert that on that legislation much depends as to whether we are to have interesting racing or the present unsatisfactory processions or loafing matches, which have brought the interest in the sport to such a low ebb.

Wise legislation, which will to a certain extent correct the present evils, is what we want, and if we read the signs aright we will see such legislation at the hands of the new Board.

TERTIUS REVIVAMUS.

A FEW days ago I received, from a friend in Boston, a copy of the WORLD. Casually turning its pages, I noticed a letter from Baltimore, signed "Secretary."

I rubbed my eyes.

I looked again.

Eagerly I devoured the contents.

Great Scott!

It was he.

What, Scott?

No, confound you, not "Scott" but "Secretary," my old friend of the by-gone halcyon days, when I was a biker bold.

Like Rip Van Winkle, I had awakened from a long, long sleep.

Oh, Secky!

Do you remember the day when we coasted down that long hill and, after doing twelve miles in ten minutes, jumped our bicycles clear over a freight train, by standing on the step and putting on the brake?

Do you remember your surprise at seeing a toothbrush for the first time, and how you lost the brush in one of your hollow teeth?

Do you recall our race against time, when you were about a length ahead and the wind from my wheel blew all your back hair off?

Do you remember that I could not make you hear when I called, because we were going faster than sound?

Oh, Secky!

When I think of these things my heart leaps within me, as a tramp leapeth the fence when the bull dog clutcheth at the backyard of his pantaloons.

I am just out of the wilderness.

For years I have not bestrode a bike.

For years I have not seen a bike paper.

For years I have been in Florida, that land of sand, where the biker cometh not, nor the "header" hath a place.

There in the gloaming I gathered the yellow orange, and there last summer the yellow fever gathered me—or at least tried to.

Thus it fell out that I came North on my recovery.

And I am here.

Well, Secky, I feel as if I had tumbled into a fountain of youth.

I shall delve into the old lumber room, get out my long forsaken bike, scrape off the rust, clean up the mouldy saddle, and, ere the new year dawns, I will have a "run" if it takes a lung.

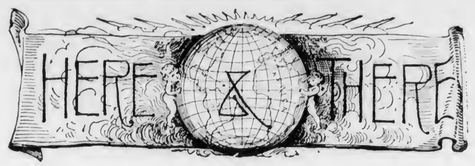
And what happens I will tell in my next. TERTIUS.

THE EUROPEAN TOUR.

DURING the past month I received letters from over one hundred riders of the wheel in regard to the trip across the water next summer. To all I have sent a printed circular containing the desired information. At this writing about a dozen have definitely decided to be of the party, and undoubtedly a large number have the matter under consideration. To such I would say that if there is any likelihood of their being of the party they should by all means send in their applications for membership in the C. T. C. at once. By so doing they will be sure of receiving their membership tickets before our departure, and should they not go they will lose nothing by belonging to the C. T. C.

The sailing dates for 1889 of the transatlantic steamers will be out about Christmas, and it is desirable to secure staterooms as early as possible, as the coming season will witness a great rush of travelers to Europe on account of the Paris Exhibition.

Sufficiently full returns have now been received to assure me that the expense of the tour will not exceed the figures given in the circular.



I have also received detailed information in regard to the entire territory covered by the tour, and the party may confidently count upon enjoying runs over some of the finest roads in the world, leading through grand scenery and historic localities.

Now is the time to decide upon the make of safety to be ridden, and the manner of carrying the necessary amount of luggage. The manufacturers of the safety you select will aid you greatly in this last matter, if you inform them just what you wish to take with you.

The party will be limited to twenty-five, and an early knowledge of just who the twenty-five will be is desired for many reasons.

F. A. ELWELL.

IN describing a header taken by an unfortunate, an exchange says: "Our roads are not all macadamized, and there is occasionally a soft spot on the thoroughfare mentioned. The rider found one of them." All we can say is that "the rider" was lucky. When it has been our good (?) fortune to investigate the general make-up of a macadam road in the capacity of a taker of headers, it has been our invariable luck to strike the hardest spot in the whole country.

NOTES BY THE "CAVILER."

I could not send you many notes last week as I was off riding with the "Vet," over the route followed by the participants of the "Wheel round the Hub." What a change in cycling since those days! Then the trip was a "nine-days' wonder," and the schools and factories in the towns through which they passed were closed, that the occupants might gaze on the new-fangled means of conveyance. Now one meets almost as many cycles as of other vehicles on the road, and would have to be mounted on a machine as passee as the old bone shaker in order to draw even a passing glance. This is as it should be, and the cycle has now settled into its proper place as an article of utility.

As the Massapoag was closed we passed the first night at Cobb's Tavern, and, after a most enjoyable breakfast in the morning, rode through the intervening towns to Nantasket, stopping to lunch with genial Geo. Cushing at his hotel in Hingham. While passing Ponkapoag Pond we were strongly tempted to call on Ned Hodges, of the Boston Club, at his shooting box on the shores of the pond, but resisted, as we had little time to spare and the chances were that Ned was chasing bulls around the board rather than geese on the pond. En route through Quincy, when our wheels were turned cityward, we were hailed by the Captain of the Boston Club, who insisted that we should accept his hospitality at the country place he has lately purchased, and on which he proposes to have several club picnics during the coming season. The grounds are well situated for such a purpose, and are covered with trees which prevent passers-by from seeing the spot where the picnic would most likely be held. While under the doctor's roof I had the pleasure of quaffing Bass' from a pewter mug brought from England by Joe Dean, as his contribution to the doctor's collection of beer mugs, which now numbers ten or twelve pieces, each of a different ware, from cut glass to Flemish or Doulton.

Our host, while lamenting that he was not a rider at the time of the first wheel round the Hub, seemed to take some pride in the fact that he was a participant with us in the second one, which took place a few years later under the auspices of the C. T. C., then in its palmiest days in this country. It was on that trip I first met Charlie Potter, who came on from Cleveland to help Papa Weston manage the affair, which was quite successful, participants in it coming from Baltimore, St. Louis, Chicago and other places. I took advantage of this meeting with the doctor to ask him if there was any truth in the rumor that he was to be a candidate for Chief Consul next year, and was assured that although he had been asked to run by representatives of most of the clubs in the vicinity he would not consent to do so, even if positive of an election. His candidate is Dr. Emery, who is in direct line of promotion, and who is the best fitted man in the State for the position.

We arrived in town that evening in time to change our togs, have a bite and sup, and attend a meeting of the new club. What new club? Well, if you went around town more o' nights, instead of hurrying home to burn the midnight oil you would be aware of the existence of an unorganized club that meets once or twice a week at Dr. Kendall's office to have their teeth filled with Roquefort and hard crackers. It at present consists of Robinson of the Rovers, Seward of Chelsea, Newman, Clark, Burns and Haley of Cambridge, Charlie Howard of the Globe, and "Kerosene" of the Herald, and the regular order of business is to sit around talking of cycling events and smoking the doctor's pipes until about 10 o'clock, when Billy Newman will say, "What's the matter with going down to Park's for a rarebit and some musty?" which motion is always carried. So you will be pretty apt to run across the party any evening you may happen to drop into Park's after the theatre. Unless I am very much mistaken the club will be heard from in Division politics before the end of another riding season.

Does your copy of the Massachusetts Division Constitution and By-Laws tell you that the present Chief Consul has power to appoint a Vice Consul? A week ago I would have been willing to lay you two to one that his appointee would be Sanford Lawton of Springfield, who has done more hard work, without reward, for the Division than has any man in the State. Mr. Lawton was the Cambridge Club candidate for Vice Consul last year, and they claim would have been elected had there not been so much "funny business." Mr. Robinson is too good a man to be shelved into a subordinate position, but perhaps it is good politics to thus dispose of a most dangerous competitor for the chief position.

A little bird whispered to me the other day that the Cambridge Club is to give a farewell dinner to their ex-President, Chief Consul Hayes, just previous to his departure for Brazil. I hope they will think to invite you and me, as this club always carries out in great style whatever it undertakes.

President Kirkpatrick writes that he has not yet decided in what city to call the February meeting of L. A. W. officers. I hope that he will decide on Chicago, as the wheelmen of that village have a national reputation for hospitality, and since you have detailed me to "write up" the big guns of the League I want to go to a city where the convention will not be held in a hotel away out of the world, an evening's journey from the theatres and points of interest. No New York for me, if you please. If the high Mickamucks of the League could be prevailed upon to call the meeting in Boston, the Cambridge, Rovers, Chelsea and other clubs combined would take pleasure in entertaining every delegate and not allow them to kill time by cooling their heels around the hotel corridors without even an invitation to see the inside of the club houses.

I learn from one of your correspondents that the Chicago delegates to the meeting are to have their expenses paid by the Division. That is quite proper, for, if a delegate is willing to give his time, which in some instances is very valuable, that is as much as can be expected of him. His travelling or hotel expenses or both should be paid by the Division. I know of two, if not more, of the present delegates from Massachusetts whose time is worth to them, at the least calculation, $10 a day. Has the Division, in electing them to represent it, any right to expect any more of a contribution than such valuable time?

BUFFALO. "MERCURY."

Ducker, "the King-pin, etc.," contrary to all expectations, has concluded to remain with us; he finds Buffalo just suited to his peculiar tastes and fancies, and will not leave for even your Boston and its many advantages. He has opened an office in the Chapin Block, having taken the agency for the Union Life Insurance Co. Now Ducker is my ideal of an insurance agent: he is a hustler, as you know already, a talker of the A1 class, and as for persistency, why, "Persistency, thy name is Ducker" (pardon the chestnut flavor of this oft repeated expression). If those are not essential to the make-up of a successful insurance agent, then I miss my guess. Busy as Ducker is he finds a moment now and then to think and discuss cycling, give us points on tournament and fancy dress carnival management. By the way, speaking of carnivals, you will recollect I stated last spring that the Ramblers were to have a fancy dress carnival under the management of H. E. Ducker, but the matter was laid on the table on account of the season being too far advanced, and also, I may say, because some of the members were rather reluctant to taking hold of an unknown quantity, as it were. The boys may have thought the matter dropped forever: not so with Ducker; with the persistency I have already spoken of, he began to get his forty-horse persuasion power in action, and to judge from the feelings and opinions expressed at the meeting of the Ramblers a week ago last Tuesday, he had succeeded in his undertaking. A committee of three (Ducker, Kellnor and Shack) were appointed to look into the matter, and if the prospects look promising to make the necessary arrangements, etc., and report at the next meeting. The carnival will consist of a grand march of all costumed wheelmen on bicycles, slow and fast racing, fancy and trick riding, a competitive drill by two out of town cycle clubs, a grand concert by the Mandolin Band (fifty pieces), a competitive drill by two crack companies of the 65th and 74th regiments of "D" Company, City Guards, and the whole to conclude with a ball. It is a big undertaking, but with "The Only" H. E. at its head, I am rather inclined to think it will be a success. It will take place some time in February.

Speaking of a tournament in 1889, Mr. Ducker says he has heard of no plans having been or being made by the Fair Association. He is of the opinion that nothing will be done in that respect until the recent fair and tournament matters are definitely settled. The chances for a tournament in 1889 are good; beyond that nothing can be said.

We have received our first invoice of "the beautiful," which has tendered to dampen the ardor of our cyclers as well as put the streets in a horrible condition as far as cycling is concerned. Sadly and reluctantly is our pet wheel put to its annual rest, to muse over the events just past, whilst the cycler hies himself to the cosy club rooms, prepared to swap fish stories with his neighbor.

The Buffalo and Rambler Clubs are arranging entertainments, such as balls, progressive euchre, pool and whist tournaments and smokers, to help while away the long winter evenings.

The first assembly given by the Ramblers took place last Thursday evening in the Concert Hall (Music Hall). It was attended by over one hundred and fifty couples. A very enjoyable time was had.

The Zigzags will have a social in the near future.

NEW YORK. "HAWKSHAW."

The Vanderbilt University at Nashville, Tenn., has issued a circular from its engineering department, offering free instruction in highway construction. The L. A. W. should secure a copy of this circular and aid in the promulgation of the enlightened doctrine it sets forth, by publishing it as official matter in your columns. Some idea of the tone of it may be gained by the following passage: "The question of a system of improved public roads is one so closely related to every material interest of the State, as to place it properly among the most important questions of public economy." If the L. A. W. can get any stronger endorsement for road improvements from a more able and less partizan source than this, I would like to see them produce it.

I am both flattered and humbled by receiving an editorial notice of myself and my work in last week's Wheel: flattered because it ranks me among cycling scribes as the equal to Joseph Howard, Jr., the master of all correspondents, though I am convinced that the compliment was the result entirely of friendship, rather than of any merit of mine. Humbled, because of the admixture of the bitter with the sweet, by being, therein, accused of being "dogmatic, etc." Feeling that I must at once do something to prove to a suffering public, my posessing both of the qualities the editor of the Wheel has thus seen fit to put upon me, I here in my most Howardesque and dogmatic style, declare that I am, as compared to Editor Prial, but yet a mere infant in ability as a cycling scribe, or rather scribler, occupying so lowly a position in the circle of wheel literature, that my eyes cannot ever reach the lofty summit of the Olympus, where enthroned in editorial grandure and supremacy, is seated the brainy Prial, forging bolts of literary perfection, and hurling them at the defenceless heads and pens of such nonenities as I am. Take the account in the last issue of the Wheel, of Coningsby attempting Eagle Rock Hill, and where in all the brainiest conceptions of editorial minds, can the equal be found to this passage? "He was compelled to stop on account of one of his wrists giving out near the summit, on the ninth trip." None but a literary Jove ever penned the equal of this. Esculapius himself knew not the "summit" of a man's wrist, and yet to our cycling Joves 'tis but a trivial matter to locate it specifically as being "on the ninth trip." Yea, verily, there is but one Wheel and Prial its editor.

Seems as though I haved stepped on some one's toes in my article against the practice of giving medals for mileages, as I am "hauled over the coals" this week, both in your columns and in those of the Wheel, by defenders of this practice. Your correspondent "Nemo" put me on the defensive by saying that "perhaps the writer * * judges others by himself." As I want to set his mind at rest at once upon that point, by declaring that I never competed but for one mileage prize in my long career, and that was for the least number of miles in the greatest length of time, and I won that "hands down." So much for that part of his reply. Now as to the assertion that in his opinion "an athletic or wheeling club does not need a social element among its members." Never was a more incorrect opinion formed and opened than this one. No club, based purely upon any athletic basis, unaided by a "social element," has ever succeeded, or can be made to do so. The history of cycling, when it is written, will be well filled with the chronicles of the wrecks of wheel clubs, based upon "Nemo's" ideas of the elimination of the social element, while its greatest success will always be those whose broadness of of ideas led them to encourage this "element." The wheelmen are but the stones from which the club is built, while the "social element" is the cement thats binds them together into the perfect and lasting edifice. But to return to the original issue. Despite the eloquence and logic of my critics, still thorough the land shall my feeble voice be heard, protesting against any attempt at "the protection of the infant industry" of cycling as a pastime by any system of award that is based upon any computation of the number of miles ridden by those whose platform seems to be one of a "free trade" of miles for medals. I will not look udon a wheel club as an incubator, in which the riders are but eggs placed therein to bring forth that "ugly duckling"—mileage, by the aid of the artificial heat of proffered prize. To such as so believe I can only say, "Get thee gone, back to the nursery from whence thou hast too early come. I like thee not and truly thou triest me much."

The cycler is an exceedingly imitative animal, deficit to a noticeable degree in originality. In everything he wears, rides or uses he follows like a sheep in the wake of his leader. Take his uniform as an example: it varies but in color one from the other. When first he chose a color for it some years since, blue was the fashion, because it could be easily obtained, and he had but to imitate the most common color of a uniform; then the Boston Club imparted a Hibernian tinge to his fancy by adopting a uniform of green, and forthwith it became the "proper caper" to doff the blue for the green. Then comes "Papa" Weston, and in keeping with his supposed age as a parent of the sport, he introduces the gray of the C. T. C., and the fashion of green follows that of blue, and gray becomes the "correct thing." Then the L. A. W. takes a hand in leading him, and says that blue, green and gray are all wrong and that to do the thing up brown is the only thing to be done, and at once his uniform becomes the color of Boston's famous bread. So it is in everything he does. Take the nomenclature of his club; rarely does he seek for anything better than the addition to it of the town, State or country in which it exists, being satisfied to become famous under that designation. As an example of how he frowns down any attempt at originality, I am reminded of an experience a friend of mine had here some years ago. A few riders met, organized a club, elected themselves to all the offices thereof, and then asked my friend to pick out an attractive name for the organization. Now it happened that every possible local name was already in use, so he set himself to work to study history and mythology in an endeavor to discover who was the first individual who had any intimate relation with the wheel. He finally decided that this honor belonged to Ixion, and while it was a debated question in his mind as to whether Ixion was particularly pleased with his connection with the wheel, yet he was chosen as the titular god of the club, and Ixion it was. What happens? Does the wheelman take kindly to this attempt at a change in naming a club? Not much. The very first mail brought that club a letter from a wheelman living in Newburyport, Mass., asking what they meant by daring to thus honor so disreputable an individual as Ixion, by adopting his name for that of a club. This is a fact, strange as it may seem, and clearly bears out my statement that the average wheelmen looks askance and with much disfavor upon any attempt at a departure from the rut in which he travels.

POKKOPOLIS NOTES. "STAR."

On December 2, the C. B. C. took a run out on the C. W. and B. R. R. to Ludlow avenue, climbing which they visited the residence of one of the members, Joe Hosea. After listening to a long and truthful (?) account of a hunting excursion from which he had just returned, and being shown through his extensive green-houses, they rode around through Clifton and down Crescent avenue, winding up at Chester Park.

The local wheelmen seriously doubt that Teddy Allsup ever owned a little hatchet.

Charley Allen, who has been absent from the city for some time, is supposed to be in search of that new wheel.

Dr. Millholland, with the exception of spending one evening a week at the club, devotes his entire time to the study of medicine, as this is his last year at college.

The silvery tongued Marqua, the minstrel of the C. B. C., who has of late developed literary ability, is at present engaged on a thrilling story entitled: "The Kendall-House Mystery."

Air-brake Norton recently contributed a wholearmful of literature to the library of the C. B. C. The collection, it is expected, will soon equal that of the "Veloce" Club which, it is claimed, contains "fully 30 volumes."

The Centrals amuse themselves every Tuesday evening with a sort of a minstrel show. For music they have a mandolin, a tamborine, bones, guitar and violin; and they only need a bass drum to make it a thumping success.

The Cincinnati and Covington Suspension Bridge Co., being common carriers, have no right to discriminate against wheelmen: and if there ever was an occasion for invoking the aid of the L. A. W. to assist us in asserting our rights, this is certainly one.

THE race track continues to be an absorbing topic, but lest it should end in the wind, those interested in the project should call a meeting, decide on some plan and appoint a committee to wait on the "Zoo" authorities so that they may have something tangible to go on.

IN making their Christmas purchases, wheelmen should not forget their clubs. There are a great many presents that would be very acceptable, for instance; ink-stands, paper-cutters, pictures, clocks, bric-a-brac, bronze ornaments, mirrors, books, bicycle-stands, book-cases, rugs, soap, club-houses, etc., etc.

THE cost of conducting either State or National meets has increased so rapidly that it now takes a small fortune, and the local wheelmen who are so anxious to secure the next State meet should consider that as the centennial deficit is so very recent, little or no money can be raised by subscriptions, and as a consequence the whole cost will have to be borne by the cycling fraternity. While it is true that our bicycle dealers are all millionaires, yet a large percentage of the funds must come from the pockets of these who use the wheel, and they should gauge their enthusiasm accordingly.

IN that literary gem "A Coincidence," Secretary, by hinting at that peculiar charm of cycling—the communion with nature—awakes an echo in the breast of many a wheelman. To the buzzard that hovers over the landscape with an eye for nothing but carrion, and to the scorcher who sees nothing but his goal, her beauties are as "Pearls cast before swine;" but to him who delights in their contemplation, they not only give a pleasure that leaves no pang, but one that refines and ennobles. There are many of us whose undeveloped pinions only permit us to hop about from twig to twig as we twitter our discordant lays, but we nevertheless fully appreciate the richer melody and the loftier flights of the gifted "Secretary."

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

CLUB politics claim the attention of our wheelmen at present, the annual election of officers for the various clubs here taking place about January 1st, and slate making is being carried on as vigorously by the members as though it were Mr. Harrison's cabinet instead of a bicycle club's corps of officers. And this is as it should be, for the success of a bicycle club depends more on its officers than anything else. In the Illinois Club I hear very few candidates spoken of for the principal offices, aside from the present incumbents. And where can they find better men than Sloan, Davis, Fergurson, etc., men who have made the club what it is to-day, the most substantial club financially of any in the city, a conservative club and yet a progressive one. In the Lincoln Club all the principal officers are in the field for re-election and will probably be re-elected by a large majority. The present Board of Directors having just floated $4000 worth of stock do not feel like relinquishing their management of the club until the success of their new venture is an absolute certainty. Crennan having moved to the South Side and joined the "Chicagos," is one of the few officers not in the field for re-election. The Lincolns are putting in a first-class gymnasium, and this, with their lectures, dancing parties, ladies' night receptions, etc., etc., will keep their members all interested during the usually dull winter months. The Chicagos do not seem to have it quite settled yet as to whether "Jonah swallowed the whale or the whale Jonah," and various tickets are in the field, one ticket composed almost exclusively of old Chicago members, and another ticket likewise of Fort Dearborn men, while various other combinations spring up daily composed of members from both the old organizations, and the last is the sensible thing and I trust will be successful. One ticket I saw partly composed was, Thorne (or Randall if he would take it), President; Skinkle, Vice President; Sanxay, Secretary; Schmidt, Treasurer; Tom Roe, Captain; Ayres, Ellis and F. M. Corey, Directors.

IT is not settled yet as to whether Roe and Van Sicklen will form a partnership in the bicycle business next season or not.

SKINKLE is doing New York, Boston and Washington at present, but says he will be back in time to vote. I wonder if he will vote a prohibition ticket this time.

RANDALL is trying to raise a beard, but Miles and Cory say it is the worst "collection" they ever saw, while Harmon and Seig are making a bluff at a moustache.

E. M. SHILER, an old wheelman of Chicago, now located in New York, was in town for a few days last week. I asked him if he remembered that trip around Waukesha County a year ago, and as the tears (?) came to his eyes and he spasmodically sank into a chair. Edward says that one scorch like that is sufficient for all time.

H. R. Winship, one of our racing men, met with a severe loss recently in the death of his father. Winship's many friends among the wheelmen sympathize deeply with him in his sorrow.

CAPTAIN DAVIS is waiting for Burley Ayres to show up at the club, when an animated time is expected. But Burley is unusually busy at present and has no time to go there, still he is always on hand at a theatre party.

WHITGREAVE gave Garden his initiation fee to pay for him to a cycling club here. Garden left for the East forgetting to pay the same, and Whitgreave being asked for the same by the Treasurer was dumbfounded, but on learning the facts got even with Garden by sending a long telegram about that initiation fee to him, "collect on delivery."

GARDEN has returned from the East resplendant in a Scotch cape overcoat, and peace once more reigns at the "Columbia" headquarters. Some one accused Garden of being the "Stroller," but "Thistle" said that he was never guilty of murdering the "Queen's English" and consequently it could not be laid to him. The next time I see you, Garden, we will have a bottle of claret (I believe that is your favorite beverage) together, while you give me a few pointers on the 1889 wheel in English, with your quaint Scotch accent.

FRANK CORY is the only one who had the pleasure of dancing with Miss Hall at the reception in her honor Thursday evening. Tom Roe looked wistfully on and sighed because he could not trip the light fantastic. Forrest started to ask her, but Frank got the start o'er him. Lucky Frank! but what say you to "Nadjy's" description of you in the Referee? And while I think of it "Nadjy," I heard many say you were the loveliest lady there that evening, and who would suppose you could wield such a caustic pen, as proven by your article last week?

IN a social way all the clubs are doing their utmost, and the life of the wheelman is still "one continuous round of pleasure." The Englewood Club, an enterprising organization just on the southern outskirts of the city, gave a very enjoyable "progressive angling party" Thursday evening last, and made merry until the small hour. On the same evening the Chicagos had a progressive euchre party and an informal reception to Miss Hall, at which Miss Hall was presented with a club badge, which she said would be cherished and thought much of as long as memory was left her, by reason of the many pleasing attentions that she had received from the wheelmen of Chicago during her present engagement here. After a light supper dancing concluded the entertainment.

I WAS in the Referee office the other day, and overheard the editor-in-chief say, as he opened a large mail that was spread out before him, "the BICYCLING WORLD is the best wheel paper in the country to advertise in by a large majority." True for you, Sam, and I am glad to see you appreciate it. And if your annual on the 15th of December is as good all the way through as the proofs you showed me every League member will miss it if he does not get one. On leaving the sanctum of the "Looker On" I ran plump into the arms of Sam Brewster, and was immediately asked if I "had purchased all the diamonds necessary for Xmas presents yet?" and then I was shown a rare collection of the same. I protested that I was no capitalist, and would have made my escape but I unfortunately inquired after his friend, Street, and there was no escape for me until the end of the chapter.

PENNSYLVANIA.

"ARIEL."

"IKEY" is way off, when he says the Hagerstown men have just as many men in line as ever. They may have them in "line," but not in a "line" of wheels. During the week I spent there in June, after the Baltimore meet, the only regulars I could count on were Billy and Nero. Updegraff was always busy; Cushwa had a best girl to see in the evenings (now to be candid, I am not sure whether it was not one of the other fellows, but never mind, it'll do to put it on Cushwa for his shoulders are broad enough to carry more than that), and so it ran the club through. The magnificent roads round Hagerstown are wasted on the boys, and I told them so. Now when it comes to social life—there's where the Hagerstown boys can give points to lots of others. They do manage to have a jolly time, and their Thursday evening sociables are exceedingly enjoyable.

SO Mr. G. C. McNeil, as per last week's Wheel, "never saw or heard of a header off of a safety." Mr. McNeil cannot have seen much safety riding. I have seen several headers taken from safeties, all from those having the brake on the front wheel instead of on the driving wheel, where it properly belongs. McDaniel, of Wilmington, coming around the track at the Tioga races at a lively gait, on an Ivel safety, suddenly put on the brake hard, to escape a collision, and was fired over the handles—the most astonished man you ever saw. I quite agree with Mr. McN. in his remarks on the ordinary. As headers are in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the result of carelessness, I ride with the circumspection that prevents them, and I manage to get my share of enjoyment out of the wheel, too, although I am not a scorcher and never will be.

WHILE the ordinary can never be displaced—spite of a temporary madness for the "dinkys"—the new lady's safety is going to be one of the mounts. First of all, is its applicability to the entire family, and with such proper strengthening of the frame as will render them strong enough for medium-weight men, their introduction is less a question of time than of supply.

ALTHOUGH instant warning was given by Mr. Osborne of the attempt on one of their wheels by Mr. Rogers (?) from Bradford (?), yet he was not in time to prevent the rascal from getting away with a Veloce safety owned by Mr. Meyer, of the Pennsylvania Bicycle Club. How he got into and out of the club house is a mystery unexplained, but it must have have been at a time when a party of riders were probably coming in from a run. At all events, the wheel was stolen and pawned, but the loss was not discovered until Thanksgiving Day, and then poor Meyer raised the roof. However, the detective bureau soon traced it to a down-town pawn-shop and it was safely recovered.

ON last Friday evening the Philadelphia Club held their regular monthly sociable at the club house, and an enjoyable time was had. There was no formal programme, but Mr. Tucker acted as master of ceremonies and the dances were varied to suit the demand. In truth the pleasantest part of these sociables of the Philadelphians is their entire absence of any formality. The only drawback to my enjoyment was the fact that as I am falling somewhat into the sere and yellow leaf my better half laid an embargo on round dances, consequently I had to sit by and see some other fellow take out the pretty girls. Much of the success of the Philadelphians as a social club is the large lady membership, the largest in the country if I am not mistaken. They have at present some twenty-five ladies, with something like twelve or fifteen now up for membership. Quite a number of these ride the safety bicycle, and they are paving the way for others. The Philadelphia Club being now the oldest in the city, their house naturally abounds with relics of the early days of cycling here, and Mr. Osborne was kind enough to show me these, of which more in some future article.

PENNSYLVANIA has also determined on a series of dances, to be given at the club house during the winter. The first of these will come off during the Xmas holidays, and will be entirely informal. It is proposed to continue them monthly, winding up with a grand ball in the spring, closing the series. A committee was appointed at the regular meeting on Thursday night to arrange for the dances and another committee was appointed to arrange for a series of "smokers" for men only. At the meeting on Thursday occurred the election for the ensuing year, and the following gentlemen received the suffrages of their club mates: President, George T. Laing; Vice President, W. W. Johnson; Secretary, L. R. McKinstry; Assistant Secretary, W. S. Harper; Treasurer, J. B. Young; Captain, W. D. Supplee. Three additional directors were also elected, viz., Messrs. Leisen, Riddell and Williams.

SPEAKING of smokers reminds us that the Century holds the first of theirs on Tuesday evening. They expect to make it a howling success, and judging from their efforts in this line in the past, I expect they will.

THE South End Wheelmen, who were to have had their anniversary supper and housewarming combined in their new quarters last Tuesday evening, were compelled to defer the event, owing to the unfinished condition of the house. They moved on Thanksgiving Day, and the masons, plumbers and paper-hangers have been occupying the house jointly with them ever since. After they get thoroughly settled they are going to have a handsome house, and intend having their friends jollify over the acquisition.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

IN reply to a query as to the nine-mile record, we can say that for the exact distance of nine miles we cannot find any record. We however find that S. G. TRICYCLING FOR LADIES. By Miss F. J. Erskine. "For some time past there has been a real need with many ladies who have had their interest awakened on the subject of tricycling for some small book which should put them in possession of the most useful and necessary information without having to pay for it by their own experience. This want is now supplied, and in Miss Erskine's book will be found hints on the choice and management of tricycles, with suggestions on dress, riding and touring, etc., adapted to a lady's special requirements." 25 cents. It is to be published by the Referee Publishing Company, of Chicago.

Oh, Missouri! You ought to be ashamed of yourself, if the following is true: "The wheelmen (Kansas City) were denied the right of incorporation on the ground that their club does not partake of the nature of a religious, scientific, benevolent or educational organization." An essay could be written, showing how closely cycling is allied with science, religion and education.

ARE you about five feet six inches in height, about 160 pounds in weight? Have you light hair, and do you comb it pompadour style? Have you a light complexion, are you freckled, and do you dress well? If this answers your description don't go to Baltimore, Washington or Philadelphia. "ANOTHER delightful communication from "Secretary" in the BICYCLING WORLD. Who is he, and why don't he write oftener?"—Sporting Life. We have not the authority to reveal the gentleman's identity, but we can assure our e. c. and our readers generally, that "Secretary" has consented to brighten our pages with his delightful contributions from time to time, as the spirit moves him. May the spirit be a restless one and "move" often say we.

"THE BICYCLING WORLD cannot 'accept' Dampman's record of of 7.20.17 in the Sporting Life 100-mile road race because it was not made on a 20-mile course, but then, the BICYCLING WORLD has no more authority than it or any other paper relegates to itself to pass upon road records, and the Sporting Life claims to have, and does have, as much right to 'accept' the record as the BICYCLING WORLD has to 'reject' it."—Sporting Life. Our e. c. is eminently correct, it can "accept" anything it desires. We only ask the privilege of exercising the same freedom of decision. We are entirely in accord with S. Life in wishing for a national organization to pass on road records, as it does in a another paragraph. We have time and time again urged this very thing, but it has not taken concrete form. Until some concerted action is taken to form a road records association we must be allowed to use our judgment as to what we accept or reject, and it affords great pleasure to accord our e. c. the very same privilege.

THAT mysterious chap who is stalking through the country victimizing bicycle clubs seems to be as hard to catch and jug as the celebrated Whitechapel fiend. Mr. H. E. Jones, of Baltimore, writes us as follows: "I am glad to learn through the WORLD that the scamp who attempted to rob the Philadelphia Club Nov. 22d was checkmated in that attempt. The partial description which you give of him answers exactly that of the imposter who visited the Rambler Cycle Club of this city a few weeks ago, and who pretended to be a Mr. Johnson of the Buffalo Ramblers. We entertained him cordially, and he returned the kindness by robbing our lockers of about $75.00 worth of clothing. He then went to Washington to practice his art on the Washington Club. He began by intercepting our letter to that club cautioning them about him. He procured a bicycle from the club and pawned it. A full description of the man referred to is as follows: Height, about five feet six inches; weight, about 160 pounds; light hair, combed pompadour style; light complexion, slightly freckled; well dressed, and with a plausible manner.

WE SKIP INTO NEW YORK AND NEW JERSEY.

THE spirit and other potent influences moved us last week to take a trip down to New York over into "Jarsey." It did not take us long to pack, as our wardrobe is one of dimensions calculated to foster speed and alacrity in movement, so our extra handkerchief and our extra collar and pair of cuffs having been delivered by a certain Sam Yee (in consideration of a certain money value) into our hands, we turned our faces westward via. the Fall River Line.

We never approach New York without a feeling that our importance and individuality has been reduced to a minimum. There is a vastness, an atmosphen of rush and an overwhelming evidence of of vast wealth and resources that causes the provincial magnate to feel that he is a very small potato indeed in the city of New York, no matter what his calibre may be considered in his native village. However this is not an essay on "The comparative importance of the provincial at home and in Gotham," and so we will avast and simply record that a breakfast and a shave having been indulged in we took the sixth avenue L for West 58th and then walked over a block or two to number 313, the office and store of Mr.

GEORGE R. BIDWELL.

This gentleman reported that business for the season was practically at an end although he expected and hoped to have his usual Christmas trade.

After discussing the past and present of the cycle trade in New York we led Mr. Bidwell into a conversation on League matters and organization as bearing on his Division. That the Chief Consul of the Empire State believes in SYSTEM will be proved by any one who has taken the trouble to enquire into the manner of doing the Division work, employed by Mr. Bidwell. In the matter of appointment of local Consuls, the Chief requires that a pledge be given by the appointed that he will be active. This official is required from time to time to send to Mr. Bidwell a list of the names of wheelmen not League members in the Local Consul's territory and these men are at once furnished with circulars setting forth the advantages offered by the League. The local Consuls are required to "keep a' moverin" in all matters to further the ends and aims of the National organizaiton, such as the appointment of League Hotels, the increasing the number of the membership and reporting on roads, or the action of Local authorities in matters that might effect the rights of wheelmen. In fact constant action and activity is required by the Chief of his subs. Should Mr. Bidwell ever see fit to withdraw from the office of Chief Consul it will require a pretty capable successor to carry on the splendid work inaugurated and sustained by the present incumbrunt.

We paid a short but pleasant visit to the establishment of Messrs. Spalding & Co. the bicycle department of which concern is in charge of Mr.

A. B. BARKMAN.

We found this gentleman thoroughly imbued with the idea that the rear driver, in both its single and double form, is to be the coming popular type of machine for Gotham riders. It is unnecessary to say that Mr. Barkman's views found a ready echo in our own mind. It was our intention to call again on the Spalding bicycle department manager, but numerous demands on our time prevented out the pleasant intention. From Spalding's we cut across to the office of the Wheel, to pay our respects to its able editor, Mr.

F. P. PRIAL.

A pleasant chat on "things in general" was indulged in, and the name of the possible future incumbent of the League Presidential office was discussed, but we cannot say on authority that the matter as to who would be the next President was settled. We also had the pleasure of meeting Mr. W. Neuman, the energetic advertising manager of the Wheel.

From thence we skipped over to the office of Mr.

ISAAC B. POTTER.

one of the most earnest workers of the Division. Mr. Potter is most thoroughly saturated with the correct idea that the most important question next to that of the rights of wheelmen on the highways, is that of the improvement of said highways. Mr. Potter actively engaged in organizing "The New York States' Roads Improvement Association." The membership of this association is by no means restricted to wheelmen.

The object of the association, briefly stated, is to improve the public roads of the State of New York.

To publish from time to time such circular information as will increase the knowledge of the public and stimulate its interest concerning the advantages of good roads and the manner of constructing and maintaining them.

To procure, by appropriate legislation, a change in the present laws governing the construction and maintenance of the public

There is no membership fee, nor shall any assessments be levied upon members at any time. The association is supported entirely by the voluntary contributions of its members and friends.

Although Mr. Potter has only pushed the organization since March last, yet he has over 20,000 names enrolled who have pledged themselves to further the ends and aims as set forth above.

We regretted very much that our intended visit to the New York branch of the

on Warren street, was not consummated. We found the hours all too short to do all we had planned, and among the things omitted was the aforesaid "intended" visit to the New York branch of the Pope Mfg. Co. On Friday we had planned to take a trip into the wilds of "Jarsey" and see if we could find out the locale of the

H. B. SMITH MACHINE CO.

We found the home of this large manufacturing concern after many twists and turns and multitudinous changes from one train to another. The village of Smithville owes its all, to the existence of the big factory of the Smith Co. The immense brick work shops and foundries cover a large territory. Wood working machinery is the chief product of the Smith Co., and of course it is well known that they are the manufacturers of the Star bicycle.

Mr. Kelly, the present head of the concern, very courteously took us in charge, and railroaded us through the different departments of the factory, and we were duly impressed with the air of business and activity evident on all hands. This article cannot deal in detail with the resources and methods of manufacturing employed by the Smith Co., that they are large and thorough was evident. What we were interested in was to find out particulars about

THE STAR SAFETY.

The experimental machine was shown us, and is in general outline precisely like the familiar rear driver, with the exception that in place of chain and gear wheels, the lever and clutch of the Star movement furnish the means of driving. It is the intention of this company to put on the market two safeties, one for men and one with the dropped frame for either man or woman. A large number of the former are already in course of construction and by the first of the year they will be able to deliver some machines. The lady's bicycle has not yet been quite perfected in the matter of detail, but it is expected by the opening of the season of 1889 to have these ready for delivery.

Mr. Kelly promised to furnish cuts and description in detail at the very earliest moment for the benefit of our readers. Our visit to Smithville was very brief but very pleasant, so pleasant that we have promised ourselves another visit in the near future.

A TOURNAMENT IN CHICAGO.

AN immense cycling tournament for Chicago for 1889 is almost assured. Mr. Miles, of the Referee, has about completed arrangements to rent the Exposition Building for the first week in May. The building is over one-third of a mile in circumference, and has a gallery completely round. The idea at present is to hold a six-day race, of twelve hours per day, with from two to three hours amateur racing each night. Two tracks will be laid, one a quarter and one a fifth of a mile in circumference. The amateurs will use the former, and the professionals the latter. In connection with the tournament, an exhibition of cycles and all descriptions of sporting goods will be held. A committee representing all the Chicago clubs will have charge of the details.

ROAD RIDING AT PHILADELPHIA.

MCDANIEL, Merrihew and A. Jefferis were tempted by the lovely weather to make a break in the local record from Wilmington to Middletown, 23 1-2 miles. They succeeded in placing it at 1.55.55, as against their own their own previous figures of 2.01, made last April. The roads were fair, but a strong head wind was dead against them all the way. McDaniel paced for the last five miles, and he and Merrihew finished hotly, nearly neck and neck. What a quartette those Wilmington men are, anyway. Don't believe there are four men in the country who could get away with Dampman, McDaniel, Merrihew and Elliott. I want to see the Reading team have another try at them next season. I hear that Dampman has given up racing, but I think that a challenge from Reading will find him with the gray-coated men, if the race comes off.

"ARIEL."

RACING AT WAUKESHA, WIS.

FULLY five hundred people assembled on Thanksgiving Day, at the starting point, to witness the five-mile road race of the Waukesha Wheelmen, and considerable interest was manifest and crowds of people were gathered all along the triangular course. The race proved quite exciting, and Warren Fuller surprised the boys by showing up first, followed half a minute later by E. H. Paige, with Milo Putney third. The following score explains matters:

	Actual Time.	Handicap.
	M. S.	M. S.
1. Warren Fuller	22 45	1 45
2. Ed H. Paige	21 30	scratch
3. Milo Putney	24 30	1 30
4. H. Robinson	26 30	3 00
5. J. Christoph	29 00	4 30
6. A. Sherman	30 00	3 00

First prize, silk umbrella; second prize, toilet set; third prize, pair gloves. No headers, no kicking; great sport, and Warren's umbrella costs him an oyster supper. No. 16,488.

[We shall be glad to hear from "16,488" whenever the spirit moves.—ED.]

HARVARD-TECHNOLOGY ROAD RACE.

LAST Saturday the much-talked-of Harvard-Technology road race came off. The distance was nine miles, the roads good, and the day perfect. A little before three o'clock the eight Tech. men, and six Harvard men started from a point half a mile East of Newton Corners on the Watertown road. The gait to the Great Sign Boards was easy, Brown, of Harvard, setting the pace, except when Norton, of Tech., who ran the race in a succession of great spurts, took the lead for a time.

At the Great Sign Boards Greenleaf, of Harvard, went ahead and set a pace on Beacon street that soon strung out the majority of the riders; but at Newtonville, where Norton got in another of his gallery spurts, there were still three Techs. and three Harvard men in a bunch. A mile from home, Bradley, one of Tech.'s best men, took a header over Brown's little wheel in turning the corner into Watertown street and could not finish.

Williston now drew up even with Greenleaf and made desperate efforts to pass him, but when the riders came into view for the finish they were neck and neck, with Norton and Brown 50 and 100 yards behind them respectively. Three hundred yards from the tape Cornish was waiting on a safety to coach the Harvard man in, and when Cornish yells "Go In" to his man it is worth a good ten yards on the spurt, which is about the distance that Greenleaf won by. Norton, who either mistook Cornish's yell for personal encouragement, or else thought it about time for his fifth spurt, dug away at his pedals and came in just ahead of Williston, and about 60 yards ahead of Brown.

The score was now even—19 points to 19—and the arrival of the next men was anxiously waited for. They finished in the order given below, the last five having been delayed by a train:

1. Greenleaf, Harvard. - - - - - 35.23 4-5
2. Norton, Tech.. - - - - - - - 35.24
3. Williston, Tech., - - - - - - 35.24 1-2

4, Brown, Harvard. 5, Barron, Harvard. 6, Rogers, Harvard. 7, Webster, Tech. 8, Holmes, Harvard. 9, Warner, Tech. 10, Hutchins, Tech.

Greenleaf rode a 55-inch Columbia Light Roadster, on which he has ridden more than 4000 miles this year.

Both Williston and Norton were a surprise to the Harvard men. The latter is about six feet tall, weighs about 130 pounds, and rides an old Harvard that rattles like a milk wagon. There is something positively ghostly in the way he can spurt hard every couple of miles and yet not be done up. Holmes and Wirts, of the Harvard team took headers, but were not hurt much.

Harvard won the race, with a score of 31 to 24.

THANKSGIVING DAY RACING IN STOCKTON, CAL.

Race meeting of the Oak Leaf Wheelmen at Stockton on Thursday, 29th November. Weather—Morning had been damp and foggy but afternoon cleared off bright and pleasant. Track—Soft from recent rains; quarter-mile.

Officers of the meeting—Referee, R. M. Welch; judges, Edwin Mohrig, C. Union Brewster, Joseph J. Bliss; starter, J. E. Clifford; scorer, T. S. Cobden; clerk of the course, N. L. Wulff; timers, C. F. Hutchinson, D. F. Creaner, H. C. Porter; umpires, Daniel Weaver, Theo. Steiny.

First event called at 2 P. M.

One-mile novice (racing wheels barred)—H. A. Crocker, first; F. E. Southworth, second; time, 3.52. Ridden very slowly, neither willing to make pace until last lap, when Crocker spurted, fairly distancing Southworth. The latter lost his pedals when within 200 yards of the finish.

One-half-mile L. A. W. State championship—W. G. Davis, first; J. E. Hickenbotham, second; H. G. Toll, third; Chas. B. Wheaton, did not finish; time, 1.32 1-2. Davis started to lower existing Pacific Coast record of 1.22 1-2, and led the field the entire distance, finishing fully ten feet ahead of second man, but the track proved too heavy for fast time. The rest of the field rode well bunched, with a pretty contest for second place, until within 200 yards of the finish, when Wheaton got into soft ground and was out of the race. Toll finished close behind Hickenbotham.

One-mile L. A. W. State safety championship—C. P. Fonda, only entrant, 3.26 1-3. Fonda, notwithstanding the failure of Davis, announced his intention of going for record, but with no better success.

One-mile Oak Leaf Wheelmen Club handicap—F. E. Southworth (ordinary), scratch, first; H. A. Dodge (rear-driving safety), 100 yards, second; time, 3.25 1-4. Dodge was soon overhauled, and was at no time at all in the race.

One-mile handicap—L. G. Hodgkins, 100 yards, first; J. E. Hickenbotham, scratch, second; time, 3.17 2-5. Hickenbotham failed to reduce his opponents' start by more than 50 yards.

One-mile scratch—H. G. Toll, first; C. P. Fonda, second; time, 3.18 4-5. J. E. Hickenbotham was distanced by 25 feet.

Two-mile scratch—H. A. Crocker, first; F. E. Southworth, second; L. G. Hodgkins, third; time, 7.48 3-5. Another procession, there being no contest until the last quarter. The finish was close, the wheels overlapping each other.

The contestants appeared in good condition excepting Hickenbotham, who was decidedly stale, besides attempting to ride in too many events. Southworth appeared to much better advantage in the two-mile than in the novice. The best form was shown by Crocker, who may be regarded as a most important addition to the ranks of our racing men. Toll showed much improvement over his former efforts.

THE DIRECT TAX OF 1861.

Editor Bicycling World: In the endeavor on the part of the Fiftieth Congress to refund the Direct Tax of 1861, we see a great opportunity for the L. A. W. Road Improvement Committees, both of the National and Division organizations, to perfect a feasible and cheap method of repairing or constructing roads with the money, if it is refunded.

Some of our newspapers think we can be generous and not take it, but it is an injustice, unless it is refunded, or the States who have not paid their portion should be made to pay it.

New York's share would be $2,600,000, Massachusetts $480,000; these amounts expended in a careful manner, under the direction of a competent official, would construct a first-class road from one end of the State to the other.

You have shown the benefit and saving to all who use the roads of having good roads at all seasons of the year. The articles have been republished here and in Buffalo, in papers which have large circulation among the farmers, and more of the same kind would be welcome, and a continual agitation of this matter would stir them up to their wants and rights. Yours, N. H. DICKINSON,

Dunkirk, N. Y., Dec. 8, 1888. No. 15,298.

PHILADELPHIA STREETS—REPLY TO NO. 3463.

Editor Bicycling World: Under date of Nov. 2d., I note that L. A. W. No. 3463, in his "little items" on Philadelphia streets, takes the Associated Cycling Clubs of Philadelphia rather severely to task, because the very gigantic ordinace, providing for the repaving, with asphaltum, of Broad street, from Columbia to Passyunk avenues, was not passed by the City Councils. He states "the Associated Clubs of Philadelphia were supposed to have been pushing this scheme through City Councils, but they seem to have been singularly inactive about it." In this connection, permit me to state that No. 3463 knows not whereof he speaks. It is true that last spring the ordinance above referred to was presented before City Councils, and was by them referred to the sub-committee of highways, before which Mr. George D. Gideon and P. S. Collins, as committee representing the Associated Clubs, appeared and advanced their argument in favor of said ordinance, which argument in itself was not strong enough to drag from its moorings the ideas entertained by this sub committee, which in substance were: The city cannot afford the enormous outlay necessary for the completion of this work, there being so many streets, both in central and outlying districts in such wretched condition, while Broad street, as stipulated in ordinance, is, comparatively speaking, good. Entertaining this view, they simply pigeon-holed the ordinance, or in other words, quashed it, and I regret to say, same was never allowed to hear the modern ideas of our City Fathers, as expounded from within those ancient walls, that so fitly become their presence. (?)

If Mr. 3463 knows anything of City Councils, he must be aware that the few Councilmen, from the still fewer wards, bordering on and cut by Broad street, will have to exert more than ordinary influence on their brother members, to carry such an ordinance, and that there will have to be more than the ordinary trading of votes.

The Associated Clubs and all wheelmen who are up in cycling literature, to date, are well satisfied with the efforts of Messrs. Gideon and Collins, and it little becomes any one to write on a subject of which they know nothing.

Mr. 3463 may be well versed on subjects touched upon in the other parts of his letter, but as to the Associated Cycling Clubs he is most certainly "in the soup." Yours very truly,

J. R. LINCOLN EDWARDS,

Secy. Associated Cycling Clubs of Philadelphia.

A MR. A. J. E. READIO of Pawtcket, R. I., has invented a device by which he claims the sensitive steering of the rear driver is to a large extent corrected. It is a "clutch," which holds the steering wheel steady. With the meagre facts at hand we must confess that we cannot see the advantage claimed, the aim and object of every maker is to have the steering head as free and easy moving as possible, and this device seems to defeat the very aim. We are open to conviction, and will defer our conclusions until we see the device.

A BICYCLE suit was on trial in the Superior Court at Buffalo, N. Y., before Judge Beckwith, lately. The wheel in litigation was originally sold by James H. Isham to a Mr. Durfinger of Black Rock, on the installment plan. Before it was more than half paid for, the vehicle was seized on an execution issued to satisfy a judgment obtained against Durfinger by Dr. L. P. McMichael. At the Sheriff's sale of the property the physician was the only bidder. Mr. Isham seeks to recover either the wheel or the balance due thereon.

LEAGUE HEADQUARTERS:
12 Pearl Street, - - - - Room 27.
ABBOT BASSETT, Secretary.

RENEWALS.

The current League year has been extended to April 30, 1889, and all memberships will be continued beyond January 1 until that date. Under the Constitution each Division must file on or before April 1, in the office of the Secretary, a certificate stating the amount fixed as its annual dues. Until that time the Secretary cannot be certain regarding the dues and therefore he must refuse to receive any renewals before that date.

IN spite of the fact that we have published our notice regarding renewals for several weeks at the head of this department, our mail brings remittances every day. Why will not members read their BULLETIN?

THEY are going to spend a million dollars on the roads of Maryland next year. Happy Maryland! The Division will do not a little to see that the money is expended in the best way.

WE have only two more weeks in which to add to the membership of 1888. We have been thinking of 12000 for a number of months and have been singing, "Thou art so near, and yet so far." We hope to do better than last year, but 12000 is beyond hope.

WE are always hoping, at this time of the year for better things to come with the next year. The trade will receive new additions next year if we can believe the propectuses that have been put out, and we hear of several additions to the list of cycling papers. And yet there are some who will say that cycling is going out.

AMERICA has about exhausted the hill-climbing business. Now let our strong road riders see which can make the best time between New York and Boston, or between New York and Buffalo. When we have had a number of these contests we shall know which is the shortest and best road between the points and that will be to our advantage.

ENGLISH cycling journals have not been slow to condemn the fraud practised in the Rowe-Temple affair, and on one or two occasions the whole thing has been set down to be peculiarly American. Perhaps they are right, but America should be given credit for unearthing the fraud. Is it not singular that our English friends have said no word about the frauds practised by these same parties on English soil? May we not fairly infer that fraud can be carried out with impunity over there?

ONLY a few Chief Consuls have sent for our Road Improvement circular. In several of the States they have been circulated by the Local Consuls, but the great majority of the divisions have shown no disposition to do anything for the cause of better roads. Under the present scheme of organization the divisions must do the work of the League. If we reckon by results we cannot see that more work has been done than was accomplished under the old scheme, and per contra, we can see where the organization has been crippled by the change.

WE cannot agree with the Wheel when it reads public opinion and translates it in the following sentence: "There is a latent feeling that Pennsylvania is not intensely loyal to the League." It cannot be gainsaid that in Pennsylvania as in New York, Massachusetts or New Jersey, there are individuals that show a feeling of antagonism towards the League. These remain outside, take all the advantages that the existence of the League is responsible for, and yet lose no opportunity to say a hard word against the organization. But the Pennsylvania Division is as loyal to the League as any on the list. She has kept her position as second in line, and although she will not show as large a membership as she had last year, there are other States whose loyality has never been questioned, who will show no better record. If there were disloyalty in Pennsylvania this office would know it. It is unfair to the Division to hold it responsible for the action of a few disgruntled ones on the outside.

WE have been asked by one or two correspondents,—"What will the Executive Committee do about the Luscomb circular?" We don't know. Those who have seen it announced in other papers that the Committee would issue a rebuke in the official organ, may have been dissapointed when week after week has gone by and no such thing has emanated from headquarters. It may be that the aforesaid papers knew not of what they wrote. The Executive Committee is in no hurry. At the proper time it may have a word to say and we do not question the word will be said emphatically, cut where it will. We do not believe the Committee will set its foot down on political work. The League must make itself a political force if it would gain the ends it seeks. The organization has been doing political work ever since it was organized and it must continue to do this to fulfil its whole mission. Mr. Luscomb has been condemned very severely for issuing the New York circular. He has not yet been heard in his own defence. Would it not be as well to hear what he has to say before going any farther in recrimination? This gentleman has done yeoman's service for the League in years gone by. He went to Albany and materially helped to get the Liberty Bill through. The grateful cyclers threw up their caps and shouted "Hurrah" when the bill was passed. Shall all this then so soon be forgotten? Let Mr. Luscomb be heard before we have any more cries of "demagogue" and "political chicanery." There has been a great cry for road improvement, and many have said, "why doesn't the League do something?" But improved roads will only come when the law compels their construction and the laws will not be made if the advice of the purists is taken and the League lets politics alone. The world will not move as we wish unless we push it.

EDITORS:

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 21 DECEMBER, 1888.

WITH the departure of Vice President Hayes for the city of Para, Brazil, we are constrained to look over the field and see, that now Mr. Hayes cannot be looked on as a candidate, who is left as a possible candidate for the Presidency of the League.

The friends of Mr. Geo. A. Jessup are strong in the field, and are urging the claims of Pennsylvania in a very active way. Mr. Jessup is a gentleman already well known in League politics, being one of the most prominent wheelmen in Pennsylvania, and is at present the Chief Consul for that State. His position as a business man in the city of Scranton is second to none, and personally he is held in high esteem.

Mr. John C. Gulick, of New York, is also spoken of in connection with this high office. As an active and faithful worker in the League and the New York Division, Mr. Gulick willprove a strong candidate. He has already been honored by the League, as its Vice President at the time Dr. Beckwith was President.

From the West we hear whispered the name of Mr. James R. Dunn, of Ohio, for many years the Chief Consul of that State. He has also been Chairman of the Membership Committee. In both capacities he has shown himself to be a strong man and an energetic worker

The name of Mr. Charles H. Luscomb, of New York, has also been spoken as a possible candidate. We, however, do not know whether Mr. Luscomb can be counted in the field or not.

The above names seem to be the most prominent at the present time.

THE Rev. Dr. Newman, of Washington, D. C., had a bicycle stolen from him Dec. 8. Later in the day he met a man riding his machine, and the reverend gentleman promptly stopped the rider and placed him under arrest. The man gave his name as C. Wishing, and on earnest assurance that he had bought it from a man named Whitman early in the afternoon he was allowed to go, minus the bicycle and minus the cash he gave for it, no doubt "Wishing" he had not been such a fool.

GOD SPEED TO EX-CHIEF CONSUL HAYES.

THE officers of the Division which ex-Chief Consul Hayes has so faithfully and efficiently served during the past, paid a fitting compliment to the retiring Consul on the eve of his departure to Brazil, by a dinner at Young's. The following members of the Board were present: Chief Consul W. H. Emery, Vice Consul A. W. Robinson, Representatives W. G. Kendall, J. S. Dean, A. Bassett, J. F. Adams, F. I. Gerton, C. S. Howard, I. E. Moulthrop.

Beside the above named officers, there was present Col. A. A. Pope, Mr. C. E. Pratt and C. W. Fourdrinier. Chief Consul Emery made an excellent post prandial presider, and eloquent speeches were made by C. E. Pratt, Col. Pope, J. S. Dean, and in fact every man round the table had a word to say. Mr. Hayes spoke feelingly of his past connection with the members of the Board, and he gave an exceedingly interesting description of the city of Para and the surrounding country. Mr. Bassett read an excellent poem, which we have the pleasure of reproducing:

TO HERBERT W. HAYES.

Drink we to-night a grand bumper to Herbert,
Fill it with what will best sorrow appease,
Pledge we the health of one soon to be sailing,
Sailing away from us over the seas.

Take now the hand we so often have shaken,
Speak from our feelings so hard to subdue,
Send him in joyfulness out from our circle,
Give him a hearty God-speed and adieu.

Balmy breeze waft him across the blue ocean,
Bear him away to the land of the palm:
Roll billows quietly, mermaids sing carols,
Good fortune speed him and keep him from harm.

Bear him, ye breezes, where Amazon waters
Roll to the ocean across golden sands,
Where a pair of duck trousers, a gold and black blazer,
Is the only dress suit that Dame Fashion demands.

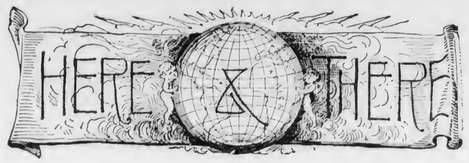
Put him where Herbert will always find pleasure,
Right closely beside a big Amazon's mouth:
Feed him on cocoanuts, dates and bananas,
Give of thy bounty, O, land of the South.

Take him where great anacondas are crawling,
Where monkeys hang down by the tail from the trees,
Where the giant mosquito and long-legged spider,
Dance waltzes and jigs with the Jumbo-like fleas.

Nail up a hook on the blooming equator,
Call up a darkey, a hammock to spread,
Give him a fan and a glass of mint julep,
And a maiden to bathe his perspiring head.

He goes to a land where the baked beans of Boston,
The fish ball, the steamed clam, the Anheuser brew,
Will never more know him, or give him sweet comfort;
We know he's heart broken to bid them adieu.

No more will his spider wheel speed oe'r the highway,
No more shall we see him at meeting and run;
His cycle stands idle, it waits for a rider,
It mourns now for whom it so often has spun.



December 18, 1888.

BULL FIGHTING AND BICYCLES.

Editor Bicycling World: El Paso, Texas, "the backdoor of the United States," has had a bicycle club since November 1st. This is supposed to be the second club in Texas, and styles itself the Border Wheelmen. Floyd Payne, President, R. H. Dimmick, Captain, and Jesse Payne, Secretary.

The weather is splendid in this end of the world for cycling, we can ride all the year round and have to put up our wheels but for a day or two on account of rain, and that only a dozen times a year. The roads are better on the Mexican side of the Rio Bravo than on our side, and into the land of the Aztec and eagle we generally go on our Sunday runs.

Last Sunday, Dec. 9th, the club took a run over to Juarez City and attended the bull fights in a body, astonishing the natives with our wheels, knickerbockers and big feet. After the performance the boys concluded to have a spin in the bull ring. When entering the arena (Captain Dimmick leading) six wild bulls charged in from the pens on the other side, and the gallant captain of B. W., in trying to create rendeness between himself and the bulls, made the best time on record for these parts. L. A. W. 20,704.

POKKOPOLIS NOTES.

"STAR."

One Saturday evening, not long since, after crawling into bed on my return from the rooms of the C. B. C., where I had admired their bronze ornaments and listened till quite a late hour to the striking of their new marble clock, I lay there lamenting the postponement of the morrow's run on account of the drizzling rain that was then falling, and trying to think of something of interest to put in my next letter to the Bicycling World and Bulletin. How much time had elapsed I know not, but the telegraphic clatter of the water dripping into the down spout had long ceased when I was startled by a jingling of bells and trampling of feet almost directly over my head. I raised up, and listening attentively, heard a scratching, scraping sound that gradually grew louder till, accompanied by an arctic blast that made me draw the blankets closer around me, there popped into the room a chubby, smiling, pleasant looking, fur clad, little dwarf, who, without waiting for permission, turned a double somersault and landed in the middle of the table that stood in the centre of the room. He no sooner resumed the perpendicular than he began acting a most ludicrous pantomime. He would bend almost double as he hugged himself, straighten up and hold his shaking sides, throw back his head and seem convulsed with laughter, without, however, uttering the slightest sound. For several moments I had looked on in amazement, wholly at a loss to account for his mysterious mirth, when suddenly he drew from his belt a sprig of evergreen, waved it over his head and disappeared.

In an instant my room had expanded to the size of the drill room of the new armory. In the centre stood a gigantic Christmas tree loaded down with the most motley collection of Christmas presents I had ever seen. On the topmost bough was a handsomely embroidered night shirt, from the pocket of which protruded a large official looking document decorated with a glaring red patent office seal and to which was attached a tag bearing the name of Air-Brake Norton; next was a diminutive trumpet for "Toot" High; a pair of boxing gloves for Tom Littleford; a string of pearls and a bunch of sweet violets for Hosea; a leather medal each for Webster and Heidkamp for their frequent attendance on club runs; a jumping-jack for Amor Hall; some teething rings and a rattle for Dr. H. M. Kempton; a convertible bustle, that could in an emergency be used as a luggage carrier, for the Bearded Lady; a copy of "The Life and Adventures of the celebrated Miamitown Cow" for Mr. Wm. Miller; a mariner's compass for Trumbower; a gross of cyclometers for Dr. Green; a little ax, in a red plush case, for the silvery tongued Marqua; a lady's tandem bicycle for the sadly-maimed Piper; a nondescript safety bicycle for the hard-to-please Charley Allen; a raw hide bow and a quiver of arrows for H. W. Longley; an anti-header for Charley Galway; a copy of Jack the Giant Killer for Oskamp; a park badge No. 13 for Charley Ross; a pretty new nothing with a whistle in the end of it for little Ralph Taylor; a copy of "She" for A. A. Bennett, to be placed in the library of the "Veloce" Club; a bottle of embalming fluid for the "Duke;" a pair of dancing slippers for the Fat Woman; a little painted tin cup, bearing the stenciled motto "For a Good Boy," for Walker Hall; an immense pair of white wings, to be attached to the frame of his Star in the rear of the saddle in such a manner as to be opened by a stern wind and closed by a head wind, for the weary Dr. Wm. D. Kempton.

These, however, were but a moiety of the presents, but before I could examine the rest my attention was drawn to an imposing four-story building that stood to the right of the tree. Its front was of pressed brick with free-stone trimmings. The upper part of the large windows was filled with stained glass of an elaborate design that included the winged wheel of the L. A. W. Through the basement windows could be seen a spacious and well-appointed wheelroom. Through the large bay-window of the second floor could be seen a group of wheelmen gathered about a grand piano, from which were issuing sweet strains in response to the delicate touch of the silent Nelson. Beyond this, through the sliding doors, could be seen a room whose walls were hidden by shelving, on which reposed the numerous and richly bound volumes of the club library. As I looked from them to the chess tables that stood about the room I heard a strangely familiar voice that said: "Papa! papa! are you never going to wake up? The breakfast bell has rung several times, and we are tired of waiting!"

NEW YORK.

"HAWKSHAW."

Assuming as correct an assertion recently made by me in this column, that in many points there was but little difference between racers, whether they were man or horse, and a little study will show that I am not far from right in the claim, it would be but wise to study the successes of the thoroughbred to see if from them something to the advantage of the racing man could not be learned. An investigation of the question from both the standpoint of the biped and of the quadruped has convinced me that in all things appertaining to training as a means of putting the racer in the fittest shape for speed, that the horse has by long odds the best of it. This column is not the place to enter into a comprehensive and complete proving of this, but as a single item in the mass of argument in favor of the claim I make as above, I must note the question of eating and drinking, which is at all times the foundation of succesful training in both horse and man. When a thoroughbred goes into hard training, and especially at the time he is to be "keyed up," and made fit for some special racing event, his food and drink, both in quantity and quality, are made the source of extreme study and care on the part of the trainer. To such an extent is the belief carried among expert trainers of horses, that any change of diet or drink is likely to result disastrously to their charges that in the case of the horse being forced by his engagements to depart from his training quarters he is always accompanied by sufficient food and drink to last him till his race has come off. It is of no unusual thing in consequence of this to see hay brought from California, or water from Chicago or Saratoga. In contrast to this take the usual course adopted in handling the man who intends to race, hence, after he has succeeded in getting himself into condition, what does he do? Why he proceeds to the place at which he is to race, often hundreds of miles away from his training grounds, and arriving there, at best, only a few days or hours before he intends to ride, and thus encounters at one and the same time a complete change of air, water and diet, and the result is often found in the failure of the contestant to approach in his racing, anywhere near the speed and stamina he had acquired in his training. Is not this a case wherein a lesson from the care and attention to the thoroughbred should prove a profitable lesson to the racer? Surely if so much care is needed by a horse, it is but reasonable to suppose that the man must require equally as much if not more.

The remedy of failure from this cause is easier with the man than the horse. Let, therefore, the wheelman try to remove this stumbling block from the path of his success. When training for any races that will take him away from the vicinity in which he trains, adopt for food only those articles of a standard kind whose plainness and universal use will enable him to duplicate them wherever he may go, let his drink, especially when in the form of water, be of the smallest quantity, as it is at all times a danger to his success. Let him learn to substitute as far as possible in the place of water some weak tea or some well-known brand of ale, so that his change of surroundings will bring him no appreciable change in the course of his living. To those who would carry this theory to its furtherest and consequently more perfect action, I would advise that for, say a month prior to their races they adopt as a beverage some standard bottled table water, using it in the place of the local water to drink, then the danger that lurks in a change of water can be almost entirely eliminated, since wherever the racer may go he can secure the bottled article exactly similar to that which he has trained upon. There are yet many more points in the training of a thoroughbred for racing that wheelmen might copy to their advantage and profit, and to such as desire to arrive at the perfection of handling and care of a racing man I would commend a careful research of the methods employed in making the thoroughbred "fit" as a study that would prove of immense advantage to racing men, by greatly improving the knowledge of many of those who now without cause pose as "trainers."

How many of the readers of this column remember the once celebrated Renton case? I venture to say that not one of those who do so will have thought of it once since it drifted from public notice, and yet in its day it was a most celebrated affair in cycling circles, culminating as it did in the arrest of Eugene Aaron, as Secretary, first, and Dr. N. M. Beckwith, President, afterwards, for libel. In fact Mr. Renton threatened to arrest the entire L. A. W. before he got through with the affair. This was the Renton innings. Now for the other side. As I drifted into the Supreme Court the other day I was somewhat surprised to find Dr. Beckwith there, and to learn from him that he was there to appear in his suit against Renton for false imprisonment and consequent damages. It is somewhat an aged but very apt quotation that seems to apply here, and that is that "he laughs best who laughs last," and I am afraid Renton, before many days, will be a convert to this belief.

That irredeemable old cycling murder mill, otherwise called "a track," in Madison Square Garden, was put into active work on Saturday night, and still maintains its reputation as being the most dangerous place possible for a wheelman to attempt to race upon. The event was a two-mile bicycle handicap, at the games of the Manhattan Athletic Club. In the final heat the entire field of four competitors went down in a grand tumble on the upper turn. From the hodge-podge of man, machine, sawdust and profanity thus caused, G. F. Brown, of the K. C. W., who had started from the 75 yard mark, and J. H. Hanson, of the New York Bi. Club, 16 yards, were first up, mounted and away, finishing in order named. Time, 7 min. 30 sec. In payment of these gentlemen's efforts at grand and lofty tumbling, and for their kindly consenting to risk their necks for the edification of the assembled multitude, the Manhattan Athletic Club kindly presented Mr. Brown with a gold watch, and Mr. Hanson with a silver one, having offered them as prizes in the race. Irving M. Halsted and H. L. Kingsland, of Baltimore, who started from scratch in their respective trial heats ran unplaced, and were therefore not in the finals. These gentlemen evidently posessed the good sense to prefer the certainty of an unbroken neck and no watch, to the possibility of a broken one, with no matter what kind of a watch for a premium. Such exhibitions as are billed as "races" in Madison Square Garden should be forbidden by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. To win some paltry prize, men (?) risk their lives and limbs, and if they themselves cannot see the foolishness of so doing, some one else ought to do so for them and forbid the affairs. When the public, time and time again in these "races" in the garden, is treated to exhibitions of falling wheels and riders, it causes in their minds a prejudice to arise against wheeling that no amount of argument can remove. I am sure that to such of them as have often seen these affairs, the dividing line between the car of Juggernaut and the modern bicycle is too slight for them to determine.

NEW ORLEANS.

"NOKOMIS."

Twelve members answered to roll call at the last regular monthly meeting of the Louisiana Cycling Club. As was hinted around, the club's Secy.-Treas., J. W. Jay, handed in his resignation, which was accepted. Jay has giving up riding altogether, having sold his wheel, and now will be an ordinary street car rider. His resignation leaving the office of Secy.-Treas. open, Mr. E. M. Graham name was proposed and was unanimously elected, he having just resigned as Lieutenant of the club. High Private, L. Jeff Frederic, was the candidate for Lieutenant and likewise was unanimously elected. Jeff is a popular fellow, a hard rider, and has his eye on the Captain in the coming races for the Batson medal, so he says. Secy.-Treas. Graham is one of the most popular members of the club, and his promotion to that office only shows in what high esteem he is held by his fellow members.

The Louisiana Division of the L. A. W. are some $80 richer since the last meet. I have just seen the report of the Racing Board, which will be read at the next meeting. It would seem that from this, meets yield a profit instead of a loss.

There is a big talk amongst the members of the Cycling Club about a turkey raffle or shoot to take place sometime near Christmas. From all I can learn there has been a committee appointed to take charge of the arrangements, and that some six turkeys will be at stake. I know from experience that a cycler knows a good turkey when he sees it, so the competition promises to excite much merriment.

The races for the Batson medal promises to be about as hard a set of races as have ever been scheduled. A 12-mile run to Schadwells, 35 miles up the river to Red Church, 30 miles to Hahnville, 25 miles on the asphalt, and I hear Shell Beach is talked of, but there is general complaint as to the latter. Next Sunday, weather permitting, the first race will take place, and as there are ten entries, the race promises to be an exciting one.

The Mardi-Gras lantern parade is booming, in fact it has taken a fresh start, and if the plans are carried out, it will be the most original one ever held in this country. Every rider will be in full costume, representing one of Mother Gooses' flock, surrounded by lanterns, torches, etc., so the effect will not only be pleasing but novel as well. Wheelmen from all over the country will be invited to take part in the procession, and to attend the Mardi-Gras festivities, which will be more attractive this year than ever before.

H. J. Pigott, a member of the L. C. C., handed in his resignation at the last meeting, much to the regret of all. He goes back to his home in England, leaving nothing but the regrets of his fellow wheelmen behind. As a parting memento, he had the boys photo. taken, and presented each one in the group with a copy. To show their appreciation of this kindness, he was in turn presented by them with an enlarged copy of the picture, handsomely framed, to carry home with him. Pigott's dry humor will be missed on many a club run.

BUFFALO.

"ALL BALL."

The event which was looked forward to with unusual interest, the annual election of officers of the Buffalo Bicycle Club, took place in their club house Monday evening, Dec. 10. Never before in our history was such intense interest manifested. And this is accounted for when two of its sterling wheelmen ask for the suffrages of members for President.

Long before the final event groups could be seen in different parts of the house discussing their favorite candidates in voices so low that it was impossible for a person of different views to catch on any scheme which might be brewing. After the writer was button-holed for about the fiftieth time he fled into a secluded corner—where he could make observations—and it was amusing to see the great interest manifest by friend and foe alike. Well, the election was held in the gymnasium and it was crowded, and that means a big crowd. After the regular business was disposed of and the election was in order some one moved that the rule prohibiting smoking be suspended. There was a weak objection raised by non-smokers, but the smokers prevailed, and the intense nervous tension was allayed in fumes of smoke, and the election proceeded.

The nominating speeches were eloquent and would have done credit to any organization. Both candidates had able supporters, and the hosts were marshalled to combat. After the smoke of battle cleared it was discovered that there had been a close conflict. Mr. Charles F. Hotchkiss being elected by a majority of two. No sooner was the result known than there went up a mighty shout, which lasted several minutes. An over-enthusiastic supporter actually climbed a rope to the ceiling, and had to pay for it with a pair of blistered hands.

Mr. C. W. Adams and Mr. R. B. Hoffman were both re-elected, and well deserved this token of esteem. Their annual reports were ably written, and when Treasurer Adams finished reading his report it was received with thunderous applause. We now come to the election of Captain. There were three candidates in the field, and the search for votes was exceedingly lively. Two ballots had to be taken before a choice was arrived at. Mr. W. E. Donaldson was elected by a plurality of twenty-two. This was the signal for great glee and hand shaking. Mr. Donaldson was almost borne away in the midst of enthusiastic friends. It was after the midnight hour when the last ballots for trustees were counted. The following are the list of officers for the ensuing year: President, Chas. F. Hotchkiss; Vice President, W. C. Letchworth; Secretary, R. B. Hoffman; Treasurer, C. W. Adams; Attorney, Albert C. Spann; Captain, W. E. Donaldson.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

O. R. DINKEY.

The "Capital Citys" have a grievance—with the dues at a minimum, they are accumulating a surplus. Several of the hard riders took a run to Chatham one evening lately. The road was worse than bad—it was rotten. Hence, when a Capital City rider encounters a piece of road that is particularly bad, he calls it "Chathamized," and his brethren understand.

At the annual election of officers of this Division the "Capital Citys" captured the Vice Consular and Secretary-Treasurer offices, Mr. Charles Hansel and Mr. Thomas F. Sheridan being elected.

As an experimenter Captain Fogarty is a success. He bought one kind of a wheel to learn on, exchanged it for another to practice with, sold it and bought another to ride on, made another change, and is now riding a "Star," and it is said that he was discovered investigating the qualities of a quadricycle a few days ago. What next, John?

Mr. John E. Ransom, one of the best riders of the club, had the misfortune to encounter a "road hog" in the person of a wealthy farmer a few days ago. The result was that the said farmer told

Mr. Ransom, after running over his wheel and smashing it, that "them things has no right to be on the road, the sidewalks was made for them." He will probably have a chance to explain to the judge why he thinks so, and give cause why he should not be fined for his hoggishness and ignorance. The matter has been referred to the Division, and as the case is absolutely good, it will probably be pushed for all it is worth.

Mr. Waldo S. Reed also had his wheel smashed by a farmer some few weeks ago, but unfortunately, could not find out the name of the person who rode over him, or he would have brought an action against him.

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

The Lincoln members are extracting all the fun possible out of their club house in a social way. Tuesday evening last a very entertaining lecture was given by Dr. Belfield; subject, "The Parasite of the Human Body." Thursday evening always finds a large gathering of club members and their "best" ladies to "trip the light fantastic." The raffle craze has struck them in full force. A gold watch has just been raffled off for the benefit of the amusement fund, and some two hundred dollars realized, Mr. Lucas, connected with one of our daily papers here, holding the lucky number. A New Mail bicycle will be raffled off in the near future, the club having been presented with one for that purpose, and the end is not yet. Their election is near at hand and their tickets are in the field already, although I think a majority of the old officers will be re-elected, and speaking of elections, I was surprised to find so many candidates as have lately developed in the Illinois Club, Mr. Sloan, the President, being almost the only officer who has not one or more rivals for the same office. So, too, in the Chicagos, there are two tickets already in the field, one headed by W. A. Skinkle and one by J. C. Ellis; W. C. Thorne for Captain on the Skinkle ticket, and Charley Seig for Captain on the Ellis ticket; and several other tickets are talked of. Frank Coty is on both tickets for Treasurer, and Frank ought to have the place.

John Bogue has been on a short visit to Denver the past week.

Pierce, one of the old Owl Club racing team, talks of taking to the path again next spring.

Cone, of the I. C. C., is now called the "Berry Wall" of Chicago, owing to a late newspaper article.

Doc Gibson says the only way to get even with those South Side "fellows" is to go over and lick them all.

Bernstein says Street is going to run for Secretary of the Illinois Club, and Bernstein is already electioneering for Street.

Tom Roe is East for a short time on business. I am told that Tom will surely see "Erminie" in Philadelphia before he returns, though.

Burley Ayers has decided to extend his absence from the Illinois Club house three months more, or until the late unpleasantness has blown over.

Garden says I entirely misquoted him in regard to that proposed St. Louis-Chicago team race, and that he has written a letter stating why the race did not occur. I certainly understood him to say as quoted by me, but if I was mistaken, and I guess I am, I offer an apology to all concerned.

The Illinois boys had one more theatre party the last night of the Nadjy Company's stay here, and the boxes were secured the first thing. Francis Wilson received their attention, while, as the Ocean said next day, "they became stone images whenever Pauline Hall appeared, but Pauline managed to sing her part through all right." I don't think any of the clubs will try and lionize any of the profession after the recent fiasco caused by the combined efforts of two of the largest clubs here.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

Probably the most magnificent road in world is the military road in India, running from Calcutta to Pershawer. This wonderful highway is 1600 miles long, splendidly macadamized, and on the low counties lined with live oaks and other semi-tropical trees while on the upper or Southern tier the sides of the road are lined with gorgeous tropical growth which is alive with brilliant plumaged birds and frisky monkeys, to say nothing of an occasional royal Bengal tiger.

The Pope Mfg. Co. has issued its calender for 1889. It is made on the same lines as that of 1888. Each day has a quotation on the subject of cycling, and a blank space to be used for memoranda. It is of convenient form to place on the business man's desk.

The Rev. C. H. McAnney, of North Long Branch, N. J., has lately taken to the bicycle. He utilizes the vehicle by visiting the members of his congregation and the sick. He calls the vehicle a "consecrated bicycle," and on Sundays he rides it to visit distant church members.

The pleasant little rivalry between the Chicago Cycle Club and the Illinois Club of Chicago over Pauline Hall must have cost the rival factions in the neighborhood of a cool $1000. Miss Hall's visit to Chicago will long be remembered by Chicago riders, and it will also remain as a pleasant memory in the mind of the fair Pauline.

Cyclists have the advantage over other men in that they possess stockings of dimensions sufficiently ample to hold quite a lot, while the non-rider has to borrow one from the opposite sex, and in some cases when a wife or sister is not handy negotiations are apt to be embarrassing to one of modest nature—like ourselves for instance.

The general press is swinging too much to the other extreme when it announces that "the days of the ordinary are numbered." In looking over our exchange clippings no less than ten papers thus solemnly proclaim the doom of the big wheel. This is all fudge; the ordinary will be in big demand, though in the future it must content itself to share the honors for first choice with the rear-driving safety.

WITH the death of the Alphabetical Road Racing Association, road racing in this country will receive a staggering blow. The hospitality of the Maryland is so well known that it hurts us to say "may." But alas! we will have to forego the pleasure of paying our respects to the Maryland Club in person on New Year's Day.—ED.

YE CENTURY SMOKER—MISS PAULINE HALL IN THE QUAKER CITY.

THE club house of the Century Wheelmen on North Broad street, above Montgomery avenue, wore a gay and festive air last Tuesday evening, thronged as it was with the Centurions and their friends and invited guests, the occasion being the first "smoker" of the winter season. While no athletic sports were provided, yet the entire entertainment was thoroughly enjoyable and enjoyed, although it must be confessed that the atmosphere was a trifle thick for weak lungs.

From first to last the conversation and mirth never flagged, nor did the excellent cigars run out. I decided that a poorer brand would induce less frequent requisition on the cigar box by the crowd generally. The formal part of the entertainment, consisting of music and song, was opened by a piano solo, after which the following programme was rendered: Glee, "Baa, Baa, Black Sheep." Glee Club: bass solo, Mr. Harry W. Schell; reading, Dr. Morris; glee, "Lorelei." Club: recitation, Mr. Brown; solo, "The Vikings," Mr. H. W. Schell, a magnificent thing, by the way; reading, Mr. Brown; glee, by the Glee Club; then came the gem of the evening, a solo, "London Bridge," by Mr. Schell. This gentleman's fine renditions were really the success of the evening, and it is no discredit to the Glee Club to say this, for they achieved all the success that could possibly attend a first appearance. Mr. Schell also favored the company with a couple of other songs, and several of the club members also gave musical numbers and recitations. It was a late hour when the party broke up amidst the unanimously expressed wishes for an early repetition of the Centurion's smoker. It would scarcely be fair to close the account without giving the names of the members of the Glee Club, to whom so much of the success is due. They are: Basses, Messrs. Walker (leader), Geo. Schell, C. C. Schell, Havens and Bahl: tenors, F. B. Schell, Carter, Talteval, Oehlers and Speier.

My thanks are due Mr. McGlathery for many courtesies received from him, as well as from others of the club.

During the progress of the affair some wag played a joke on the police officers by notifying them that a mill was in progress between Dominick McCaffrey and another pugilist, and a squad had collected for the purpose of making a raid on the house before the joke was discovered.

MISS PAULINE HALL

reached this city last week, with the Casino Company, which is playing "Erminie" at the Chestnut Street Theatre, and your correspondent called on her by appointment, last Thursday afternoon, spending a very pleasant half hour. She was full of reminiscences of her Chicago and Boston wheeling exploits, and expressed herself as most deeply sensible of the many attentions paid her by the cyclers of the two cities. The weather being so disagreeable, she had not brought her bicycle with her, but expected to have it sent to her in case the weather moderated, when she proposed enjoying some riding through the Park and Lancaster Pike, of which she had heard. On Thursday night a number of the Pennsylvania Bicycle Club propose attending "Erminie" in a body, and a block of upwards of forty seats have been engaged for the occasion, which is to be a full dress affair, and which is also to be signalized by the presentation of some floral and other emblems to the fair prima donna. Full particulars of the theatre party in my next.

TO TERTIUS—C. C. L. O. A.

"WELL, I'll be dammed," said the stream, when it heard there was to be a mill built on its bank. Well! Tertius, is it possible you are still —?

'Twas but last night, whilst looking over my log-book, I glanced along the articles wherein which we recounted our adventures, and whilst thus engaged I began to wonder where you were, and if I would ever again hear of you.

This morning, when I unfolded and opened the WORLD, behold! you were before me.

Yet, why should I evince surprise? The old saying is, "Speak of the devil and you will see him."

And so you have been down in Florida? Well, I'm glad to learn it, for it has puzzled me immensely to satisfactorily determine what had introduced the yellow fever germs into the land of swamps and winter resorts.

Where did you get that Latin word, did you find it in your roaming?

Yes, Tertius, I remember all the pleasant times and rides we had.

Do you remember that trifle I loaned you? Well, don't hurry yourself.

Do you remember that pretty girl we saw in the butcher shop, and you went in and got a "cold shoulder" from her, and how "muttonish" you looked when you came out? SECRETARY.

THE ROVERS, OF CHARLESTOWN, MASS.

LAST Friday night Young's Hotel was the scene of one of the most enjoyable dinners ever given by a cycle club, the occasion being that of the third annual dinner of the Charlestown (Mass.) Rovers. Among the guests present were ex-Chief Consul Hayes, Abbot Bassett, Dr. Kendall, J. B. Seward, C. S. Howard and J. C. Kerrison. Coffee and cigars having been reached, President A. W. Robinson opened the post prandial exercises by giving a glowing history of the past and a cheerful forecast of the future. Some of toasts which were given in verse are worth reproducing. The first one, "The Wheel:"

Oh, wheel, paradoxical ever,
Though tired always thou'rt weary never,
The kicks we give thee are but kicks of love,
For every kick is an onward shove!

This was responded to by H. W. Hayes in a manner that evoked the enthusiasm of the Rovers.

The next toast, "The League," was also couched in appropriate verse, as follows:

The League that distance measures not,
In miles on sea or land;
But that which winds a chain about
The cyclers—heart and hand.

Chief Consul Emery responded to this toast, and made a stirring speech on behalf of the national body.

To the toast, "Our Female Annex," Abbot Bassett responded in a way that provoked applause and merriment. After roundly rating the incorrigible bachelors for not getting better halves, and in answer to the query as to "where shall we get them?" Mr. Bassett proceeded in mirth-provoking verse to instruct the bashful Rovers "how, when and where." We now expect to hear of a great addition to the ranks of the benedicts in the Rover Club.

J. B. Seward, Dr. Kendall, C. S. Howard and others spoke, recited and sang, as occasion or their peculiar talents warranted.

THE CRIMSON CHALLENGES THE BLUE.

THE Harvard Bicycle Club has challenged the Yale Bicycle Club to a road race next spring. The course, distance and number of men is left to Yale, and the challenge is sent now in order that Yale may be able to find no excuse for not accepting it: but with Greenleaf, Davis, Bailey, Brown, Barron and Rogers against them Yale will hardly dare to take up the gauntlet.

FAST RIDING IN AUSTRALIA.

IN a three-mile race at Melbourne, Australia, T. W. Bust rode the distance from scratch in 8m. 2 4-5s., beating a field of seventeen riders. This is, we believe, world's record for the distance in competition.

A few days later J. W. H. Bust covered a mile against time in 2:30 2-5. This beats the English record, but does not touch Rowe's record of 2:29 4-5.

On the same day E. Elliot rode one-half mile against time in 1:13, which is within one fifth of a second of the world's record held by Rowe.

MILE ROAD RECORD.

A NEW machine, the Rudge Triplet, with S. G. Whittaker, No. 1, E. Oxborrow, steering, Jack Lee, No. 3, rode a mile on the road near Coventry, in 2.31 1-5. The Cyclist thus speaks of the event: "There was little wind, but the roads were very heavy and sticky from the recent rains. The route is about half down hill, and on the word to go the trio went off at a tremendous pace, and simply flew over the ground. Unfortunately, an error was apparent in the reading of one of the watches, so after half an hour's rest Mr. Sturmey, with Mr. Williams and the "Triplet," repaired once more to the starting-point, Mr. Wootton having the assistance to check the finishing time of Messrs. S. Golder and Walter Phillips, and the word being given, away flew the crew, passing over the bridge in the wonderful time of 2m. 31 1-5s., this beating by far the fastest time ever recorded for a mile on the road by any machine."

AUGUSTA, GA., TOURNAMENT.

UNDER the auspices of the Augusta National Exposition (with your correspondent in charge) the first two-days' amateur and professional meeting ever given in the South came to a glorious termination, on the exposition grounds at Augusta, on Wednesday, Dec. 12th. The dates selected were the 10th and 11th, but heavy rain on Monday caused a day's postponement, and the wind and sun made the track (at least a portion of it) dry and fit for racing on Tuesday. Riders from several cities in Georgia gathered to take part in the contests, and only ten days were allowed the manager for notifying the cycling portion of Georgia and Carolina. The entries and attendance were most gratifying. Augusta cyclists, with commendable promptness, resurrected their bicycles from the garrets and cellars, where since the flood they have found quarters, and within five days after the tournament blast was heard on the Georgian hills Augusta once more shone forth in cycling, and her boys put in good work on the exposition track, headed by that most genial and energetic of youths, Charles A. Bland, of the Georgia Railroad. The local papers had daily reports of the men in training and the entries as they arrived, and on the day of battle few people (who read) in Augusta did not know of the two-days' bicycle tournament. The Exposition Directors must have had a very poor opinion of the charms of a bicycle meeting, for they acted in a very small spirit in the matter of finances, which curtailed both amateur and professional prizes, and it is safe to say that Georgians will be a long time before they will see a two-days' meeting of eight events each day given for the paltry sum the Directors of the Augusta Exposition allowed for the recent meet. But the meet was a success; everybody enjoyed themselves, and the Directors were highly pleased, pleased so much that the Secretary complimented "yours truly" in a letter of thanks—and well they might be for the outlay—but cycling has received a boom here and much good will result.

The Pope Mfg. Co. kindly donated one of the prizes in the shape of a cup, and the Coventry Machinists' Company a gold medal. I have to especially thank Mr. L. E. Hickok, who had charge of the bicycle exposition (who had a walk-over for the blue ribbon award), for his able assistance in carrying out the tournament arrangements, and also the cyclists of Georgia who so nobly responded to the short notice. Charleston, Atlanta, Macon, Savannah, Columbus, and other cities were represented. I have the word of the cycle agents here, who declare that the tournament and exhibit at the Exposition have done more good and have made more sales and enquiries than anything this part of the South has seen, and the manufacturers will soon recognize that industrial exhibitions and tournaments are the true "boomers" of the trade.

Below I give results:

FIRST DAY—DEC. 11.

Half-mile amateur open—Homer Reed, Atlanta, first; Tom Powers, Atlanta, second. Time, 1.26.

One-mile, professional, Southern championship—W. J. Morgan, Boston, first; J. H. Polhill, second. Time, 3.04.

Quarter-mile amateur (heat race 2 in 3)—Homer Reed, first; C. A. Bland, Augusta, second; F. A. Colson, Charleston, third. Reed won first and third heats, thus winning the race. Time, 42s., 41 1-2s., 44s.

Half-mile professional handicap—W. M. Boyst, Greenville, 50 yards, first; W. J. Morgan, scratch, second; J. H. Polhill, scratch, third; W. H. Maxwell, Charlotte, N. C., 60 yards. The scratchmen caught Boyst within 100 yards from the finish but could not head him. Boyst winning by a yard in the fast time (for the track) of 1.09; Morgan, second; Polhill, third.

One-mile amateur handicap—T. A. Powers, Atlanta, 120 yards, first; W. J. Browne, Augusta, second; Rees Mulligan, Augusta, third. Time, 3.48.

Half-mile bicyclists vs. trotting horse—The trotter, a 2-40 skipper, defeated Morgan and Polhill in 1.20 and 1.22.

SECOND DAY—DEC. 12.

One-mile Southern championship, and cup presented by Columbia Company—T. A. Powers, first, Homer Reed, second; W. J. Browne, third. Time, 3.52.

Half-mile Southern championship, professional—J. H. Polhill, first, by a yard; W. J. Morgan, second. In this race Morgan broke the little wheel fork, finishing the race in danger. Time, 1.24.

Two-mile amateur handicap—T. A. Powers, first; Homer Reed, second; W. J. Browne, third. Time, 8.04.

One-mile championship of Augusta—J. F. Henderson, first; R. Mulligan, second. Time, 3.48.

Quarter-mile dash—T. A. Powers, first; J. M. Carter, second. Time, 42s.

Half-mile bicyclist vs. trotter—W. J. Morgan won the first heat in 1.21; the horse the second in 1.21 1-2; the third was not run.

The short races were a feature of this tournament, and gave much satisfaction. Close finishes resulted in many races. The attendance was about 3000 each day. "SENATOR."

NOVEL, USEFUL AND HANDSOME.

THE attention of our readers is especially called to the advertisement of the Economy Wall Desk, which appears in another column. It is a desk so constructed as to occupy a minimum of room and at the same time afford those conveniences which are always needed where writing is to be done, whether in an office or in a private room in a dwelling. Entirely unlike other desks, it is fastened to the wall instead of standing upon a foundation. When closed it occupies no more space than a wall cabinet, and is really a handsome decoration to a room or office. When open, on the other hand, there is a generous surface on which to spread writing materials, and also abundant pigeon-hole room for the storage of stationery, manuscripts, books, etc. We know of no article of the kind which has received higher praise from persons of distinction than has this desk. A number of these testimonials appear in the advertisement. The desk, while good for any day of the year, makes a most attractive holiday present.

CHATTANOOGA (TENN.).

THE Chattanooga Cycle Club is on a boom. During the past season we have more than trebled our numbers. We intend next year to make our club the banner club of the South.

During the past summer several miles of our streets have been paved with asphalt. The roads hereabout are fair: Montgomery avenue, from the Stanton House to Mission Ridge, as as fine a stretch of road as one can find anywhere. Hills are numerous and our coasts are fine. Lookout Mountain is the largest hill in these parts, in fact it is such a big one that none of our riders have ever been able to reach the top on their wheels.

A few Sundays ago a party of eleven took a run to Crawfish Springs, Ga. We were under command of our Captain, Dock Thacher, and were cicerone by Mr. Sedgwick. On our trip down Gus Krouse's machine, which had been injured a few days before in a race, broke down. Krouse patched it up, and pluckily rode it the rest of the run. Arrived at "Crawfish" we ate a hearty dinner, a part of which we had brought along and the rest we obtained from a store and a farmhouse near by. The start for home was made at 2.30. When we had covered about half of the distance, the Mascot, who complained of a pain in his side, dropped out and waited for the next train. The fire-eater and the man-tamer being in a hurry to see their girls, left the others and struck a 2.40 gait for Chattanooga. As we came by their sweethearts' house, we saw their wheels leaning against the front fence. BUDGER.

"PEDAL AND PATH," one of the most entertaining stories of a bicycle trip over and back across the Continent ever written; see advt. Send in 25 cents for a copy. It's value received.

A NOVEL ICE ATTACHMENT FOR CYCLES.

A REFERENCE to our advertising columns will reveal a cut and announcement showing how cycling on ice, or hard frozen snow may be indulged in by all who possess a wheel of any type whatever. The ordinary, the rear driver or the Star can be easily fitted. This device is furnished by the Ohio Cycle Supply Co., of New Knoxville, Ohio., which concern will furnish all the necessary information in regard to this "new idea," which "idea" we have no doubt will find a ready sale in sections where ice riding can be indulged in now that we are assured of "great speed and perfect safety."

A PILGRIMAGE FROM FRANKFURT TO BAYREUTH.

(By F. A. Spencer.)

My friend E. and self could think of no pleasanter rest from our work than to spend one or two weeks in wheeling to Bayreuth, the Mecca of Wagner worshipers. Frankfurt-on-the-Main was our starting point, and our mounts were a 54-inch "Sansparell" and a 50-inch "British Challenge." We provided ourselves with excellent maps of our route. The engineering staff of the German army have laid off a large section of Central Europe into theoretical squares; these in turn are accurately surveyed, and every detail of the character of the land is given, including the gradient of all hills or mountains.

The morning of August 1st saw us off in a fine, drizzling rain. Our seats for the performance of Parsifal on the 5th were engaged, so that weather was a secondary consideration. We traversed the broad plain through which the river Main flows, and in half an hour we had left the rain clouds behind and ridden into bright sunshine. Frankfurt lies in Prussian territory, and we were soon out of that country and on Bavarian soil. At noon we reached Aschaffenburg, which city contains a fine old "burg," or castle, with many towers; here also is a model of ancient Pompeii among other sights of minor interest. From Aschaffenburg we struck into a valley which presented charming scenery, but a decidedly rough road. Having fortified the inner man with a substantial dinner, we proceeded to make a short cut across the Spessart mountains. The rise was steady, without a level intermission, but of a grade to permit our reaching the top, after a climb of a little over an hour. A violent thunder shower overtook us here, and we took refuge under some fine old beech trees. Sunshine followed, and mounting again we enjoyed an uninterrupted coast for about an hour and a half down the other side, amid beautiful scenery. We reached the banks of the Main once more. Not being quite sure as to the identity of the stream we inquired repeatedly the name of the river of the peasants. To our queries they invariably answered that they "did not know." This evidence of stupidity and ignorance was fully up to the average standard of intelligence shown by the Bavarian peasant and of which we had repeated evidence during our trip. We reached Gemunden at dusk, and devoured a fine, warm supper, and then to bed to sleep the sleep of the healthy cycler. The next morning we were off betimes; our route lay along a "sand-papered" road with the river on one side and the terraced grape orchards on the other. These orchards are most carefully built and tilled, perched apparently on almost perpendicular walls. The brand of wine is not much known outside of Germany. After a three hours' ride we approached Wurzburg, the approach to this place being by a fine, long coast. On the way down E's spring broke, so our first move was to find a dealer where the broken part could be mended. The town presented a very picturesque appearance, as we approached, with its many churches and towers. It contains one of the more celebrated of the German universities. Students with vari-colored caps and slashed faces, such as "Senator" Morgan described, were therefore numerous.

In the meantime rain had come again. One of the young apprentices in the dealer's shop offered to pilot us out of town and put us on the nearest road to Schweinfurth, our next objective point. He started us up a regular "teaser" of a hill, but when we looked back at the top to thank him he had disappeared. After ploughing a little further along through the mud we learned that we were on the wrong road. On hearing this cheerful news we made some lurid comments on our guide (?), the weather and the road, and wended our way back to the right road, which we had seen winding up on the other side of the valley. This presented a hill longer and steeper than the first, so we walked. We finally reached a rolling plateau under the most perfect cultivation, but devoid of any particular attraction except the mud, which piled itself on our wheels and ourselves. We reached Schweinfurth under a clear sky at dusk. The town is chiefly occupied in manufacturing colors. Of these, blueing forms an important part and is exported to America in large quantities.

Under way again at 8 o'clock next morning we made Bamberg about noon, still following the river Main. Here we called a halt for dinner, that is E did, as an indulgence by your correspondent in a combination including cucumbers and cow's milk on the previous evening, had materially lessened my interest in things edible. After recuperating somewhat we pushed on, the weather, now being bright and cool, making the exercise of riding delightful. We again struck into the mountains to make a short cut. We pushed up hill for about three quarters of an hour, and were rewarded by a fine view of the valley we had just left, the charming landscape including two ruined castles on prominent headlands overlooking the valley. The roads were beautiful excepting where they passed through a village or hamlet.

In Bavarian villages the roads are simply vile, rough, cut up and dirty; the villager dumps all the family refuse into the street, and there it is left to rot and interfere with traffic. The peasant's beast of burden is usually a cow, and sometimes an ox and an occasional dog or woman, but never a horse.

The houses are of the most primitive, cheerless order. The average German village has little or nothing picturesque about it, in fact they repel rather than attract.

IT is with sorrow and sincere regret that we chronicle the death of Dr. Harrison T. Appleby. At a special meeting of the Buffalo Bicycle Club, of which he was an honorary member, the following resolutions were adopted: Whereas an all wise Providence has taken from our midst our beloved associate and fellow wheelman, Dr. Harrison F. Appleby, to whom we are greatly indebted as the founder and leader of the club in its earlier days, therefore be it Resolved, That this club, in meeting assembled on the 14th of December, 1888, sincerely expresses its sorrow at the loss of a valued member, and tenders its sympathy to the bereaved family; also Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the family of the deceased, and be engrossed upon the minutes of the organization.

Dr. Appleby's history as a wheelman is full of interest. He was the founder of the Buffalo Bicycle Club and its first active President. He served the club in various capacities during its early career, and his wise counsel and untiring work in its behalf went far toward placing it on a permanent and successful basis. Dr. Appleby was one of the pioneer wheelmen of America. He received his first bicycle in the fall of 1878, and was the first person to ride outside the city limits. Mr C. F. Chavel received his bicycle July 6th, 1876, and the doctor ordered his wheel some months earlier, but his size required a special wheel made to order, and this prevented him from being the first to appear on a wheel in Western New York, but he rode on one of the wheels on exhibition at the centennial some months earlier in the same year, which gives to him the distinction of being the first to ride the bicycle.

When the velocipede first made its appearance here the doctor made a drawing of it, went to a carriage maker, and had one made which was the pride of the town. He was always a very methodical rider, and his yearly mileage was the largest in the club. He took delight in it, he was as happy when riding alone and communing with nature as when in the company of others. He was most companionable and full of wit. His loss is felt keenly, and where shall we find another such as he?

The "Ramblers" took appropriate action on the death of Dr. Appleby and the loss which the Buffalo Club sustains.

THE VOLANT SAFETY.

(Springfield Bicycle Manufacturing Company.)

THE Springfield Bicycle Mfg. Co., realizing that the demand for a machine of the safety type is still in its infancy, although growing, determined to produce a bicycle of that type, and after months of experimenting, have produced a machine which it was our pleasure to inspect at their show rooms on Columbus avenue last Monday. We regret that the wood cutter has not completed the cut of this machine in time for this week's issue, but we were assured by Mr. Yost that we would have it in time for our next, together with a fuller description of the Volant.

The first thing that struck our notice in examining the machine was that it was much shorter or more compact between the centres, that is, the driving wheel and the steering wheel were brought much closer together than in the ordinary crank rear driver. This is made possible because of the principle of driving, as applied to the Springfield Roadster machines. By thus bringing the wheels together, it is claimed by those who have tried the machine, that it makes the steering much less sensitive than is possible when the wheels are farther apart, which is necessary in order to clear the foot and the crank on the rotary driving machines. Among other improvements made on the machine for the 1889 pattern is a new and much simplified clutch in which one spring is made to do the work of five, as was the case in the clutch heretofore manufactured by this concern. The bearings which carry the driving gear are double ball, thus giving a large bearing surface, and consequently increased stiffness and easy running. Balls are also fitted to the driving and steering wheel. The saddle is something new, and has many points of great excellence, one of which is that by a simple device the saddle can be elevated or lowered, front or back, to fit the peculiarities of different riders. In fact this device is the only one we have ever seen that appeared to us practical and almost instantaneous in adjustment. By an ingenious arrangement of the rear part of the saddle to the coiled springs, a certain rocking motion is imparted to the saddle, so that when a man presses down, the saddle instead of being stiff follows to a limited extent the motion of the thigh when it is raised or lowered in either the up or the down stroke. It has also a very simple but efficient adjustment for a tension. The pedals instead of being of the form heretofore common with the Springfield Roadster, will be of the ordinary bicycle pattern, with bearings of special design.

It is not the intention of this article to go into a detailed description of the machine, this will be done in our next week's issue, providing the cut is finished. In general appearance the wheel is graceful, and impresses one as having great strength and power. A sample wheel has been given a most thorough and trying test with the most satisfactory results. In finish, the standard black enamel and nickel plate are used. The saddle and the steering posts are, of course, adjustable, as well as the brake rod. The handle-bars are brought well back, and where the ends and cylindrical handles are attached they are bent at an angle which will make the holding of same in a comfortable and natural position. In regard to price, the company have not yet decided as to what this will be, but it will probably be in proportion to the prices on their other machines.

We also had the pleasure, while in the office of this company, of being shown their

which they call their No. 5. It is in every respect like their machine of last year, with the exception that is has a tangent spoke and hollow rim and improved clutch and the bicycle pedals. It is a fitting and excellent addition to their line of wheels, and will no doubt at once jump into popularity with the riders who desire and believe in the tangent spoke and the hollow rim.

As soon as we can procure a cut of this machine, we shall give it also a more extended notice. In the meantime, this need be taken only as an announcement of what may be expected in the case of both machines.

LEAGUE HEADQUARTERS:
12 Pearl Street, - - - - Room 27.
ABBOT BASSETT, Secretary.

RENEWALS.

The current League year has been extended to April 30, 1889, and all memberships will be continued beyond January 1 until that date. Under the Constitution each Division must file on or before April 1, in the office of the Secretary, a certificate stating the amount fixed as its annual dues. Until that time the Secretary cannot be certain regarding the dues and therefore he must refuse to receive any renewals before that date.

WE have no very devoted love for ancestral customs, and antiquity does not heighten our veneration for institutions that are not intrinsically good. Ceremonious observances are of but small account in themselves if they are destitute of ennobling and refining influences. But the passing hours of Christmas are more deeply laden with the inspirations of moral advancement and physical enjoyment than any day in the calendar. The whole world unites in joyful commemoration of the birth of the world's Great Benefactor, and gives the fullest scope to the indulgence of those kindly sympathies which were so beautifully commended in His teachings and in His life. To all our reader, young or old, wheelmen or non-wheelmen, of all sects and creeds, and of no sect or creed at all, we proffer our hearty good wishes for their enjoyment of a MERRY CHRISTMAS.

THE wheel has triumphed in the courts again and again, but never until now have we had a decision from a Supreme Court. Rhode Island has given us what we have long desired, and the legal status of the cycle is now established beyond question.

CHIEF CONSULS are requested to fill vacancies in the office of delegate to the National Assembly at once. The call for the annual meeting must soon be issued, and proxy blanks will be sent out as soon as possible. Appointments must be made as follows: California, 2; Maryland, 2; Massachusetts, 2; Missouri, 1; New Jersey, 3; New York, 1.

WE remarked a few weeks since that there was money ahead for the man who should make a practical hitch for two safety machines. We have since learned that the hitch is an accomplished fact, and an application for a patent for the same has already been filed.

WE received a letter from a League member last week, in which he propounded the old query: "What is the League doing, anyway?" We were able to answer him for the particular Division under whose jurisdiction he resides is just now hard at work upon a road book, it has successfully fought several cases in court, and in many ways it has shown itself useful to wheelmen. When we had written the answer to his question it was our turn, and we inquired: "What are you doing for the cause, anyway?" Have you furnished any routes for the road book? Have you aided your Chief Consul by service of any kind?" We await his answer. The men who do nothing are the first to inquire what is being done, and there is more vinegar in the tone of the inquiry than its subject matter.

A BICYCLE IS A VEHICLE.

So Says the Supreme Court of Rhode Island —One More Important Decision.

State vs. Patrick H. Collins. This complaint was brought under chapter 66 of the Public Statutes. It is charged that the respondent while travelling with a vehicle met another person travelling with a vehicle on a highway, and did not seasonably drive his vehicle to the right of the centre of the travelled part of the road so as to enable the other person to pass with his vehicle without interference or interruption. Upon the trial the defendant was found guilty and fined. The evidence showed that the defendant was travelling with an express wagon, and that the person whom he met was travelling with a bicycle, and the defendant asked the Court of Common Pleas to charge that a bicycle is not a carriage or vehicle, within the purpose of the statute, and that he was not obliged on meeting a bicycle to drive his wagon to the right of the centre of the travelled part of the way, and on his request being refused, excepted. His exceptions were: First—That the language of the section under which he was complained of is less broad than that used in other sections which apply to all persons riding or driving, thus showing the intent to exclude some class of travellers from its operation, viz., those travelling on horseback. Second—The requirement of the section that the person in charge of the meeting vehicle shall drive not only to the right, but to "the right of the centre of the travelled part of the road," indicates that the Legislature contemplated that the vehicle met should be of a class to require for its safe passage one-half of the travelled part of the road, and not merely, as in the case of a bicycle, a few inches—bicycles not having been invented when the statute was originally enacted. It is stated that a bicycle has been held in England to be a carriage within the meaning of a statute forbidding furious driving on the highway, and not to be a carriage within the meaning of an act which gave a right to levy toll for every carriage of whatever description and for whatever purpose which shall be moved by any other power than that of beasts of draught.

The State contended that a bicycle is a kind of velocipede, which both Worcester and Webster define as a carriage, or vehicle on wheels, and cites a decision of the Treasury Department of the United States, made when John Sherman was at its head, on appeal from an assessment of duty made by the Collector of Customs of Boston, on an imported bicycle. The Collector had assessed 45 per cent. on it as a manufacture in part of steel, and the importer claimed it to be dutiable at the rate of only 35 per cent as a carriage, which position was sustained by the Department.

The opinion as rendered by the Supreme Court is as follows: The question raised by the exceptions is whether a bicycle is a carriage or vehicle within the meaning of Public Statutes R. I., c. 66, p. 1, which enacts that "Every person travelling with any carriage or other vehicle, who shall meet any other person so travelling on any highway or bridge shall seasonably drive his carriage or vehicle to the right of the centre of the travelled part of the road, so as to enable such person to pass with his carriage or vehicle without interference or interruption." The Court is of the opinion that it is a carriage or vehicle which carries a person mounted upon it and which is propelled and driven by him. The word vehicle is certainly broad enough to include any machine which is used or driven on the travelled part of the highway for the purpose of conveyance upon the highway. The purpose of the section is to prevent accident or collision, and such accident or collision may happen from a bicycle and other carriage meeting, unless the rule laid down in the section is observed. In Taylor vs. Goodwin, L. R. 4 Q. B. 228, it was decided that a bicycle is a carriage within the act which forbids the driving of any sort of carriage "furiously, so as to endanger the life or limb of any passenger." The exceptions therefore are overruled and the case remitted to the Court of Common Pleas for sentence.

THE · SPRINGFIELD · ROADSTER · VOLANT · SAFETY.

LIGHT, COMPACT, STRONG AND DURABLE.

We wish to call the attention of the public generally to our new improved VOLANT SAFETY, which we have been induced to prepare to place on the market for 1889 to fill a long-felt want for those who desire to ride and do not wish to stride a high wheel, and for those who wish to purchase a wheel which can be adjusted to fit the whole family from a rider of 44 to 58 inches, and still for those who desire a machine that can be adjusted to them as they grow.

The VOLANT combines features of merit which can readily be appreciated by all. Our walking lever motion enables us to bring the wheels much closer together, thus distributing the weight to better advantage, also making it much less sensitive to steer. It has Ball Bearings all around, runs light, and is strong and compact. We shall have them ready for delivery by Feb. 15th to March 1st. Retail price $115.

EDITORS:

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 28 DECEMBER, 1888.

FROM almost every quarter comes news of great club activity. This is especially true of all places, except of the extreme East and of Boston in particular. This city, once proud of its cycling clubs and their activity and prosperity, now finds that the city proper possesses not an active cycling club. 'Tis true, 'tis pity, and pity 'tis, 'tis true.

OUR appeal to wheelmen to agitate the matter of road improvement is bearing good fruit. While it is the duty of the cycling press to iterate and reiterate the necessity, convenience and economy of good roads, it is extremely desirable that the general press should be induced to array itself vigorously on the same side. Our advice is to write to your local papers and stimulate a popular demand for improved highways.

AN interesting and romantic tale of the late H. B. Smith, of Smithville, N. J., the manufacturer of the Star bicycle, is going the rounds of the press. Our readers will remember that he left his enormous fortune for the establishment and maintenance of a school for young mechanics. This will is to be contested, it is said, by a lady from Vermont who claims to be his wife, although not the one held out to the people of Smithville as the wife of the late H. B. Smith. Even in cycle circles we have our romances, though hitherto they have been confined to the tale of a handsome young man on a bicycle, a bad fall, pretty girl, nursing handsome young man, mutual love and grand wind up with tandem accompaniment.

WE await anxiously the outcome of the Stanley show, for we are informed that great strides will be made by the makers in safeties, both single and double. We are not disposed to quarrel with those who are confident of the future popularity of the ordinary, but we feel an equal confidence in the success of the rear driving safety and in its perfection we feel a deep interest, because it is, we are assured, to be the wheel of the people. The feeling of interest in the tandem we find quite general, and look forward next season to seeing some most excellent productions. We have heard of but one maker who will not put a two-wheeled tandem on the market.

THE INCONSISTENT SIDEWALK RIDER.

UNDOUBTEDLY all the readers of this paper are acquainted with, or at least have heard of, that peculiar conglommeration of human inconsistencies of the genus SIDE, who rides a bicycle. One time you will hear him engaged in a disquisition upon the rights of cyclers, and again you will see him exercising the qualities of his unfathomable incongruity. His instruments of torture are a bell and whistle, and above all his brazen countenance. The principal mode of self-gratification of this non compos mentis is to ride on the sidewalk as if pursued by the furies, at the same time ringing his bell or tooting his whistle, not only being the cause of discomfort to, but endangering the lives of the legitimate users of the walk. Another of the favorite pastimes of this interesting individual is sidewalk riding at night without a lamp.

Again you see this mixture of discrepancies exerting himself to push his wheel through a crowd, when, by going only a few steps further, he could with half the trouble go round.

This kind of rider, when he enters a town, not only injures himself but also his fellows in the sight of the public, not taking into consideration the incalculable wrong done the cyclers (if there be any) of that town.

Oh! human nature, how inconsistent thou art. LEAGUE.

[Yes, we all know him, and we hate and despise him. Arrest him, fine him, imprison him, and we who do believe in consistency will rejoice. ED.]

THE SOUTH END WHEELMEN RECEIVE THEIR FRIENDS.

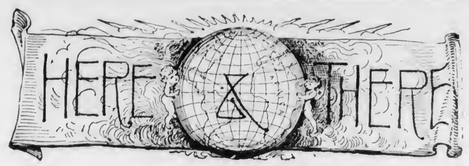
Two years ago the southern part of the city of Philadelphia witnessed the formation of a new club, which was christened by its half dozen originators, "South End Wheelmen," and last Tuesday evening the two-year old infant celebrated its second anniversary and also its housewarming in the new quarters, No. 1720 South Broad street, where its forty-three active and twenty two associate members have found a home. About half past eight o'clock the club mounted their wheels and rode up Broad street to Dickinson, where they were met by the Mutual Band, under leadership of Prof. Ferrazzi, and headed by the musicians the procession moved down to the new club house amid a glare of red fire, Roman candles and rockets. The club house had been handsomely decorated for the occasion both without and within, and presented one blaze of light as the wheelmen rode up to the entrance, saluted by the cheers of the non-riding members and visitors. Among the latter were prominent representatives from nearly all the city clubs.

A CONCERT

was given by the band in the large meeting room on the second floor, and after the house had been inspected from the gymnasium on the third floor to the wheel room on the first, the guests and members were invited out to supper. For the responsibility of the finest supper I ever saw at the opening of a cycling club house thanks are due the following committee: Messrs. Jackson, Caryl, Young, Bradley and Edwards.

THE PRESENTATION OF THE MILEAGE MEDALS.

for greatest milcage during the year, was then made to the following members: Messrs. Edwards, 6474 miles; Draper, 3400; Dimon, 2074; Keim, 1674; Bradley, 1810; Bechtold, 1671; Caryl, 1040. E. J. Kolb was also awarded a handsome medal for his win of the club championship ten-mile road race in October, and Captain Bradley was presented with another beauty by his friend, George Caryl, club Secretary, as a memento of his one-mile championship, won by him at the State Fair.



Not content with the undoubted success they scored on Tuesday night, the club repeated it by tendering a on Wednesday evening, to which they invited their lady friends. Music and dancing were indulged in and refreshments were served to the fair guests, who pronounced wheeling in general, and club receptions in particular, a great success. Here's a health to the South End Wheelmen! "ARIEL."

Philadelphia, Dec. 23, '88.

THE Columbia Bicycle Club, of North Attleboro, Mass., have elected the following officers for the year 1889: President, F. J. Mills; Vice President, W. F. Swift; Secretary, T. E. Bell; Treasurer, C. F. Kurtz; Executive Committee, F. J. Mills, T. E. Bell, C. F. Kurtz, S. E. Lamphrey, and J. Platner.

PENNSYLVANIA.

"ARIEL."

LAST Monday evening the South End Wheelmen, at their regular meeting, elected Captain J. J. Bradley as delegate to the Associated Cycling Clubs, in place of S. Jackson, Jr., who declined re-election. Mr. J. A. L. Edwards remains the other representative from that club.

IF it were not for the fact that I do not care to invite said J. A. Lincoln Edwards, Secretary of the A. C. C., to sit down on me as he did on Mr. 3463, in the last issue of the BI. WORLD (it's rather unpleasant to be told you are "in the soup," you know), I should like to intimate that said A. C. C. do a little more next season toward promoting inter-club runs, etc., than they did this; but with the Association's feelings in view (likewise my own) I refrain.

READING is talking of holding the next State Division meet in that place on July 4th. Rather a long look ahead, but there is no reason why it should not be a go. The central location of the town would draw large delegations, thus ensuring its success.

THE new house of the Century Wheelmen is still an unsettled question. They at one time thought they had secured the house on the corner of Broad and Montgomery avenue, but the negotiations fell through and they are now talking of a property near Broad and Oxford. It is a question whether it would not pay them to build. Fifteen or sixteen thousand dollars is a large sum to put into a property that will have to be altered to suit the requirements of a wheeling club.

HARE and hounds is taking down here. Following the Thanksgiving Day run of the Centurions, the South End Wheelmen held one last Sunday. Messrs. McArdle and Wheeler were the hares, and that they were well selected is shown by the fact that they were not only not caught but only one of the hounds followed them over the entire course, which was described to me as a terror, being over railroad tracks, cross country lanes, and the kind of roads generally that prevail down toward the "Neck." Mr. Chas. Kolb, who followed them took six headers, while Mr. Wheeler took one, standing on his head in a manure pile. Some people will insist on choosing queer places for a dismount. The hares rode a total distance of 24 miles in 1 3-4 hours.

A CHANGE has taken place in trade circles here. Strong and Green have removed their place on Fifth street to Arch, above Seventh, and they certainly have, in their new quarters, the finest cycling storeroom in the city at present. A lot has been leased back of the store, which they purpose utilizing as a riding school. The firm is now the Strong & Green Cycle Co., a new man having gone into the business, whose name I am not allowed to reveal until after the first of the year.

ALTHOUGH we are verging toward midwinter riding still goes on. Captain Supplee took eighteen of the Pennsylvanias to Norristown last Sunday, and I rather imagine this is record for the season. The Centurions, South End and Mount Vernons were also out on the road. To-day I took a spin up the River drive, along the frozen banks of the Schuylkill, with the thermometer somewhere near ten above, and we are only hoping it may be thus all winter. No vaseline for us, yet, if you please.

KIRK BROWN and his new Psycho tandem came to grief this week. He was riding it round the public buildings, with a young man on the front seat, exhibiting the points of the machine, when the front fork broke near the head. Fortunately, the wheel held in or a moment or two, and a bad fall was averted.

CHIEF CONSUL JESSUP called a special meeting of the Board of Officers of the Division last Friday evening, and in response thereto a bare quorum materialized. Following were present: Messrs. Jessup, Hare, Burt, Tucker, Osborne, Lewis, Brown, Wells and Crowther. Mr. Jessup brought before the meeting a plan of dividing the State into districts, after the example of Massachusetts and New York, but the plan of elections for representatives from said districts was considered to involve so many difficulties that it was finally dropped, after a full discussion. The following gentlemen were appointed a committee to make nominations for the election next season: Messrs. Osborne, Philadelphia; Trimmer, York; and Van Nort, Scranton. The meeting then took up the matter of the Road Book (Pennsylvania-New Jersey-Maryland), and after hearing from the printing house having the matter in charge it was decided that the book be issued not later than February or March, to be furnished to all members of the Division free and to the New Jersey and Maryland Divisions at 40 and 50 cents respectively, according to binding, for each member of said Divisions; a quantity to be also furnished to the trade and to other wheelmen, for which a retail price of $2 per copy will be asked. The Secretary-Treasurer's report showed a balance in bank of some $758, with about $100 paid on account toward the printing of the book, so that the Division is somewhat flush. A motion was made and carried to have the National delegates place Geo. A. Jessup in nomination for the Presidency of the L. A. W., this being the first official action on this subject.

A CIDER and doughnut party came off at the "Pennsy" house on Tuesday night, in honor of President Laing's re-election, which was greatly enjoyed by a large number of cyclers. Music and sparring filled out a very pleasant evening.

"HAWKSHAW."

I VERILY believe that if a race was advertised to take place on the summit of the Brooklyn Bridge towers, that a large field of New York wheelmen would be found ready to start in the event, so great is their anxiety to risk their necks in any form of medal grabbing that might be proposed, no matter how unsuitable or dangerous the grab might be. When I saw the disgusting exhibition of men and machines that formed a cycling sandwich upon the track of Madison Square Garden on Saturday evening, I thought that here at least would be some gentlemen who would see the danger and consequent folly of attempting to do any form of in-door racing under the present system of Garden or Armory games, but I should have known better, I suppose. I might have known that the gentlemen in wheeling circles here, who are by courtesy termed "racing men," can no more resist competing in one of these events when some valueless bauble is the prize for which they risk their necks than a bull can remain lamb-like under the tantalization of a red bandanna. Like a Jack-in-the-box the same field of starters popped up at the games of the Twelfth Regiment on the following Monday. The track, some twelve laps to the mile, with a surface as smooth and as treacherous as ice, was crowded with these gallant exponents of grand and lofty tumbling. But why take up space here to narrate the result? It was the same old story, the same gentleman from Brooklyn who occupied the position of premier tumbler on Saturday night appeared in the same role on Monday, and nearly the same pyramid act was indulged in by those unlucky enough to be contesting with him. A young man borne upon the shoulders of his friends in an unconscious condition was the result, but what matters that? What difference does a few killed or wounded make to these racing gentlemen? Doesn't the winner get a ten dollar gold (?) medal, and isn't that compensation enough for danger, or even death itself? Maybe you don't think so, Mr. Editor, neither do I, but then these gentlemen would declare that we were old fogies, because we held such opinions and valued our necks at a greater price than a $10 medal, and were therefore not fit judges of the glory of such bloody contests as these. Perhaps not. Why, Mr. Editor, you remember in our day we used to think of cycling as the very poetry of athletics! See how it is changed! These gentlemen are fast convincing the public that instead of being the poetry it is the Sullivan of athletics, i. e., "the champion knocker out." Alack! alas! that it should come to this. But it has.

WHAT a universal leveler cycling is! History once made Warwick a "king maker," but cycling has brought the proud Warwick down to being only a "common felloe" maker, and the highest honor it accords the name of Warwick is to attach it to a new pattern of bicycle.

A BRILLIANT writer, in a journal published somewhere or other in the wild, woolly and windy West, advises the editor of this paper to correct the writer of this column "with a great big club" for some utterances of mine that have not met with the approval of this same b. w. from the w. w. w. W. How sad it is to see such ignorance exposed in public print. Undoubtedly the editor of the journal upon which the aforementioned b. w. is employed has long since learned that upon the block-head of this b. w. nothing short of an imposing stone vigorously applied will make any impression, and at once, from his own experience, he comes to the conclusion that editors correct the errors of their writers here in the East on the same plan, and advises the use of a "great big club," doubtless thinking in his mild and idiotic way that this would be a more polite, because less deadly way, than the use of the imposing stone which he is acquainted with. Some day when this b. w. has nothing else to do if he will just take a day off, and write a treatise on what he knows about running a paper, which at the utmost oughtn't to take up over a very small page of letter paper, and will kindly send a copy to the editor of this paper and myself, we will both, I am sure, in the future endeavor to improve upon our present crude form of journalistic endeavor, and in days to come perhaps we, too, may learn like our friend, the b. w. in the w. w. w. W., to more fully appreciate the use of the "great big club" as a factor in journalism. In days of old the wise men came from the East, especially around Christmas time, but no longer is that so, for it is from the West that they now swoop down upon us, and thus another error of the past is corrected by the wisdom of the present.

NOW has come the season of the year, "the saddest of them all," when ye back country wheel correspondent is no longer able to cajole the editor into the belief that the entire cycling world is waiting with breathless expectancy for the arrival of the paper which prints his soul destroying wheel notes, wherein appears the startling news that "Sam has got a new oil can, and it's a dandy," or "Bugle Low opened a jack-pot at the club the other evening, and lost seventeen cents and a monkey wrench by attempting to bluff out on a pair of Jacks against a full hand," or something else of the same kind. So lacking this material for his notes, owing to the closing up of the riding season, he plumes his wings for a loftier literary flight, and thinking that no one else has read the "quick or you're dead," he allows his gigantic brain to bring forth something like this: "Now swirl me swift from the surging spring, I'm weary of wold and wind; the gruesome graik of the jabberwock comes jummering to my mind; the feeble song of the spotsome trog comes solemnwise soughing slow, and again I hear, by the bournful birch, in the swailing swirl of the soughful wind, as the gust goes glooring by, the weird wail of the wheelmen wild, as he lays his wheel away." And the next week's issue of the Bungtown Starter, contains a notice among its social notes, just beneath the one wherein its readers are informed that Squire Jones has painted his new barn red, something like the following: "Willie Wheeler, the son of our esteemed fellow townsman, Col. George Washington Wheeler, is a well-known light in the literary world, and has refused several tempting offers to dispose of some of his literary products. We append one taken from the well-known journal, the Wheelers' Weird, etc., etc.," and then will follow an extract from the wonderful Willie's efforts. Such is fame in backwoods life, and such is the pain that we who read wheel papers or write for them, must be afflicted with. Oh Lord!

"OCCASIONAL."

ON January the 18th, the Social Wheel will celebrate its first anniversary by a "theatre party" and a banquet. The club will first attend the Opera House, and after the performance they will attend to the eating portion of the programme.

THE latest remark at the club rooms, "Who is 'Occasional'?"

WHEELMEN of this city are already talking of a spring meet; it is not a bit too early, either.

IN the November Sports Afield the Ramblers again remind the Social Club of their challenge, "open to any club west of the Missouri." What is the matter, Socials, does mere talk frighten you?

IN the Ramblers' club rooms there is a mark on the wall (about four feet from the floor) said to be one mile above sea level. Boys, think of it: riding hills over a mile above those of your Eastern States. How do you think your wind would affect you?

"HOD" KENNEDY is on the lookout for the "chump" (as he calls his expected victim) that wrote the BI. WORLD for information as to his (Kennedy's) eligibility to the L. A. W. Mr. Kennedy has his "guying" gun well loaded, and I caution Mr. "Wheelman of Denver" to lay low for the present.

WHEELMEN of the East, let me excite your envy. How many days during the winter can you call a run and have twenty-five wheelmen turn out with you, and then a little later to have the "other club" come along and swell the number to thirty-seven. The Socials on their run to Littleton last Sunday had the above number: twelve of them were Ramblers, however, who happened to run up against us.

ST. LOUIS.

"LINNEUS."

"STROLLER," with your native Chicago modesty, you overstep the mark when you say that I did any bluffing as regards a race between Stone and Lumsden. If you will trouble yourself to look up the WORLD of Oct. 19, you will notice a squib, under "What I would like to see," "Stone meet Windle." You took exceptions to this, and in your letter of Nov. 2 you state, "but hadn't you better have Percy try Lumsden again before going for the scalp of Windle?" Prof. Stone has about gotten tired of POOR bluffing, and early this week he placed the whole affair in the hands of C. C. Brewster, with instructions to challenge Lumsden. Brewster has written to Garden in the matter, and it behooves "Stroller" and the balance of the Windy City cyclists to "put up or shut up." Percy Stone says if the match is arranged it cannot come off before spring, and he would prefer to have the races run on the road, as we have no suitable track here; one race at Chicago and one at St. Louis, and in case of a tie, the run off to be held at Clarkesville. The wheelmen here are all very anxious to have the race come off, and will all put their little pile on Stone.

GERRY JONES, "He pays the freight," ex-Chairman of the Racing Board, was in town Wednesday, and left on Thursday for Kansas City. Gerry does most of his riding now-a-days in a Columbus buggy.

I HEAR that President Lucas, of the Cycle Club, has entered into negotiations with a well-known capitalist, looking towards building a cycle track somewhat nearer town than the Fair Grounds. He refuses to divulge anything as yet, but states that if the track is built the credit belongs to the Cycle Club.

SPEAKING to Willi Brown a few evenings ago the question was broached of having him ask Street Commissioner Burnet to appoint a wheelman to act as Street Inspector without pay. He thought favorably of the scheme, and thinks that if a wheelman is found who is willing to serve, he could have him appointed. Who will act as such?

R. A. NUTTSON is arranging a cycle race meet to be held at Hot Springs on Christmas Day, and a poster at the agency announces in big black letters that "the fastest men in the world will compete." He has Percy Stone down for the amateur events, but Percy says he will not attend unless he receives a check covering all expenses. [Nice amateurism.—ED.]

A LOCAL sheet called the Real Estate Bulletin devotes two and one half columns of space to an article in which it extols the virtues (?) of our granite pavement, and says Mr. Burnet will make the mistake of his life if he adopts brick instead. Cyclers would gladly welcome the change, as our present down-town paving is becoming poorer every year.

MISSOURI is not to be placed in the category of States whose Chief Consuls have as yet not sent for the road improvement pamphlets, as nearly 200 of them have been mailed to all parts of the State to each Road Commissioner or Surveyor. In connection with the pamphlet a circular asking for road information and names of cyclists was sent out, and answers are beginning to come in giving the required information and complimentary to the leaflet.

NOTICING that your correspondents are bringing on their candidates for President, I would ask, "What's the matter with Doctor Emery?" Any one who was present at the officers' meeting at Baltimore and heard his debate on the constitution, which completely knocked out the "Great Objector," could not help being favorably impressed with the man. Dr. Emery has served the League long and well, and in my opinion would run a good race for the position.

THE Division has not increased its membership this year, and is still six members behind last year's figures. With the great increase of riders this would seem inexplicable, and the explanation is to be found in the words "too few workers." Up to last September the city was practically without a local Consul, and nobody seemed to bother himself about recruits. This condition of affairs has also held sway at other places in the State. There is absolutely no reason why Missouri should not have had 400 members.

HAL GREENWOOD tells a good story on the Cycle Club. It seems that when the club leased their present quarters their landlord had been greatly annoyed by a neighbor, who, wishing to buy the property, had frightened off all prospective tenants by stating that the house was haunted. Now whenever the rent is paid the owner blandly asks, "are you still making enough noise to keep the spirits out? if not, be sure to make all you can." It is needless to say the boys need not to be told this twice, and whenever sheol is raised they are simply living up to their contract to knock the spirits out.

STROLLING round to the agency last Wednesday, hungry for news, I had the pleasure of meeting "Senator" Morgan, who had just arrived from the South. He states the tournaments at both Columbus and Augusta were fairly successful and that he is on the way to California to see how the land lies for giving a big tournament at Frisco. The "Senator" impressed me as being a man of snap and vigor as far as cycle racing is concerned, and if it were not for that R.-T. affair he would be differently regarded by all. He will be back East to attend the Chicago tournament in May, and says St. Louis ought to make use of the opportunity and give a race meet following the Chicago affair, as all the best men in the country could then be brought here.

S. C. NEWMAN won the Missouri's mileage cup this year by riding 5003 miles: he will evidently not try to win it for another season, as he says "a cycler who rides for pleasure as well as for health is overdoing the matter if he passes the 3000 mile limit in a season of eight months. A person of strong constitution may not to permanently injured by a 5000-mile ride in one season, and will soon attain his normal condition, he has done himself no good in a physical way, and it is safe to say that not one in a hundred will repeat the performance. Long distance riding has a tendency to disgust the rider with the sport, simply because it removes it from the realms of pleasure and healthful exercise into the commonplace regions of work, and this, too, makes me doubt the reports of cyclers doing from five to seven thousand miles season after season. Ride 5000 miles in a season, and after spending all your spare time, formerly devoted to society, reading and other pleasures, on a wheel, consider if you care to repeat the performance—ten to one you won't."

"MENTOR."

THE United Wheelmen are now located in their new quarters at 1117 Broadway, and the club house is a bijou in interior appearance, and will compare favorably with any club in the country. The prosperity of the club is due nearly entirely to L. S. C. Ladish, the club's President, whose untiring energy has placed it on its present substantial basis. The house has been fully described in these columns, but the members were surprised at the luxuriousness of the house. The rooms are all beautifully furnished. The papers have been filled with descriptions of the club's house, and the general public has become more or less interested in the club.

"OCCASIONAL," your Denver correspondent, has now come out of the gloomful gloom long enough to remark that the jump-pedal mount is a chestnut vintage of '79. We herewith tender him our distinguished consideration and ask to excuse us for living.

"SENATOR" MORGAN, your special correspondent, was in the city today (19th) en route for 'Frisco. The "Senator" has a host of friends here and they were glad to see him. He called at the United Wheelmen's club and entertained a circle of the boys with his many reminiscences of the path. He left here for Omaha.

YOUR correspondent learns from a highly reliable source that it was the intention next year to elect Chas. H. Luscomb President of the League, his circular letter to the New York Division members, however, has "cooked his goose," so to speak, and that J. R. Dunn will be nominated in his stead. This information is given for what it is worth, but it is entirely reliable.

BOB HOLMES, of St. Louis, Chairman of the Missouri Touring Board, had occasion to write to Marshall, Mo., to get the names of wheelmen there, for the purpose of securing them as League members. Bob's letter of inquiry found its way into a wag's hands and the latter sent a list of fourteen men, who did not ride bicycles, and were burdened with adipose tissue from 200 to 300 pounds.

HARRY G. STUART, who leaves this evening for Los Angeles, Cal., where he has accepted a position on the Los Angeles Times, was tendered a banquet on Sunday evening at the Coates House. The affair was an enjoyable success. The menu was elaborate. Dr. Henderson made a neat address, testifying to Mr. Stuart's work for bicycling. Although not a speaker Mr. Stuart replied in a few words. President Ladish also spoke at length of Mr. Stuart, and his connection with bicycling in Kansas City. At a late hour the members returned to the club rooms and a reception was held. Mr. Stuart left the next morning for a trip into Missouri, returning Wednesday. He will reach his new home on Christmas morning.

W. C. BRADLEY, of Ottawa, Chief Consul of Kansas, was in the city last week and called at the United Wheelmen's club house. Mr. Bradley is arranging for the fourth annual Kansas Division meet at Ottawa, in June. The races will be held in Forest Park and wheelmen will camp out on the grounds. There are a number of large buildings where entertainments can be held. The buildings and grounds are illuminated with electric lights. Camping out will prove a pleasing innovation. This meet promises to draw a bigger attendance of wheelmen than any previous: $1,000 in prizes will be offered contestants. Mr Bradley is now trying to secure a national championship to be run off there. The track is without doubt the finest in the State. It is fifty feet in width, sixty on homestretch. The track is surrounded with trees which makes it shady and cut off the wind.

MINNEAPOLIS.

"WHISKERS"

THE weather for the past two months has been all that could be desired, and the roads are as smooth and hard as marble. The result is that one sees hundreds of cyclers daily in a short ride around the city. A few of these popular resorts are Lakes Harriett, Calhoun, Cedar, Como and White Bear. Then there is Minnehaha Falls and Fort Snelling, around which the scenery is perfectly grand. So, gentlemen, if any of you have any intention of paying a visit to the Northwest during the summer months, do not fail to bring your wheels, and some of us will try and make your visit pleasant.

AMONG the best riders in town the speedy are E. A. Savage, J. R. Stockdale, Colie Bell, E. J. Hale, Henry Lackor and Chas. Barwick. The first three are evenly matched and have had some very interesting brushes.

THERE are about one thousand wheelmen here and I am very sorry to see such a light League membership. On making enquiries I find there has never been any one who took an interest in the League and did the necessary missionary work. There is really no active club here, though the Minneapolis Bi. Club claims to be, but it is more dead than alive. This is a mystery, as there is plenty of good material.

I HAVE long been an admirer of J. Purvis-Bruce as a writer, but have never had the pleasure of meeting the gentleman. Learning that he once resided here I started to find out what kind of a fellow he is. The first person approached was Chas. Barwick, who said he knew Bruce very well. "But," said he, "if you want to find out anything about him go and see the cow boy." "And for Heaven's sake who is the cow boy?" "Oh," said he, laughing, "that is Jim Stockdale. We call him the cow boy because he went South on a cattle ranch last winter and in the spring blew into town in a hat that would take a man three days to ride around. He and Bruce were like unto 'Damon and Pythias.' You will find him at Sam Morton's sporting goods store." So thither I went, and on enquiring for Mr. Stockdale, a gentleman in the rear of the store, his feet cocked on a desk, silk hat on one side, and smoking a cigar as contentedly as if he "owned the earth" was pointed out. "Know Bruce?" said he. "Well, I should smile.' Why, partner, he was the whitest man that ever struck this camp." So we sat down and had a talk, and if Mr. Purvis-Bruce is half the man that Stockdale paints him, all I have to say is that I long for the day when I may meet him.

KENTUCKY TIPS.

"BOURBON."

WHAT'S the matter with Kentucky. We wish to assure the readers of the WORLD that she is "all right." Like the intrepid Stanley, not having been heard from for so long, a suspicion may be entertained that all was not right. But we are still with you, Mr. Editor, and hereafter you may bet on us for a place.

LOUISVILLE has a promising club now, an infant as yet, but four months old: two as promising children have gone before, gathered in by the cycle of the great reaper. Phoenix-like we have risen from their ashes, and we hope to gather a spring harvest of new members. Out of two hundred riders in this city, we have as yet secured a membership of but twenty-seven active members.

THERE are always men in all classes who stand aloof and let the workers put an undertaking upon its feet, and when success is assured, they flock to the standard to enjoy the benefits. It has been truly said that the lazy men get the best of everything.

I AGREE with "Hawkshaw" in what he says in support of the "social element" in clubs. We believe in the "social element," and while we are biding our time until we get a club room, we are accepting invitations to the homes of our members, where good fellowship and other good things rule the hour.

THE twenty mile road race, fixed for Thanksgiving Day, was postponed. Six entries were from Covington and the Kenton boys were quite confident of "plucking" our best spurters. They will have an opportunity to try at the Division meet in April at Danville, when the postponed road race will be run off.

CHIEF CONSUL CRONINGER, of the Kenton Wheel Club, is now engaged upon a new road book and map, which will be issued in the spring. He is putting his club through a course of winter training, to be ready to "do us" when the season opens.

A REPORT comes from that quarter, that recently the club made an 80-mile run just for a little exercise, during the last two hours of which they made 28 miles. Please pass the salt.

WE have received copies of the circular on road making, issued by the League. A very excellent and well written article. It was published in a condensed form in the Courier Journal of last Sunday, which will give it wide distribution.

LOUISVILLE has voted a million and a half dollars for street improvements, and during the next year our wheeling territory within the city will be considerably extended, and many new riders may be expected to join our already quite respectable army.

The San Francisco Club is, next to the Boston Club, the oldest Wheel Club in the country and we are pleased to learn from the "Pathfinder" that with all its ten years it is more prosperous than ever and has the handsomest and largest cycle club rooms on the Pacific Coast.

L. A. W. 17,561 writes: "Now that the riding season is over, the average club man hangs around the store and seeks for some pleasant way of passing away the wild and wooley winter hours. A new idea in the cycling line has been brought out by several of the lovers of the sport here. The 'idea' is to see how many times and how fast a dinkey (safety) can be ridden around a circle within a space ten feet square. Mr. Jacob Jackson and his Veloce have succeeded in placing the record (as a starter) at 200 times without a dismount. The phrase 'miss and out' must be slightly changed to apply to this branch of cycling to 'outside and out.' The circles must be made inside the lines or no go. Now let us see what some of the pushers of the rear driver can do. When they become expert enough, perhaps the space might be cut down to 9 feet square, etc. As 'Jakie' went something over a mile in making his ride, we could perhaps get some records for this style, say for 1-4, 1-2, and 1 mile, no 50 mile records wanted. Then again, the space can be enlarged to suit ordinaries. It's lots of fun—for the spectators, so try it.

We take extracts from that paper, commenting on Temple's letter. * * * * "Temple's letter explains itself on many points, but there is only one which we propose to touch on, and that is the assertion of Mr. Woodside that all Temple's victories were arranged. Temple's pertinent question practically answers this charge. He asks: 'Why, if the races were arranged for me, were they not arranged for Woodside and Rowe?' We know that they were not so arranged, and there's an end of it. Again, Temple did many excellent performances under the eye of amateur officials, and on watches above suspicion. The record of the little man's performances are not confined to the professional

Gentlemen—As the year is drawing to a close perhaps you would be interested in knowing how the "SWIFT" has fared in this section as compared with other Safeties. To be brief, there are more "SWIFTS" in use here than any other make of Safety. We have not taken a single "ordinary," or any other kind of machine in exchange, as part payment, for a SWIFT during the season. Not a single SWIFT after leaving our hands has to our knowledge been exchanged for other make of safety or sold to a third party. There is not a second-hand "SWIFT" for sale or exchange. track. He appeared at amateur meetings and tournaments, and the best of our amateur authorities officiated. It is ridiculous to tell us that Ralph Temple is a waster and a fraud. We believe that for his size and weight no better or faster man ever sat upon a bicycle. We further believe that all the important races which he ran over here were bona fide. He has but one fault, and that is, he rides an English bicycle. This one fact seems to have snuffed out all the patriotic pride which we fancied would have bubbled out when a native-born Chicagoan held his own manfully against all comers. The nation which annually imports a selection of English amateur athletes to send them back within a few months as "Americans" to compete in English championships, might have been expected to rejoice over native talent, but far from it: with some honorable exceptions, the only American of the American team has not received even fair play in America. We are sorry for the little man. The agreement for the "barney" was in the handwriting of Rowe's trainer. Temple slaughtered Rowe in every practice spin in England until Morgan requested him to let him beat him; and with both men fit and well, we would stand Temple to win every race of a similar series, and we hope he will go to win every time if another set of matches can be arranged next season." [We think Bi. News is wrong in ascribing Temple's treatment to the fact that he rode an English wheel—that is bosh. We further would correct Bi. News by stating that the three "articles of agreement" were one each in the handwriting of Morgan, Alley and another party to the fake—ED.]

HOW THE MARYLANDS "DEFENDED THE CUP."

It's a fine old League Club—God bless 'em, every one. Loyal? Yes, loyal to the heart's backbone. They are League clear through. A little exclusive to be sure, but with a warm, comfortable wrapping around the cockles of the heart that bursts open and gathers in its petals every wheelman that appeals by honesty and respectability. And don't you make any very gigantic mistake either for it is devoted to wheeling with an enormously big, big D. Truly it has its social features and very delightful they are too, but the members are not effeminate dudes. Oh, no—these same clever chaps who don dress suits as occasion requires and are pinks of propriety in propriety, are athletic men early in the morning or the night after a club german. No, they are not "toughs," but they can do some tough riding nevertheless.

The dear old Maryland Club. You were told in charming simplicity of one of its late annual "Bushwhackers' Meets," and now you shall learn how it "defended the cup." The citizens' cup was subscribed a year ago and won by the Marylands, when such crack riders as Jerry and John Lord, Dick Whittingham, Kemp Bartlett, Ned LeCato, Sam Shriver and others could make it a foregone conclusion. But to-day, Jerry is a dignified M. D., John is doing the country across the pond, Dick is with the Hoes in New York, Kemp has taken unto himself a charming little helpmeet, Sam has gathered icicles in the harvest of life and left us, and none of the fleet flyers remained but Ned—dear, old, faithful Ned—whose loyalty is proverbial and whose heart is as a child's. You must know the cup had to be defended for two years before it could become the property of the club.

October rolled around, the month in which the contest must be made, with scarce a thought of preparation. The leaves were beginning to fall, and so were the hopes of the club members. Enough interest was not manifested to get up a team of defenders. The men were doing plenty of road riding but were disinclined to the restricted regimen necessary to proper training. Something must be done. At last, at one of the regular club meetings the topic of defending the cup was alluded to. One charming old frost-bitten chestnut, with skin wrinkled by many a severe winter, and kernal kiln-dried by the hot blasts from the furnace of dolce far niente, and one distinguished for an arousing oratory which has long burned its way to conviction in the councils of the League as well at the club forum, arose, and with silver tongued eloquence burnished with the liquid gold of earnestness, addressed us thus:

Said Sam, in a climax of peroration, after an appeal, "fellow members, fraternal brothers, my heart sheds molten tears of crimson vital fluid at this apathy in the once great King of Clubs" (evidently Sam didn't have his mind on his number, but did have it on the last evening's little gathering of Knights of the Round Table). "Can it be that the grand old Maryland Club, with a full house and a full hand, will faint heartedly lay it down to a despicable little bob-tail bluff? Are ye braves with women's hearts? Why has this apathy stolen silent, unseen, but not unfelt, into our wigwam" (Sam had just been a witness of the wild-west show)? "AROUSE YE, and buckle on the armor of defense against the assaults for club supremacy and kick out a brilliant victory on the pedals of white-winged Mercury" (Sam gets a little mixed in metaphor). "Are ye men or are ye women? As for me, give me the cup or give me the chalise. I would rather be a door-keeper in the House of Representatives, and exist on cold tea, dipped with a congealed ladle from the frozen depths of the Polar regions of despair, than to dwell in the innocuous atmosphere of an Irish Turk's bath. Hear me, ye apathists! I, Sam—Sam, the slumberer—Sam, the sacred shrimp in the lagoon of idleness—I, I, who love the small vices so dearly, I, who so devoutly court morpheus on the couch of splendor, I, who delight to sip the nectar of the gods from the exhilarating cup of Bacchus, I, who somnolently inhale the perfume of the fragrant Havanna under mine own vine and fig tree, I, Sam, the marital exquisite, will from this period of my normal precocity, arouse me and appear upon the arena of the amphitheatre encircling the Druid's fair lake, and will there greet the first warm smiles of the monarch of the day with severe athletic training, and press on, on, on to victory, or take a header into the lake with all the fellow scorchers who will join me."

Sam sat down exhausted by enthusiasm superinduced by his own sentiments, and the members were affected to tears—copious tears, which fell on the floor with a dull thud, similar to Niagara's cataract. Mose wept, Harry wept, Ira wept, John Fahne, Pete, Billy, in fact all wept, and Jim Wilkinson wept phonetically. Needless to say this glowing appeal had its effect—all the boys were "one the fake" but Sam.

After the janitor had mopped up the saline floods, Captain Ned began to look around him for material for the team. It was not promising, because unknown. That which was known to be promising was from various causes unavailable. One had taken unto himself a wife. Another had to bury a hatchet. Another couldn't get up early. Another couldn't spare time from business, and so it went on. But don't you ever begin to believe that the club's resources were exhausted. Our Ned don't give up so easily as that. The nursery and the cemetery was left and Ned ransacked them. From one cradle he pulled out Oscar, and from one simple grave, without adornment, he resurrected "Old Jerry." Oscar was given some antelope's milk to make him talk faster, and Old Jerry was galvanized into a pretty lively corpse by the electric taffy, which flowed in honied words from Ned's honied tongue. Then Ned stuck in his thum and pulled out a plum, and the fruit was Billy Hall. Again, Ned extended his digit into the dough and fished out a "chaser," and the cracker was Billy Beatty. Billy is not called a chaser because he is particularly chaste, but for the reason that he chased out the funds for the late League meet.

Ned gathered together this little Spartan band and looked them over. Oscar volunteered the information that he "d-i-d-n-'t k-n-o-w a-s h-e c-o-u-l-d r-u-n v-e-r-y f-a-s-t, b-u-t h-e w-o-u-l-d t-r-y a-n-d g-e-t i-n f-r-o-n-t o-f s-o-m-e o-f t-h-e o-t-h-e-r f-e-l-l-o-w-s a-n-d f-a-l-l d-o-w-n." Oscar afterward practiced this little racket in training, but somehow he lost the combination, skinned his own nose and gave up the jockeying feat in disgust. Ned made the team a neat little speech. Said he: "Oscar, you must practice pedaling faster than you talk. Dear Old Jerry, you antiquated old tombstone, you have held your breath so long in your narrow home that you ought to have a great deal of wind to spare. Billy Beatty, in the name of the seven Sirens, do keep your hash hopper closed and chase something. Billy Hall, you got the cup and got us into trouble; now you kick us out of it. As for me, I hold three aces, Crist, Brown and Barber, and it's a pretty good hand to bluff on."

No one understood that little reference of Ned's, but afterward it was found that Ned had learned that the other clubs had been scared into not entering teams because they had heard that the Washington cracks, Crist, Brown and Barber, had made application to join the Maryland Club, and the clubs took it for granted these flyers would be entered for the cup. Ned's diplomacy consisted merely in keeping silence, neither affirming nor contradicting their impressions until he had his own men well under training. Crist, Brown and Barber were members of the Maryland Club, and they will carry Maryland's name to the front in many a team race about the country, but a scrub team is always good enough to defend the cup when drilled by such an able general as Captain Ned LeCato.

Well, the race "came off" October 10—ten miles around Druid Lake. Four clubs entered teams of five each. The clubs were Maryland, Baltimore, Rambler and Centaur.

Ned briefly exhorted his noble army of defenders thusly: "Young men, old men, scrub men, lend me your ears. You have before you a herculean task. You have been called from the cradle and the grave, from the shop and from the sanctuary, to defend the cup, and the eyes of the Maryland Club are upon you. Billy Hall, you carpet the way. Old Jerry—you darling old mummy—you shake the wrinkled kinks out of those dilapidated old legs, and strike a parallelogram for the tape. Billy Beatty, you capture the whole bakery, and Oscar will insure us the victory. I have spoken. Let us be on."

Old Jerry was carefully lifted on to his wheel, and the galvanized mechanism manipulated, which kept his jerky old legs in motion, and pushed off with a shove that would have kept him going to all eternity had not Bob Unduch fired a bundle of old clothes at him just as he crossed the tape at the finish on the last lap. The aim was fair, and withal a pretty good shot, considering that Bob had not had much practice shooting at galvanized corpses on the wing. Old Jerry came down with a crash—but with the five points necessary to win—where he lay with those miserable old legs mechanically kicking those jerky old kicks until the combination was unsprung and the parboiled specimen of antiquity liberated.

The victors gathered Old Jerry up, pasted him together, and have put him in the club cabinet of curios for future use, but President Mose first spread a banquet at the club house, where wine flowed like water.

And that, God bless them, is how the Marylands defended the cup. OLD JERRY.

RESPECTS TO MR. "OCCASIONAL."

WHEN one is asked a direct question, through the columns of the BICYCLING WORLD you of course allow space for him to answer it?

It is very queer that the Denver Ramblers are "occasional"-ly critised by outsiders, who do not seem to be entirely satisfied with the club's actions.

Last year the "WORLD" commented on our ten mile an hour clause (as we call it) saying "the Denver Ramblers have a clause in their by-laws which debars wheelmen who cannot maintain a gait of ten miles an hour" (or words to that effect). Ramblers, indeed! the idea of rambling at the rate of ten miles an hour; nothing was said by us either in conformation or denial. Now, astonishing as it may seem, the Ramblers nearly always ride at the rate of ten or eleven miles, although there is nothing in the by-laws prohibiting the admission of a three mile an hour man should he desire to enter. Ten miles an hour is not considered fast out here, as several prominent Eastern Wheelmen whom we have met can testify. The above explanation may be interesting to those who asked some of our members at the Buffalo tournament regarding our "ten mile an hour clause."

The most laughable criticism, is by "Occasional" in the WORLD of December 7th, and were it not that he makes a pointed inquiry, would be met in silence.

If he can convince us that he is not a member of the social club, we forgive him. In any event he has a cordial invitation to attend one of our short thirty or forty mile "follow-the-leader runs" and if he succeeds in finishing we will give him the credit he would deserve for being above the average rider. For it is a positive fact that there are not over a dozen riders in Denver who could have finished the run, mentioned by him without walking at least fifteen miles of the course.

As to the hound-deer chases, they were both experimental and in both cases the course was unavoidably shortened by accidents.

My dear "Occasional" our record of fifty thousand miles on club runs was not made in town. "ONE OF THE BOYS."

A PILGRIMAGE FROM FRANKFURT TO BAYREUTH.

BY T. A. SPENCER.

Our next stopping point was a little village twenty-four kilometres from Bayreuth. After resting there we jogged along easily. The enthusiastic natives call that part of the country the Franconian Switzerland. There were many abrupt knobs rising from the plateau, well covered with trees. These varied the monotony of the landscape, but did not strike us as particularly Swiss. We reached the crest of a hill overlooking Bayreuth at about 11 o'clock, and stopped to spruce up a little generally, as we had a kind lady friend, a member of the Festival Company, who had arranged for our seats and lodgings. Both were essential precautions. Bayreuth is beautifully situated at the junction of three valleys and somewhat on a mountain side. The Festival play house could be immediately singled out standing out alone, further up on the mountain. It is called "das Richard Wagner Buhnenfest-Schauspielhaus," which in English means "the play house of the Richard Wagner Stage Festival. Riding into Bayreuth our first act was to procure our grips from the express office whither we had sent them ahead. Securing these we proceeded to our lodging house and donned non-cycling garb once more. After posting ourselves as to some of the points of interest, we strolled out. Our first turn brought us into the Richard Wagner street. This is about the most important street in the town, and contains Villa Wahnfried, Wagner's former home, the present residence of his widow and children. Further on it is continued as a beautiful avenue lined with majestic trees, which conducts one to a little inn once frequented by Jean Paul Richter, the poet. The Villa Wahnfried is almost completely hidden from view behind trees and thick shrubbery. It stands one or two hundred feet from the street. We found a way which led through the royal park to the final resting place of Wagner. During his life there was direct communication between his grounds and the park; thus, upon royal summons, he could reach the royal presence by the most direct route. Poor, demented King Louis of Bavaria was at least clear-headed in one direction, he appreciated Wagner's genius. He used his great wealth without stint in enabling Wagner to realize some of his ideals. The Munich citizens conceived a hearty dislike for Wagner, because he was seen so much in the King's company, and so much of the King's time and money were expended on "The Master" that it was thought the latter was gaining undue influence over the King and working harm to the State. The most energetic measures which lay in the power of the people were made to oust Wagner. At these evidences of what he regarded as the ingratitude and inappreciativeness of the Munich people, he shook the dust of Munich from his feet and retreated to Bayreuth. Here his greatest triumphs have been realized, and his masterful genius and his indomitable energy have enabled the world to enjoy the highest form of the music-drama.

Wagner's tomb lies in an idyllic spot. It is simplicity itself; a single polished granite slab, about six feet by ten, and inclined at a slight angle, covers his remains. Around in a circle, about thirty feet in diameter, are planted young trees and shrubbery, almost concealing the grounds and the rear of the villa. It is the ideal of a peaceful and beautiful resting place. There were several magnificent floral tributes resting on the slab when we were there.

The royal park and palace looked rather dilapidated, but the latter was used whenever royalty visited the town. There were numerous quaint and picturesque old structures scattered through various parts of Bayreuth. Just such as may be seen in many similar towns in Southern Germany.

At about 3 P. M. we turned our steps up the long incline leading to the play house. It had begun to rain, but already a steady stream of pedestrians and vehicles of all descriptions was on its way up the hill. Among the vehicles were the glittering equipages of the royalty and nobility, and through various degrees down to the tumble-down droschky. The house does not present a very imposing appearance. It is constructed substantially but of a style nondescript yet perfectly suited for the purposes for which Wagner intended it. The front half contains simply the auditorium, the rear half the stage and flies. The stage is square, and extends upward and downward a space equal to that seen by the spectator.

The first salvo of trumpets was heard from the front portico, and the audience at once began to fill the auditorium rapidly. It was a polyglot gathering, but all actuated by one motive. The majority stood, and the men kept their hats on. The auditorium is unique; the seats rise from the orchestra at an angle of about twenty-five degrees, and they are arranged divergingly. There are no galleries; the architecture is severely simple. There are two tiers of boxes at the extreme rear. These contain the only upholstery there is in the building. The result is almost perfect acoustics. The capacity of the building is about 1500 people.

Suddenly the electric lights are completely extinguished, leaving the audience in nearly total darkness, there being a faint shimmer of light from the orchestra reflected from the ceiling above the stage. The orchestra is completely hidden from view, half of it under the stage and the remainder covered by an immense semi-circular sounding board, so that the orchestral music reaches the audience by reflection from the stage.

Naturally the audience seated itself at the disappearance of light, and waited in utter silence for the opening notes of the orchestra. I can only describe my feelings as those of awe. The consciousness of being surrounded by so many human beings, each one with all his senses concentrated into one, and waiting almost breathlessly for the beginning. At last the tones rose, long drawn, wonderfully sweet and majestic, soft at first, then gradually swelling until one was thrilled with its grandeur. The great curtain was finally drawn aside, and revealed a beautiful scene of early morning in the forest, with the castle containing the Holy Grail on a hill top in the distance. The story is founded partly on the deeds of the Knights of the Round Table, and partly upon certain occurrences in the life of Jesus Christ. The most remarkable scenes are that of the Chapel of the Grail, with all the knights assembled, and wonderful choruses coming from the heights above the stage. The change which led up to this was one of the most wonderful pieces of scene-shifting I ever witnessed. With lowered lights the scenery very slowly moved across the stage from right to left. Gradually one became aware of columns here and there among the blanks which had succeeded to the forest scene. These became more numerous and regular; suddenly a flood of light revealed the Chapel of the Grail. The next remarkable scene was that of the flower garden of "Klingsor," by means of whose beauty and that of the beautiful flower girls it is hoped that "Parsifal's" downfall will be accomplished, and thus the progress of the triumph of right over wrong be stayed. The flowers were of such huge dimensions as to make the performers look like pigmies.

THE WHITE CYCLE CO.

VERY quietly, but with an energy that speaks well for the future, has the above-named company been organizing, building a factory, putting in an expensive plant, and generally making preparations for a large business during the coming season.

The White Cycle Co. was organized Feb. 18, 1887, with a capital stock of $150,000, and the officers are as follows:

President and Manager, Frederick White (Westboro); Vice President, F. F. Denfield (Westboro); Treasurer, George O. Brigham (Westboro); Secretary, Frank E. Peck (Boston); Directors, Frederick White, Geo. O. Brigham, Allen W. Achorn, F. F. Denfeld, F. E. Corey, M. D. (Westboro), Frank E. Peck (Boston), Emerson W. Law (Cambridge).

Mr. F. White is the inventor of the machine which this concern are to manufacture. It is not the object of this article to describe the machine; that will be done later, and as soon as data and cuts can be procured from the company.

What we wish to do is to let our readers know what the concern has done so far in preparation toward turning out machines.

The factory of the White Cycle Co. is situated at Westboro, Mass., thirty-two miles from Boston on the Boston and Albany Railroad. Work was commenced on the buildings last September.

The new factory, nearly ready now for occupancy, comprises two buildings; the main factory is built of brick and wood with floor of concrete, overlaid with plank, and is 152x50 feet, and the blacksmith shop, engine and boiler room and polishing room under one roof, 50x30 feet. Both of these buildings are one-story in height and designed originally by the Superintendent with special reference to the purposes for which they are to be used.

The shops will be heated by steam and lighted by electricity.

An improved case-hardening furnace and a power hammer will be placed in the blacksmith shop and probably also a machine for welding parts of the cycles by electricity.

The boiler and engine now being placed will be of fifty-horse power capacity.

The machinery is of the finest and will cost upwards of $20,000, and is from the works of Brown & Sharp, of Providence, and Pratt & Whitney, of Hartford. The placing of the machinery will commence right away.

The plant will have a capacity of 2000 machines annually.

This company have secured the services of Mr. W. R. McDonald as Superintendent, and Mr. William Bixby Forenan, both mechanics of the highest order.

Mr. F. White, the inventor of the cycle and the President of the company, is an old resident of Westboro, and the citizens thereof are justly proud of their energetic, pushing fellow townsman.

As before stated, at the very earliest moment that we can procure facts and cuts we will describe the "White Flyer Cycles" for the information of our readers.

THE WARWICK PERFECTION SAFETY.

(Warwick Cycle Mfg. Co.)

IN a former issue we stated that it would be our pleasure to introduce to the riding public one of the novelties for 1889, in the Warwick Perfection Safety.

We called at the factory of this company in Springfield Thursday (20), and were met with our inquiry as to "how that safety was getting along" by the practical answer of being shown the model machine, the cut of which adorns the head of this article.

Under the triple guidance of Mr. Warwick, the President, Mr. Tapley, the Treasurer, and Mr. Kennedy-Child, the Superintendent of Agencies, we were piloted through the well appointed factory, and from the three we obtained the following facts in regard to this machine:

"In the first place," said Mr. Warwick, "we want to grind the fact into you that every ounce of metal in these bicycles we are making is of wrought steel: this is a point we wish to impress on you most thoroughly." That we were duly impressed is proven by the fact that we give this statement the premier position in the article.

The bicycle has many novel points about it, which we will point out in the following

SPECIFICATIONS.

The frame is made of the loop pattern thus making the machine suitable for either sex, the novelty in the construction being that the frame is of two weldless steel tubes. These are connected with the head by a double neck, thus ensuring great strength. Just back of where the sprocket wheel is attached the frame divides and forms the back fork terminating in the "Warwick Perfection" spring bearing.

THE FRONT FORKS are of the well known Perfection type, and like the back ones are attached to the bearings by the W. P. spring.

THE SEAT pillar follows the curve of back wheel for a certain distance, and then is straightened to receive the saddle rod.

THE STEERING.—Mr. Warwick has been tireless in his experimenting as to making the steering less sensitive than is common, and he has at last adopted the following device, which will be better understood by studying the cut: The steering centre or head is similar to that of others, where cones are used, but instead of continuing the steering rod straight up to the handle-bars, just above the top cone bearing the rod is bent back at a sharp angle for a short distance and then it is continued by a graceful curved line (still back) to the point where it meets the handle-bar. The practical results of this is that tests have proven the steering to be much steadier, and that, of course, is what riders of safeties are desirous of securing.

THE BEARINGS to both wheels are adjustable ball bearings and positively dust proof. The pedals are Warwick Tenacious pattern and run on dust proof adjustable ball bearings.

THE SADDLE is of new design, having a pleasant rocker motion, is adjustable in all directions, being fitted to an elastic wire spring of great simplicity. The introduction of two thin flat steel springs under the leather of the saddle prevents same from stretching.

THE SADDLE POSTS.—This device is a novelty and consists of TWO posts fastened to saddle, these fitting into two corresponding tubes on the adjustable frame rod. Into these tubes spiral springs are placed and then the saddle is slipped in and the ends rest on the spirals, thus giving an easy vertical motion and spring. Another beauty of this device is that the saddle can be removed or placed in position instantly without touching a bolt or screw.

THE GEARING is fifty-four inches, attached to rear hub cog, by a forged steel chain, with a simple adjustment by two set screws of wonderful strength and lightness.

THE TUBING AND RIMS are all of the special Warwick tapering gauge. Spokes are direct; wheels, 30 inches, with 3-4 inch tires.

FINISH, best enamel and nickel; mud and dress guards and foot rests are attached, and of approved form. A powerful plunger brake is fitted to the front wheel; handle-bar, saddles, etc., adjustato any height.

THE COLUMBIA LIGHT ROADSTER SAFETY.

(Pope Manufacturing Company.)

IN the Light Roadster Safety for 1889 the Pope Mfg. Co. seem to offer to the public a wheel that will meet all the wants for a reliable and efficient safety. We cannot do better than furnish our readers with the following brief of its construction:

Thirty-inch rear (driving) and 32-inch front wheel; tires, 7-8-inch rear, 3-4-inch front; cold-drawn and rolled seamless-steel hollow felloes; No. 13 tangent spokes, 40 to rear, 36 to front wheel, all adjustable at felloe; Columbia adjustable ball bearings all round; seamless steel tubular front fork with anti-vibrating spring joints; Columbia steel double frame; adjustable crank and chain driving-gear; improved Ewart forged-steel detachable-link chain; detachable sprocket wheel; detachable Knous cranks, 5 3-4, 6 1-4 and 6 3-4 inch throw; Columbia "double-grip" rubber ball pedals; 5 1-4-inch ball-bearing socket steering head; 28-inch one-piece tubular-steel curved handle-bar, adjustable for height; vulcanite handles; adjustable rear-wheel lever-spoon brake; adjustable L seat rod; Kirkpatrick saddle; detachable steel-wire lantern bracket; foot rests; guards to steering wheel and chain; tool bag, with Columbia B. & S. monkey wrench, screw driver and oil can; gear, 54; weight, 51 pounds; finish, enamel and nickel tips; price, with ball pedals $135, parallel pedals, $130.

The slight increase in the size of the front wheel we consider a good one, and we are assured that the new spring joints, while relieving as to vibration, in no wise interferes with the steadiness of the steering. This is a point to make a note of, as we have time and time again ridden safeties which were almost spoiled by the unsteadiness and unreliability of their steering. The rear or driving wheel bearings are outside the flanges of the wheel, where they ought to be. Altogether the machine forms a notable addition to the excellent assortment of wheels manufactured by this old and reliable company.

THE VOLANT SAFETY.

(Springfield Bicycle Manufacturing Company.)

WE promised our readers a description of the Springfield Roadster Volant Safety in this issue of our paper, a cut of which is here presented, but we must of necessity make our description brief for want of time before going to press.

From a talk with the manufacturers of this wheel we learn that they hope to secure a large trade of new riders who desire to ride for pleasure and business and do not wish to stride a high wheel, even though they know it to be absolutely practical and safe, also for those who ride but little and would like a wheel which combines the qualities of the ordinary safeties with the capacity for hill climbing and sand or rough roads, which with the features peculiar to the Springfield Roadster pattern of bicycles, it is claimed accomplish.

The principle upon which this wheel is constructed shows merit from its simplicity and conveys at once to the mind strength and durability and ease of running. The steering wheel is 30 in. in diameter and the driver 31 in., with U rim and direct spokes, being upended and threaded at flange end with 7-8 inch tires. The wheels are brought much closer together, which shows compactness, and which makes steering and controlling the wheel much less sensitive.

The handle bars set well back and close to the rider. The steering head is of the V shape centres pattern with a neat adjusting device. The backbone slopes gradually to saddle post which is an upright, and from which the fork extends to rear wheel. The fork is slotted to permit of adjusting the chain, which extends from the rear sprocket wheel to the clutch mechanism, which is adjusted below the back bone and directly underneath the saddle post, which spreads each side from the centre sufficient to allow of adjusting the levers, and which extend down on a line with the chain. The gearing for speed is much less by means of the sprocket than in the ordinary, as this is partly done by the lever motion, thus distributing the strain more equal. The speed of the Volant is equal to a 67 inch diameter wheel, and those who have ridden it claim it to be much easier to run and less fatiguing. It has the ordinary bicycle ball pedals and Humber chain with two rows of balls on each wheel, two rows on each clutch stud and two rows on each of the hanger bearings. It is finished in enamel with nickel trimmings, with the new improved friction clutch, which is to be added to all of the 1889 wheels turned out by this company.

We cannot see any reason why this machine should not become popular, and we think the Springfield Bicycle Mfg. Co. deserve success and with their newly equipped factory at Highlandville they hope to be able to supply the demand for their wheels for 1889, which up to the present time they have not been able to accomplish.

THE splendid quarters formerly occupied by the Massachusetts Bicycle Club have been disposed of to the Boston Art Club at a great sacrifice. The club's furniture and other properties were sold to the highest bidder on Wednesday last. This seems to be the unfortunate end of one of the oldest and at one time one of the strongest wheel clubs in the country.

AT the indoor games of the Manhattan Athletic Club, Madison Square Garden, New York, on the 15th inst., first and second prizes were won on Columbias.

ABBOT BASSETT, Secretary.

HERE'S to 1889! We greet the New Year with good wishes. The Secretary extends the compliments of the season and wishes one and all a HAPPY NEW YEAR.

THE League has gone ahead this year and we enter 1889 with a membership of 11,948. This is the highest point ever reached. It is not much ahead of the point reached last year, but it is an advance and we have to chronicle no backward step. We have many months more in which to add to our numbers but for purposes of camparison we must take the calendar year, and that makes for us a good showing.

Judge's Charge at Toledo, Ohio.

The following communication has been received from Grah Brothers, Toledo, Ohio.

The case of Wm. Grah Jr. vs. John S. Barker et al, in which the plaintiff recovered a judgment against the defendants for $161.25, was lately decided in the Common Pleas Court at Toledo, Ohio, and will be of interest to riders of bicycles and tricycles.

While riding on his tricycle on the right hand side of the street the plaintiff was run into by the servants of the defendants, who were driving an ice wagon in the opposite direction.

The action was for damage done to the tricycle and for slight personal injury. Messrs. Kinney and Newton appeared for the plaintiff. In his charge to the jury, Judge Pike, among other things said; "It is the right of every citizen to travel upon the streets and highways in the city at all times, whether on foot or in any vehicle, whether that vehicle be a four-wheeled one, a three wheeled one or a two wheeled one. He has the equal right with all others to use the streets in a particular manner, exercising ordinary care that he shall by his own act do no injury to any one else." And under that statement that we have just made the motive power upon which the plaintiff is alleged to have ridden on the 22d of July was a conveyance or a motor that he had a right to use and be upon on the streets of Toledo, at that time. * * * If you find from the evidence that the defendants' servants with a heavy conveyance crossed over at more than an ordinary rate of speed, at a point where they were likely to meet other conveyances and persons, it was their duty to exercise greater care to avoid a collision. And if they did not, and they inflicted injury on the plaintiff by the want of ordinary care and diligence the defendants are liable. * * * The property in issue here is described as a tricycle, and testimony has been introduced tending to show that a new one would cost a certain price; that this tricycle, that is a tricycle of the description of the one used by the plaintiff would cost a certain price. It is not necessary that I should tell you the amount. It would not make any difference whether he got it for half price or not. He may have gotten it for $5 while it was worth $50 that wouldn't establish the value. The value, no matter what it cost him, is whatever you find it to have been worth at the time it was injured. Then you will take into consideration the amount of expense he has incurred in having it restored to him for use, whether it was then worth fully as much as it would have been had it not been injured. You may add whatever less it is worth (notwithstanding the expense you may have allowed him that he has paid out than it was worth at the time it was injured. * * * *

The Best Business Calendar Published.

THE Columbia Calendar for 1889, although on the same general lines as its predecessors, shows marked improvement. The leaves are not pasted, but sewed at the end, so that any leaf can be immediately turned to. The stand is made of pressed pulp, handsomely gilded, and practically indestructible. There is ample space for memoranda on each leaf, and there are 365 leaves. Although this is the fourth year of the Columbia Calendar, the matter contained upon the slips is fresh and new, and as usual gives much valuable suggestion on the whole broad field of cycling. The Calendar is sent by mail on receipt of twelve two cent stamps. Address Advertising Department, Pope Mfg. Co., Boston, Mass.

THE · SPRINGFIELD · ROADSTER · VOLANT · SAFETY.

LIGHT, COMPACT, STRONG AND DURABLE.

We wish to call the attention of the public generally to our new improved VOLANT SAFETY, which we have been induced to prepare to place on the market for 1889 to fill a long-felt want for those who desire to ride and do not wish to stride a high wheel, and for those who wish to purchase a wheel which can be adjusted to fit the whole family from a rider of 44 to 58 inches, and still for those who desire a machine that can be adjusted to them as they grow.

The VOLANT combines features of merit which can readily be appreciated by all. Our walking lever motion enables us to bring the wheels much closer together, thus distributing the weight to better advantage, also making it much less sensitive to steer. It has Ball Bearings all around, runs light, and is strong and compact. We shall have them ready for delivery by Feb. 15th to March 1st. Retail price $115.

EDITORS:

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 1 JANUARY, 1889.

A VERY Happy New Year to every one. May the end of 1889 see every rider happier and healthier for the indulgence in our favorite pastime, and may every manufacturer's, importer's and dealer's bank account be found to have increased many fold when at the end of the year they strike a balance and figure up the profits of the season past and gone.

THE Boston Athletic Association threw open the doors of its $300,000 club house Saturday evening. The interior is simply magnificent, and the elegance and completeness of every detail renders it a most desirable and attractive resort of our swell young men who are athletically inclined. Among the members present at the opening, the following well known wheelman were present: E. C. Hodges, Lon Peck, Ralph Ahl, J. S. Dean, Henry W. Williams and others.

OUR very esteemed contemporary, the Wheel, grows childishly merry at our expense, and cuddles itself with egotistic enthusiasm, because, forsooth, we reiterate the prophesies and rumors connected with the Presidency of the League. It is strange how frequently we find inconsistent traits in the same individual. The editor of our most highly regarded contemporary is really a very bright and intelligent young man, but he cannot resist the temptation to pick an imaginary flaw in our armor at every fancied opportunity.

THE opinion of S. C. Newman, the winner of the Missouri's mileage cup, that the man who rides over 3000 miles in a year exceeds the limit of pleasureable recreation, and descends into the realms of irksome labor, is one of the most sensible opinions of a man who ought to know, we have had the pleasure of recording. We have frequently noticed that the ones who soonest abandon the wheel and become tired of cycling, are those who were the most enthusiastic and ardent in the use of their machines at the start. It is, as a rule, the rational wheelman who indulges in the moderate, sensible and reasonable use of their cycle as a pleasant means to a desirable end. For over ten years we have constantly cycled more or less, and we are looking forward to the coming of spring with pleasureable anticipation. Be moderate.

A WORTHY CAUSE.

SEND IN YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

THE following circular has been issued to the wheelmen of Kentucky and neighboring States, by V. Driscoll, E. W. Weaver, of the Carrollton, Ky., Bi. Club:

"On July 3, 1888, as a member of the Carrollton, Ky., Bicycle Club was on his way from Louisville to Mammoth Cave, he met two men driving a gray horse. Coming round a bend, coasting at full speed, the machine frightened the horse, caused him to throw both horse and wagon down an embankment, in consequence of which the horse broke his leg, which made it necessary that the animal should be killed. In many places the rider would have been roundly abused. The owner of the horse, however, fully exonerated him. When it was discovered that the horse was the man's sole dependence it was thought but fitting and proper that an effort be made to reimburse him for his loss. In no State in the Union are riders accorded such full privileges and uniform politeness as in Kentucky; and, as this, although probably a rare occurrence, is a clear case against the wheel, it becomes the duty of wheelmen to step to the front and repair the damage. The entire loss was less than $100, but it is proposed to raise that amount. Subscriptions of any amount will be received and in due time fully acknowledged. Forward all subscriptions either to the owner of the horse, R. B. Mattingly, New Haven, Ky., or to the Secretary of the Carrollton Bicycle Club."

The following subscriptions have so far been received:

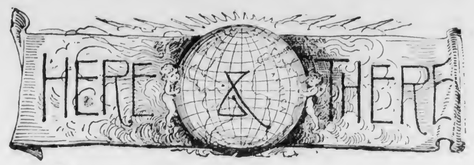
E. W. Weaver, Carrollton, Ky., $15; Pope Mfg. Co., Boston, $5; BICYCLING WORLD Co., $5; S. H. Ranche & Bro., Lancaster, Pa., $1; miscellaneous, $18.50; total, $44.50.

So much for the generous dispositions of riders. The total loss was probably $100, and it was to be hoped that the whole amount would be subscribed, particularly as the man was poor. Any further subscriptions will be gladly received.

A SOURCE OF DANGER TO WHEELMEN.

I WOULD most earnestly call the attention of all wheelmen to that most dangerous custom of wearing belts drawn tightly about the waist to support the pants, or even where they are laced tightly or where there is any constriction al out the waist whatever.

Many wheelmen are leading sedentary lives, especially the older riders, and are not physically in a proper condition to put forth the very severe muscular exertions which all wheelmen are called upon to do, and one of the dangers which I wish to particularly call attention to is that of causing hernia or rupture.



I know of two cases of hernia caused directly by the severe exertions put forth in climbing steep hills. One of them was a particularly strong, healthy and robust young man, and I am quite confident that the indirect cause of those hernia was the wearing of tight belts. The young man alluded to above has always been very active in outdoor sports, very fond of lifting, and made it a common custom to put forth his utmost strength whenever opportunity offered, and he never had any tendency toward such a result until he began bicycling, which brought about an entire change in form of dress. When any person puts forth his strength in lifting, "hill climbing is merely a form of lifting," the abdominal muscles are called strongly into play, and if by belting or other means they are prevented from expanding and increasing the circumference of the waist their force is then directed toward forcing the abdominal contents downward, and thereby greatly increasing the chances of causing hernia.

The clothing should always be loose about the waist. As suspenders are inconvenient to wear and very uncomfortable in hot weather, I would suggest as the simplest, and I think the best, way of holding up the pants is by means of a band sewed around the inside of the flannel shirt, with buttons sewed through the shirt and band and then the buttonholes made on an extra band on the inside of band of pants, the same as little boys' waists and pants are joined.

I sincerely trust that no one will misconstrue this article as condemning wheeling; no one believes in it more thoroughly than your humble servant. I am writing from experience not hearsay, and I would desire all wheelmen to give heed to my warning and so avoid a source of danger. L. A. W. 18,954.

[The above is written by a physician who has made a special study of hernia.—ED.]

THE aggregate value of prizes won by H. Synyer, the English amateur, is estimated at over $3000.

"HAWKSHAW."

To become beautiful, or to remain so, is the constant study and chief aim of many women. The first essential in either securing or retaining this is health, and the foundation of health is exercise, hence it follows as a logical conclusion, that such as desire to become beautiful, or would remain so, must exercise, and the question narrows itself into what form must this exercise be taken? In an endeavor to find something that would answer, the woman of to-day has tried tennis, archery, rowing, etc., only to find that while each has its advantages, yet still it did not supply their wants. It remained for cycling to supply to the women of to-day the most perfect form of exercise that has yet been offered them. The perfection of construction and lightness of weight in the modern tricycle was the beginning of woman's entry into wheeling, this was further encouraged and increased by the appearance of the sociable and later on by the tandem form of wheel. There yet remained the difference in favor of the wheelman, however, that the bicycle offered an ease of propulsion and an absence of much weight that was denied to women in any of the tricycle forms, and thus placed her at the disadvantage that seems to hedge all forms of sport when she endeavors to enter. Makers have for years known this, and have labored to overcome it, and to-day sees as the result the introduction in perfected form of the lady's bicycle. At once woman is placed abreast of the stronger sex, and at last secures a perfect form of exercise. Let us study some of the results from a standpoint of health and consequent beauty.

Observe a woman before she lifts herself into the saddle, and a few minutes afterward as she shoots through the park. She becomes a changed being. The roses spring to her cheeks, the light seems to leap from her eyes, her form is the inspiration of graceful action, and she becomes a beauteous picture of moving health. And this, after all, is the best view to take of cycling. Aside from its charm, its dash, its buoyancy of motion, its special or general beauty, it is the most healthful exercise in the province of woman. It is better than dancing, tennis or archery. There are many reasons why this is so, and one of the strongest seems to be that it brings continuous changes of scene, which tends to rest the body as well as the mind. The fascinating effects which it has on the fair rider cannot be estimated, provided the wheelwoman has a well-built wheel, and rides it understandingly and with moderation. It will be noticed that horseback riding has been omitted from the list of exercises now adopted by women. This was done to give it a special consideration of itself. It alone has of late years secured more women admirers than all of the other forms of exercise combined, and is to-day considered to be an essential accompaniment in the education of women. As such it may be a success, but as an exercise it is a failure.

Dr. Robert Day, the great London specialist and authority on women's diseases, lately declared his opposition to it in the following words: "Give me a neighborhood where from six to ten ladies ride horseback, and I will guarantee any physician practice enough to make a good living. I don't believe in it, even for men." No more positive statement from any eminent authority could be made against the evils of this form of exercise for women, and to the average reader no further arguments will be needed to convince them of its undesirability for their adoption. Having thus disposed of the strongest fashionable opponent of wheeling for women, perhaps a consideration of what claims cycling has upon the fair athlete might be worthy of consideration. Once purchased, no further outlay or expense is entailed upon the fair wheelwoman. It is a horse ever saddled, to mount which does not require the aid of some one else, and upon the saddle of which she is independent, free to go when and where she may, fast or slow as the road or her inclination may tempt her. In no other outdoor exercise is woman as independent as in wheeling.

Now as to the special consideration of its beauty giving and retaining properties. Bringing into play every muscle in the frame, causing the blood to flow in a healthy stream throughout the veins, the result is a perfection of form and carriage that cannot be found elsewhere. But perhaps it's in the complexion of a wheelwoman that we find the strongest advocate of its beautifying qualities. It is extremely beautiful, and was almost unknown among women of a generation ago. The skin is as smooth and polished as satin, fine and close in texture as ivory, is a clear, delicate biscuit in color; transparent and with rich color showing through rather than lying on the surface. It gives the impression, also, of exquisite cleanliness. It is the result of sunlight and fresh air, and the healthful process of cleansing every pore of the skin daily with perspiration. Nothing can clean the skin like the moisture that flows through it from warm, quick flowing blood, and nothing can produce this like cycling. No water put on the outside has a like effect to the water that comes from the inside. To such women as would be healthful, happy and beautiful, no surer method can be commended than for them to adopt cycling as an exercise.

POKPOPOLIS NOTES.

"STAR."

Whilst some local wheelmen believe it would be beneficial to have the next State meet here, there are quite a number who, from the "we-want-the-earth" cries and the disgraceful scenes enacted at the last national meet at Baltimore, coupled with their experience in entertaining visiting wheelmen at home, are very doubtful as to the advisability of holding it here. Our city affords too many opportunities for the young man, away from the restraints of home, to indulge in a drunken debauch, and such conduct on the part of even a few would not only not advance the interests of the L. A. W., but would give cycling in this vicinity a blow from which it would take years to recover. We have been laboring patiently to induce conservative middle-aged business and professional men to take to the wheel, and now that our efforts are about to be crowned with success we do not wish to lose in one week that we have been so long in gaining.

The "Veloce" Club have had another election.

Christmas was such a delightful day that only those of us stayed at home who had to play the part of Santa Claus.

It is reported that Thomas Stevens, of International fame, will deliver his lecture, illustrated by stereopticon views, before the Porkopolitans early in January, and it is believed that he will be greeted by a crowded house.

On Sunday, Dec. 23, several local wheelmen attempted to climb Sycamore Hill. Charles Croninger and Charles Roth were the only ones to reach the top. Teddy Allsup, who also made the attempt, would have succeeded if—

At last a wheelman has been found who is willing to make an affidavit that he actually saw Teddy Allsup climb Sycamore Hill! He further states that during the whole trip Teddy never once used his pet expression, "it's bloody 'ot."

The disagreements between the cycling clubs of Chicago, so frequently alluded to by "Stroller," are a surprise to our wheelmen, for we have reached that stage of perfection where the lion is said to lie down with the lamb. Our clubs, actuated by a feeling of brotherly love for each other, work together in perfect harmony. The interest of one is the interest of all, and the mischief-making individual who would attempt to run down one club to a member of another would fare badly—perhaps.

If, as suggested by N. H. Dickenson in the Bicycling World and L. A. W. Bulletin for Dec. 14, the Direct Tax of 1861 should be returned to the States from which it was received and be used to improve the highways, we could make good use of the share falling to us. Some of our roads lead through very picturesque localities, but are so hilly that a profile of them would look something like this, AAAAAAAAAAAA. Now if they could be regraded, it would not only be a blessing to the farmer's horses but a godsend to the cyclist.

On the Sunday before Christmas, as the clerk of the weather was so busy preparing for a visit from Santa Claus that he forgot to order the usual Sunday drizzle, the C. B. C. took a run to Florence, Ky. The day could not have been better if it had been made to order. It was bright and clear, the temperature ranging from 24 to 46 degrees, and the boys just more than enjoyed themselves. They found Florence as agreeable as ever and apparently glad to see them, in fact it was quite dark before they could tear themselves away. As they were coasting the long hill on their return, they did not discover, in the intense darkness, that the pole at the toll-gate had been let down till Nelson ran into it with a bang that all but demolished the machine and nearly paralyzed the rider.

The local wheelman is of necessity a hill climber, for our roads abound in hills that rise from 300 to 400 feet in a distance of from one to two and one-fourth miles. The grades are by no means regular and even, for the steepest part is generally at the bottom, and then there are places where the road, to the weary climber, seems to be almost stood on end. We also have a number of shorter and much steeper hills that at one time seemed unsurmountable, but with the improvements in bearings and in the shape of handle-bars they have, with the exception of Sycamore Hill, been gradually conquered. Although Teddy Allsup claims to have climbed this hill, there are quite a number of wheelmen who did not see him do it and who would very much like to see him do it again. Several of the Kentons, piqued by Teddy's assumed superiority, have decided to attempt it themselves on the very first favorable opportunity. It is said by those who have seen both hills, to be longer, steeper, and in a worse condition than the famous Corey Hill.

When the bicycle first appeared in "Porkopolis" our streets were like a chronic ulcer, which the people, from long habit, had come to look upon as practically incurable, and cycling as a consequence, like a weak and sickly child, struggled along for several years, maintaining a decidedly precarious existence. Some three years ago, however, a change of treatment was tried, and as a result granite and asphalt pavements gradually made their appearance where ruts and holes had formerly abounded. This change began in the centre of the city, but until this year we had but few outlets where the riding was as good as the walking. Before the close of 1889 we expect a marked improvement in this respect. The Lower River Road is to be paved with granite to Bold Face creek in Sedamsville; Eastern avenue will be finished early next season; Clifton avenue, which is being regraded and widened, will also soon be completed; and College Hill on the Hamilton pike is to be regraded so that it will be a regular and easy grade from the bottom of the first hill to the top of the second. If in addition to these improvements the abominable streets of Cumminsville could be decently paved and the granite pavement on Colerain avenue be continued from Centre street to Harrison avenue, the local cyclist would be happy.

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

The Chicago's inaugural dance is a thing of the past. It was long waited for, well attended, and everything went off smoothly. Some 150 couples were at the hall when time was called for the grand march. And it can be put down as being one of the best social entertainments ever given by the "knights of the wheel" in this city. Full dress was the order of the evening, and such a vision of female loveliness and manly beauty (a la Thistle) is rarely found. There was Burley Ayres, the life of many a club run; Garden, the "brawny Scot;" Oliver, the truthful; likewise the "twins." Brave Lieutenants, officers and ex-officers, all in the regulation spike-tail, and all most zealous in their attentions to their fair companions. Financially, as well as socially, I am told, it was successful, and will increase the finances of the club in a substantial manner.

Another theatre party is being planned for the return of the Aronson Company in "Erminie." Some 200 seats have already been secured by the Chicagos. The Illinois and Lincolns have been asked to attend also.

Burley Ayres has been forced to resign from the Illinois Club, so Riggs tells me, and has also resigned from the Chicagos. I am sorry to hear this, and hope that both clubs will refuse to accept his resignation. Burley is too active a wheelman to be stricken from the roll of either club.

I see that one of your correspondents is in favor of having the annual meeting of the League officials here in this city. I should like to see this also, and I have no hesitancy in saying that the various clubs here will see that the aforesaid officials have "one continuous round of pleasure," if this city should be decided upon as the place to hold the meeting.

Some one in the St. Louis Spectator thinks we are trying to throw mud on Stone, and that when racing comes again in the spring we will have a chance to quit bluffing. Not at all, my dear boy, far be it from us to throw mud at any one; facts are stubborn things. As for Stone, we appreciate his ability in the racing line, but think our man better, and as you say, "in the spring we will have a chance to see who is bluffing."

Tom Roe has finally established himself as manager of the bicycle department with the Western Arms Co. That little unpleasantness between Roe and his late partner, House, still continues. Tom would like the agency for the Star next year; House seems to be willing for a consideration, but Tom thinks he can get it from the company itself for the asking. Perhaps he can, but I doubt it, for House has made many friends among the wheelmen here while building up the trade he now commands.

As a result of all the talk about the respective merits of Lumsden and Stone, Stone has placed himself in the hands of Mr. Brewster. Lumsden has given his interests over to the tender mercies of Mr. Garden to look after, and it is safe to say that the result will be a series of races in the spring (probably a one, five and ten mile race) for a medal, and either the Chicago or St. Louis boys will find walking very beneficial for the health after the bets are paid, as the friends of both seem bound to wager their all on their favorite. Mr. Brewster says he is glad that team race did not come off last fall, he will be able to get a far better team together in the spring than could have been done last fall. All right, Mr. Brewster, we will have a team ready for you at any time. Why not have the team race during the Lumsden-Stone series?

A next job was put up on Charles Seig at the caucus of the Chicagos, to shelve him from running for the Captaincy again. The majority of the riders think that Charlie should give way for a new man, and although an A No. 1 man, that he promises too much in comparison with what he actually does, and so to do it politely and not hurt genial Charlie's feeling, he was nominated for the Secretaryship, and it went through by acclamation, but Charlie would none of it, it was the Captaincy or nothing, and so he is in the field, with Thorne, ex-President of the C. Bi. C., and Roe as competitors against him, with the odds in favor of Thorne, though Charlie has already promised the offices at his disposal several times over for votes pledged him.

NEW JERSEY NOTES.

"KATCHET."

W. E. Eldridge has been awarded the medal offered by C. V. Futhill, of the Hudson County Wheelmen, to the member of that club scoring the highest road record for 1888. Mr. Eldridge has covered nearly three thousand miles, and is well deserving of the medal, which is one of the handsomest ever made.

The Elizabeth Wheelmen have an athletic class, which practices in the well-equipped club gymnasium every Thursday evening.

The club records of the Elizabeth Wheelmen for the last season show an increase of over 30 per cent. over the previous season in the number of miles covered.

Mr. George C. Pennell, the efficient President of the Elizabeth Wheelmen, has taken the Elizabeth agency for the Columbia wheels, and expects to make a boom when the spring season opens.

Oraton Hall is well patronized by beginners this winter, and the chances are that the number taught to ride within its sacred walls from October 1 to January 1, will aggregate close to one hundred.

It is reported that Ed R. Collins, of the Union County Wheelmen, and J. Armoy Knox, of Texas Siftings, will start for the Bermudas about February 1, and will meander about the islands on a tandem bicycle.

Articles of incorporation have been filed by the Camden Wheelmen, by their counsel, U. G. Styron, Esq. This club is in fine condition, both numerically and financially, and will be heard from in the near future.

The Elizabeth Wheelmen will give a first-class cycling entertainment early in February, probably about the second week, in the Opera House, and among other attractions expect to have the famous trick riders, Maltby and Finley on the bills. When the Elizabeth boys undertake a thing of this kind they always do it in A1 style, and the coming affair promises to be away up.

A League member, dating from Louisville, Ky., asks, "Do L. A. W. members always retain their original number?" Yes, the original number is always retained and is written on the renewal ticket, there is also a renewal number, which is written on the ticket, is used for the convenience of the Secretary's office.

George Gould, the son of the great Jay, is very fond of wheeling, and we are told that he owns a safety bicycle the like of which does not exist. The frame, forks and spokes consist of aluminium, the balls of the bearings are made of diamonds. On the head of the machine is set a diamond of fabulous value, the handles are of mother-of-pearl. The only steel about the machine is the saddle spring. The machine weighs, "all on," less than thirteen pounds, and that is mostly the weight of the rubber. It was made by a prominent Coventry firm, and took eight months to construct.

A CYCLING RELIC.

I was sitting in my easy chair, in front of the open grate, enjoying the warmth and glow of the fire which there burned brightly.

Without, the wind howled, and ever and anon great gusts of it laden with sleet and snow came dashing against the window pane. It was just the night of all nights to sit by the fire and meditate.

I do not remember how long I had been sitting there lost in thought, when glancing over toward the farther corner of the room I saw my bicycle slowly and deliberately step down from its standard and approach the fire.

I was struck dumb with surprise, and could hardly believe my senses, but there it was apparently as full of life as any living thing. Bending over, it turned first one pedal and then the other toward the fire as if warming them, and then turning toward me it crossed one wheel behind the other, leaned against the mantel and cast at me a long, searching look, which I returned as steadily as I could, for I must confess that the strange spectacle made me tremble from head to foot.

At length, after the lapse of what seemed to me a long time, the bicycle spoke. There was a hard, metallic sound to its voice, and it spoke slowly and with great deliberation, as if to impress upon me every word.

"Fine treatment," it began, "I receive at your hands, and I a faithful servant who many and many a time have shown my devotion to you and a regard for your interests seldom exhibited by my kind; yet in weather like this, while you sit comfortably before the fire, I am compelled to stand in the farther corner of the room, close by a northwest window, with the cold wind rushing through the cracks so that every spoke in my wheels shivers. The ill treatment I have received has not been small, and the hardships I have had to undergo have not been few.

You have taken me out in all kinds of weather, banged me round on ferry boats and in baggage cars, slammed me down by the side of the road to be handled by every small boy in the neighborhood, and stumbled over by every blind old fool who chanced to pass.

You have entered me in all sorts of races, and then driven me till the breath was all gone out of me, and all for no purpose, for you have never come within a row of apple trees of winning a race. The worst of all that is, that you are never man enough to own up that you know no more about riding a bicycle in a race than a two-year-old, but you have always given as an excuse, 'my wheel isn't just right for racing.'

Once in a race you let your foot slip off the pedal, and threw me down so that five other bicycles and their riders came piling on top of me, till I felt like the under man in a football scrimmage.

At another time you pretended to make an attempt to break the one hundred-mile road record, and tried to put up a job on the public by riding over a 'ten-mile' circuit which by actual measurement was only six and three eighths miles long, thus compelling me to be an involuntary party to a diabolical scheme to cheat and deceive. Fortunately your left leg gave out at the end of the fifth lap, and nobody ever discovered it.

I remember, too, how time and time again you rode me out to

The Coventry Machinists' Co., Ld., Boston, Mass.:

Gentlemen—As the year is drawing to a close perhaps you would be interested in knowing how the "SWIFT" has fared in this section as compared with other Safeties. To be brief, there are more "SWIFTS" in use here than any other make of Safety. We have not taken a single "ordinary," or any other kind of machine in exchange, as part payment, for a SWIFT during the season. Not a single SWIFT after leaving our hands has to our knowledge been exchanged for other make of safety or sold to a third party. There is not a second-hand "SWIFT" for sale or exchange. And finally, from present indications there will be more "SWIFTS" sold here during the coming season than any two other makes of safeties.

Yours very truly,

LOOK OUT FOR THEIR TANDEM BICYCLE.

A. KENNEDY-CHILD, Superintendent of Agencies.

SPRINGFIELD, U. S.

Jamaica Plain to see a girl with red hair and a mole on her cheek as big as a ten cent piece, and there hour after hour I was compelled to lean up against a tree and listen to the sickening sentiment with which you regaled her."

Then it laughed a low, hollow laugh, and said reflectively: "But it was fun that afternoon the hammock broke down and both of you went sprawling on the grass."

The hard, severe look returned and it went on.

"Not content with riding me yourself you loaned me to novices who twisted my backbone all out of shape and gave me many a knock and tumble in their attempts at riding.

Do you know, though," and its look softened a bit, "I think I know from experience what a pure amateur is."

Then uncrossing its wheels it stood upright, and pointing a handle-bar at me, it said:

"But that's all over now. I've stood it just as long as I am going to. You and I have got to come to an understanding, and that, too, in short order."

Then advancing a step nearer it shook its pedals in my face and said: "You little thought how patient and long suffering I have been, for at any time I could have broken your precious neck had I been so disposed. I have given you a 'header' now and then, when I have held in as long as I could, and once I marred your complexion so that your Jamaica Plain beauty, with the mole on her cheek, took you for a tramp and called the dog when you went there to call, but I have never done you any serious injury.

But patience has ceased to be a virtue, and right here and now I purpose having satisfaction."

I tried to speak, but before I could utter a syllable it commenced to strike me with its pedals, aiming all its blows with unerring accuracy at the pit of my stomach. I tried to ward off the blows, or to escape, but in vain. Then for a moment it ceased striking and I thought the attack was over, but no, it jumped upon me and with the small wheel struck me again and again. At last, with a tremendous effort I sprang from my chair, and seizing the bicycle threw it on the floor and falling on it held it there and shouted at the top of my voice. When I came to, my bicycle was on the floor and I was on top of it. "A."

TERTIUS.

I AM back from Baltimore; I mean a part of me is.

The rest of myself is scattered around in the classic mud of Maryland's shining shore.

I'm a wreck!

But Great Scott!

You ought to see Secretary!

He is a smashed cyclone, a demoralized blizzard, a reversed tornado, a paralyzed hurricane; he is a bike without spokes, a watch without a mainspring, a locomotive without a boiler, a piano without strings.

Jerusalem!

It happened this way:

In my last letter I said "I would have a run before the year ended if it took a lung."

Well!

When I got my bike in shape for running "a right, smart heap o' weather had done set in," as Secretary would say.

So I thought a think.

Why not run down to Baltimore, see Secretary, and have an old-time "run" with him?

At the same time I could pay him that ten cents which I suppose is due him. I say "suppose," because I am not sure about it. You see, I asked Secretary to have a "shandy gaff" with me one day; a "shandy gaff" is a fifteen-cent drink; Secretary said that he would take a five-cent cigar and ten cents? He duns me for that dime in his last letter, so, says I to myself, says I, "he shall have it."

I took the night express and reached Baltimore the next day. Baltimore is celebrated for oysters, beer, niggers, pirates, lovely women, brick sidewalks, monuments, red clay, the Secretary, mules, mud and a riot.

I went over to the club house, met Secretary, paid him the dime, set up a bottle of Mumm, was treated to a "two fer" cigar, borrowed a bike, and then, like lambs at play, Secky and I started out for a run.

Ah me!

Can mortal tongue tell? can mortal pen picture the events of that day?

I wot not.

Yet, in my feeble way, I will take a shy at it.

"Where shall we go?" said he.

"Damfino," said I.

"Let's run down to Washington," he suggested.

"How far is it?" I asked.

"Between forty and fifty miles," he replied.

"Washington it is," said I.

So we started.

At first we jogged along slowly—probably fifteen or twenty miles an hour—my friend making things interesting by pointing out celebrated landmarks. Here was a large oak tree with cleft trunk which was caused by Secky's running into it with his bike; there, a chasm thirty feet wide, which he had leaped at a bound, with his bike on his shoulder; anon we crossed a railroad, and my friend suggested that we ride down it.

"Rather rough," I remarked.

"Rough?" he echoed. "Why, Tertius, the rails are smooth as glass."

I caught on.

It is quite a trick to run a bike on a single rail, but after slipping off a few times I steadied down, and we just hummed.

I was on the right hand rail and Secky was on the left. I saw that Secky was rushing me, so I clinched my teeth and humped.

Faster and faster.

The telegraph poles formed a thin, hazy line.

Faster and faster!

We passed Odenton like a flash, and a few seconds later were in Bowie—ten miles away.

Then something happened.

Just beyond Bowie the road takes a sharp turn, curving to the south. Around this curve we rushed at a speed which only light or electricity could equal. And then—

Horror of horrors!

We met an express train!

The engineer would not turn out and we could not.

Scarcely two miles separated us, and before Secky or I could reach for our brakes we struck the train.

Our bikes behaved nobly.

They cut through the outer edges of the cow-catcher like cheese, lopped off the little wheels and big driving wheels of the engine, and then we stuck.

The shock flung us clear over the train and landed us, kerplunk, in the Eastern branch of the Potomac, near Bladensburg, not more than ten or twelve miles away.

The shock was terrible.

I landed in the mud, battered and bruised, but, luckily, no bones were broken.

I waded ashore, dragging my friend behind me.

Poor, poor Secky!

One of his own shoes—number twelves, too—had hit him in the back of the head, and the other had slugged him under the chin.

The gray matter of his brain was joggled out of place, several teeth were loosened, one of his generous ears split, both eyes in mourning, and in fact he did not look at all nice.

I brought him round with a gallon or two of kerosene, and returned home, where I am slowly recovering my normal condition.

Yours truly, TERTIUS.

THE "TRIPLET" QUADRICYCLE TAKES ANOTHER RECORD.

THE Rudge Triplet Quadricycle, with S. G. Whittaker, E. Oxborrow and Jack Lees "up," did the half-mile road record in great shape Dec. 19, to the tune of 1m. 9 4-5s. The distance on the Menden road near Coventry was measured by S. Golder. The wind was strong and a head one, and the road was rough. The timers were S. Golder, F. W. Allard and S. G. Woolton.

WHEW!! A MILE IN 2.18 1-5.

WE clip the following from the Cyclist of 19th ult., and we shall await verification with bated breath: "Just as we are going to press we learn by wire from Buckden, that a mile has been ridden in 2m. 18 1-5s., on Phillips' "Triplet" cycle, with Whittaker, Oxborrow and Lee up. Timekeepers, Rowe, Hillyer and several others. The roads grand."

[LATER.—The Cyclist of the 26th is at hand but a careful scanning of its pages fails to reveal any further reference to the above claim. Can it be a canard? And yet the Rudge people are advertising the record (?).—ED.]

HILL CLIMBING AT WASHINGTON.

"LAST week at Washington, D. C., several pedestrians witnessed Mr. E. F. Rosenberg break the previous records of hill climbing, held by P. M. Harris, of New York, at Sixteenth street and Boundary, commonly known amongst wheelmen as Stand-Pipe Hill. He made fifteen round trips in forty-one minutes, without a dismount, and rode his forty-six-inch Springfield Roadster. His intention was to make twenty-four round trips, but his timekeeper refused to wait longer on account of the chilly weather. Among those who witnessed the remarkable feat were Messrs. Ide, G. V. W. Knox, Dr. Lee and Hills, of the Washington Cycle Club, and many others."—Exchange.

A PILGRIMAGE FROM FRANKFURT TO BAYREUTH.

BY F. A. SPENCER.

(Concluded.)

Each act lasted an hour, and with an intermission of one hour between the acts, brought the performance up to ten o'clock. There was a great rush after the performance, some hurrying to get a seat in trains for various directions, others to get a seat in the most popular "kneipe" or beer restaurant. This latter is known as "Angermann's." Wagner used to sit there of an evening and drink his glass mugs of the celebrated Munich beer, and smoke. The place is a classical resort devoted to very unclassical uses. The entry is dark and forbidding. Immediately at the right is a chamber about twenty feet by seven feet, with low arched ceiling, and decorated with scenes born in the artist's mind. When we arrived the place was already packed, and people were eating and drinking from planks placed on beer kegs in the entry. Places had been reserved for us and we took our seats. At our table sat Wm. Steinway, of New York, Herr Scheidemantel, one of the leading baritones, Herr Halier, first violin in the orchestra, two or three male singers of less repute, and several chorus girls. At the other table sat noted German music directors, singers and actors, as well as a mixed collection of members of the common herd. During this season Bayreuth is cosmopolitan to the last degree. Everybody addresses everybody else, without previous introduction, and all the iron-bound rules of German conservatism are utterly ignored. The revelry was carried on until early morning, but we discreetly retired before midnight. On the following morning we heard a familiar sound of wheels, and we looked out upon a party of a dozen wheelmen, who, we learned, had followed in our tracks from Bamberg. They had come to see the second performance. The German wheelmen wear the most undignified and inappropriate headgear I have ever seen on wheelmen anywhere. Several were supplied with willowy riding whips to chastise impertinent dogs and small boys with. These are carried in a nickeled socket at right angles to the handle-bars. One of these doughty cyclists must have tried to ride down a hill which we discreetly walked down. We judged that he had climbed over the handle-bars and tried the quality of the road with the skin of his face and temple.

On the following day we attended the performance of "die Meistersinger." This was in direct contrast to "Parsifal" in its object and character. It was light and amusing. It is regarded as Wagner's nearest approach to comic opera. The old adage, of familiarity breeding contempt, was fully exemplified in ourselves. We approached the building and took our places in a much less awe-stricken spirit than on the day before. The usual visit to "Angermann's" followed.

The following morning saw us under way, refreshed and impatient for new hills to conquer. We reached them soon enough —and were conquered. Near the bottom a troop of dirty peasant boys rushed out and fell in behind us. Soon a brown arm and hand reached under my arm, and grasping my back-bone, or rather that of my machine, began helping me push up the hill. The same happened to E. It meant a "trink-geld" at the top, of about two cents, but as we hadn't gotten tired yet, we, with some difficulty, shook the urchins off. It was evidently their custom to approach every wheelman that passed in the same way, and many had no doubt availed themselves of their services. A climb of about twenty minutes brought us to a similar rolling plateau as that on the other side of the valley. We passed from this, however, into a most charming valley, very narrow and with precipitous wooded sides. We stopped for dinner at a small post hotel. Beyond this we had more climbing, with a subsequent and delightfully long coast. The character of the road was, as usual, superb, and so we bowled along at a good pace and covered about forty miles during the afternoon. Towards evening we were so high up in the mountains and the temperature was so low that our teeth fairly chattered upon mounting after a short halt. The remainder of our ride took us through an almost level country with uniformly fine roads. On the day next to the last of our tour we rode in and out such a way as to pass through five provinces. Three were petty duchies, of which one rarely hears outside of Germany. After a spin of about thirty miles on magnificent side paths we rode into Leipsic.

This ended our tour, and the greasy, muddy pavements gave each of us the first fall we had had in a trip of nearly 250 miles. Our actual riding time was about forty-five hours. The trip was novel, lay through charming country, and presented roads which it would be difficult to equal for the same distance and under similar conditions. We always avoided putting up at large towns, and in this way our expenses averaged about $1.50 a day.

Our wheels were ignominiously packed after doing us such good service, and we parted company, the one bound for London, the other for Berlin.

THE END.

THE EAGLE BICYCLE.

For some time past we have solicited information from the proper source in regard to the intentions of the Eagle Bicycle Mfg. Co., of Stamford, Conn., but we were always met courteously by Mr. L. B. Gaylor, the Vice President, with the reply that "all in good time and when the Eagle Bicycle Mfg. Co. is ready to place machines on the market we will give you the information." That this firm is now ready to announce will be appreciated by our readers after reading this article and their advertisement on page 153.

It will be of interest to know who are the men back of this new enterprise and we therefore print the names of the officers and directors.

Officers—C. H. Lounsbury, President; L. B. Gaylor, Vice President and Superintendent: D. H. Clark, Treasurer: E. S. Walsh, Secretary.

Directors—Hon. W. T. Minor, Hon. E. L. Scofield, Chas. H. Lounsbury, Walton Ferguson, D. H. Clark, Charles Gaylor, Dr. I. F. Wardwell, E. S. Walsh and L. B. Gaylor.

The company's headquarters are at Stamford, Conn., and we believe it is their intention not to manufacture any other machine except the one which is the subject of this article. It is claimed for that it possesses the elements of unsurpassed speed, lightness, strength, absolute safety from headers, easy running, a positive and powerful direct acting brake. In its make up none but the best steel forgings are used, and nothing has been spared to produce a first-class wheel in every particular. In view of the fact that the company sent us only one cut, we must refer our readers to page 153, where they will find the cut used in the advertisement of the Eagle bicycle.

The strong point in the rear-driving safeties is that the rider is propelling the machine from a fixed axle and that the driving and steering are accomplished by different wheels.

The Eagle has these two very strong points with the further point that the driving is done by cranks directly on the wheel without the auxiliaries of chain or gear.

Fully 90 per cent. of the weight of the rider is on the driving wheel, where it should be: in fact, after a rider has mastered the Eagle the front wheel can be said to "skim" the ground instead of rolling over it.

The steering is very easy and the machine can be run without hands after very little practice. It will be noticed that there are two steering centres, one near the head and one just over the small wheel.

The front forks are curved so that the tendency is to draw and not push the wheel over the ground.

The brake is powerful, and the lever is brought out to the end of the right handle-bar and is applied in a similar manner as that of the ordinary.

The saddle is adjustable for stretch and also for tilt.

The large wheel has 64 direct spokes fastened by a neat sleeve and nipple to the rim.

The bearings are of the best Bown adjustable pattern, to both wheels and to the pedals.

The handles are pear shaped, vulcanite, and the bar is bent well back, so as to be under control of the rider.

The mounting is done by the pedal. In connection with this we clip from the Eagle catalogue the following: "The Eagle is easy to mount. We do not mean by this that any person without knowing how to handle this bicycle, can get at once into the saddle without any difficulty. But we do mean that when a person has once learned to ride the Eagle well, there is no wheel made which is more easily or quickly mounted, the fact that is has only pedals for a step may to some seem an objection, while to others who have been accustomed to mount by the pedal, the following explanation is of course unnecessary. It is well known that in learning the pedal mount on the "ordinary" the greatest difficulty encountered is the danger of taking a header simultaneously with the mount, and many after one or two such experiences give it up and satisfy themselves with climbing on by the step. The form of the Eagle, however, is such that no matter how clumsily the rider may throw his weight upon the pedal, the machine cannot tip forward, and he has only to give his attention to properly steering it to prevent it from falling sideways."

The Eagle Co. are in the market with the intention of pushing their machine for all it is worth; with this end in view, it is the desire of this company to secure the services of live responsible agents in every town and city in the country. To such we would advise that they address the Eagle Bicycle Mfg. Co., Stamford, Conn., and full particulars can be procured.

THE COLUMBIA TANDEM SAFETY.

The Pope Mfg. Co. score another "first" in producing the first tandem safety bicycle ever built for the market in the United States. The "dwarf" machine in its different forms of single and double has come to stay, and will be one of the most popular mounts of the coming season. The Pope Mfg. Co. forecast the public taste by producing a machine of this type, and we are confident that their enterprise will receive a fitting and substantial reward.

The frame is made of the regular seamless steel tubing used by this firm and is braced at every point possible to secure strength and rigidity. When a lady is to ride, then the brace that extends from the front seat rod to the frame back of steering head is removed. It is recommended that when two men ride the machine, that this brace be kept in position.

The steering can be controlled by the front or the back rider by means of the adjustable connecting rod shown in the cut. This rod is detachable and the steering can be all done by the front rider if desired. The handle bars are each of one piece of the best seamless steel tube, strengthened in the middle by an inner tube to provide against breakage, and curved to bring the handles into the proper position. They are keyed into the straight arms by semi-tubular taper keys, which can easily be withdrawn when this is necessary.

The brakes are applied to both back and front wheel. An adjustable plunger brake applying directly upon the front tire is under the control of front rider, while a well connected and powerful lever-spoon brake at the rear is under the control of the back rider.

The wheels are thirty inches, solid crescent felloes, forty-four tangent spokes to driving wheel and thirty-six tangent spokes to front wheel. The tires are 7 1-8 endless moulded best quality rubber.

The bearings are similar to those used on the Light Roadster Safety, and are made with a full appreciation of the requirements of a double machine.

The driving gear is made carefully and with reference to the great strain that must be put on it. The Ewart chain is used, and the fact that under test it bears a strain of 2,000 pounds before breaking sufficiently demonstrates its strength. The regular gear is 57, though it can be fitted with a 54 or a 60 gear if desired.

Knous cranks are used and the throw is adjustable to 5 3-4, 6 1-4 or 6 3-4. If desired, cranks can be fitted for 5, 5 1-2 or 6 throw. The Columbia double grip ball pedals are fitted, but in case parallel pedals are preferred a reduction of $5 will be made from full list price for each pair. Adjustable L seat rods. Harrington cradle-spring, with Knous adjustable saddle front, and Kirkpatrick saddle rear. Detachable steel-wire lantern bracket. Foot-rests. Guards to both wheels and chains. Tool-bag, with Columbia B. & S. monkey-wrench, screw-driver and oil-can. Weight, 82 pounds. Finish, enamel and nickel tips. Price fitted with ball pedals $200, with parallel pedals $190.

THE ELWELL EUROPEAN TOUR.

Editor Bicycling World: As a cyclist who has been on three of F. A. Elwell's tours, I want to say a word about the proposed European tour for next summer. His method of conducting them leaves to every man his own liberty of riding at whatever speed he chooses, with whom he wishes, and of stopping for lacteous fluids as often as he needs a bath. The cost of the trip, $400, is exceedingly low, and he will make no money from it, as I personally know he did not come out even on the other tours. Every other wheelman who has been on one of his tours can testify to this. He is always ready to sacrifice his own comfort for his companions, and his expedient resources always bring everybody through all right. The riders he collects together in his tours have invariably been quiet, gentlemanly wheelmen, who are a credit to the sport. I would not miss going on this European tour for twice its cost, and will guarantee the jolliest trip of his life to every one who goes.

Junius E. Beal,
Michigan Division Representative.

[We most heartily endorse the above words of praise. Those who attended the several tours down East and to Bermuda, under Mr. Elwell's management, will bear us out in saying Mr. Elwell is a very prince of leaders in tours.—Ed.]

Louis Harrison, one of the best known cyclers among the old-timers, and at one time the editor of the World, has returned to this country after a residence in Paris of several years. We hope soon to see Mr. Harrison in Boston, and then we shall learn his plans as to his future residence.

Although it is nearly two months before the Presidential election the political pot is already boiling pretty hot.

The late Wm. Woolsey, of Hartford Co., Md., bequeathed in his will the sum of $60,000 to be used in turnpiking the roads of that county. The sums specified to be expended on certain roads are as follows: On the road from Belair to Churchville, $10,000; road from Churchville to Havre de Grace, $20,000; road from Churchville to Darlington, $15,000. Equal sums, per mile, are specified to be used on the roads from Churchville to Aberdeen, and from Churchville to Calvary.

This talk about Pennsylvania being disloyal is all bosh and twaddle. If people imagine that a large body like the League can be run without the managers being criticised they are very much mistaken. And yet we find the so-called "disloyalty" of Pennsylvania to consist merely of a certain amount of criticism which may not be entirely just. If "criticism" and "disloyalty" are synonyms, then we fear we must be placed on the side of the naughty rebels. A truce to this "disloyalty" racket!

The Rhode Island Wheelmen, of Providence, held their second annual New Year's Eve stag party Dec. 31, 1888, at their club house on South Main street. There was a large attendance and refreshments were served about 10 P. M., and to which the party did full justice. Captain Speirs also called a club run for the same evening, and at 11.45 P. M. eleven of the most venturesome members followed their Captain over slippery pavements and sticky roads for an hour and a quarter. When arriving back at the club house they dispersed, every one pronouncing the party to be a success.

ABBOT BASSETT, Secretary.

MR. SHRIVER raises the point regarding the filling of vacancies in the office of delegate to the National Assembly which are created by the increase of membership. The case under discussion arises because we have no code of by-laws in harmony with the Constitution. It has seemed to us that a liberal construction of the Constitution would allow each State to make such rules as it shall choose for the filling of vacancies in its delegation to the National Assembly and we have so advised in several instances. But if the rule is so hard and fast, as Mr. Shriver insists, it is just as well for us to know it now. We have laid the matter before the Executive Committee with a request that they consider the matter and render a decision. The vacancies announced in the BULLETIN were not all as Mr. Shriver seems to think, created by increase, but in some of the States elections that should have been held during September, have never been reported at this office.

THE Executive Committee held a meeting in New York last week and, among other work, they investigated the charges made against Mr. C. H. Luscomb who, it is alleged, issued a circular in the name of the League, favoring the election of Governor Hill of New York. The result of the investigation is given in the communication published this week. The statement made by Mr. Luscomb was satisfactory to the Committee but it has been thought best not to give his defence at this time. At the February meeting Mr. Luscomb will present the annual report of the Rights and Privileges Committee, and he promises to deal with the subject at that time, giving a history of the case and the reasons which called for the circular. This will bring the matter officially before the National Assembly and every member may then put himself on record in the case. This has been thought to be a better way to deal with the question than to set and on foot a newspaper discussion.

THE Texans are moving for new roads. At a recent meeting of the Dallas County Road Convention, Col. J. B. Simpson stated the object of the convention to be to help the county out of the "slough of despond" into which it drops every winter, and sometimes during the summer. His idea of relief lay in securing a fund ample to build four great lines of thoroughfare through the country, running to the cardinal points or in such directions as the judgment of the county commissioners might decide. He was in favor of issuing a million dollars bonds for road construction. The county, he said, was now wasting annually in the construction and repair of highways about $50,000, an amount sufficient to pay interest on $1,000,000 at five per cent, at which rate there would be no trouble in placing the bonds either in this country or in Europe. The people to be brought into the country by improved roads would, he said, pay their quota to the interest and sinking fund, and as property advanced the requirements would be met still easier. The question in a nutshell was, were the people of Dallas county prepared to continue a wasteful course or would they, without an increased expenditure, resolve upon having a system of good macadamized roads, with the additional stimulant to their property that an expenditure of a million dollars would entail. Regarding the constitutional features of the case the consensus of opinion of able lawyers was, he said, that there was no constitutional inhibition against action by the Legislature authorizing the issuance of the bonds.

The following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that a wise and conservative general law be passed at the next session of the State Legislature authorizing the various counties of the State, under restrictions to be provided by law, to issue public road bonds, not exceeding 4 per cent. of the taxable values in each county, said bonds to run not less than twenty years, and to bear not more than 6 per cent. interest, and to be sold at not less than par value; not more than 33 1/3 per cent. of the whole number of bonds to be issued and placed upon the market in each of three years; ample provision to be made by law, out of the fund, to keep constructed roads in good repair.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to confer with the Representatives-elect from this county in respect to the framing of an amended road law for this State, and that such amended road law be framed by said committee and presented to the next Legislature.

Resolved, That the acting County Judges of Dallas county be requested to correspond with the black land counties of Texas, and cordially invite delegates from all of said counties to assemble at Dallas or Fort Worth on Saturday, the 5th of January, 1889, to discuss the improvement of county roads, and to formulate and recommend to the coming Legislature a satisfactory road law, which shall permit the issuance by counties of a reasonable amount of bonds for road construction.

* National Assembly.

The allotment of delegates to the National Assembly is made on the basis of membership September 1st. If the Executive Committee shall decide that the Divisions are entitled to fill vacancies made by increase of membership the Assembly will be increased by one delegate from each of the States: California, Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania and a Vice Consul from Tennesee. Of the members ex-officiis eight are members of the Assembly otherwise, and the total of the Board is decreased thus much so far as the February meet is concerned.

From the Executive Committee.

The Executive Committee having investigated the issue of the circular in New York State in favor of the support of Governor Hill by the wheelmen, find that the circumstances attending the matter were such that there was no other course consistent with the honor and interests of the L. A. W. than the action taken by the chairman of the Committee on Rights and Privileges.

That while the matter of how far the L. A. W. shall participate as an organization in political contests is a question for the National Assembly alone to determine, the conditions present in New York State at the time of the issue of the circular, called for immediate response from the representatives of the organization.

Delegates to the National Assembly, L. A. W.

Editor of the Bulletin:

Dear Sir—Please do not consider me unduly censorious if I ask whether the vacancies in the National Assembly, announced in the current Bulletin, are vacancies caused by death, resignation etc., or by increased membership in the several Divisions and in either case, under what authority Chief Consuls can fill vacancies by appointment. The new Constitution provides, Article IV, Section 1, that the National Assembly shall consist of certain named officials, "to be elected as hereinafter provided," among whom are "Delegates from the several Divisions and Sub-Divisions." Section 2 says that "each Division shall elect a Chief Consul, etc., annually, between the 15th day of July and the 15th day of August;" and Section 4 that "each Division Board of Officers (whose constitution is prescribed in Section 3) shall hold its annual meeting in the month of September and shall then elect from the Division one Delegate for each two hundred members upon its roll on September 1st;" and that these Delegates with the Chief and Vice Consuls, "shall constitute the National Assembly." Nobody, therefore, has any business in the National Assembly except a Chief or a Vice Consul elected by a Division between July 15 and August 15, a Chief Consul elected by a sub-Division of 50 or more as appointed by the President to rule over a sub-Division of less than fifty or a Delegate elected by a Division Board at its September meeting on the basis of apportionment unalterably fixed at September 1st. There is no provision for expansion by growth between September 1st of one year and September 1st of the next year and no provision for filling vacancies, however caused, except that the President may appoint if a sub-Division fails to hold an election of Chief Consul when entitled to do so. The invariable rule of all constitutional instruments is that when no way of filling a vacancy is provided for, it can be only filled in the manner of original appointment or election. The vote of the Baltimore Meet to adopt the old By Laws as far as applicable to the new Constitution, until new By-Laws are prepared, does not govern in this case. The By-Laws are necessarily inferior to the Constitution and that having defined who shall constitute its governing body and how they are to be chosen, the By-Laws cannot alter that definition by adding any other persons whatsoever. Moreover, the old by-Laws deal only with a Board of Officers and know nothing of a National Assembly, which is a new creation of a new Constitution. Under the circumstances therefore, it would seem that no Chief Consul has the right to make any of the appointments called for and that no vacancies even exist if it is for the purpose of representing a larger membership than was upon the rolls of a Division at September 1st. Yours truly,

E. J. SHRIVER.

APPLICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP.

The Best Business Calendar Published

THE Columbia Calendar for 1889, although on the same general lines as its predecessors, shows marked improvement. The leaves are not pasted, but sewed at the end, so that any leaf can be immediately turned to. The stand is made of pressed pulp, handsomely gilded, and practically indestructible. There is ample space for memoranda on each leaf, and there are 365 leaves. Although this is the fourth year of the Columbia Calendar, the matter contained upon the slips is fresh and new, and as usual gives much valuable suggestion on the whole broad field of cycling. The Calendar is sent by mail on receipt of twelve two cent stamps. Address Advertising Department, Pope Mfg. Co., Boston, Mass.

THE · SPRINGFIELD · ROADSTER · VOLANT · SAFETY.

LIGHT, COMPACT, STRONG AND DURABLE.

We wish to call the attention of the public generally to our new improved VOLANT SAFETY, which we have been induced to prepare to place on the market for 1889 to fill a long-felt want for those who desire to ride and do not wish to stride a high wheel, and for those who wish to purchase a wheel which can be adjusted to fit the whole family from a rider of 44 to 58 inches, and still for those who desire a machine that can be adjusted to them as they grow.

The VOLANT combines features of merit which can readily be appreciated by all. Our walking lever motion enables us to bring the wheels much closer together, thus distributing the weight to better advantage, also making it much less sensitive to steer. It has Ball Bearings all around, runs light, and is strong and compact. We shall have them ready for delivery by Feb. 15th to March 1st. Retail price $115.

THE NEW MAIL.

Only wheel with Trigwell's Ball Bearing Head! Has had another year of Extraordinary Success! No breaking down about This Wheel.

TESTIMONIALS.

12,890 1-2 miles on a New Mail. Rather a Record for a wheel.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 3, 1888.

Messrs. Wm. Read & Sons—

Dear Sirs: I have ridden your New Mail 12,890 1-2 miles during the past two years, and I find that it stands the hard riding I have put it to admirably.

I would not care to ride a wheel without the ball head which the New Mail is fitted with. In October I rode 1700 miles in 27 days, which is the American record for one month's riding. I do not know of any one having ridden more than the above for two consecutive years, viz., 12,890 1-2 miles.

Respectfully yours, WM. T. MURPHY,
Kings County Wheelmen.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Dec. 19, 1888.

Messrs. Wm. Read & Sons—

Gents: The New Mail, I must say, is the strongest and best made wheel I ever rode. As I have ridden about all the different makes of bicycles used in this country, and have made a study of the different kinds of heads, I must say that the Trigwell ball head is the most perfect head on the market. I have used it for three years, and have never had it work loose on the road. Yours truly, W. B. MIDDLEBROOK, Bridgeport Wheel Club.

Messrs. Wm. Read & Sons, 107 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.—

Dear Sirs: About one (1) year ago I bought one of your "New Mails." I have ridden it about 2800 miles over all kinds of roads (a great many miles on Jersey City cobble), and it has been true every time. I have not had a nut loosen in that time, and have adjusted the ball head but once. The backbone is indeed "perfection;" firm as a rock. I cannot say enough in its favor. There is not, in my opinion, a wheel made that equals it. You can use this as you wish.

Yours respectfully, J. E. DAY.
Dec. 25, 1888.

Wm. Read & Sons—

Gentlemen: I cannot pay any tribute to the Trigwell ball bearing head which will do it justice. Only those who ride constantly and hard, and have changed from a cone to a ball head can appreciate what a blessing it is. I have used it for three years over all kinds of roads, and found it simply perfect. It has converted the riders of every manner of machine in this vicinity.

Very truly yours, WM. H. MEALY.

EDITORS:

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 11 JANUARY, 1889.

13,250.

THE above figures represent the present circulation of the BICYCLING WORLD AND L. A. W. BULLETIN, and should be full of import and suggestion to our present and prospective advertisers. The above circulation, 13,250, is larger by far than all the rest of the cycling publications published in this country put together. This fact is one that should not be lost sight of, and when our rates are compared with other publications of not much over one tenth the circulation of the BICYCLING WORLD AND BULLETIN it will be appreciated at once that our charges for space are extremely reasonable.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

BELIEVING that the BICYCLING WORLD AND L. A. W. BULLETIN, with its 13,250 weekly circulation, is a splendid medium for those who advertise, we have determined to go into the field very actively this coming season. In connection with this decision we have made arrangements whereby Mr. W. Neumann will solicit business for our advertising columns in the East, while Messrs. Lindsay & Tayler will represent us in Chicago, Cincinnati, and west of those two cities.

Mr. Neumann is a well-known and very successful canvasser in New York and Boston, and we bespeak for him a continuance of the kind patronage which has been his in the past.

Messrs. Lindsay & Tayler are as well known in Chicago as Mr. Neumann is in New York, and they are spoken of as men who can push a good thing when they have it. That the tools we place in their hands, coupled with their skill as good advertising men, will produce practical results, is in our mind a foregone conclusion.

With the introduction of the gentlemen who will solicit advertising patronage for this paper, we will close by asking the gentlemen in question to take off their coats and fire that 13,250 circulation at the head and reason of every available advertiser in this broad land of ours.

OUR good Governor Ames, in his third inaugural address, recommends the appointment of a Highway Commissioner in the following language:

"The economic and proper construction and maintenance of suitable roads, streets and bridges throughout the Commonwealth is at all times of great interest to the public, and while every community is more or less dependent upon steam railroads for the carrying of passengers and freight, yet all such passengers and freight have to pass over the roads leading to and from the steam roads. The knowledge and skill required to construct and maintain good roads and bridges in the most economic manner requires long experience, combined with good judgment and a special knowledge of the relative value of available materials. I therefore recommend the passage of a law authorizing the appointment of some suitable and skilful person who shall have a general advisory oversight of the roads and bridges of the cities, towns and counties of the Commonwealth, who may be freely consulted by the local authorities without charge, and who shall make an annual report to the Legislature relative to the roads and bridges in the Commonwealth, with such suggestions as from time to time shall tend to promote the public interest."

We call the attention of this recommendation to Chief Consul Emery, with the suggestion that he take advantage of the way pointed out to the League to be of some practical, tangible benefit. If we could have an intelligent and efficient man whose sole business was to secure improved highways, it would be a good thing, and is worth trying for.

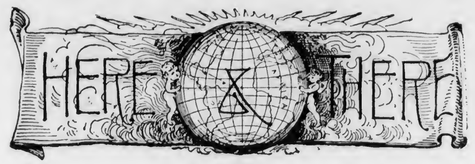
GOV. BEAVER, of Pennsylvania, also comes out strongly in his inaugural message, which also has the right ring to it. That State governments are beginning to urge some method of improving the highways is a cheerful omen for the future. A pleasing feature in the Governor's message is that he takes occasion to specially mention riders of the cycle as having rights in the premises. We append the paragraph on roads in the message:

"It is said that the civilization of a country is marked by its roads. If this be true, Pennsylvania cannot claim to have ranked highest in civilization. It is safe to say that no expenditure of public moneys yields so little in return as the road taxes of Pennsylvania. Our entire system of road laws—or rather our road laws which lack system—should be thoroughly revised and codified. They served their purpose when temporary roads were to be laid out and cheaply made through unbroken forests and over lands which had but little value. The time has come when it will be economy, in every way, to build our roads permanently and substantially.

The comfort of our people, economy in the transportation of our products, saving in the wear and tear of vehicles and animals, and the needless multiplication of highways, all demand that the laws governing the laying out and construction of our roads, should be radically reformed and systematized

This may be considered a matter of minor importance, and yet it affects every inhabitant of the Commonwealth. We must all use at some time or other, in some way or other, our public roads. Their character and condition affect the breeding of our stock, the style of our vehicles, the carrying capacity of the farmer's wagon, and the speed and enjoyment of all who travel them for business or pleasure, either in the carriage, in the saddle, on the bicycle or on foot.

A thorough system should be devised and authorized by the Legislature which could be put into immediate effect by our older communities, and adopted by those which are newer as their ability and the wants of their people might require."



TOM STEVENS OFF AGAIN ON AN IMPORTANT EXPEDITION.

MR. THOMAS STEVENS, who has been retained for some time by the New York World as a special correspondent, has been suddenly dispatched on an important expedition for "the World."

As the journey is undertaken on the basis of six months' absence all Mr. Stevens' lecture and other engagements for this season will have to be cancelled. Should Mr. Stevens accomplish the object of his present expedition and decide to enter the lecture field upon his return, his value as a platform attraction will be greatly enhanced thereby.

In that case he may be depended upon to do the right thing by those who have been put to inconvenience by his sudden departure on "the World's" mission and the necessary cancellation of his present dates, should they desire to secure his services.

Yours sincerely, G. W. TURNER,
Business Manager New York World.

"HAWKSHAW."

MANY years ago, between the covers of some now forgotten school book, I remember reading the fact that from the grim and homely cocoon came the brilliant and gorgeous butterfly. So long ago has this been that I had entirely forgotten the fact until to-day, as I sat, a la George Francis Train, upon a bench in Central Park, looking at the throng of gay equipages with their loads of Fashion's butterflies, and then, as the ever-present wheelman rushed hither and thither through the press of carriages, my mind drifted back to the days of long ago, when these wheelmen were little better than outlaws upon the roadways of this same park, and while I thus compared his position then with his freedom now, I thought of this cocoon butterfly affair, though in a much reversed way, since in the case of the butterfly it is an evolution of showy brilliancy from unartistic sources, while with the wheelman it has been a retrogression from the dazzling raiment and equipment of the past, to the sombre garments and makeup of the present. To see the rider of to-day, mounted upon a wheel devoid of the brilliant sheen of nickel plate, with its size shrunken from the towering height of the ordinary to the insignificancy of the rear driver, perhaps with no uniform at all, or if so, with one of the utmost severity of color and construction; who would recognize in the cycling cocoon of the present the gaudy butterfly wheelman of the past? Not you or I, Mr. Editor, would we? No indeed, we have both been there ourselves, and our memories here play us no pranks when we call upon them to furnish us with mental views of the dear old dead and gone butterfly of our cycling infancy. But there are thousands now riding where there were dozens then, and it is for the benefit of these that we must conjure up these memories of the by-gone, and by the aid of the camera of the press, photograph them upon the pages of the BICYCLING WORLD AND BULLETIN, so that we may not be accused of being stingy through reserving these artistic likenesses of an almost forgotten past for the sole enjoyment of ourselves.

'Tis said that a "thing of beauty is a joy forever," then judged by this standard the butterfly of the elder-day was not "a thing of beauty," since he endureth not, and having passed away remains only "to memory dear," and his place in the eyes of the multitude is to-day filled by the cocoon of the less poetic, perhaps, but more practical rider of the present, from which cocoon has been spun the mighty silken web of the L. A. W. and its thousands of members. Let me picture a little more definitely one of these butterflies as I remember them. Take the dead and buried Mercury Club of this city as an example, and let us see if Solomon in his best ready-made suit ever held a candle to them for gorgeousness of raiment. Their uniforms were made in Paris, at a cost of $50 per man, and consisted of a royal purple velvet coat, knee breeches of white doeskin, with stockings and jersey of purple silk to match the color of the coat, topping all of this was a diminutive polo cap, projecting upward from each side of which were two large gilt wings, in a supposed imitation of those pictured as springing from the head piece of their Mercurial namesake. This, when mounted up a full nickeled wheel weighing nearly a hundred pounds, with fifteen-inch handle-bars which were continually knocking the wind out of the butterfly as he struggled to reach the pedals of a machine at least two sizes too large for him (for your true butterfly despised to be mounted upon any bicycle whose pedals he could reach in any other manner than with the tips of his toes), while his leg was extended to its fullest possible length, gives you a true and unexaggerated pen portrait of this theatrical pioneer of the cause of cycling. He's gone now, never again to flash across the vision of a startled public, and the cocoon that has succeeded him, in his homely but serviceable covering of gray or brown, is certainly an improvement much to be desired. But still, like all old people, you and I, Mr. Editor, will often find ourselves wishing we were back to the good old butterfly days of our cycling careers, which, despite its many faults and failings, carried with it so much of the pleasures of novelty and youth, that now even with all the cycling improvements that exist we cannot find because of the satiety and age that has fallen upon us. Vale! my dear old butterfly. You are but one of the many brilliant colorings of our youth that has faded into the obscurity of our old age. You were too beautiful to last, and you live henceforth but in the fond memories of the "old-timer," who will cherish you for what he thought you to be, mistaken though perhaps he was.

YOUR St. Louis correspondent, "Linneus," says that when the Chicago flyer, Lumsden, runs against the Stone wall of St. Louis' racing champion, that the wheelmen of the last named city "will all put their pile on Stone;" sort of a "stone pile" as it were.

DON'T think I am going to act the part of a reviewer when I follow the above item by yet another based upon an extract from another of your able corps of contributors, for I am not, but really, when "Ariel" speaks of taking "a spin up the River drive, along the frozen banks of the Schuylkill, with the thermometer somewhere near ten above," and winds up the account of his pleasant experiences in doing so by further stating that he hopes "it may be thus all winter," I am led to believe that cycling has undergone a greater change than most of the "old timers" are aware of. Surely Conant Foster had not such a ride in mind when he penned these lines:

"Come! mount and away! Let the tuneful lay
Flow on to the treadle's timing;
Yet, tarry, I pray—for a moment stay,
And list to the water's rhyming."

Much I fear, that no matter how poetic might be the temperament of the cycler, that the charm of "waters rhyming" would not cause him to "tarry" and "list" to them, with the thermometer "somewhere near ten above." No really I don't think he would.

EVER since cycling began to be recognized as an international sport, coupled with practicability for business purposes, there have been chronic croakers who periodically mounted the house-tops and tried to make the world believe that cycling was on the decline. These croakers, with eagle eyes, watched for the slightest accident or anything trivially detrimental to cycling, and as soon as they found it, placed it under the most powerful glass and expected the world to see it in its magnified size.

THE changes in the Massachusetts Bicycle Club resulting in the selling of its magnificent property gave these pessimists opportunity to advance, for a reason that none of it could have happened were there not a waning interest among Boston cyclers from cycling, and from that it was easy to figure that Boston and various other places were losing their cycling grip. It is hardly worth while to deny these statements before the intelligent cycler, for he knows that the past season has seen more added to the ranks of cyclers than has any season since the cycle was invented. Still I want to say a word on the subject.

As to the assertion that cycling is declining in Boston, it is not true. Boston is and has been the greatest cycling centre in America. The suburbs of Boston are marvellous in beauty and of great extent, and a very large proportion of Boston's business men live away from the brick blocks. There is no section of Boston's suburbs without an organized cycle club; indeed, in some of the suburbs the cycle club is the most wide-awake of any of the social organizations. This multiplicity of suburban cycle clubs has, of course, worked more or less injury to the Massachusetts Cycle Club, located as it was within the city proper. Again: The forming of the Boston Athletic Club, at a cost of some $300,000, near by the building of the Massachusetts Club was also a strong factor in weakening the Massachusetts Club's grip, and it is but natural that many of the representative cyclers should be more interested in a club devoted to general sports and athletics than to one specifically devoted to cycling, particularly so when the athletic association promised to furnish accommodations for cyclers.

THE Massachusetts Cycle Club corporation then, dissolved wholly for legitimate reasons, from a combination of circumstances of direct benefit to the members and to no discredit to cycling. The Massachusetts Bicycle Club is not disorganized. It remains as a cycling association, and is likely to so remain indefinitely and perpetuanently. A large membership to the club remains, none of whom have lost their interest in the old Massachusetts. Plans for next season are being laid, and shortly the club is to have its annual dinner and reunion.

THE Massachusetts Bicycle Club was made up of many of the representative Boston athletes, and many of them have joined the new athletic club and propose to keep their cycles in the athletic building; and in speaking of the new athletic club I cannot refrain from remarking that it is a pity that this club should not put at east one of its well-known and competent cycling members on the committee regulating the wheeling department. Such men as Hodges, Peck, Everett, Dean, Tombs, Ahl or Williams would appreciate the needs of cyclers and see that they were catered to. The preparation of the wheel room for the abundant storage of ordinary bicycles, and the meagre space devoted to safeties and tricycles indicates how little the committee know of how the "wheel world wags."

So Luscomb is going to explain, defend or excuse, which ever it may be, his political action as a member of the Committee on Rights and Privileges. I can well imagine how sonorously plausible it will be, but after all is it not raking among the embers of the past to keep this question open?

ST. LOUIS.

"LINNEUS."

THE smoker given by the Missouri Bicycle Club on Saturday, Dec. 22, at which the Cycle Club were present by invitation, was a grand success, and a large number of the members of both clubs were present to enjoy the fun. Pipes and tobacco were provided in profusion, and the programme, consisting of music—selections on the mandolin by Prof. Wagner, of Gilmore's Band, and solos on the banjo and guitar by Messrs. Hinchman and Wurtembach—was well received. The mandolin seemed to capture the boys' hearts, and each selection was loudly encored. After the music Messrs. Snyder and Sanders and Tivy and Pomarade gave an exhibition of the manly art, after which supper was served. The Cycle boys had their champion high kicker, Beggo, with them, and he being anxious to test his mettle with anybody present, C. C. Hildebrand accommodated and completely annihilated him. A stag dance completed the evening's entertainment, and a request was immediately made by several of the club's members that these entertainments be given oftener in the future, which will no doubt be complied with.

ONE of the hardest road riders that St. Louis boasts is Ed Grath, who has ridden to Ballwin every Sunday during the season.

IT is rumored that Bob Clarke, one of the most enthusiastic riders that the Cycle Club had, has given up riding and will sell his wheel.

ED. L. MOCKLER, ex-Secretary of the Cycle Club, returned from Dallas, Texas, a few days ago, and will again take up his abode in this city.

CHIEF CONSUL BREWSTER has been corresponding with R. D. Garden, to arrange the details of the Stone-Lumsden race. Percy Stone is taking good care of himself and will soon begin to train at the Missouri gymnasium.

NEVER in the memory of the oldest cycler have we enjoyed such excellent cycling weather during the winter months as now. There has hardly been a single day that a ride could not be taken anywhere, and the roads are all in fine shape.

THE Cycle Club has caught the raffling fever, and they are now raffling a 51-inch Columbia Light Roadster for the benefit of the club. A large number of tickets have already been sold, and the success of the venture is assured. The profits will go towards fitting up their card room and gymnasium.

AT the Missouri Club house a large number of members may be found every night engaged at the pool or billiard tables, or in the reading room. Since the heating apparatus has been put in shape the attendance has perceptibly increased. Harry Louderman and Russell Blossom are the present pool sharks of the club.

THE proprietor of the Ballwin Hotel put up a bottle of wine and a good dinner to the first cycler arriving there on Jan. 1. The prize was won by Will Harding, who arrived at 12.15 A. M. Geo. E. Tivy was the second man out, arriving at 1.15 A. M. The landlord had a fine turkey dinner ready for the boys but none of them stayed for it.

THE cycler is indeed a funny animal, as is evinced by the action of a number of them, headed by Sanders, Tyler and Finley, who go twenty miles out into the country to enjoy a dance at the Ballwin Hotel. The hotel has a large dancing hall and since the parties have been started Landlord Busch is anxious to see more of the boys come out and assure all a good time.

NELSON C. HAYNES, of Kansas City, has consented to fill the vacancy on the Touring Board caused by the resignation of J. M. Tryon, and will probably be appointed. Although Jackson County has more riders than any county in the State, save St. Louis County, it is but very meagrely reported, and the services of a good man are therefore urgently needed to do the needful.

THE talk of holding a race meeting in the spring is extensively indulged in. There is certainly no reason why a pony tournament should not prove to be a paying investment. "Senator" Morgan, while here, told me that if either of the clubs refused to take the responsibility he would be willing to give us a first-class tournament after the Chicago affair, provided he secured the co-operation of both clubs.

CONSUL H. S. RITTENHOUSE, of Jonesburg, was in town last week, and in conversation with him he asked, "why don't the local cyclists engage in a Division tour, say from St. Louis to Sedalia? The roads are good all the way during a dry spell, and I should take pleasure in piloting the boys through." There is no reason why this cannot be done, and if local riders wish it a tour can be easily arranged.

A MEETING of those interested in the forming of a stock company to handle bicycles will be held at the Cycle Club house next Friday, and it is expected that a large number of riders will be present to present their views. It is said the agency of two well-known wheels has been offered the company if it is organized, and that a capitalist has been willing to put three or four thousand dollars into the enterprise.

FOOTBALL is all the go, especially with members of the Cycle Club, and each Sunday a large number of them may be seen at Forest Park engaged in this excellent sport. A few Sundays ago, during a lull in the game, Ed Bates had an experience which he will not soon forgot. He wagered Captain Sanders that he could kick the ball with both feet, tried it and—sat down in a way that shook the earth. The horse laugh he got would have killed an ordinary mortal.

THE Cycle Club kept open house on New Year's Day, and a large number of guests were present. The House Committee, consisting of A. L. Jordan, E. Barnard and W. S. Snyder, deserve great praise for the excellent arrangements made to entertain the visitors. Dinner was served at 4.30 P. M., and forty sat down to as excellent a meal as was ever served in a club house. After dinner cigars were lighted and an adjournment to the parlors made, where the balance of the evening was spent in singing, chatting and listening to stories and chestnuts of last year's riding season. Taken all together it was a very successful affair, and will be long remembered by those who had the good fortune to be present.

DENVER.

"OCCASIONAL."

"——! ——!——. What should this mean?
What sudden anger's this How have I reap'd it?"

"One of the boys" (doubtless one of the dozen riders in Denver "who could have finished the run"), in his kind respects to the WORLD of Dec. 28th, brings to mind the above quotation from Henry VIII. "How have I reap'd it" indeed? simply stating facts? If I can convince them that I am not a member of the Social Club they will forgive me!! Thanks! They need not worry, I do not care to be forgiven; no, not even if the price of such a pardon was less expensive than the disowning of a club that any member can be proud of, an organization that is the wheel club of Denver, if not of the West. I thank Mr. Parkens for his cordial invitation to attend one of their short thirty or forty mile "follow-the-leader runs," and on the first possible occasion will take advantage of his kindness, and hope to contribute my mite toward another 50,000-mile record for 1889.

ALTHOUGH a member of the Social Club, it has always been my aim to represent both sides equally. How well I have succeeded is shown herein: A certain member, thought to be guilty of the authorship of these notes, is thusly shot at: "Say, ——, when are you going to get out some more Rambler notes? I do then want to join the band and help 'guy' the good-natured soul, patiently suffering my crime."

ON Christmas Eve the Ramblers gave a most enjoyable stag party. The Social Wheel Club attended in a body, making it the first occasion on which the organizations have shown their friendly feeling toward each other. This new state of affairs will be vastly more productive of good than the old rivalry.

AGAIN have the S. W. C.s been compelled to move into larger quarters, this being the third time in the first year of their existence. The rooms now occupied by them are situated in the Leonard Block. These rooms have been newly papered, carpeted and furnished, and present a very handsome appearance.

THE Social Wheel Club met, for the first time in their new quarters, on Wednesday evening, Jan. 2d, and elected the following officers for 1889: President, E. S. Hartwell; Captain, F. N. Coleman; First Lieutenant, I. B. Holzman; Second Lieutenant, E. R. Pynchon; Third Lieutenant, Lou Hanson; Recording Secretary, M. E. Harris; Financial Secretary, C. E. Hawver; Treasurer, F. H. Wright. Color Bearer, Don Davisson. At the same meeting they took in seven new members, making a total of thirteen for the last month of their first year.

On the following evening, January 3d, the Ramblers held their semi-annual election. These are the officers elected for the term ending July 1st: President, A. A. Morris; Secretary, B. Hullinger; Treasurer, G. A. Epeneter; Captain, H. E. Peck; First Lieutenant, Harvey Green; Second Lieutenant, Robt. Biegle; Third Lieutenant, R. S. Riche.

"Mentor," of Kansas City, is most graciously excused for living. His being alive is, no doubt, a mistake anyway.

PENNSYLVANIA.

"ARIEL."

"Westfield" got ahead of me in the announcement of Mr. Wells' intention of forming one of the new firm of the Strong & Green Cycle Co. Well, I had promised him and kept it; so could not well help myself. Mr. Wells turns over the literary department of the Athlete to Chris Wheeler, a gentleman who needs no introduction to the cycling public, and well fitted for that position. Let us hope that in the next issue of the paper the phrase "If there is one cycling club in town, that, as an organization, etc.," will be conspicuous by its absence. I counted no less than six of 'em on two pages. Mr. Wells intends taking in the Stanley Show, and will tell the Philadelphia Wheelmen about what he sees there.

Under the auspices of the Philadelphia Bicycle Club, Thomas Stevens lectures at Association Hall on the 23d inst. [We think the above announcement doubtful in view of the fact that Mr. Stevens is to be sent away immediately on a special expedition as told in another column.—Ed.]

Take it all back Mr. Editor; somebody has been misinforming you. There are not fifty ladies riding bicycles in this city yet. Half a dozen would be nearer the mark, but with the advent of spring we look for a rapid increase, and if all buy machines who have been been taught this winter, the number will not be far from your figures.

Thanks, Mr. "Vortex," I will have a little patience, but please do not assume that I claim any club is afraid to race with the Wilmington team, for such is not the case. All I hope for is an opportunity to witness the race, and may the best team win. Don't know who you are, but your notes are entertaining and I welcome you to the list of cycling scribes.

Score the first club run of the season for the Century Wheelmen, who started out over a muddy road at 12.01 on New Year's morning for a ride to the Park. The South End men had formed good resolutions about a club run but they did not pan out and the club run resolved itself into a midnight supper at Boothby's. I am glad to say that my good friend, Mr. J. R. S. Edwards, stuck it out by himsel, and got in the first run of the New Year for the down-town contingent.

The social season is in full swing here. The Pennsylvanias held their first smoker and stag party on Friday night which was a first class success, while the Philadelphia Club had a musical: the same evening, and on next Friday, 11th inst., Pennsylvania's first dance of the winter comes off. The invitations are out, and it is to be a full dress affair. In order to do themselves proud with their fair partners, the Pennsylvania men have been having little practise dances on Saturday evenings.

Last Sunday the Pennsylvania men ran to Norristown and from the mud they struck, drawn by a warm sun from the frost bound ground, I don't think the experiment will be repeated for a while. Merrihew, McDaniel, Elliott and another of the Wilmington Club came up from their town the same day and say they rode through more mud than we ever saw, but I doubt it. McDaniel was then within 31 miles of 6,000 for the year and on Monday, the last day of 1888, he ran this up to 6,001. Mr. Edwards leads for this city, with upwards of 6,700 miles. W. T. Fleming, last year's champion, only has 5,474 to his credit, having been off his wheel during August and September. He goes to Florida the latter part of this month. Would I were with him.

Open House, on New Year's Day, as practised by the Centurions was a great success! From two to six, in the afternoon, they received their friends, consisting of the various city clubs and others. "Pennsy" and the South End came in bodies, through the Park and attracted much attention. In fact, on the return home there was one member of the Pennsylvanias who wished he had not been the cynosure of all eyes. This was the way it happened: The club had mounted, after bidding farewell to their hospitable hosts, and one of them being belated, started to spurt when, slipping a pedal, then and there, before the eyes of the assembled throngs (Broad street being crowded, the day being a lovely one and the Grand Opera House Matinee just over), did that unlucky wheelman describe a most scientific "header" bringing discredit on the club and covering himself with mud and confusion. And there stood that fiend, McGlathery, nearly going into convulsions over it. Oh, it was too much! And to think that I have always been such an exponent of the ordinary, too, decrying the safety and the tricycle alike! (N. B. I almost forgot to say that if the Century Wheelmen intend to make a success of any more feeds they want to keep that man, McGlathery, out of the supper room. There'll be no profits made with him around).

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

The election in the Illinois Club passed off very quietly, and resulted in the re-election of President Sloan and Captain Davis. Blackman was also elected Vice President; Street, Secretary; Mason (Geo.), Treasurer. Frank Riggs will take care of the colors the coming season.

The Chicago's election comes off Monday, the 7th, and a lively time is expected. Skinkle, one of the Presidential candidates, has been in constant fear of a new ticket being sprung or that an attack would be made on him personally. There has been a three-cornered fight for the office of Captain thus far, between Seig, Thorne and Roe, in fact it waxed so warm that anonymous circulars were posted up in the two club houses, signed "Observer," that came near causing a correct imitation of a Donnybrook Fair on a small scale. The circulars were well written campaign documents, with liberal quotations from the Scripture, Shakespeare, etc., and after giving the reasons why the writer thought two of the candidates should be defeated, went on to extol the merits of the third man in a very ingenious manner. But the author lacked the nerve to come out boldly and sign his name. Speculation is rife as to the author although rumor has it that "Observer" is none other than a candidate for one of the principal offices in the club.

The Lincolns will probably elect the same Board of Officers as last year, with some few changes.

Some of the principal officers in the Illinois Cycle Club were invited to attend the Chicago's theatre party Tuesday evening, but thought it best to refuse, owing to the recent difficulties, fearful that their actions would be harshly criticized by their own club members.

Tom Roe had an animated discussion the other day with Captain Davis. Among other little pleasantries between them Roe asked Davis how many black balls he should get if he made application to join, to which Davis replied that he "would get exactly 154" (the entire vote of the club).

The Illinois boys are taking a good deal of interest in the fight for the Captaincy in the Chicago Club, and are quite anxious to see Roe defeated, while the Lincolns seem well pleased with Skinkle's nomination and say that if he is elected the Lincolns and Chicagos will pull together in unison.

Being at the Illinois Club house New Year's afternoon I was quite surprised to see a New Year's greeting sent to them by the Chicagos. The Illinois boys sent a neat reply to the same, and it looks as though peace would once more reign among the cycling clubs here.

There was a scheme proposed in my hearing the other evening that struck me as being a very good idea if properly carried out, and that was, that the Chicagos, Illinois and Lincolns combine and rent a down-town club house, each club to stand one third of the expense. The three clubs combined ought to be able to rent convenient quarters, where they could have a wheel room, a pool and billiard table, etc., in fact a rendezvous for the noon hour or at any time for any wheelman belonging to either of the three clubs. I hope to see this succeed.

What is the matter with that Recruiting Committee that Thorne promised would work such wonders? Have they ever done anything as yet? The Englewood consolidation scheme, I believe, was turned over to them, but the committee seem to have lapsed into a state of innocuous desuetude.

The Pastimes have arranged for a very social and enjoyable time Saturday evening, the 12th, in an athletic way, and a full attendance is assured.

There seems to be an erroneous impression among some of the members of the League in this State in regard to the expenses of delegates to the official meeting being paid by the Division. The new Constitution will recommend (so I am told by Sloan, one of the committee to revise the same) that the Chief Consul's expenses be paid, and this only.

San Francisco, November 5th, 1888.

The Coventry Machinists' Co., Ld., Boston, Mass.:

Gentlemen—As the year is drawing to a close perhaps you would be interested in knowing how the "SWIFT" has fared in this section as compared with other Safeties. To be brief, there are more "SWIFTS" in use here than any other make of Safety. We have not taken a single "ordinary," or any other kind of machine in exchange, as part payment, for a SWIFT during the season. Not a single SWIFT after leaving our hands has to our knowledge been exchanged for other make of safety or sold to a third party. There is not a second-hand "SWIFT" for sale or exchange. And finally, from present indications there will be more "SWIFTS" sold here during the coming season than any two other makes of safeties.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) DEVANY, HOPKINS & CO.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

WE have before us a photograph of the display of the Pacific Hardware Co., of Honolulu, H. I., at the art and fancy goods exhibition in that city. Conspicuous in the picture are a couple of bicycles, the product of the Springfield Bicycle Mfg. Co. We now expect to hear of new hill-climbing records made by some of the aborigines, arrayed in all the magnificence of a paper collar and and necktie.

13,250. What is it? Why, the present circulation of this paper. Advertisers take a hint!

THE season has opened, and "Larry" Overman has taken to the road in the interests of the Victor wheels.

"YOUNG" PORTER, of Newton, will ride a safety next year. That youth with proper handling would make a flyer.

LOUISE ARMAINDO offers to make a match to race Lottie Stanley for any distance from ten miles to one hundred.

W. WINDLE'S winnings in the form of medals, bric-a-brac, watches, etc., will aggregate in value nearly $2000.

THE Springfield (Mass.) Bi. Club have engaged Mrs. Alice J. Shaw to appear at City Hall in that city Jan. 25th.

BILL NYE is to lecture at the Holyoke (Mass.) Opera House Feb. 23, under the auspices of the Holyoke Bicycle Club.

THE Lynn Bee says: "Temple will not rest satisfied until he has met his old foe (ROWE) and run him into the ground."

WINDLE has been invited to enter his name for the amateur championship of Europe, to be run at Berlin next season.

13,250. Have you a second-hand wheel to sell? Out of the above number of readers there ought to be one who would buy your wheel. Then advertise it.

TOM STEVENS is off again, under the auspices of the New York World, on a six months' trip. What the object of the expedition is, is not announced.

H. R. STOKES, the Australian who is cycling the world around a la Stevens, never used a brake on his bicycle. He claims it is safer to ride without a brake.

THE Lynn Bee says that Windle will race next season. Mr. Windle says he will not race next season. We sincerely hope that Mr. Windle has been misinformed as to his own intentions.

THE K. C. Wheelmen of Brooklyn hold first and second long distance records bs having G. M. Nesbett ride 8231 miles during 1888, and W. T. Murphy covering 8140 1-2. Both are members of the K. C. W.

AN exchange heads an article, "The Big Wheel Must Go," and then it goes on to say: "The days of the large-wheeled bicycle have been numbered, and the last of them are at hand." To the above we say "Nonsense," with a big N.

THE first game in the Wheelmen's Bowling League of New York and New Jersey resulted in a victory for the Hudson County Wheelmen over the Kings County Wheelmen, by a score of 1498 to 1488. Grant (203), Harthman (207), H. C. W., best individual scores.

RATHER unusual for a fellow in this latitude to be scooting along the highways on a bicycle during the first week in January, and yet we took a splendid spin last Friday, and from appearances we shall have another ride on the wheel before we mount the swift toboggan.

THIS is the kind of letters we recieve from advertisers: "We are much pleased with the appearance of our advertisement. We received a number of answers to it before the paper itself reached us." Why of course with a circulation of 13,250 the advertisement is bound to be satisfactory.

THE six days' bicycle race at Pittsburg between five female riders resulted in a victory for Hattie Lewis, with a score of 455 miles; Elsa Von Blumen second, 451 miles; the rest nowhere. Lottie Stanley did not start. Miss Snallor rode 374 miles, althongh her left arm was disabled, and her pluck was greatly applauded.

PETE D., the Hub correspondent of the American Athlete, does not like it because we pitch into the hoodlums who insult passers-by at the Reservoir. He "deniges of the charge," as Mrs. Gamp would say, and to strengthen his denial refers to Chief Consul Emery. That's a good scheme: ask Dr. Emery, by all means.

WE are heartily glad that two such wholesouled fellows as Tertius and Secretary should prove to be "long lost" chums. The swapping of recollections of mutual adventure is truly diverting. Secretary has the floor this week (Tertius had it last issue) and a very charming sketch, the Secretary's account of the watermelon party proves to be.

A MADDER or more excited man was not to be found in the good city of Newton, Mass., than Mr. W. Shaunessy last week. He left his bicycle outside a bank for a few minutes, and on coming out it was not visible. After tearing round looking for the "thief," the bicycle was found hidden away safely by a practical joker. Mr. S. is now looking for the joker.

THE Berkshire County Wheelmen, of Pittsfield, Mass., gave a grand masquerade party in Central Hall last Wednesday evening. The costumes, many of them coming from Boston and New York, were the finest ever seen in Pittsfield. The Germania Band furnished the music. The committee in charge were Messrs. Mollner, Cooney, England, Brown and Sheridan.

THE Fort Schuyler Wheelmen, of Utica, N. Y., celebrated their fifth anniversary Monday, Dec. 31, by a grand supper at the Genesee House. There were eighty cyclists present, among whom were many guests. Chas. E. Metz, the President, introduced Mr. Geo. E. Freeman as toast master. There were several toasts, and it was well towards daylight before the dispersion took place.

AT the annual meeting of the Melrose Cycle Club, held Jan. 2d, the following officers were elected: President, Jerome Hillbourn; Captain, B. F. Eddy; First Lieutenant, Irving Moultrop; Secretary, E. W. Jones; Treasurer, J. N. Hopkins; Club Committee, Dr. Chas. Sprague, S. Pearl Brock, C. Twitchell. The club will open their new club rooms Friday evening, Jan. 11, with a reception and dance.

A PORTLAND, Me., Company has received orders to build another bicycle locomotive, which will cost about $8000, for Hon. Moody Boynton, and a double decked passenger car, the plans for which are being drawn by the chief draughtsman of the company. The company will also build a track of about 300 yards in length in their yard, on which to make a trial of locomotive and car when completed about a month hence.

THE first match in a series of bowling contests, between teams organized in various bicycle clubs in and near New York, was bowled last week Thursday at the Knickerbocker Hotel, Mott avenue and 138th street. The contesting teams were selected from the bowling clubs of the New York Bicycle Club and the Harlem Wheelmen, the latter winning by a score of 1429 to 1342. There were ten men on each side, the best individual records being 189 by W. De Goicouria, of the New York Club, and 185 by G. A. Pearse, of the Harlem Wheelmen.

A DEFENCE OF HORSEBACK RIDING.

Editor Bicycling World: When "Hawkshaw" so sweepingly condemns the use of the horse for riding as unhealthful, he only lays the use of the wheel open to return attacks from the champion of horseback riding. The abuse of either form of exercise has about the same result. Wrong clothing—wrong saddles—too long, too rough or too hard riding, these have the same effect on rider of horse or wheel. The sport would be hurt rather than benefitted by converts who leave the horse because they are broken up by long or hard rides on a rough goer, having pounded their spines on a flat English saddle. Such would be sure to take a stiff or heavy wheel and a hard saddle, ride long distances without getting into condition, strain at all hills and rough places, and then lay the blame on the wheel for a resultant break up or down of the system, which was started on the horse, and more likely to occur from horseback riding than cycling.

An easy horse and a high, narrow saddle, or an easy saddle and the wheel one can best control, with judgment in riding, will make each exercise a health-giving recreation. But give me the wheel where the roads are rideable. L. A. W. 190.

13,250. Have you anything to sell? If you have, we can tell the above number of people all about it. STE

WATERMELONS.

HAVE you ever noticed with what unanimity and utmost zeal people work, spend and inconvenience themselves generally, to enjoy something free?

I've seen people travel miles through disagreeable weather and incidentally spend several dollars to partake of something of which they have received an invitation to partake, and which free offering probably cost the "invitor" fifty cents a head; and yet those same people would refuse point blank to spend fifty cents for the "something" itself.

Doubtless such was the spirit that animated the twenty of us who accepted the invitation to Billy's watermelon feast.

My log book makes but brief mention of it: I expect I was too lazy to write a "fuller" account. All it says is: "About twenty of us went out to Halstead's to partake of Billy's watermelon feast. I composed some appropriate verses to the club tune, but couldn't get anyone to sing them. Al pretended to have a fit and scared Ned. H., and thus got a drink of brandy. Had lots of fun. It was a glorious night."

I relight my pipe, prop my slippered feet on the fender, and gaze dreamily at the glowing coals and leaping flames. The neglected book slips from my lap to the rug.

Tinkle, tinkle, sounds the bell in the theatre of memory. Up goes the dusty curtain: the flames of the fire are transformed into the footlights, their crackling becomes the music of the orchestra. I look beyond them on the stage. The scene is a night in August, in the year 1884.

It was a perfect night, glorified and brightened by the moon, as a man's life is glorified and brightened by a loving wife. Indeed, it was such a lovely, attractive night that the moon and all her children, the stars, were out promenading the sky. There was such a profusion of the latter that some one called attention to them as we were riding along, and our conversation drifted to that subject. The poet repeated the verse about "twinkle, twinkle little star," and then the fellow who once looked through a piece of smoked glass at an eclipse of the sun began to point out the different distinguished individuals and constellations.

No one interrupted him until he pointed to Jupiter, and said: "That is Sirius."

"Are you serious about that?" asked Yates.

He paid no attention to the question, and continued: "It is also called the dog star."

"He's a sky terrier, then, I suppose," observed Sam.

"Over yonder," continued the smoked glass observer, not noticing Sam's remark, "is the crab, called Cancer."

"Well, is that a case of cancer in the sky's stomach or on its tongue?" queried Tom.

Superior to such remarks, he further said: "That nebulous matter tracing its delicate hue along the azure is the milky way."

"Is that where the little baby angels get their milk?" asked Ira.

"No, sir," spoke Harry, "it is the milkman's road to heaven."

"Do any of you know when stars are dangerous?" asked Joe.

"When they are backed up by a policeman," answered Howard.

"No, it is because they sometimes shoot," he explained.

Whilst those little remarks did not enliven the trip, they quickened the pace, and we were soon at Halstead's.

We had arrived somewhat before we were expected and supper was not quite ready. Whilst we were seated on the porch, Al, who evidently thought things a little slow, rose suddenly from his chair, walked mixedly to the middle of the road, turned a flip-flop and a sort of a back somersault, then sprang in the air, kicked his legs and flung his arms around wildly, gave a wild screech, dashed across the road, flung himself down in a fence corner, and there lay moaning and squirming. Every one stared at him in mute amazement.

Ned H. was the first one to act. He hastily ran over to where he lay, and kneeling by his side caught him by the arm, anxiously asking him what was the matter.

Al, tossed and moaned, gasped: "Gim me air," and tugged viciously at his throat.

"Al, old fellow, it's I, Ned. Tell me what's the matter."

Al squirmed and threshed his arms about, and gurgled, "fit, fit!"

"Come here, fellows, quick: he's got a fit!" exclaimed Ned excitedly.

As we all rose, Al suddenly sprung on all fours, kicked out like a mule, and his feet landing on Ned's side laid that individual low, and then the man with a fit took off up the road as hard as he could clip it, whooping and yelling, and the whole crowd in hot pursuit.

He leaped a fence and climbed a tree, and when we all gathered under it, he jumped out on Ned T.'s head and nearly broke the latter's neck.

We all pounced on him, and whilst he struggled and kicked, moaned and jabbered, we toilingly carried him back to the fence, carefully lifted him over. Depositing him on the green sward we paused to recover our breath and cool off.

Al ceased his struggles and quietly lay there, breathing heavily. By this time Ned H. had recovered and came running up.

"How is he?" he asked.

Not waiting for an answer, he again knelt by the prostrate man, and asked him how he felt.

"It's all over, Ned, thank you," faintly answered Al, "but I'm so weak."

"What will you have?" eagerly questioned Ned.

"Brandy," articulated Al.

The joyful Ned flew down to Halstead's, whilst we crowded around, some fanning him, others saying cheerful things.

You may be sure Ned was quickly back, and as some of the boys raised and held him in a sitting position, Al drank the fluid with great gusto.

We gladly and silently waited the effect—it came.

He sprang to his feet, looked quizzically at us for a moment, then said: "Well, fellows, I'll go down and see if supper is ready, and if it isn't, maybe I'll have another fit."

He took to his heels and his merry laughter rang on the night air.

Probably, dear reader, you have seen the day dawn. Suddenly the gray east assumes a rosy hue, a drifting cloud all at once shines with a pinky color, straight up to the zenith a thread of gold mounts like a rocket, a fresh, moist breeze springs from the orient and gently shakes the sleeping birds into wakefulness, the horizon assumes a purplish complexion, and then Mr. Solomon (some disrespectful people who have no regard for old age call him old Sol) rises to view. That was the way the truth dawned on us. We solemnly marched back to the tavern, and there Al sat at the table, alongside of the biggest watermelon.

The prospect of supper temporarily diverted our thoughts from him.

And such a supper! There were beefsteaks, fried chicken, oysters, potatoes, cakes, hot biscuit, milk and coffee, and then the watermelons.

"They certainly are large watermelons," observed Joe.

"Oh, yes," said Ben, careless like, "they are a good size for this section of country, but they are mere pigmies, mere pigmies. Now down in Georgia we grow melons that are melons. Why one year father made the melon patch right next to old Silas Pennysaver's cotton field, and don't you know, the old miser sued father for the value of ten bales of cotton; said our melons had grown so large that they spread over his field and occupied the ground that would produce that much cotton."

We all noticed John brace himself, and he said: "I know they grow large melons down South, and your story reminds me of an adventure I once had with a watermelon on my uncle's farm up in Maine. He took great pride in a variety he called the Flowing Fountain, on account of the immense quantity of water in them. I had often heard him speak of them, but being skeptical, determined to investigate for myself. So one morning I went out in the patch, and selecting one at random I sat down in a gully about ten feet deep by six wide and cut it, and the water gushed from it in such volumes that in less than two minutes that dry gully was filled with a raging torrent, and if I hadn't been such a good swimmer I'd have been drowned."

"Well," said Ned L., "my grandfather's melon patch didn't raise such big, or such watery melons, but it had mighty fertile soil. I remember going in it, when a boy, and cutting and eating one. I sat on a stone in a bare spot, just outside the patch, and strewed the seed all around as I ate, and by the time I had half finished, the entire place was covered with watermelon vines, and by the time I had finished, the watermelons on them were ripe."

"That reminds me of the fertility of the soil on my aunt's farm," said Whit. "One day I was in the garden, and finding a watermelon seed in my pocket I threw it on the ground, when, presto! up sprang a vine with a full-grown melon on it, and away it started to grow, dragging the melon with it. When I recovered from my astonishment I started after it. I chased it, on a dead run, down the road, over the fence, across the fields, up hill and down dale, over mountains, across rivers, through forests, States, counties, cities, towns, suburbs, reservoirs, tunnels, railroad tracks and Indian trails, for seventeen hundred miles, when I fell from sheer exhaustion and a desire to get home in time for dinner, and from that day to this I have never seen that melon."

There was a ghostly, dreadful hush, and a stopped clock stillness, until Billy exclaimed: "There it is right before you, and don't another one of you dare say a word."

We all silently finished our repast.

Ah me! The curtain goes down, and I am once again seated before the library fire, my thoughts lingering on the play. The flames die out one by one, like the musicians disappearing from the orchestra through the little door under the stage, until I am left alone with the cold embers, and I sigh as I stoop and pick up from the rug my log book, which contains the silent memories of those olden days.

SECRETARY.

FROM SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

THE Capital City Cycling Club, of Springfield, Ill., held its annual banquet on New Year's evening in its new club house on the corner Sixth and Washington streets. Invitations had been sent to all the of League and Division officers. Counter attractions at home detained some, but those who did participate were amply repaid, and they thoroughly enjoyed the eloquent and witty remarks made by the speakers.

The rooms were very tastefully decorated with paintings and portraits of prominent wheelmen, bunting and evergreens festooned and caught up by beautiful and rare exotics. The tables were ranged lengthwise down the long hall. President Edgar S. Barnes occupying a seat at the head of one table and Mr. Ed. S. Sherwood, Vice President, that of the other.

After the delicacies provided by the committee had been partaken of cigars were passed around and the toasting commenced. All the replies had been arranged for previous to the banquet, and great credit is due Mr. Will S. Henkle for the very able and judicious manner in which he arranged the programme.

The opening speech by Mr. Barnes was listened to with attention and pleasure. He briefly recounted the history of the club—the severe struggle of its early days; of some fifty odd members, the "faithful seven" had often a hard time to drum up sufficient to form a quorum. How, when the finances ran low, and rent, gas, etc., had to be provided for, the "boys" were assessed, how nobly some of the lambs yielded, while the constitutional kickers, kicked, and how hard the officers worked to keep the club together. He then drew attention to the result of their "sticktoitiveness," the handsome building which they now occupied as a club house and the elegant furniture with which it is filled. He also referred to the race and meet of the Illinois Division on July 3 and 4 at Springfield, one of the results of our exertions on that occasion being that two of the officers of the Division, the Vice Consul and Secretary-Treasurer, had been chosen from the ranks of the C. C. C. C. In conclusion, the speaker said that the club was in an exceedingly prosperous condition, and amidst prolonged applause the speaker resumed his seat.

The Chairman proposed the toast of "Our Country," which was responded to by Mr. O. M. Hatch, Jr., in a very humorous speech. Mr. Hatch said that during the coming winter a Liberty Bill would be presented to the Legislature here, and he hoped and believed that ere the spring of 1889 it would be among the Revised Statutes of Illinois. With a few more remarks Mr. Hatch "subsided."

The Chairman then called on Mr. John P. Fogarty for a song, and he responded by singing in his rich baritone voice "Beautiful Star."

The next toast was the L. A. W. officers, and was responded to by Mr. T. Sheridan, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Division, who made an interesting statement of what has been done in the last few years by the L. A. W. in general and the Illinois Division in particular. When Mr. Sheridan announced that Illinois had at last passed New Jersey in membership, and had left that little State behind for good, he was greeted by prolonged cheers, amidst which he resumed his seat.

Mr. Joseph B. Ruckell then gave a very pathetic recitation relating to a terrible struggle between a cyclist and a "yaller dorg."

The "Army and Navy" toast was responded to by Lieutenant A. W. Beaton, Fifth Regiment, I. N. G., who made some very interesting remarks on the use which is being made of the bicycle in the various European armies.

Messrs. Robinson, Ackerman and Getty rendered a very telling L. A. W. song, and the chorus, "I'm the son of a son," was duly honored by the entire company.

"Other Kinds of Wheels" was responded to by Mr. Fred L. Pearce, of the Wabash Railroad, in a masterly style. Mr. Pearce is a young rider but a very enthusiastic one, and is one of the most untiring tourists of the club.

Mr. C. H. Brensing gave as a recitation that poem, as published by the WORLD, by the poet scout, Crawford, detailing Mr. Stevens' ten-mile race across the prairie with a cowboy on a bronco.

The toasting closed with Mr. Waldo S. Reed replying to the toast of "The Ladies." A more appropiate "responder" to this toast could not be found. Mr. Reed knows just what to say for the ladies and when and how to say it. He has a very large circle of lady friends and is, as he should be, a general favorite. He spoke feelingly, and, apparently from personal experience of how ladies admired the graceful cyclist gliding along, how they would unconsciously turn their heads to gaze after him, and how often he had been told by different members of the fair sex how they wished that it was fashionable for ladies to ride bicycles. But now, that that lovely, adorable, angelic being, Pauline Hall, has broken the ice he hoped it would not be long before he would have the ineffable ecstasy of accompanying one or another of his many lady friends, far from the maddening throng on a bike to enjoy the sweet scented country air as well as save the expense of a livery rig.

After half an hour's general conversation the party broke up and all went home happy and satisfied with the result of the banquet.

O. R. DI NARY.

WASHINGTON (D. C.) CYCLE CLUB.

THE Amusement Committee of the Washington Cycle Club arranged an entertainment for members on Thursday evening, Jan. 3d, which was much enjoyed by those present, who represented a large majority of the membership that have the good of the club at heart.

The entertainment commenced with music by the club orchestra, with Mr. W. G. Wilmarth, first violinist, W. C. Babcock, cornetist, and C. W. Houser, pianist, and following with recitations, songs, etc., and while listening to the strains a repast was served consisting of peanuts, apples, ice cream, cake and cider.

The gloves were put on by Messrs. Knox and Rosenberg, which provoked fun for the lookers on and resulted in hard hits and several falls for the participants.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. E. E. Curry, Chairman of the committee, for his efforts in arranging the entertainment.

The next club hop will take place on Friday evening, Jan. 18th, and all L. A. W. strangers are invited.

THE GORMULLY AND JEFFERY MFG. CO.'S MACHINES FOR 1889.

In reply to a request as to what the wide awake firm of Gormully and Jeffery Co. were going to do in 1889, we received the following reply which we can do no better than reproduce although we were advised that the same information had been sent verbatim to other papers: "We have not yet completed the cuts of our novelties, but we presume you will be interested in publishing a few pointers. The Light Champion and Champion, with the exception of a few minor improvements, remain the same. The American Challenge, American Safety, American Light Safety and American Ideal will remain about the same. None of our tricycles will be changed nor our tandems be altered in any important points. The American Rambler has been changed to an open front machine, but combines all the salient features of last season. It is very strong, and we shall guarantee it to carry 250 pounds. For a gentleman's use it will be braced, but the brace can be taken off for the use of a lady. We do not expect to sell a great many of these wheels for ladies' use exclusively, but it will, no doubt, be very handy for an all round family machine. We have a new rear spring which is much more pliable than the spiral we used last year, and also have a new saddle which is the easiest we have ever mounted ourselves. Comparative novices ride this machine hands off. The Ideal Rambler is a practically all steel rear driver, with a 16-inch rear wheel and a 20-inch front wheel; it follows the model of the Rambler very closely; we shall probably price it at $75. It will have ball bearings to both wheels, and pedals for an extra consideration. While we expect it will carry 150 pounds safely, we shall guarantee it to carry 125 pounds. It will be excellently finished, and we expect it will prove a very popular machine for ladies as well as boys and girls. We might further add that we have a new drop forged steel chain of our own invention, which is very strong and perfectly noiseless, and we change the 6-8-inch tire of the front wheel of the American Rambler to 7-8-inch."

A WRITER from Bombay, India, to the Cyclist, says: "Some of the natives have taken to the bicycle, and when mounted upon an ordinary are indeed curious objects. Fancy a man dressed in a long coat and loin cloth, with bare legs, and his feet in turned up slippers, bestriding a tall machine. How they manage to mount is quite a mystery to me, their toes only being loosely fixed into the slippers. A great many Parsees ride, but confine their attention to three-wheelers."

WE would just like to know if the last two years riding record of 12,890 1-2 miles made on a single New Mail by W. T. Murphy of K. C. W., Brooklyn, N. Y., does not take the cake? Yes, that record is that of one machine and is a magnificent test as to durability of this splendid roadster, and Wm. Read & Sons are justly proud of said record. Messrs. Read resume their old position in the advertising column of the WORLD this week and we would suggest that our riders keep their weather eye on that space for future announcement.

13,250. That's a pretty large circulation for a class paper of this kind. Yes, it's more than all the rest of the cycling papers of this country put together.

JOHN HARRIOTT,

MANUFACTURER OF

Bicycle and Athletic Medals,

CLUB PINS & BADGES,

DESIGNS ON APPLICATION.

3 Winter Street, Boston, Mass.

LEAGUE HEADQUARTERS:

12 Pearl Street, - - - - Room 27.

ABBOT BASSETT, Secretary.

RENEWALS.

The current League year has been extended to April 30, 1889, and all memberships will be continued beyond January 1 until that date. Under the Constitution each Division must file on or before April 1, in the office of the Secretary, a certificate stating the amount fixed as its annual dues. Until that time the Secretary cannot be certain regarding the dues and therefore he must refuse to receive any renewals before that date. This notice has been published for many weeks, and yet renewals come in with every mail.

THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY.

The communication from Mr. Shriver, published last week, was referred to the legal adviser of the League, Mr. Luscomb, who holds that position by virtue of his office as Chairman of the Rights and Privileges Committee, and to the Executive Committee. Mr. Luscomb has advised the Executive Committee and communications are submitted.

(From Mr. Luscomb.)

To the Executive Committee, L. A. W.:

The Secretary requests an opinion on the letter of Shriver's, and also on the selection of Vice Consuls in Divisions.

Sections 1 and 4 of Article IV should be read together; Section 1 naming the governing power and Section 4 its Constitution.

There is no power in any official, National or State, to add to the National Assembly. It is created, in the case of Chief Consuls and Vice Consuls, by vote of Divisions and in case of Delegates, by vote of Division Boards of Officers.

The time of selection is specifically defined and the Constitution intentionally omits granting authority to any officer to make appointments.

The number of Delegates is therefore absolutely determined for the year as of date of September 1st.

In the case of Chief Consuls and Vice Consuls there is greater latitude because it is then the office that holds position in the National Assembly and by the Constitution the choice of the person who shall fill it is vested in the Divisions (Article IV, Section 3.)

Therefore, if the Divisions shall have adopted By-laws providing for the filling of those offices, any officer elected thereunder will properly be a member of the National Assembly. In cases where no By-laws have been adopted and no election has been held as provided in the Constitution the old officers hold over. In cases where sub-divisions reach the 100 limit they are then privileged to forthwith organize as Divisions and elect Chief and Vice Consul to hold office until the ensuing September, without waiting until that time (Article II, Sections 2, 5.)

There is no power in the President to appoint, except in case of sub-Divisions, particularly specified in Article II, Section 3 and Chief Consuls cannot appoint Delegates in any event. Yours fraternally,

C. H. LUSCOMB.

T. J. Kirkpatrick, President L. A. W.

(From the Executive Committee.)

Abbot Bassett, Secretary, L. A. W.:

Mr. Luscomb has correctly interpreted the matter referred to him. Summing it all up I should say that the National Assembly is to be composed:

1. Of all Chief Consuls.
2. Of all Vice Consuls, no matter when elected or appointed, so long as they are now in office.
3. Of delegates from the divisions—one for each 200 members on their division list on the first day of September last.

That is, Chief Consuls and Vice Consuls are entitled to sit in the Assembly no matter when they were elected or appointed; and they are to be elected or appointed whenever their Divisions are of sufficient size to permit it under the other rules of the Constitution. But no additions can be made to the list of delegates after the number to which they are entitled under the rule September 1st. Faithfully yours,

T. J. KIRKPATRICK.

Approved; W. S. BULL.
H. W. HAYES.

This discussion makes the table published last week correct in every particular. No changes are made in the representation since the elections of last summer and fall except that Texas has gained a Chief Consul and Tennessee a Vice Consul.

ON the 15th of March, 1888, the Executive Committee issued a circular asking from the Divisions a popular subscription to relieve the National organization from its financial embarrassment. They expected, and they had a right to expect, that the call would meet with a ready response, and that a goodly sum of money would be forthcoming, and the League be placed upon its financial feet again. We regret to say that the committee has been wofully disappointed. A few Divisions came forward promptly and appropriated liberal sums, but more than three-quarters of all the Divisions have simply ignored the call.

THE National organization has always pursued a liberal policy towards the Divisions. During the dark hours of financial distress in 1887 the National organization struggled along under the burden of debt and made no call for assistance. The Divisions have never lost a dollar through the parent body. They have been paid in full, while the losses of the National organization went high up in the thousands. Last June the League entered upon a new financial system, whereby the National organization surrendered to the Divisions the lion's share of the dues, and asked for itself a small per capita tax. It made this surrender at a time when it was free from debt, but it stood on the threshhold of a half year when the income must, by force of circumstances, be very small, and it could not expect to pay its bills without help. This help was looked for from the popular subscription. It has not been forthcoming.

AT the beginning of the New Year it is a good plan to look one's assets and liabilities squarely in the face and map out our plans for the future. Looking at the financial condition of the League we have nothing to discourage us, and very much to give us hope. By pursuing a policy of economy the Secretary has been able to bring his office through the unproductive last six months of the year, and exhibit it in a solvent condition Jan. 1, 1889. The quick cash assets of this office are alone large enough to meet all the liabilities including all that is due the Divisions ($942.98).

THIS would be a good showing any year but this; but alas, this year of Our Lord 1889 is different from other League years, for we have before us four months during which the income will be not nearly equal to the outgo, and this excess of expenses must be met in some way. Should the National organization bear it all? Must the League be carried along through four extra months on the shoulders of the National organization alone? Can the Divisions call for their pound of flesh and yield nothing? If nothing may be expected then the interests of the League demand that a Constitutional Convention be at once called and a return be made to the former financial policy.

UNDER the new system of things the income of the League from membership fees for the last six months has been divided as follows: Divisions, $1504.50; National, $855.75. Under the old financial system the money would have gone as follows: Divisions, $351.12; National, $2009.12. Thus the National organization has by a change of rules given $1153.37 more to the Divisions than they would have had under the old rules.

NOW let us use two ifs. If there had been no change in the financial year the League would have stood free and clear of debt on the 1st of January and it would have had money on hand. If there had been no change in the financial system, the League would be able to carry its membership through the extra four months and remain solvent.

IN the circular of the Executive Committee was the following clause: "The Executive Committee has the choice between two plans: It can instruct the Secretary to withhold payment to the Divisions of all that is due them, thus making them creditors of the National body, as they were in 1887, or it can call for a popular subscription." The latter plan has not met with the success predicted for it and the Committee has instructed the Secretary to withhold payments to the Divisions until some provision is made to carry the League through the four months till May 1st.

THE income to be derived from the per capita tax is amply sufficient to support the National organization if the present membership is held, in fact we believe the League could borrow money to tide it over and pay the loan out of the surplus of next year, but it is about time that the League had money enough to pursue a liberal policy in the conduct of its business, and it can find good use for every dollar that comes to it. We have been discounting the future and have not been forehanded for years. Very much work can be done with money. The Secretary has been obliged to abandon plan after plan drawn up in the interest of wheelmen simply because the funds necessary were not at hand, and the Executive Committee has found its hands tied very many times.

THE League is now trying an experiment. It has been asserted that more work will be done for cycling if the States are given the burden of labor and the larger portion of funds than can be accomplished by the national organization, if it undertakes the work and holds the funds. We are now trying tentatively to discover if the advocates of the State-work theory are in the right. Nothing has been shown during the past six months to prove that they have the right of the matter, for no more work has been done, if as much, as was accomplished under the old system. Perhaps it is unfair to judge a system after six months' trial, and we will not do so, but we believe the League has gone to work in the wrong way, and that sooner or later a radical change will have to be made in the prosecution of League work.

UNDER the old system of things the States got by far the smaller proportion of money paid the League for dues. And yet the great majority of States found no use for the money and it lay idle in the treasuries. Under the new system there has been but an aggravation of this evil for more money has gone to rest at ease until some day when it will disappear in a junket.

WE believe the Divisions should do the practical work of the League, and we believe that those Divisions that do the most work should have the most money. If a State desires to get out a road book, to prosecute a legal fight or to do any great work in the interest of cycling we believe that State should be assisted by the National organization. Give the National organization the great bulk of funds. Let the Divisions have enough to pay running expenses and no more. Then let the Divisions map out their work and call for an appropriation from the National organization. It may be that in a given year the money would be expended by six Divisions or less, but it would be spent to some purpose and for the good of cycling, and it would not be lying idle seeking for employment. To-day the large Divisions get a great deal of money but their demands are large and they do not get as much as they need, while the smaller Divisions do not use even the small sums they receive. We believe the money paid in to the League treasury should be expended for the benefit of cycling and not hoarded. We do not think that the funds are used to the best advantage when they are spread broadcast with the hope that all may fall on good ground and bring forth fruit in abundance. We believe it should be the duty of the Executive Committee to direct League funds into channels where they will be used to the best purpose and always for the good of cycling.

APPLICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP.

The following is a list of applications for membership received up to date, and published in accordance with Article III. of the Constitution, which is as follows:

"Any amateur wheelman, in good standing, eighteen years of age or over, shall, with the indorsement of two League members in good standing, or of three reputable citizens of the United States or Canada, be eligible to membership in this League upon payment of an initiation fee of one dollar, and such dues for the year as may be provided for in the By-Laws. Upon the approval of the Board of Officers, or a committee thereof, two weeks after the publication of the name in a list of candidates in the official organ of the League, the applicant shall become a member."

Tickets will be issued seventeen days after the publication of names.

Candidates will please notice if their names and addresses are correct.

Members are requested to examine carefully these lists as they are published, and to report errors and omissions to the Secretary. In order that no objectionable person may unite with the League, members are given the right to protest, but such protest must be received by the Secretary within two weeks from the date of publication, and contain specific charges so far as it is possible to make them. All such communications will be considered confidential.

The application list is closed at 10 A. M. on the Monday preceding day of publication. All applications received after that hour must go over to the list of the following week.

THE · SPRINGFIELD · ROADSTER · VOLANT · SAFETY.

LIGHT, COMPACT, STRONG AND DURABLE.

We wish to call the attention of the public generally to our new improved VOLANT SAFETY, which we have been induced to prepare to place on the market for 1889 to fill a long-felt want for those who desire to ride and do not wish to stride a high wheel, and for those who wish to purchase a wheel which can be adjusted to fit the whole family from a rider of 44 to 58 inches, and still for those who desire a machine that can be adjusted to them as they grow.

The VOLANT combines features of merit which can readily be appreciated by all. Our walking lever motion enables us to bring the wheels much closer together, thus distributing the weight to better advantage, also making it much less sensitive to steer. It has Ball Bearings all around, runs light, and is strong and compact. We shall have them ready for delivery by Feb. 15th to March 1st. Retail price $115.

THE NEW MAIL.

Only wheel with Trigwell's Ball Bearing Head! Has had another year of Extraordinary Success! No breaking down about This Wheel.

TESTIMONIALS.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 3, 1889.

Messrs. Wm. Read & Sons, Boston, Mass.:

Dear Sirs—The 53-inch New Mail, bought of you in 1887, I have now ridden nearly 4000 miles. True, this is not a great mileage, but every foot represents hard road use, and not to and fro over smooth park roads.

During the summer of '87 I rode this wheel from here to Niagara Falls, 845 miles, every foot of the way being either wheeled or walked, and it went through without a single mishap, making 70 miles average each day on the road, and five cents for benzine to clean the bearings, represents all the care and expense given to it. The ball head was not cleaned or adjusted till after I had ridden some 850 miles of rough road.

Since then, accompanied by two other New Mail riders, we made a straightaway run of 105 miles, being the first century run in our State. Afterwards, with one other New Mail rider, I pedalled it 138 miles in a day, which is State record. Not a great record, to be sure, but remember it was over Tennessee roads, and 133 miles of it unreputed.

This is my seventh wheel, five of them being the highest grade and price on the market, all of which I rode for at least one year, owning always at least two at one time, to better compare their merits, and I now say the New Mail is, without exception the most perfect and superb light roadster I have ever had.

It combines all the good features a most exacting wheelman could demand, including material, workmanship, easy running and great beauty of outline. In fact I have never yet met a wheelman, no matter what wheel he was riding, that did not say the New Mail was the handsomest looking wheel he had ever seen. The ball head is simply immense, and I would not habitually ride a wheel without it; not a ball has been broken; it is always rigid, and never gives me the slightest trouble. Further, I am thoroughly convinced the oval backbone is the correct thing. I have never known of this shape perch being broken here, although there are some eight or ten English roadsters with oval backbones in our city, which wheels have been in hard use over five years, while I know of three round backbones broken here this season on high price roadsters.

Only lately I had the machine to pieces, and found the head and all bearings as good as new; in fact I think with perhaps a new set of tires some of these days the wheel is good for the next ten years.

Yours very truly, ED. D. FISHER,
Capt. Nashville Bi. Club.

BOSTON, 18 JANUARY, 1889.

13,275.

THE above figures represent our edition for this week. Now is the time to take advantage of the large and increasing circulation. No matter whether you have one wheel or one thousand, this is the medium for you.

A BILL for the provision of better highways will probably be introduced into the Tennessee Legislature during the coming session. A letter from a Senator of that State, asking for data as to similar bills, has been received by this paper, and we have taken steps to secure same.

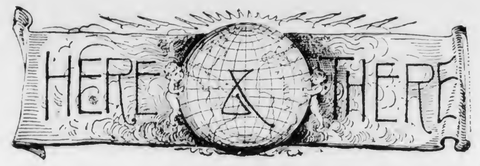
THE Mayor of Boston, at the annual dinner of the Boston Merchants' Association held on the 8th inst. at the Vendome, made but a short speech, but one very much to the point. Referring to a previous speaker, who had shown how a more equitable system of taxation would be more easily borne, and would increase the revenue to the extent of at least two million dollars, he said: "That would give us two million dollars that we want to spend upon our streets alone." The storm of applause which followed this remark was not so much evidence of the need of improvement in the condition of our streets as of the importance of a subject never in this country brought prominently before the people until the commencement of the cycling era.

OUR New York contemporary waxeth wroth, and heapeth personal abuse on the devoted head of Mr. Luscomb. We are sorry to see our worthy brother lapse into the disreputable methods pursued by the general press when discussing the real or fancied demerits of a political opponent. Now as to the desirability of Mr. Luscomb as compared with Mr. Jessup, we aver that it is an open question, and one which it is perfectly proper to discuss, but we must protest, in the name of decency, that the contest does not degenerate into a name-calling match. Both candidates will be represented by their friends at the meeting in New York next month, and in furthering the interests of their particular candidate they will see to it that the weaknesses of the opposing man are well ventilated and exposed, so as to act as a foil for the pre-eminent excellence of their man. This is all proper and legitimate politics, but don't let us get into a wordy wrangle like a parcel of schoolboys, whose ideas of politics are confined to calling hard names and retorting, "You're another."

THE recognition by the non-cycling press, of the importance of the Roads Improvement question would aid materially the efforts of those who primarily, at all events, regard the matter from the rider's standpoint. As a matter of fact there is no endeavor being made by cyclists to-day in the success of which the public should be more interested, or in which success would bring so much of benefit to the community, as this endeavor to improve our roads. It must be admitted with shame that in this country, good roads are the exception, bad roads the rule, and to aid in removing this stigma should be the pleasure, as it certainly is the duty, of every good cyclist and every good citizen. It is an encouraging sign when a paper like the Boston Herald, the circulation of which is exceeded by but two or three newspapers in the country, takes up this topic, and in a double leaded editorial puts it before its readers, 11th January, 1889, with eloquence and conciseness. For the benefit of our distant readers we reproduce (with italics of our own) the entire article, which reads as follows:

BETTER AMERICAN ROADS.

Some time ago we called attention to the inferiority of the roads in some of the suburbs of this city, and to the fact that where good roads exist the increase of population and in the valuation of property has been more rapid than where little attention is paid to them. Brookline to-day is distinguished for its fine avenues; the roads are so fine that everybody uses them, and the attractions of that section are so well presented that an increasing number of people wish to select this town for their permanent homes. Brookline is not superior in its attractions to other suburbs of the city, but it has constructed its highways so well that its claims are better presented. Wherever good driveways exist within easy distance of the city the incentive is strong to erect good houses, and it is eminently for the advantage of the towns suburban to Boston to put their roads in the best of order, and to increase the facilities for reaching the city, if they wish to secure the overflow of the city population. But this subject is wider than the Boston suburbs. There is a growing demand for better roads all over the country. Gov. Beaver of Pennsylvania recently urged this matter in strong English on the Legislature. The Vermont press insists that the State will prosper in proportion to the increase of excellent roads through its beautiful scenery. It is insisted upon that they shall be smooth and hard at all seasons, never muddy, without roughness in riding, with no obstruction in hauling, so that people can traverse them with security and enjoyment. There is no reason why the finished highways which form one of the attractions of the old world to the American tourist should not be found everywhere in the better settled parts of our own country. No public investment is likely to bring in better and happier returns to the people. President Eliot says that our roads and streets are the worst to be seen in any civilized country, even in Algeria, and that roads and parks are the instruments of public happiness which our own people have too little considered. The simultaneous interest in this subject in different parts of the country indicates that a public defect is already widely noted and commented on, and this is the first step toward a change for the better.



THAT RECORD OF 2.18 1-5.

EVER since we announced that Whittaker, Osborrow and Lees had accomplished the mile straightaway on a Rudge Triplet in 2.18 1-5 we have carefully watched the English papers for particulars as to the claim.

The papers that announced it have been strangely silent on the subject ever since. The bare statement of the claim is not enough in such a case as this when the time claimed is nothing less than marvelous.

In the mean time the Rudge people still advertise the claim.

As we took our facts from the Cyclist, won't that paper please state whether "Ah Fong" did the timing?

NEW YORK.

"HAWKSHAW."

THE entente cordiale that seems to have been recently established between things theatrical and matters cycular through the advent of a fair member of the former profession into the realms of the latter would, if one believed all the panegyries penned by wheel writers, surely presage an early marriage between the athletic cyclos and the fair and tuneful clio. In time all things happen, but I am afraid that in the present case the writers above noted have viewed this affair in entirely too much of a couleur de rose aspect to make the products of their pens as truly prophetic as they would otherwise be, were the object of their writings less passing fair. It will now be in order for some of these gentlemen to retort that I take this pessimistic view of the affair because I am an old bachelor whose heart-strings are too tough or too shattered, it matters not which, for them to prove responsive to the soft influences of female loveliness. While it is not true that I have yet reached an age where it can be claimed that Time has entirely shorn Cupid of his wings, I will admit that at my age perhaps the hand of prudence, while it may have deprived Cupid's wings of some of the wilder feathers there, yet still leaves him enough to fly with a more equal and steady flight than has yet been known by my younger brethren of the pen.

BUT to revert from so dangerous and personal a position. There is to some extent a warm personal feeling existing between the profession and the pastime, and many of the former are past grand masters of the header art. Space forbids that I attempt to name all of those, so I will take only one as an illustration. Mr. William Gillett, the talented author of "Held by the Enemy," "Shenandoah," and other well-known and successful plays, is almost as skilful a rider as a dramatist, and the following will show his interest in the sport is never lagging. When he was writing his last and most successful play, "A Legal Wreck," he thought of a plan by which he would advertise his play and at the same time place before the public a "handwriting upon the wall" that would betoken his connection with wheeling and its protective League. He proposed to call his play "Legally a Wreck," and it was to be billed throughout the country everywhere simply as L. A. W., and free use of the League badge was to be made, but unfortunately at the last moment he discovered that such a title would conflict with some other play long since written and forgotten, and he was compelled to abandon the idea. So we were forced to take the will for the deed, a misfortune much to be regretted. Perhaps the persons who will now for the first time learn of this affair and most regret it will be the members of the wheel clubs, who have been wont to decorate their headquarters with the lithographic works of art furnished by manufacturers and race meet promoters, and who will see in this failure of Mr. Gillette's a direct robbery of themselves of a choice bit of artistic ornamentation, which would have cost them but the usual outlay for this order of art gallery, i. e., the tacks that hold it to the wall.

IT may be that the era of decent streets in New York is nearer than most of us suppose. Much encouragement for this belief is found in the newly-elected Mayor Grant's message, in which, after deploring the condition of our streets to some length, he speaks as follows: "* * * * though recent experiments on Madison avenue seem to show that in certain localities an asphalt pavement might meet the public requirements. The cost of both pavements (granite block and asphalt) being about equal, the selection might be determined by the character of the thoroughfare to be paved." Now if Chief Consul Bidwell will just shape public opinion a little bit, who knows but what some day we may have an asphalted avenue running from the park to the centre of the city. Speaking of new pavements reminds me that in Germany successful attempts have recently been made at introducing a composition of rubber as a street covering. While it cannot be denied that taking a header on a roadway made of rubber would indeed introduce a new pleasure into cycling and would rob this grizzly old wheeling bugbear of all its terrors, yet we are not so high-toned as to be able yet to turn up our noses at asphalt, so, Mr. Mayor, it's your treat, and we won't ask for rubber; just give us asphalt and plenty of it, and then if ever you want to run for any office, no matter what it is, I will pledge you a solid wheelman's vote that will astonish you. Try it, and see if I am not right.

SO the New York World has sent "our Tom," that's Tom Stevens, you know, to Africa to find Stanley. Well, well, here's fame, sure enough. Mr. Stanley is just as good as found already. Mr. Stevens doesn't use a bicycle on this trip, as there is a law in Africa which forbids the use of the wheel upon any of the boulevards there, so walking will be plenty good enough for Tommie. He has promised me, though, to use his influence in passing a bill similar to our Liberty Bill, which will open up Africa as a new wheelman's paradise, and he will distribute tracts among the colored aristocracy, showing the ninety-six different reasons why all men should learn cycling. While I am not officially informed on the subject, yet I am led to believe that Stevens intends to do a mean thing on this expedition of his. He intends to smuggle in a wheel, and when well into the interior of the country, there issue a challenge to all riders of the dark country, and failing to receive any reply thereto at once proclaim himself the champion of Africa. 'Taint fair, perhaps, but what are you going to do about it?

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

A CHOICE bit of gossip is floating around to the effect that "Verax," in order to heal the breach between the Lincolns and the faction that left that club and formed the nucleus of the present Pastime Cycling and Athletic Club, recently made application for membership in the Pastimes, thinking that consolidation might be brought about between the clubs in the course of human events. A friend of the gay and festive "Verax" made a canvas of many of the members of the Pastimes and found that black balls were numerous, in fact it fairly rained black balls, and this being reported to "Verax" his application was withdrawn instanter; and now the Lincolns and Pastimes think not of consolidation, and Ned congratulates himself on his narrow escape from those awful black balls.

SOME one asked John Cory why Randall did not have a lady with him at the theatre party, to which John replied: "He could not get anyone to go on account of the moth-eaten appearance of those whiskers of his."

THE annual meeting of the Chicagos promises to be a lively one, owing to the scheme of running two club houses being looked upon by many of the members as a useless expense, besides being a heavy drain on the club finances.

THE Illinois are exerting themselves to the utmost at present to make their annual ball a flattering success financially as well as socially, and there is small room for doubt but that they will succeed, and enrich the club coffers in a marked degree thereby.

I AM told that the famous triumvirate composed of Garden, Oliver and Bell is liable to be dissolved, owing to Bell calling Garden an Englishman, and Oliver saying that Bell was right, all of which has caused Garden's Scotch blood to boil with unusual indignation, and trouble is looked for in the future.

THE Lincolns hold their election on Monday, and as stated by me before there will probably be few changes in the present Board of Officers, with perhaps that of Secretary. Irwin will probably be elected to this office, as Spooner, the present incumbent, sighs for a position more congenial to his taste in the road department.

ON hearing of Roe's election Davis drew himself up to his full height and grimly said, "it is war to the knife now," while Sloan said he had nothing to say, "it was better to let it drop and not make a mountain out of a molehill;" and Street remarked, with that sarcastic smile of his that pleases his friend Burnstein so much, "yes, not only to the knife, but by the knife to the hilt."

THE annual Pullman road race is being talked up, and preparations are being quietly made to make this one (the third) the most successful yet. A field of over a hundred starters is almost certain. The Illinois boys say they will show their Chicago brethren the dust (or mud) in this one, and the winners will wear the Illinois Club colors; and great will be rejoicing in the West Side club house when this comes to pass.

THE Chicago's theatre party Tuesday evening last was one of the most successful of the season. Some two hundred members, with their ladies, were present, filling the parquette and the boxes. Full dress was the order. Erminie was the opera, and in the second act Pauline Hall, after her beautiful Lullabye song, was presented with a magnificent floral wheel and silken banner appropriately inscribed. Many of the Lincoln wheelmen were present with their ladies, and I noticed a few Illinois members scattered through the fire. Messrs. Garden, Miles, Hosford, Ingalls, Roe, Oliver, Bogue, Ayres, Schmidt and their ladies were among those occupying boxes.

THE "Twins" had a spasmodic attack of doggerel verse in last week's Reform, and have the following about the "Stroller:"

"Who can that cruel "Stroller" be?
A hundred men have asked us
We do not know—we wish we did.
If we don't—well, blow it—bust us."

Comment on the above is unnecessary. The "Stroller" at one time was quite well known here, but times change and men change with them. Keep on guessing.

THE Chicago's annual election passed off quietly, and resulted in the election of Skinkle, President; Sanvay, Vice President; Cory, Treasurer; Sieg, Secretary; and Roe, Captain. The Captaincy represented a beautiful, three-cornered fight until within a few days of election, when Sieg gracefully withdrew and consented to run for the Secretaryship, masing it a close fight between Roe and Thorne, resulting in Roe's election by a small majority. Since writing the above I learn that Cory has resigned, owing to new business relations that will take him away from Chicago the most of the time. Skinkle is a worthy successor to Randall and probably far more popular in the club, but the club loses a most valuable officer in Mr. Cory and the club will have hard work to fill his place. He has been the one of all others who has done so much to put the club in the position it holds to-day, as one of the leading clubs in the West.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

"CANDOR."

THE Rhode Island Wheelmen are commencing to talk of a grand tournament next Decoration Day. If it is as good in proportion to the tournament that was held at Roger William's Park in their city last Decoration Day there is no question but what "Rhody" will still hold her high standard for successful bicycle tournaments.

CAMPBELL & CO., the bicycle dealers who really commenced business in this line here last season, seem to have done exceptionally well. They are about to move to larger and more convenient quarters in the new "Remington Building," where they will carry a full stock.

THOMAS STEVENS was to have given his lecture here on the 24th inst., and all the circulars, programmes and tickets had been printed, when we received word he was about to sail for Africa. The committee have concluded to have in his stead a grand musical and literary entertainment, consisting of the Crescent Male Quartette, the Weber Ladies' Quartette, the Beethoven String Quartette, and the Star Banjo Club. The quartettes and "musical gangs" will be assisted by Prof. Packard, of Brown University, as reader. The Crescent Quartette is the finest musical body "of the kind" in this vicinity. Their tenor, Mr. M. B. Grout, is an especially good one, while their first bass, Mr. Chas. L. Baird, "gets there." Mr. Phat T. Webster, the first tenor, is remarkably clear in his upper "register." Mr. Barron, the Court Jester, will perform.

POTKOPOLIS NOTES.

"STAR."

ON the last Sunday in 1888 the C. B. C. went to Linwood. There was nothing remarkable in the going, but the return will never be forgotten, for the whole distance was ridden in a drizzling rain that set in during the afternoon. As they were slowly jogging along by the light of the gas lamps of Eastern avenue, several kind-hearted individuals called their attention to the fact that it was raining and that they were getting wet.

THE style of the League cap should be changed. A low-crowned cap with a straight visor is more dressy, neat and stylish, and doesn't make the wearer look so much like the driver of a brewery wagon as the one now in use.

IT is said that a bill is to be introduced into the State Legislature to make an appropriation to turn the Miami canal into Mill Creek at a point beyond Cumminsville, and to transform the portion lying in the city limits into a magnificent boulevard over five miles in length.

CHAS. CRONINGER, who climbed Sycamore Hill on the Sunday before Christmas and who was compelled to dismount when near the top on his second trip by Teddy Allsup coming to grief directly in front of him, seems not to have had enough, for on the next Sunday he climbed Graveyard Hill at Sandfordtown, Ky., which is longer, steeper and rougher than Sycamore Hill.

THERE are three classes of women who would soon bid farewell to every ache and pain if they would "throw physic to the dogs" and judiciously use the ladies' bicycles. There is the woman suffering from diseases peculiar to her sex, and who does not take exercise because waking painfully jars certain organs; the school teacher, whose trying occupation has nearly exhausted her supply of nerve force; and the woman inclined to obesity, who does not walk because her weight tires her feet. To the first the swaying motion of the bicycle and the absence of painful pressure of the abdominal muscles, owing to the trunk being held erect by the arms, offers a means of exercise that would soon tone up the weakened parts and make her think life worth living; to the second it is only necessary to say there is no tonic to the nervous system equal to cycling; and to the third, with only the weight of her lower extremities on the pedals, she would find that, with a moderate use of liquids, she would soon lose her ponderosity. Of course it is understood that in acquiring the art they should have the assistance of a muscular attendant who is thoroughly familiar with the machine, and when they have learned to ride that, at first, the exercise should be taken on comparatively smooth and level roads and for brief periods.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

A GOODLY number of ex-Chief Consul Hayes' friends assembled at the Albany Depot last Monday afternoon to give that gentleman a parting godspeed. He leaves for the land of Brazil on Tuesday next. May he return to us with pockets full of ducats and an anatomy full of health.

WILLIAM GILLETTE, the "Private Secretary," is now a member of the L. A. W.

DR. CHAS. S. BUTLER, of Buffalo, will have the sympathy of wheelmen in the loss of his only son, who died Jan. 6th.

BROWNING, King & Co., of New York, have been appointed official tailors to the League. Advertisement appears this week.

WHILE the Boston Club is waiting for its new quarters to be furnished the members meet every Saturday night at Veith's Hotel on Tremont street and dine. "Papa" Weston is the promotor of these meetings.

MR. H. A. LIENHARD, for seven years connected with the office force of the Pope Mfg. Co., has gone west to represent that firm. He is a member of the East Cambridge Club, and his fellow clubmen gave him a great send off last Friday evening.

THE Northampton (Mass.) Wheel Club are prospering. This club took possession of their new club rooms two weeks ago. It has three rooms in Cook's Block, fitted up with all the modern improvements. A fine billiard table occupies one of the rooms.

THE new home of the old Boston Bicycle Club, on Boylston street, between Washington and Tremont streets, is being rapidly prepared for its occupancy. The entire inside of the building has been torn out and reconstructed to meet the demands of the club.

MR. T. S. MILLER, who was suddenly called away from Chicago to New York, desires to use the columns of the WORLD in saying good-bye to the many of his friends he did not have time to see. Mr. Miller is with the Lidgerwood Mfg. Co. of New York City.

WE shall miss the spicy notes of our old friend Page, of the St. Louis Spectator, and we are sincere in our regret that his bad health has compelled him to seek a warmer clime. The land of the Aztec will be his home. May good luck and a return ro[illegible] be his future lot.

THE total 1888 mileage for the R[illegible] dence, is 42,620, or an [illegible] bers. H. L. Perkin[illegible] with a record of 4100 miles each; Cooke comes next, 3550, and then Spiers, 2625. Doc rode 767 1-2 miles in December, which we think is record for the month in this latitude.

DR. W. G. KENDALL, Captain of the Boston Club, was among the favored guests of Sam Wah Kee at the dinner given by the millionaire Celestial in honor of the birth of his son, christened (Gov. Ames Mayor, Hart Kee. The genial Doctor now declaims on the beauties of birds' nest soup and melody from a Chinese standpoint, with a zest and earnestness that awes and impresses his less favored clubmates.

WE are in receipt of an excellent photograph of the "Big Three" of the Dorchester, Mass., Bicycle Club, Clarke, Doane and Benson. The Eastern Road Club cup reposes contentedly on a table between Clarke and Benson. We cannot but regret the absence of McCombie, one of the team who lost his life in his attempt to help secure the cup for his club. The particulars of the fatal accident are still fresh in the minds of our readers.

THIS is cheap cycling with a vengeance, but we rather expect hat our correspondent from Greenfield, Ind., must have had quite a number of friends who were "glad to see him," and put him up over night, or he could not have got out so cheaply. He writes: "Total distance ridden in 1888, 600 miles; paid for repairs, 85 cents; hotel bills, $2.55; total lost, $3.40; greatest distance in one day, 65 miles; fastest time, 7 miles in 22 minutes."

A SUGGESTION to the Illinois Division from L. A. W. No. 358: "In the WORLD of Dec. 14th an item stated that arrangements were about completed for an immense cycling tournament to be held in Chicago during the month of May, and as that month brings most delightful weather for cycling I suggest that the Division hold their annual meet in that city at the same time. The tournament will attract many wheelmen from other States, and if we add the meet the attraction will be doubled. What say you, wheelmen?"

THAT was a great dinner given Vice President Hayes by his associates of the Cambridge Club last Saturday. It was a rouser, and we think many moons will pass ere good old Herbert will forget that affair. The menus were ornamented with an excellent etching of Mr. Hayes, and these mementoes of the feast will be preserved carefully by all those who participated. Among those present were Vice Consul Robinson, of the Charlestown Rovers; Jack Seward, of the Chelsea Club; C. S. Clark, H. W. Burns, Charles Haley, George Nash, G. H. Gaines and others, of the Cambridge Club.

THE Melrose, Mass., Bicycle Club took formal possession of its new rooms last week Thursday. The rooms are located in the northern section of Eastman's block, and consist of a parlor and billiard room. The parlor is handsomely furnished and carpeted, and is supplied with an ancient fireplace, and there are several Turkish rugs and various pieces of bric-a-brac. Upon the walls are hung handsome paintings and engravings, and an upright piano occupies one corner of the room. The billiard room is appropriately furnished with combination billiard and pool tables. The club has twenty-five members and is in a prosperous condition. A reception was given to the friends of the club in the parlor at 8 o'clock, and at 8.30 the members of the club and invited guests repaired to the upper hall and danced until midnight. It was with sincere regret that we could not accept the kind invitation to attend, which was kindly extended through the courtesy of Mr. E. P. J. Morton.

ON THE WING.

BY OUR ROVING CORRESPONDENT, "SENATOR."

"Ho, for the Golden Gate!" was the cry when your roving correspondent shook the dust of Augusta, Georgia, from his feet and boarded a train for Omaha, which was to be the first stopping place. Atlanta, in "Lou" Powers, Homer Reed and others, had sufficient attraction to justify a stop-over for a day, and glad indeed I was that the stop-over was made, for it enabled me to have a twenty-minute chat with the Hon. Henry W. Grady, editor of the well-known Atlanta Constitution, and possibly the greatest orator of the South, if not in America, whom the Southern people hope to see at a future day President of these United States. The chat of course was cycling and cycle racing, as Henry W. Grady, Jr., is an enthusiastic cyclist and a member of the Atlanta Bicycle Club, and his father is proud of the cycling ability of the son. Mr. Grady was the means that brought about the Atlanta week's cycle tournament of 1887; it is hard to relate that he feels the Piedmont Fair lost money by the attraction, through, possibly, incompetent management principally. There may, in the summer of this year, be another tournament given in Atlanta on a larger scale, and will no doubt have Mr. Grady's able assistance in the management of the same. The genial Constitution editor told your correspondent with great glee about his great road race in 1887, when he chartered a special train to carry spectators, as the course lay right alongside the railroad track the whole distance. "It was a great success," said Mr. Grady, "and I cleared four hundred dollars out of it.

The dark summit of Lookout Mountain and Chattanooga met our view on the evening of the 22d Dec., and my scramble in 1884 to the summit, "to stand where Hooker stood, and where afterwards the stars and stripes floated from," and my reward being a severe sore throat, was food for thought as I stood on the back platform of the Pullman. "I lay ten days in that shed with only one blanket, and poorly fed, during the battle we had on that mountain," said a rough looking man who stood at my side, and who had at that moment caught my earnest gaze at the mountain which furnished a death bed for many a brave Confederate and Federal. "I belonged to a portion of Mead's command," he continued, "and was left with some more wounded in that shed while the battle was raging in the hills."

It soon got cold enough for my overcoat, which was the first intimation I had that we were passing from the torrid to the frigid zone, and when the train dropped us on the worn out, rickety, old Nashville platform I expected every moment to hear a colored gent shout, "you should have seen this depot 'foh de war," as everything to the darkey mind was much grander "'foh de war" than afterwards. Hunting up Ed Fisher, the bicycle agent of Nashville, the pioneer cyclist of this part of Tennessee, Mr. Fisher volunteered the statement that over fifty wheels were sold in Nashville last year, and the riders are on the increase. I also met Mr. Duncan and a brand new League member, Mr. Jones by name, who proudly exhibited his League ticket received the day before. Two hours was my stay in Nashville.

The evening found me at Louisville, Ky., and having four hours at my disposal before my St. Louis train left, tracks were made for Huber & Allison's bicycle agency, where I was cordially received by Mr. G. M. Allison and brother. This enterprising agent dwelt on the improved condition of Louisville streets, and hoped for a genuine revival of cycling interest in 1889, and was of the opinion that the safety would have the run to a certain extent.

MR. J. L. YOST.

THE announcement will be received with surprise that Mr. J. L. Yost has severed all connection with the Springfield Bicycle Mfg. Co., which concern Mr. Yost has been so closely and prominently identified with since its incorporation.

For months past Mr. Yost's family physician has urged that gentleman to give up his sedentary mode of life, or incur the penalty of a serious break down in health. In view of the fact that Mr. Yost's whole ambition and interest was wrapped up in the Springfield Company this urgent advice on the part of the physician was a very hard matter for Mr. Yost to accept. Yielding at last to the inevitable, Mr. Yost severed all connection with the company a week ago, and started for the Pacific coast last Saturday morning.

His late associates in business deeply regret the necessity of this step and they, together with all who have been brought in business contact with him, wish him a speedy return to robust health and Boston.

The successor of Mr. Yost, Mr. Herbert Barrows, is a gentleman eminently fitted to fill the important position thus left vacant, as he has been closely connected with the company since its inception, and is thoroughly conversant with the working details of the concern during its existence.

ROAD IMPROVEMENTS.

THE year 1889 opens with most gratifying evidences of active agitation on the matter of road improvements.

In two States, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, the Governors, in their inaugural message, urge legislative measures in order to secure better highways. On the other hand, New Yorkers hoped that Governor Hill would make some mention of this important subject and recommend similar action to that of Governors Ames and Beaver, but nothing of the kind appears in the message of Gov. Hill. From Ohio we hear that the question of improved roads has been taken up in Akron and Norwalk with spirit by those interested in this vital question. The country papers are discussing the importance of a new departure, and urging the tax payers and voters to go in for improved highways.

We cut from a Philadelphia paper the following paragraph, and commend the last two sentences especially, to the thoughtful citizen: "Every street in Rutledge (Pa.) should be macadamized, as well as the roads leading from Morton, Swathmore, Folsom, and the towns on the P. W. & B. Good roads are more important than good sidewalks. They will build up a town quicker than any other one thing, because everything else will naturally follow. See?"

A meeting was held in Elizabeth, N. J., last week Thursday, to discuss the matter of the proposed new Highway Law to be introduced into the New Jersey Legislature this session. Mr. W. T. West was appointed Chairman, and Comptroller Carlton, Secretary. The utmost interest was evinced, and a series of resolutions were adopted, embodying propositions giving to the Board of Freeholders the authority to designate certain roads as country roads, put them in proper condition and to keep them in repair, the material to be stone; the expense of such improvements to be borne partly by the county and part by the township and cities through which the roads run. One proposition is to issue county bonds, these bonds to be paid for in the proportion of the expense as divided up between the county and the several sections traversed by the roads. It was a representative meeting, several members of both branches of the Legislature being present.

The Massachusetts Division will be actively in the field this season, working and using its influence to further Legislation looking towards improved highway supervision. A good deal of quiet work is being done, which does not show on the surface, but which we hope to see take concrete form in the near future.

Gentlemen—As the year is drawing to a close perhaps you would be interested in knowing how the "SWIFT" has fared in this section as compared with other Safeties. To be brief, there are more "SWIFTS" in use here than any other make of Safety. We have not taken a single "ordinary," or any other kind of machine in exchange, as part payment, for a SWIFT during the season. Not a single SWIFT after leaving our hands has to our knowledge been exchanged for other make of safety or sold to a third party. There is not a second-hand "SWIFT" for sale or exchange. And finally, from present indications there will be more "SWIFTS" sold here during the coming season than any two other makes of safeties.

In Tennessee and New York the road improvement question will be one for the Legislatures to deal with. And so the good work goes on.

THE Philadelphia Record prints the following sensible stricture on the condition of the Quaker City streets: "The conservatism of Philadelphia and the patience of its people under annoyance have no better illustration than may be found in its hundreds of miles of cobble-stone pavements. For one hundred and twenty-five years the streets of this city have been cobbled, and 90 per cent. of the roadways are still paved in this fashion. The cost of repairs and cleaning is great enough to pay for proper paving every ten years. The cost of wear and tear of vehicles, of increased horse power, of loss of time, of loss of health, and of lessened value for ground and improvements, if the aggregate could be correctly ascertained, would no doubt be found to amount to a sum sufficient to lay down a new Belgian or asphalt pavement every year. But still we rattle over our cobbles, and bob up and down upon them, and fall in the ruts and endure the filth with an equanimity that would have taken the conceit out of Job."

POLLY, OF SWEETBRIAR VALLEY.

BY SECRETARY.

THAT all women act contrary to the ablest deductions of science, the laws of cause and effect, the regulations of supply and demand, as well as the Darwinian theory of the survival of the fittest, was firmly believed by Absum Cornpatch, and that belief had been more firmly established by an interview he had held that morning, in which his daughter Polly was mis-animated and defiant vis-a-vis. It is true that Absum Cornpatch's feminine acquaintance was extremely limited, and a broad-minded person might, therefore, term his conclusions unjust. "But," said he, "all pigs delight to root and all women delight to torment a man. I allow that different pigs root in different manners, and likewise different women torment men in different manners, but the rooting and the tormenting are accomplished."

I do not believe that in making this comparison Absum intended to place women on a level with pigs, or convey the impression that he thought they were, but as his chances for comparing all things in this world were limited to what he daily saw within the confines of the little valley wherein he lived, and from where he made but rare excursions to the neighboring city when he had the products of his farm to sell, and as at such times he was always too busy in keeping the designing city man from perpetrating some deep-laid swindle on him and at the same time keeping him from detecting any of the simple, little rustic wiles the honest farmer is prone to play on the green city man, that he had not much time left for observation, therefore we cannot expect his comparisons to be as refined and chaste as we, who have had more opportunities, would make them, where woman is concerned.

He had always secretly hated the city chaps, because when he was a lumbering sapling clumsily courting his wife Polly, he had had a city chap for a rival. Even now as he remembered him he would experience the dull hatred that he had felt in those old days when he was wooing Polly, in his plain, uncouth, shy way, and would sit off at a distance, sensibly feeling his inferiority to the city man, whose manners were polished and whose conversation was agreeable and interesting. Ah, well he could remember how, when he could only awkwardly mumble out some few words about "crops," need of rain, condition of the cattle, or some such humdrum talk, the glistening city chap would gaze on him with affectionate scorn and glibly recount adventures in foreign lands, the opinions of political leaders, and anecdotes so ludicrous that even Polly would be forced to laugh, and he would be the only one whose heart was too miserable to permit the lips to smile.

Ah, if it had not been for Polly, her own, dear, sweet self, he never would have had the heart to have fought the battle to its victorious end.

Now Polly's father and Polly's brothers and sisters were all in favor of the city man. The sisters were thinking of the wishes they could spend in the city, and perhaps also catch a city husband; the brothers planned it would be a good place to stop and save hotel board, and besides he would necessarily show them the sights at night and pay for the fun, for all city chaps who marry country lassies are expected to do that and have done it since time immemorial. Polly's father favored it because the city chap was a clerk in a fertilizer office and could doubtless get him a discount off of prices and a lengthy note.

Polly and Polly's mother were the only ones who favored Absum's suit. Polly's mother favored it principally because Polly's father opposed it. Polly favored it because she loved Absum with all her dear, affectionate heart. She was not ashamed of his uncouthness and poorly fitting clothes. One day, whilst her sisters were teasing her and ridiculing him, Nancy said: "Mercy, Polly, how can you stand him, he smells so of the fields and stables." Polly instantly retorted: "Well, he never smells of liquor."

Absum loved and revered Polly the more for sticking to him, despite the taunts and ridicule of her sisters and brothers and the wishes of her father, and also always retained a warm spot in his heart for his mother-in-law, who was such a staunch friend in his troublous court-ship days.

During their young married life he had often told her he thought a girl should always marry the man she loved, if he was fitting, no matter who opposed it, and that he liked her the more for her grit, and her mother for her loyalty.

Of the flock they reared and guarded the pet lamb of her father was Polly, Jr., the image of her mother, from the soft, dark, curly hair adorning her scalp to the tender, under epidermis of her tiny feet.

And this pet lamb had just left him.

This was the interview:

Polly, Jr., defiantly: "Yes, I shall marry him."

Absum, smiling confidently: "You shall, hey!".

Polly, Jr.: "Yes, I am going to marry the man I love; that's what mamma said, and you say I am her own daughter."

This was an ugly shot from Mistress Polly, and her opponent winced.

Absum: "You are, hey! I say you shall not with my consent, and what's more, if you do it without it you shall never darken my door again." The old chap's dander was up and he spoke with decided emphasis.

Polly, Jr.: "I shall marry him with or without your consent, and I shall darken this door just as often as I please, and what's more I shall marry him right yonder in that parlor, and if you don't like it you can—" she was going to say "put that in your pipe and smoke it," but remembering her father did not smoke she said, "put it in your ox cart and haul it around the farm." And Mistress Polly tossed her curly locks, filled her eyes with poniards, pouted her rosy lips, and strutted from his presence with the swagger of a queen.

RACING AT OMAHA.

OMAHA has proved itself to be the paradise of professionals by the very generous support given the races during the past week. Almost every night and afternoon the capacity of the Coliseum building has been tested to the utmost. As the week advanced, the struggle between Knapp and the Unknown waxed hotter and hotter, until the enthusiasm got worked up to fever heat.

Unknown, who by the way is a protege of Prince, is an Englishman and a player in the band of the U. S. Regt. stationed at Omaha) seems to be a hot favorite. He never rode a bike until a few months ago but he soon showed that he had rare stuff in him and the grand race he made with the veteran Knapp has proved the faith of his admirers to be well placed. His real name had for some reason been carefully suppressed, but your correspondent gives it as Reading. At the end of the first day the big four, Dingley, Knapp, Morgan and the Unknown had finished exactly even and this fact helped to awaken public interest so that the building was crowded Tuesday, and the excitement great.

On Tuesday when the men had all been started, Dingley went away at a clip which evidently meant that he was going to try to shake the crowd, but the gang stuck to him like burrs, and for five miles the spectators saw the fastest riding ever seen in this city. The best Dingley could do was to gain half a lap, but the other men soon pulled him back to their company and he had to be content to "move with the procession," and in fact he had to leave the track for 30 seconds, during which time he lost three laps. Of these he regained two laps from Morgan and Knapp, and one lap from the Unknown.

On Wednesday 5000 people assembled to see the race, and the management was jubilant. Knapp had his instructions to go for Reading Unknown at 9 P. M., which he did in great shape, and the enthusiasm was tremendous. Knapp managed to gain one lap on his rival, but he was run out, while Reading did not show great distress. The contestants were showered with flowers from the hands of Omaha's fair daughters. Louise Armaindo had to quit the track on this day, having become very sick.

The rumor was started Tuesday night that the Unknown's name was not Reading, but that he was none other than Tom Battensby, the great long-distance rider of England.

Again on Thursday the Coliseum was thronged; the racing was every bit as exciting as on former days. Dingley again cut loose, and made his mates follow him to the merry tune of 18 miles for

Again on Thursday the Coliseum was thronged; the racing was every bit as exciting as on former days. Dingley again cut loose, and made his mates follow him to the merry tune of 18 miles for the first hour. He paid for his effort later by fainting. This practically put Dingley out of the race.

A spoke in Knapp's machine gave out and threw him off, but he got another machine instantly and soon regained his lost distance.

On Friday night over 5000 admissions were sold, and the shouting that was done was a caution. It was a hard race for first place between Knapp and the Unknown, but Knapp managed to finish the evenings's run eight laps ahead of the plucky Britisher.

Saturday night saw 8000 people pass the gate, and the excitement ran high. Knapp had got a good lead on the Unknown, notwithstanding the latter's repeated and determined efforts to catch up. His efforts evoked such a storm of applause as to make one's head ring. It was a fearful uproar, and the ladies present stopped their ears while efforts were being made to quell the noise. As the time for the finish drew near, and as the soldier had gained two laps on Knapp, the excitement became worse, although it confined itself to shouting and the track was left clear and free. When Knapp finished the race, a winner by six laps, it seemed as if the building would fall. The Unknown was the favorite, and as a new rider he has made his mark. The question is, whether he won't prove a better man than Knapp, with more experience.

"Senator" Morgan has challenged the winner of the race, and so Omaha may have another six days' race. J. J.

CORRECTION.

Editor Bicycling World: Kindly do me the favor to correct the statement that the Kings County Wheelmen hold both 1st and 2d high scores and that G. M. Nisbett is a member of the K. C. W. I am a member of the New York Bicycle Club and consequently the New York Club holds the record of longest distance for 1888, viz., 8231 miles.

The New York Club in 1888 rode 58646 miles—reported by 76 men—but it is only fair to state that 25 men report less than 100 miles for the year, even then our average for 76 men would be about 771 3-4. Yours very truly, GEORGE M. NISBETT.

ELIZABETH WHEELMEN.

On Tuesday evening, Jan. 8, the above-named club held their annual meeting, and elected officers as follows: President, George C. Pennell; Vice President, A. G. Jenkins; Secretary, A. S. Brown; Treasurer, E. A. Faulks; Trustees, T. A. Doe, A. S. Crane, D. B. Bonnett, P. A. Oliver; Captain, Fred G. Gilbert; First Lieutenant, Louis B. Bonnett; Second Lieutenant, William H. Caldwell. Mrs. D. B. Bonnett was elected Color Bearer of the tricycle division.

The report of Captain Gilbert showed a total mileage of the club for the year just ended as being 23,947. The individual mileage of those who rode 1000 miles and over is as follows:

D. B. Bonnett, 2877 miles; H. McNiece, 2006; F. C. Gilbert, 1385; L. B. Bonnett, 1287; J. F. Decker, 1213 1-2; Rev. H. H. Oberly, 1075; A. T. Downer, 1000.

The largest individual mileage since the organization of the club is held by D. B. Bonnett, with 13,883 miles.

The cyclometer prize for 1888 was won by H. McNiece.

The largest monthly record is held by A. T. Downer, with a credit of 528 miles during September.

The 24-hour club record is held by Capt. Gilbert, who rode 157 miles in 18h. 45m. Touring was largely indulged in. Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington being the favorite objective points.

On the track the club members have also shown up. Captain Gilbert won the 3-4-mile steeple-chase at the Baltimore Meet. W. H. Caldwell started in eighteen races, scoring ten firsts.

After the business meeting refreshments were served, and the balance of the evening given over to social enjoyment, singing, athletic exercises, etc., being also enjoyed.

The Entertainment Committee is at work completing arrangements for a grand cycling entertainment to be given February 13th. X.

The telegraph reports, which are copied, stating that the bicycle race between Prince and Eck on bicycles and Beardsley on a horse, Dec. 10-15, resulted in a victory for horses, was incorrect. The facts are that the bicyclists beat the horse by eight miles.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Editor of this paper is not responsible for opinions expressed and statements made in this department. He also reserves the right to expunge all matter which in his opinion is improper.

? ? ? ?

Why has not the Martha's Vineyard banner been delivered to the Somerville Club who, it has been decided, won it by having the largest number of men in line in the parade at the Division Meet this summer? Is it because some of the members of that club openly acknowledge that it was unfairly won, because some of those who paraded in their ranks had long since ceased to be members?

Why did the President of one of our prominent clubs curtly refuse to be present at the annual ball of another club? Was it because of the bad blood engendered between the two clubs on account of this banner question?

What is the matter with C. S. Howard, of the Board, for Secretary-Treasurer if the present incumbent should be elected Vice President? Can anyone name a more eligible candidate, one who is more conversant with League and other cycling affairs? Should not the office, for obvious reasons, be located in Boston and not in some provincial town?

Why is the Division treasury in such a scandalous condition, when, but a year ago, it contained more money than probably any other Division treasury in the country? Would the League Secretary really like to have the other Divisions impoverish themselves merely that their chief officers may be solid with the royalty crowd?

Was the Second Vice Presidency given to Massachusetts as a sop to induce the delegates from this State to vote for the calsomined candidate? and will these officers, who, individually, are noted for their independence, allow themselves to be seduced by such pap?

Why is the above-mentioned candidate so satisfactory to royalty? Is it because they have had him in training for several years, so that, if he is elected, the King-Maker, his nibs of Central Park, will continue to be the power behind the throne? Would Jessup, of Pennsylvania, be such a figurehead? I opine not, and trust that the Massachusetts delegates will vote for him, and thus unselfishly help to relieve New York of the burden they have so long borne of running the affairs of the League with little assistance from outside? Is not the hour at hand when other States should shoulder some of the responsibility?

Why has the same old, unsatisfactory hotel been selected in which to hold the coming officers' meeting? Few of the delegates wish to go there, and still fewer will put up there. Is it because one of the proprietors is a prominent member of the club that has so long had the control of the strings that work the League puppets?

Why is the Wheel so down on Luscomb? It was not such a long time ago that they tickled each other's backs.

Why is New York selected year after year as the city in which to hold the officers' meeting? Are not the delegates tired of the treatment they receive there, and ready to go to some city where they will be at least invited to see the inside of a club house?

When shall we again have the pleasure of listening to one of those carefully rehearsed speeches of the Doctor's, and how many times does he go over them before they are satisfactory to him?

These, Mr. Editor, are a few of the many conundrums that have been fired at me during the past few weeks by some of my cycling friends.

Although I desire to please these friends by giving the solutions, my answers would probably not be acceptable, so I offer a dinner at Young's to the correspondent who will correctly answer the greatest number of these chips from the conundrum factory, you to be the judge. "WHYT THE."

ROUTES WANTED.

Editor Bicycling World: Will you, in your next issue, ask any one who knows, to kindly give, in a general way, the best bicycle route from Cincinnati, O., to Grand Rapids, Mich.? Mr. J. P. Petty, of this city and myself intend to make the trip next summer, and we are in doubt as to whether we should go up through Ohio or Indiana not knowing which route would furnish the best riding. We shall of course consult the road books for details when we decide which State we shall pass through to reach Michigan.

We are still having good riding in this vicinity—no snow as yet.

Fraternally yours, W. C. MUNRO.

Cincinnati, O., January 8, 1889. (P. O. Box 747.)

Editor Bicycling World: I have a great desire to take a two weeks tour this coming fall (1889) and would like to go South or Southwest. Can any one advise me of a particularly good route? What I mean by good route is, good roads and rolling country. I am looking for a picnic. Having spent my former vacations in the rough mountainous country of Western Pennsylvania I am very anxious to experience the pleasure of rolling over some good roads. I would like to start from some point in Southwestern Pennsylvania and be out two weeks.

I have no particular objection to returning over same route.

"HAWKSHAW" GETS IT.

Editor Bicycling World: I am not in the habit of devoting much time to the notes contributed by your correspondent, "Hawkshaw," for the reason that the excessive amount of egotism displayed in them is rather tiresome. I did, however, read his remarks in the WORLD of December 28th, and in connection with them—with your permission—I should like to express the sentiments of a few and perhaps of a majority of your readers.

You will doubtless concur with me in saying that, laying aside all sentiment, the weekly paper furnished to L. A. W. members is, in a majority of cases, especially in the large cities, the only substantial advantage accruing from a membership in the League. The paper is also the most convincing argument that can be used in gaining new recruits. Is it, therefore, good policy to allow the otherwise high standard of your paper to be lowered? To waste valuable space, and to antagonize your Western readers by such trash as that which often emanates from your New York correspondent, "Hawkshaw?"

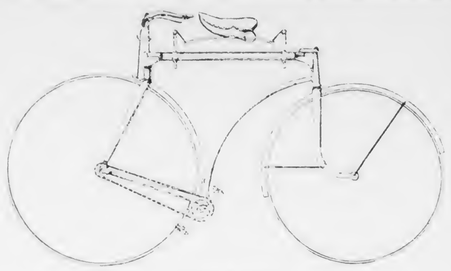
Take for instance his notes in the WORLD of Dec. 28th. The first third of the space is taken up with his positive assertions as to what wheelmen should and should not do. The next third is devoted to the utter annihilation of a correspondent "somewhere," as he terms it, "in the wild, woolly and windy West," who had hurt his feelings; and the last part, which purports to be after the style of some country correspondent, is a lot of nonsense, which is about on a par with the rest of his peculiar methods. It would hardly seem possible to find anything more "wild and windy," to use two of his own rather inelegant terms.

There is not a particle of news, nor a sentence in the whole thing that would go toward inducing a wheelman to join, or one who is already a member to remain in the L. A. W. The effect is entirely to the contrary.

My motive for this criticism is not pique because I am living, according to "Hawshaw," in the wild, woolly and windy West, for I was born and passed most of my life in New York City. I am afraid, however, that some Western wheelmen may accept his remarks as voicing the sentiments of the majority of riders in New York regarding the West.

"Hawkshaw" has probably never been further West than New Jersey, and may therefore be pardoned for his decidedly antiquated and narrow views, which I am sure are not shared by many other Eastern wheelmen. Very respectfully, L. A. W. No. 14,670.

St. Louis, January 9th, 1889.



[Our correspondent is decidedly savage in his comments on "Hawkshaw's" contributions. We cannot admit that "Hawkshaw" was intentionally ill-natured or malicious in his reference to the West, but No. 14,670 seems to take the other view, and though we are sure he is mistaken, yet he has a perfect right to his opinion and to the expression of same through our columns.

Our friend, No. 14,670, however, strays from actual truth, and in several other ways gets beyond his depth. In the first place No. 14,670 asserts: "The first third of 'Hawkshaw's' space" (of Dec. 28) "is taken up with his positive assertions as to what wheelmen should and should not do." A reference to said notes shows this is not correct, the space being given to a criticism as to the use of the Madison Square Garden track for cycle races. Mr. No. 14,670 also states that "perhaps he expresses the sentiments of the majority of our readers" in condemning "Hawkshaw's" notes as being "trash," "a lot of nonsense," etc.

This is not all, for our most esteemed correspondent, No. 14,670, asserts that the effect of "Hawkshaw's" notes will be to drive members out of the L. A. W.!!

Taken all in all the above letter is remarkable, and outside the protest at "H.'s" references to the West is an effusion that causes us wonder. We respect Mr. No. 14,670's personal opinion of "Hawkshaw's" notes and we are sorry that he does not like them, but our respect is increased to reverence when we find No. 14,670 is speaking for a "majority" of our 13,250 readers. Hereafter when we want to feel the pulse of the "majority" of our readers we will invoke the aid of this wonderful oracle.—ED.]

The Forest City Ramblers' Cycle Club, of Cleveland, Ohio, held their annual meeting last week. The present membership is 55, and the total mileage is 70,000, the first thirteen riders having 42,202 between them. The Ramblers are in every sense a cycle club, awake, alert and on the road.

THE ACME.

The above cut represents a machine invented by Mr. Harvey Brown of Brandt, Ohio, and which he calls the Acme Safety. The machine consists of a 32-inch front driving wheel, a rigid fore-frame, a 30-inch rear steering wheel, and the rear fork hinged to the perch as shown in cut.

The driving wheel being held firmly in line with the framing it is claimed that the push of the rider does not throw it out of its course. The rear wheel is used as the steerer with the rear fork hinged to the perch far enough forward of the centre of the rear wheel as to voluntarily follow in line with the front one when the machine is in motion. The steering is effected by connecting the steering bar and rear fork by means of rods and links, the rods passing through the hollow perch. The links consist of two toothed wheels, one fixed firmly on the top end of rear fork and the other hinged on the rear end of the perch, both inclosed in a neat sheet metal case.

In addition to the usual lever and spoon brake there can be placed on the crank shaft a drum and hand brake operated by the foot.

The saddle is placed on an elastic seat spring which is suspended between two oscillating springs absorbing vibration.

Ample means are provided for adjustment to suit riders of different leg measure.

It is claimed that a bicycle constructed as above will run steady and that a rider need not be an expert to ride with hands off the handle bar.

NEW RAPID CYCLES.

(From the Cyclist.)

We shall publish our list for 1889 on Jan. 1st next, when they can be had on application. We hope to exhibit at the forthcoming Stanley Show, when we shall place on view cycles which for sound workmanship cannot be beaten.

It is worth while of any firm interested in the sale of cycles to write us for terms, and thus get an insight into the system which will ensure protection and prevent anyone else selling into their district. It is simple and effective, and consists mainly in furnishing each of our agents with a certificate of appointment as agent for the sale of "New Rapid" cycles, and guaranteeing only those machines which are purchased through such agents.

We invite cycle manufacturers to copy this system of ours, as well as the machines which we shall exhibit at the Stanley Show.

ST. GEORGE'S ENGINEERING CO., Birmingham.

MESSRS. SINGER & CO. will put on the market for 1889 twenty-four different patterns of cycles as follows: Four ordinaries, six safeties, including a ladies' safety and a tandem safety and single tricycles, including the Veloceman (hand driver) two tandems, one Victoria for four or more riders and three Carrier tricycles in single and double.

MR. E. M. WAITE, of Salem, Oregon, is nearly sixty years of age and yet uses his Columbia bicycle every day, and considers it indispensable.

THE Warwick Cycle Mfg. Co. have issued their first catalogue, and it is a model of typographical neatness. The wood cuts are especially fine, and the descriptive letter press is exhaustive and well written.

ONE of the novelties for the season will be the safety to be built by Wm. Read & Sons. We shall describe at the very earliest possible moment that facts and cuts can be obtained.

LEAGUE HEADQUARTERS:
12 Pearl Street, - - - - Room 27.
ABBOT BASSETT, Secretary.

FOR the first time in the history of the League we count 12000 members on our rolls, and still they continue to come.

THE Uniform Committee gives notice of a change of base in regard to the League Uniform. Hereafter the buttons and the cloth may be had of the Secretary at the regular contract price.

WE are sorry to see the Wheel introducing "vinegar" into the campaign for the presidency of the League. Two candidates are now in nomination by their friends. Each has done good work for the League and either will make an able president. We hope to see a friendly contest, and the League will not suffer by the triumph of either candidate. But let us avoid bitterness and recrimination. There is no call for it.

THE influence of the League in favor of good roads is clearly seen in the columns of the press and in the utterances of public men. We have set them to talking, and the manufacture of public opinion in favor of better highways is rapidly going on. This is the first step, and it is a very long one.

National Assembly.

In accordance with Section 1 of Article V of the Constitution, the Annual Meeting of the National Assembly of the League of American Wheelmen will be held on Monday, February 18th, 1889, at the Grand Union Hotel, New York City, convening promptly at 10 o'clock A. M.

It is earnestly desired that all persons entitled to a seat in the assembly will arrange to be personally present. In view of the fact that Bylaws are to be adopted for the national organization, it may be advisable to continue the meeting over two days. I trust the members of the Assembly will, if possible, arrange their business matters so as to permit them to remain two days if it be found necessary.

In the absence of any new rule regarding proxies of those who cannot be personally present the old rule will govern. This rule is as follows, the National Assembly taking the place of the old Board:

"At these meetings any member of the Board may be represented by proxy, provided that the person holding the proxy shall be a member of the Board, and that no person shall be proxy for more than three members, unless he be a Chief Consul, when he may hold proxies for six members. Provided, however, that no officer shall be proxy for another and vote in his stead, unless he be designated by name in the handwriting of the officer signing the proxy, and further, no officer holding a proxy shall be empowered to transfer the same to any other officer under any circumstances."

The following gentlemen are hereby appointed a Committee on Credentials: Chairman, W. H. Emery, 1377 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.; W. S. Bull, 10 West Eagle St., Buffalo, N. Y.; and J. J. Van Nort, Scranton, Pa. Proxies may be mailed to the Chairman, care the Grand Union Hotel, New York, four days previous to the meeting, and members having proxies should, immediately on arrival at the hotel, report to the committee. A little attention to this matter on the part of members of the assembly will greatly expedite the work of this committee.

We now have but one business meeting a year, and it is hoped all the persons who are members of the assembly will be personally present at the meeting, with arrangements made to remain until all the business is properly and carefully done.

Respectfully submitted,
T. J. KIRKPATRICK, President.

L. A. W. Uniform.

To the members of the L. A. W.

We have discontinued the arrangement had with Wanamaker & Brown, of Philadelphia, Pa., for the manufacture of the L. A. W. uniform, and placed same with Browning, King & Co., Broome and Centre streets, New York City, who will supply the uniform at the following prices:

Coat, $8.25; breeches, $3.50; shirt, $2.00; cap, $1.25; hose, $1.00.

Members who desire to have their suit made to measure by their home tailor can be supplied with the cloth at $2.25 per yard on application to the above firm or to the Secretary of the L. A. W., Abbot Bassett, 12 Pearl street.

Messrs. Browning, King & Co., through previous experience in making the League Uniform and also through the fact of having the largest and best equipped establishment in the United States, are in a position to give us satisfaction in any particular, and as the Uniform matter has not been handled to the satisfaction of the members of the League or the committee in the past two seasons, we considered a change necessary and in fact imperative.

Messrs. Browning, King & Co. will mail each member of the League a sample of the L. A. W. Uniform cloth also an illustrated descriptive circular of the uniform with full direction as to ordering the uniform and self measurement. The change in contract will take place January 15th.

All such communications will be considered confidential.

The application list is closed at 12 M. on the Monday preceding day of publication. All applications received after that hour must go over to the list to the following week.

THE · SPRINGFIELD · ROADSTER · VOLANT · SAFETY.

LIGHT, COMPACT, STRONG AND DURABLE.

We wish to call the attention of the public generally to our new improved VOLANT SAFETY, which we have been induced to prepare to place on the market for 1889 to fill a long-felt want for those who desire to ride and do not wish to stride a high wheel, and for those who wish to purchase a wheel which can be adjusted to fit the whole family from a rider of 44 to 58 inches, and still for those who desire a machine that can be adusted to them as they grow.

The VOLANT combines features of merit which can readily be appreciated by all. Our walking lever motion enables us to bring the wheels much closer together, thus distributing the weight to better advantage, also making it much less sensitive to steer. It has Ball Bearings all around, runs light, and is strong and compact. We shall have them ready for delivery by Feb. 15th to March 1st. Retail price $115.

AN UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIAL.

MESSRS. WM. READ & SONS, BOSTON.

Gentlemen—Will you kindly put my name down for one of the first copies of your new Catalogue, describing your New Mail Safety. I am anxious to see what I am sure will be the the heighth of mechanical art, judging from the perfection of your "New Mail" bicycle. I have ridden one of the latter, bought of you, through thick and thin for two years, and I know I can depend on it every time. Graceful in outline, rigid, yet elastic as whalebone, its Ball Head firm as a rock, yet sensitive to every touch as the mouth of a high-bred horse, every ounce of metal put where it will do the most good, it seems as though in it the skill of the bicycle builder had culminated, and that if further improvement is to be, it must be in other designs as yet undreamed of, or in other materials, whose nature is perhaps hinted at in the metal aluminum. Very respectfully,

CHARLES L. PALMER,

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 1 FEBRUARY, 1889.

NEARLY THREE QUARTERS OF A MILLION.

ON the present basis of the weekly circulation, 691,000 papers in one year would be issued from this office. It takes over 1500 reams of paper, the total weight of which would be 57,760 pounds. The advertiser can ponder on these figures.

THE editor of our New York contemporary devotes two columns editorially to the subject of circulation, the tenor of which seems to be that there are 60,000 wheelmen in the United States who are not subscribers to his paper, and he grows grandiloquently patronizing, in that he allows us our "miserable 13,250 circulation," while he will be content to take as many of the 60,000—as he can get; all of which is edifying, generous and a trifle amusing.

But the nub of the thing is right here. We went a-fishing, cast a fly and hooked our esteemed contemporary, and so now comes the scaling, the cleaning and the frying of the little fish.

When the aforesaid editor makes an affidavit showing the exact number of names on his regular mailing list, and when he makes affidavit that from 3000 to 4000 of that claimed 5000 issue were not sample copies, we will have a very few more words to say. We are sorry that the impetuosity of our New York brother impelled him to rise at our fly, but so it is, and he has swallowed the bait, hook and all.

We must ask our readers to bear with us for taking up valuable space discussing this matter; we will not sin often, and we will be brief.

OUR esteemed contemporary, Bicycling News, has been asking prominent English racing men a series of five questions as to their individual views of the time limit scheme. We take from that paper the replies of Richard Howell and Herbert Synyer, as representative men of the professional and amateur ranks:

"Query 1. Will a time limit man cause the cracks to hurry?

Says Howell—'The time limit has been tried in England, and found not to answer; in fact, it has never answered anywhere. It would not cause the cracks to hurry in the least, they would sooner have the race run over and over again than make the pace, and run a chance of a second-class man beating them.'

Query 2. Is forcing the pace a wiser course than 'tactics' or head work?

'Many races are won by head work only, when they could not possibly be won by forcing the pace.'

Query 3. In amateur races, will withholding the prize be an effective penalty?

'I don't believe any good comes of any kind of threat. It's only regular racing men that understand the question. People go to see a race, not to see a man fined.' [Amen!—ED. BI. W.]

Query 4. Do you think it wise to experiment in championship races, amateur or professional?

'If new-fangled things are advertised the public don't understand it, and they don't know whether it's a donkey race or a bicycle race, and they don't go to see it.'

Query 5. In your experience, has 'waiting' or 'going all the way' been most successful (in first-class company)?

'I have won mostly all my championship races at the waiting game. I used to go all the way, but found out that I could win much more easily by waiting, and sprinting my men down at the finish.'" * * * *

We now come to what Mr. Herbert Synyer says on this important subject:

"'I, for one,' says Mr. Synyer, 'should do as I have always done in whatever contest, that is, ride to win.'

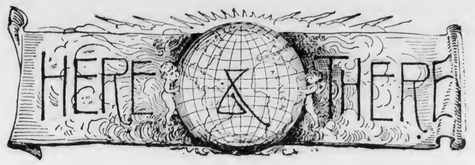
That is, he would ignore the time limit and ride his races exactly as heretofore, as his judgment taught him. On the pace-forcing, as opposed to tactics, question, the amateur champion writes:

'Is mere pace-forcing preferable to tactics? Certainly not, and even as Osmond has tried the pace-forcing system, so have I, and I have come to the conclusion that for a man to be able to run another man off his legs he must be at least a hundred yards the better man in a mile, especially when there is any wind about.' * * * *

Finally, Synyer expresses his readiness to join with other cracks in a refusal to enter for any time-limited championships, and he adds that he considers

'That such contests ought not to be at the mercy of a few non-racing men, who, so long as the men get over the ground in a certain time, irrespective of a good finish, care not one jot whether the best man runs first, second, third or unplaced.'"

We reproduce the above opinions from two such prominent racing men, not because we are surprised at their answers, or that we supposed for one instant that they would take any different position. That the crack amateur or the crack professional would object to any scheme forcing them to give more interesting races we were perfectly aware of, before we read the opinions of Howell and Synyer.



The professional is hot after his little purse, and the crack amateur is also earnest in his chase after the prize.

But did our worthy "cracks" ever consider from whence came the purse and the prize? If this thought has never entered their brain we will joggle their perception by remarking that the public furnish the funds to make up the purses and pay for the prizes. Now this same long-suffering public is rapidly becoming disgusted with these loafing matches and fake exhibitions, miscalled races, and said public is fast arriving at the point where it will refuse to attend these so-called race meets. Briefly, the public is the goose that lays the golden eggs, the stubborn professional and amateur, who kick against giving interesting races, take the part of the man who killed the poor goose.

The moral and result is easy to learn—A dead goose, no egg; no egg, no purse, no prize.

Perhaps after all it will be a good thing that the "crack" racing man is determined to refuse to enter time races. Let him go; there are plenty of "second-class men" who will remain on the path and give us races in real earnest, as of yore, and not exhibitions of modern jockeying and brain racing, which may be very intellectual but intensely stupid.

OFFICERS who send proxies to be used at the coming National Assembly in New York must bear in mind that unless they follow printed instructions on the same, to the very letter, the proxies may be thrown out.

LOS ANGELES.

"VINDEX."

THERE is one things residents of this city take just pride in, and that is the Southern California climate, with the brand blown in the bottle. At this season of the year the contrast in the atmospheric conditions between Southern California and the East is simply marvelous, and is to be experienced to be appreciated. In the East old Boreas has been on a rampage, and Jack Frost has nipped the ears of the rich and the poor. Here in the glorious country of Southern California the air is redolent with the rich fragrance of the orange blossom, the air is as balmy as a day in June. The birds seem to sing more sweetly; the sun shines brighter and warmer. The orange trees are heavily laden with their golden fruit. The Eastern wheelman has carefully wrapped his faithful old bike in canton flannel, and it has been relegated to the cold and cheerless cellar. Its owner has for the nonce given up bicycling, but can be found at the club, narrating the incidents of the past season. Here the wheel is never stored, but is used by its owner the year round.

IT is stated that President Kirkpatrick and Treasurer Brewster will visit Los Angeles this spring.

"A MERRY Chestnuts and a Happy Rats, Job Lots, Remnant Sale, A. W. Allen, J. J. Archibald," was the New Year's card presented by these two festive young wheelmen.

W. S. WING, Osborn & Alexander's able representative here, has sent in a large order for ice bicycle attachments, which were recently advertised in the WORLD. There are no cantharides on Wing.

EFFORTS will be made with the powers that be, to hold the State Division meet in this city this summer, and the date will probably be May 30. Races will be given at Agricultural Park. An interesting programme will be arranged.

"MENTOR," your former correspondent at Kansas City, is now a resident of this city. In a talk with your correspondent, he said: "Please give my compliments to 'Occasional,' the Denver correspondent, and tell him he has an excuse for living, and that is to be ultimately cut short in his mad career by the fool killer."

LOS ANGELES is being paved with asphalt, and the riding is superb. This city is surrounded by a number of lovely places to visit, and the roads are fine. This year a boulevard will be constructed to Santa Monica, the great seaside resort, and the trip can then be accomplished in an hour. This is the favorite run of the wheelmen. Wheelmen should visit Southern California, the ideal wheelman's paradise.

THE Los Angeles Wheelmen are now comfortably quartered in their new rooms in the Panorama Hall building. The club occupy two well-furnished rooms; one is used as a billiard room, and the other as a reception room. On last Tuesday evening (15th) the club gave a reception and hop to their friends. About forty couples participated, and a royal good time was had. The ladies were bewitching in beautiful toilets, while the men in their knickerbockers were much admired.

NEW YORK.

"HAWKSHAW."

A CERTAIN bi-monthly wheel paper announces on its first page that Mr. Stevens has been sent on "a bicycle trip in search of Stanley, and then on the following one makes the wonderful prediction, that "if the wheelmen of Philadelphia will only guarantee Thomas Stevens a good round sum of money they could, no doubt, prevail on him to come to this city and recount his adventures in foreign lands." Here's richness for you! Think of the wheelmen in Philadelphia writing to Stevens at Zanzibar, asking him to come home at once and receive a "good round sum" just to tell them of "his adventures in foreign lands." Oh! Tommie, Tommie! Why did you go on your bicycle to Africa, and thus stir up Philadelphia journalists? It's awful wicked and unkind of you, and I'm ashamed of you, really I am.

As a rule I am not in favor of political jobs, and the presence of the "colored gentleman" in any bill usually causes my opinions to be averse to its becoming a law, but if ever I was tempted to the contrary it was this week, when the "Senegambian individual" was discovered secreted in bill No. 29. This bill was introduced at Albany, and authorized the Commissioner of Public Works in this city to pave with asphalt pavement the Grand Boulevard (or Broadway), from 59th to 110th street. If there is anything that would boom wheeling here it would be this, but unfortunately the papers asserted that the bill was a "strike," and that there was $50,000 "boodle" to be divided when it passed, and I am afraid that there is no hope for us not to continue to ride the Boulevard as a morass in wet weather and a Sahara in dry.

DR. N. M. BECKWITH last week secured a judgment against D. H. Renton for $1000 for false arrest. It will be remembered that the Renton vs. L. A. W. case was the result of a communication from a member of the L. A. W. in Scranton, appearing in the columns of the Bulletin, then under the editorship of Eugene Aaron, in which it was alleged that Renton appeared upon the track in a racing costume devoid of decency. Renton began the play by arresting Messrs. Aaron and Beckwith for libel, and whooped things up in general, threatening at one time to arrest any and every body. On the trial that followed, before a country jury on Staten Island, pictures of Renton in racing costume were shown to prove that he was not indecently clad, in fact I think Renton appeared personally before them, clad in the identical abreviated habiliments. This was the opening scene, and the victory of Dr. Beckwith's, above recorded, is the final one, in what started as a tradegy and ended as a farce. Ring down the curtain. The play was bad, though truth compels me to say that some of the stars were good, and ably filled the roles in which they found themselves so unexpectedly cast.

I DON'T think anyone has been more enthusiastic over the entry of ladies into cycling than I have, and none have tried harder to encourage them in doing so than myself, but when it comes to a question of woman bestriding an ordinary, and riding round a track for the purpose of being guyed by a curious public, then I want to go on record as voting decidedly in the negative. I had thought that this class of cycling disgrace met its birth and death in the performance of Louise Armaindo, but alas! I was mistaken. On Feb. 11th we are going to have what is billed as a six-day female bicycle race here, the contestants to ride eight hours each day. Mr. Richard K. Fox, the editor of a "society journal," intends to present the winner of the event with a $500 diamond medal, emblematic of the female bicycle championship of the world. Pittsburg has the distinguished honor of introducing this highly creditable (?) form of sport. It will take many years for the better class of wheelmen to overcome among ladies the stigma that will thus fall upon wheeling, and it is much to be regretted that it should occur just at this time, when so many ladies have had their attention favorably called to cycling as a pastime suitable for their adoption.

BALTIMORE.

"NORVAL."

THE work of the roads improvement committee is said to be progressing favorably and the committee feels encouraged to keep along in its work. The chairman, Chas. R. Eisenbrandt, has received congratulatory letters from wheelmen in all parts of the State and is in receipt of numerous letters from other States inquiring into particulars of his work.

THE bad weather has arrived and stopped wheeling.

THE fourth annual full-dress reception of the Maryland Club will be given on February 13th.

THE Centaur and Chesapeake Clubs expect very soon to move from their old headquarter. The Chesapeakes are seeking for a clubhouse further out on Fulton avenue.

J. M. CUMMINGS, the popular Secretary of the Baltimore Club, will be married on February 20th to Miss Edith F. Brittain. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride, 1743 Park avenue.

HARRY T. KINGSLAND, Maryland's champion bicycle rider, is at present a full fledged member of the Manhattan Athletic Club, also is William Macdermott, Maryland's champion high-jumper and sprinter.

IT is rumored that the members of the Rambler Club are anxious to consolidate with the Baltimore Club. It is very likely that if any of the Ramblers should individually make application for membership in the Baltimore Club, they would be taken in.

CHIEF CONSUL ALBERT MOTT and his wife will probably be the first Baltimoreans to become regular riders of a tandem bicycle. Mr. Mott has commissioned a friend to purchase him the most desirable of those which will be exhibited at the coming Stanley show in England, where all the English and some of the American manufacturers show their latest and most improved machines.

THE Madison Avenue Improvement Association has prepared a petition to the City Council for the paving of Madison avenue from North avenue to Druid Hill Park gate with belgian blocks. A portion of the street is paved at present with these blocks. The property holders are anxious to have the work completed. The wheelmen claim that as there is no heavy travel in that portion of the city the asphalt pavement would be far preferable to all who use the street. The cyclers would be content if the space between the car tracks was paved with the blocks, but they do not prefer having the whole street covered with them.

BUFFALO.

"ALI BABA."

TIME creates wonders: as with all successful clubs, so with the Buffalo Bicycle Club. February 22d will be the tenth anniversary, and we are going to celebrate it in a way which calls forth special rejoicing. It will take the form of a banquet which will in all probability be held at the Niagara. Would that you could be there. I always fancy that men of letters have ravenous appetites. [On the contrary, editors are proverbially abstemious.—ED.]

DR. JULIUS POHLMAN gave an able lecture on physical exercise at the Buffalo Club house, and the ladies showed their appreciation by being present in large numbers and showing an interest, which the doctor was gratified to note.

LADIES are beginning to show an unusual interest in physical culture, and from the amount that is being written about the benefits of cycling, and the enthusiasm shown by women, it will not be long before we shall see many of the gentler sex active cyclists and experts in the gymnasiums. The Women's Wheel Club is making the study of physical culture a part of its work.

THE Buffalo Club didn't hang up its stocking for Santa Claus, but if it had done so, large as that stocking is, it would have been inadequate for the beautiful present which awakened our surprised delight, as we gazed into the club parlor on Christmas morn. This present was nothing less than a splendid antique oak chair, presented by the Ladies' Wheel Club. It is a most worthy and welcome gift from our fair co-inhabitants.

EXTRAORDINARY weather this; not in fifteen years, says the "Oldest Inhabitant," have we had such a mild January. As late as the 19th wheelmen were seen riding to the park lake, with skates hanging from backs. It was a little cool then, too, but what of that? When the streets are in almost summer condition the strict enthusiast is not to be blamed for putting on his bicycle suit, the temptation is too much, and a frozen thumb or two is counted as gain under the invigorating dual allurements of a skate and a bike.

LESS than an hour ago I observed an elderly gentlemen riding on one of those ancient, primordial, primeval velocipedes. It had a seat between two large wagon wheels. Every now and then the "ancient mariner" would touch the pavement and with a vigorous kick he would send it spinning along for several feet. He repeats this movement whenever the speed comes down to a mule pace. Upon interviewing him he remarked that "it was fine going down hill, but 'twas a tough job going t'other way," and thus saying he gave another kick and disappeared down the stream of time, toward improvement, I hope.

PORKOPOLIS NOTES.

"STAR."

NO 14,670 is not the only one that has found fault with "Hawkshaw's" language and sentiments. Several of our local wheelmen, aware of the munificent salary that your correspondents receive, expect you to employ a very high grade of literary talent, and their dissatisfaction at the very diffuse style and caustic language of your New York correspondent has on several occasions been rather bluntly expressed.

THE citizens of Cumminsville are at last becoming aroused to the necessity of improved streets, and it is believed that after about five years of "talkee talkee" they will have Colerain, Hamilton and Spring Grove avenues paved with granite.

IN regard to holding the next meet of the State Division here, the general opinion seems to be, that owing to the changes taking place in certain of our clubs, it would be better to wait till 1890, when it is believed we will be better able to manage an affair of that kind.

THE recent demise of the Central Wheelmen points a moral. The club was organized about two years and a half ago, and started out with very brilliant prospects, but in their anxiety to become the largest club in the city they paid very little attention to the qualifications of new members so long as they were able to pay the club dues. As a consequence, a disturbing element crept into the club that soon destroyed its usefulness.

ON January 24 the Newport Club gave a dramatic entertainment that would have done credit to professionals. Miss Nellie Longley and Mr. L. L. Buchanan, however, carried off all the honors, and, in the opinion of those who saw the performance, Miss Longley has a brilliant future in store for her. The wheelmen of the Three Cities were out in force. Fourteen of the C. B. C., who arrived rather late and were consequently obliged to take back seats, were highly amused by the affectionate embraces of a spoony couple sitting in front of them, and which seemed to immensely tickle the silvery-tongued Marqua.

IN speaking of long runs, Charley Hanauer says in effect that they enable the wheelmen to see more of the country than short runs do, and that to the strictly temperate man they are not injurious; and that the exhaustion due to dissipation is too often ascribed to over indulgence in bicycle riding. Whilst the latter part of his opinion is unfortunately only too true, yet we could relate quite a number of instances that conclusively prove that it is not every strictly temperate man that can take long runs with impunity, in fact their "broken up" condition during the early part of the week is often used as an argument against cycling. Very few of us, like Charley and the Croningers, are built like race horses, most of us, indeed, are built more like plugs and cart horses. Many of us are confined in offices and business houses from early in the morning till late in the evening for six days in the week, and have neither time nor inclination for gymnasium exercise, consequently when we start out on Sunday our muscles are soft and unequal to the strain of a long run, and then as the fresh air and the exercise give us appetites like sawmills we are very apt to eat several times more than we usually do. Now if we should go on a long run we should be obliged to either start on our return very soon after dinner, or to scorch in order to get back in time for— church, and would be fit for nothing the next day.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

IN the death of Mr. Brandon Lewis, of Lafayette, Ind., that city and section lose a man and a cyclist who was an honor to his town and to his kind. He was one of the first riders in the State of Indiana, and was an enthusiast on the subject of cycling. At the time of his death he was 67 years of age. On Jan. 1st he took his last ride, covering 74 miles in 7 hours and 7 minutes, remarkable time for a man of his age. He was a walking guide book for the territory in his vicinity, and he was always ready to impart information to those seeking it. The press of his city bear testimony to the high esteem in which he was held by his fellow citizens. Mr. Lewis' parents survive him.

NEWARK, N. J., is spoken of as a probable meeting place of the League this year.

THE Wilkesbarre (Pa.) Club gave another of its delightful socials at the club house last week Friday.

STERLING J. STEELE, a well-known amateur racing man of Bristol, Conn., died a few days ago.

ERRATA. We announced the date of the Elizabeth (N. J.) Wheelmen's entertainment as being Feb. 13th; it should be Feb. 12th.

PRESIDENT GORMULLY, of the Gormully & Jeffery Mfg. Co., was in town last week, and paid us the compliment of calling at our office.

A COLORED driver in Washington, D. C., was lately fined $100 for threatening to run down and drive over a cyclist, Mr. Arthur Harrison by name.

THERE is music in the air these times, and the coming officers' meeting Feb. 18th promises to produce harmony (?) of the most Wagnerian character.

THE Orange (N. J.) Wanderers are talking of a new club house, or as an alternative the idea of joining the Orange Athletic Club was freely discusssed, and was favorably considered.

THE New Haven (Conn.) Club held their ninth annual dinner at Prokasky's Cafe last week Thursday. One report speaks of the club as an aggregation of "twenty-seven handsome young men!"

THE organization of a great century run, similar to that managed by Mr. L. A. Clark, of New York, last year, is now under way. Notice of a meeting by those interested will appear in the WORLD at an early date.

CAPT. H. S. WIGGINS, of the Portland Wheel Club, who is to act as Treasurer of the coming European tour, has lost flesh rapidly the present winter in his struggle with letters from French and German landlords and foreign money tables. He is determined to have it down fine, however, if it reduces him to a shadow.

ERRATA. In last week's issue, in the article from Mr. Corcoran, the paragraph that commences on the fifth line from the bottom of the page should read, "Heat races of a mile, best two in three to win, are nothing more than waiting or lap races," etc. The correction is to substitute the word "lap" for "loaf."

WE believe that the memorial erected by the New South Wales cyclists, in honor of the late H. Cortis, the great English amateur, is the first ever erected in honor of his reputation as a rider only. Starley, the inventor, has a monument at Coventry, but we think that Cortis is the first name thus honored by cyclists, as a cyclist.

THE importance of the bicycle in illustrations becomes more apparant every day, as shown in a very large picture issued by the spacious and famous McComb House on Grand Island, the popular summer resort of Western New Yorkers. This picture has the usual railroad cars, steamboat landing, with the regulation beach and its complement of bathers, has four carriages and two bicycles and one tandem.

NO. 17,605 writes us from Martinsburg, W. Va.: "The toll heretofore levied on the M. and W. turnpike, from Martinsburg to Winchester, on cycles has been abolished. The wheelman can now ride along the pike, without the ever-recuring "toll, gentleman," sounding in his ears. The agitation for road improvement is bearing fruit even here. One of our local papers contains a long editorial on Gov. Beaver's message, advocating improved highways. Keep the ball rolling; it's bound to tell.

PRESIDENT AMEE, of the Cambridge (Mass.) Club indignantly denies the rumor that poker playing is allowed in their club house. It did come to the attention of the officers of the club, however, out of which probably grew the report, that two members had indulged in a game of cards for money. The members were fined $10 each for the offence, but they called for a hearing and, no evidence having been adduced to prove the offence charged against them, the fine was removed.

SEVEN leaders in New York society—Messrs. John C. Furman, a down-town broker; T. Howard, a man about town; Worthington Whitehouse, S. S. Sands, Jr., Robert Hargous, James Waterbury and Edward C. Potter—appeared at a swell ball given in that city attired in black satin knee breeches, silk stockings, pumps with buckles, tailless velvet coat, and watered silk vest. The gentlemen pledge themselves to use this as full dress exclusively hereafter. Their appearance caused a sensation, but the verdict was one of approval.

A FORMER member of the Boston Bi. Club, Francis Craigin, (more properly Cragin,) died on January 22 at Greenwich, Conn., of a complication of diseases, aged 29 years and 5 months. He was lately in the employ of a prominent firm of architects in New York; was well known some ten years ago among bicyclists in Boston; had friends also in Chicago, where he visited about that time, and rode his machine from there to Washington D. C. He was a young man of very good abilities and a generous disposition, and an athletic frame promising length of life which the fatal stars cut short. He leaves a widow but no children.

AN INTERESTING TEST CASE IN ILLINOIS.

ONE day in the fall of 1888 Mr. John E. Ransom, an L. A. W. man, accompanied by his brother Charles, were riding their bicycles just outside of Springfield, Ill., when they were met by one David Talbott, driving a horse and a two-seated carriage. Talbott was asked to give the boys room, on the beaten road, to get past, but Talbott refused to turn out. In their efforts to get out of Talbott's way, John Ransom fell from his wheel, and Talbott's carriage ran over his bicycle, damaging it badly. Upon learning the facts of the case, Chief Consul Davis, Illinois Division, instructed the Local Consul of Sangamon County (in which county event occurred) to proceed according to law, to recover from Talbott the amount of damages incurred. In consequence of this action of the L. A. W. the case of Ransom vs. Talbott is now pending in the Circuit Court of Sangamon County. It is an action in the case for damages to a bicycle belonging to the plaintiff. The injury occurred, it is charged, by reason of the failure of defendant to turn his carriage to the right of the centre of the road, in due season, to allow plaintiff to pass.

The declaration claims that a bicycle is a carriage within the meaning of our Statutes. A demurrer has been filed to the declaration.

The suit involves two questions. First—Is a bicycle a carriage within the meaning of the law, and governed by the Law of the Road, entitled to the same rights and subject to the same liabilities? Second—If it is a carriage, was defendant guilty of negligence in this particular case?

The first of these questions will be decided by the Judge on the hearing of the demurrer. The second can only be decided by a jury upon the facts proven at the trial. The demurrer will be argued within a week or so. The trial may be had by March 1st.

The Statutes of Illinois, Chapter 121, Act May 4, 1887, provides: "That whenever any persons, travelling with any carriages, shall meet on any turnpike road, or public highway, in this State, the persons so meeting shall seasonably turn their carriages to the right of the beaten track, so as to permit each carriage to pass without interfering or interrupting, under the penalty of five dollars for every neglect or offense, to be recovered by the party aggrieved."

The law provides for suits to enforce above penalty before a Justice. Our suit is not for this penalty, but the section is given for general information. Whether we recover damages in this case or not, we stand a good chance of getting a decision as to the fact that a bicycle is a carriage. Other States have had such a decision but we are behind in that particular. EDGAR S. BARNES.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) WHEELMEN.

THE entertainment held by the Rhode Island Wheelmen at Music Hall last Thursday was the social event in cycle circles for this city so far this winter. The talent was all local, and many a brave and fair bosom swelled with pride at the evidence of excellence of the skill shown by our musicians, both vocal and instrumental. The music was of a high order, and the rendition was in keeping. Mr. Packard made a hit in his elocutionary efforts, and the Crescent Quartette covered themselves with glory.

The annual meeting of the Rhode Island Wheelmen will take place on Monday, Feb. 18.

MASSACHUSETTS DIVISION L. A. W.

THE officers of the State Division met at the Clarendon Hotel, Boston, last Saturday, and one of the most important measures was the issuance of a circular to be sent to all the town officials of the State, calling attention to Section 4, Chapter LIII, Public Statutes, making the erection of sign boards compulsory at the forks and intersections of highways. This circular winds up by stating that the League will institute proceedings against all towns that have not complied with the law.

The question of a State road map was referred to Messrs. Forbes, Bassett and Whitney.

It was voted that the Board meet hereafter on the first Saturday in every month.

ATHLETIC ALBANIANS.

THE in-door tournament given last Friday by the Albany (N. Y.) Wheelmen at the Academy of Music was a success from every point of view. Over 1200 people were present, and the efforts of the performers were received with great enthusiasm. The impersonation of Mlle. Armelius by Maltby was excellent, and completely "fooled" the audience. The "dude act" and the skillful riding of Maltby brought down the house.

The fencing by Thompson and Diamond was exciting; the horizontal bar act by Littenthal brothers, Ryan and Spring was excellent. A sparring match, "gentle enough to please the ladies," was had between Butler and Mills; those bad boys, Duncan and Egan, wanted to have a "go," but it was feared Albany propriety might be skocked. The tug of war between Troy and Albany just raised the people to their feet, and when Albany pulled Troy over the line the people howled. In this entertainment the Albany Wheelmen score another success.

"THE GOOD WORK."

THE Philadelphia Press has a long leader on the road question, and urges that popular opinion be so shaped as to demand better roads. Among other things this paper says: "No change, however, will work which does not recognize, first, that road building requires trained skill and, second, that the present plan of letting farmers 'work out' a road tax is antiquated. 'Good road construction in Europe,' says the Engineering News, 'enlists the services of the best engineers the country can afford.'"

In speaking of the present system of "working out the road tax," the Press continues: "Of course, if the farmers prefer the system of working out their road tax to a system of good roads, American country roads will remain in their present condition. The tax will continue to be paid, its aggregate amount will be enough to give good roads and it will all be wasted. The roads will remain what they are—the worst in any civilized country.

It ought, however, to be possible in the Eastern counties of this State, which are filling up with country seats, big and little, to introduce a reform. To be effectual this must require:

The Coventry Machinists' Co., Ld., Boston, Mass.:

Gentlemen—As the year is drawing to a close perhaps you would be interested in knowing how the "SWIFT" has fared in this section as compared with other Safeties. To be brief, there are more "SWIFTS" in use here than any other make of Safety. We have not taken a single "ordinary," or any other kind of machine in exchange, as part payment, for a SWIFT during the season. Not a single SWIFT after leaving our hands has to our knowledge been exchanged for other make of safety or sold to a third party. There is not a second-hand "SWIFT" for sale or exchange. And finally, from present indications there will be more "SWIFTS" sold here during the coming season than any two other makes of safeties.

Yours very truly,

THE EUROPEAN TOUR.

TO ALL WHO MAY BE INTERESTED.

As our arrangements are about perfected, a short sketch of the route and of this party may be of interest to those wheelmen who are intending sooner or later to make the "Grand Tour" awheel.

Starting from Boston, May 18th, on the Cunader Cephalonia we disembark at Queenstown, port of Cork, Ireland. Here we remain a day or two to recover from the effects of the ocean voyage, and to get the "hang" of our wheels—many of us being unused to the safety type of cycles, some one variety of which will be ridden by every member of the party.

Our route is now to Dublin, via Yonhal, up the famous Blackwater river, through Waterford, Wexford and the beautiful county Wicklow. After remaining in Dublin a day we cross the Irish Sea to Liverpool by night and in the morning ride to the quaint old town of Chester (17m) where the remainder of the day will be spent in rambling about its balconied street and along its ancient walls. Then on to Birmingham and Coventry, stopping to view the great cycle works. From here to London our route includes the picturesque ruin of Kenilworth Castle, the magnificent Warwick Castle, the home of Shakespeare at Stratford-on-Avon, the college town of Oxford, Windsor Castle and Hampton Court Palace. Early in the morning we ride into London, there to remain a week and see that which we have heard about, and read about, but never seen—that is the most of us. This over, we ride to Brighton, the great English watering-place and then to New Haven where we embark for France. Landing at Dieppe, we ride leisurely to Paris, via, Rouen, Mantes, Versailles and St. Germain. In Paris the exhibition will be in full blast and the week spent here will be filled to the brim with pleasure and interest. Then, ho for Geneva! 225 miles away over the Jura mountains. The road is magnificent all the way being one of the military highways of France. The towns passed, are out of the ordinary line of travel, and picturesque to a degree. In Geneva we remain over a Sunday and then up the beautiful Lake Leman for a two weeks' ramble through Switzerland. Our route is as follows: Villeneuve, Aigle, Gesseny, Thun, Interlaken, Falls of the Lauterbrunnen, Murren, Brunnig Pass, Lucerne, trip to top of Rigi, Brunnen, Zug, Wadenschwyl, Wesen, Rapperschwyl, Zurich, Schaffhausen. This brings us to the headwaters of the Rhine, and here we begin to keep company with that beautiful and historic river which is not terminated until it empties into the North Sea. We pass through Basil, Strasburg, charming Baden-Baden, the German university town of Heidelberg, Mayence, Coblenz, where wine is good and cheap, and fragaht cologne. Here we take steamer for Rotterdam, and at this place our tour, as a party, ends: each member will here go his own way—some directly home by the Rotterdam line, or by Liverpool, quickly reached by through steamers and trains, others to Paris or Berlin, and still others to Norway.

It will be a delightful tour—it can't be otherwise—and we are anxious to have as many as we can in our party to share the good time with us. Our number must be limited to twenty-fivs, as more could not be accommodatad with comfort. Our ranks are rapidiy filling up, as will be seen by the following list of those already booked for the tour:

Arthur Bennett, W. H. Bennett, Chicago; F. H. Palmer, F. A. Elwell, H. S. Higgins, Charles Leavey, Portland, Me., Junius E. Beal, Ann Arbor, Mich.; Wm. C. Roseboom, Cherry Valley, N. Y.; Rev. Charles. E. Fessenden, Summit Hill, Pa.; P. Howard Reilly, New York City; Clark Cooper, Trenton, N. J.; I. Newton Smith, Philadelphia, Pa.; H. Wentworth, Skowegan, Me.; John Thompson, Watkins, N. Y.; Herbert Leary, Rochester, N. Y.; George Clark, Greenville, Miss.; Stephen L. Breed, Lynn, Mass.

It will be seen that there are a few vacancies left, and we cordially invite those who would enjoy taking this trip in our company to do so. It is not intended to make it an expensive trip, and can easily be afforded by scores of readers of this paper.

Address all communication to F. A. Elwell, Portland, Me.

POLLY, OF SWEETBRIAR VALLEY.

BY SECRETARY.

During Charlie Cracker's counting days, on several of his bicycle trips to the Cornpatch homestead, he met Absum driving Thought. Now Absum had heard of the boasted superiority of the bicycle over a horse, and the afternoon of their first meeting had promptly challenged Charlie, and away they went, the politic Charles allowing the old gray mare to win easily; and on subsequent occasions he contented himself with being defeated, whereupon Absum laughed to scorn the claims of the caoutchouc shod steed.

In the confines of Sweetbriar Valley there was not a more industrious, energetic, accumulative, progressive farmer than young Humphrey Turnipson, and this same Humphrey thought that within the area of that valley there was not a sweeter girl than our Polly.

He wasted considerable time wooing Polly, and Absum encouraged him.

The afternoon of the day on which Polly had held the interview with her father, she met Charlie at their usual trysting place. She told him what we already know, and added to his and our information by further saying that her father had returned from the barn, informed Polly that she should marry Humphrey, and what more, the marriage should take place that very night, and that her father had just hooked Thought to the buggy and had driven over to the preacher's to send him up to the Cornpatch house, and from there her father was going after Humphrey to bring him up and have it done and over.

It was a period of consternation and despair for the young lovers, until Charlie suddenly drew forth his watch, asking what time Absum and Humphrey would probably be at her home.

"About seven o'clock," half sobbed Polly.

"It is now four," said Charlie; "I can do it. Meet me at the gate ten minutes of the hour, and all will be well. Good-bye, and keep a brave heart."

He stooped and kissed her, saying, "to-night I will kiss my wife."

He sprang on his machine and rode rapidly away.

From this time to the moment of Charlie's return seemed an eternity to poor Polly, and as the distant village clock struck the hour of six her excitement was intense, and she grew hot and cold by turns, as she imagined she heard the rapid beat of old Thought's hoofs and the wheels of her father's buggy. She knew by the sun that it must be near seven, and as the moments passed and Charlie did not appear she was ready to be hysterical.

"Will he never come?" she repeated time and time again.

At last!! she spied a dust-covered figure on a tricycle dart round the curve of the highway. A moment more and Charlie, very white and almost breathless, but with a set look about his mouth and a glitter in his eye which meant "do or die," was at her side.

He was on a tandem tricycle.

"Quick!" he gasped, "jump up."

"But I can't—" she began.

"Quick!! quick!!" shouted Charlie. "Jump up."

"There is no time for explanations or talk of any kind now," he said to her.

As they started off through the growing dusk the old gray mare appeared over the brow of the hill, a quarter of a mile away, drawing the buggy in which sat Absum and Humphrey. They saw the fast disappearing pair, and instinctively divined who they were.

With an oath, Absum lashed the old gray, and started in pursuit.

"Pedal, dear, pedal, Polly," said Charlie, who had looked back; "they are after us."

"I don't know how," answered Polly, breathlessly, "I never rode one of these things before."

"Put your feet on the rests and let me run it," he answered, as he fairly stood on the pedals, and sent the machine flying around the bend and on down the level road.

As they reached a little cross lane, Polly beheld a lady and gentleman seated on a tandem.

A MODEL SALESROOM.

When the Pope Mfg. Co. obtained the building Nos. 77 and 79 Franklin street two years ago, a clock concern occupied the lower floor on a lease. The lease expired the 1st of January, and the Pope Co. took possession of the floor and began fitting it up as a salesroom. Although the finishing touches have not yet been put on, the floor is open to wheelmen. The salesroom is lighted from three sides with very large plate glass windows. On one side of the room have been placed the drawers, boxes and pigeon-holes to contain the many hundred parts of the Columbia machines. Ample space is given for sundries, and nearly the entire centre floor is occupied by the Columbia bicycles, tricycles, tandems and safeties. The most spacious corner of the floor is covered with a handsome rug, upon which stands a large library table covered with all the cycling publications of the world. Easy chairs surround the table, and an open fireplace gives it the coziness of home. Wheelmen are cordially invited to make free use of this reading corner. Close by the reading corner is the department devoted to the selling of the World Typewriter. Taken all together the new salesroom of the Pope Mfg. Co. is the lightest, most convenient and commodious of any we have seen.

CHANGE IN FIRM NAME.

THE familiar name of W. B. Everett & Co., will disappear from among the names of our large importers and in its place that of Singer and Company will appear.

For the past year the firm has practically been Singer & Co., although for various reasons the honorable name of W. B. Everett & Co. was continued. The business of the firm will be continued the same as it has been since the retirement of W. B. Everett, and Mr. W. L. Ross will continue in charge as the manager of the Singer Co's. American branch. The products of the Singer Co. have become so well established in reputation for unexcelled excellence that it would seem superfluous for us to add our word of praise and approbation. In the twenty-four different patterns of cycles that they make they show every known kind of wheel, for the child, the tourist, the racing man, the parcel delivery man or the unfortunate man who has to depend on his hands for propelling power, to say nothing of their various "Victoria war cycles."

The Royal Singer Safety is a new machine for 1889 and is a specially light machine built for expert riders.

SPRINGFIELD BICYCLE MFG. CO.'S FACTORY.

WE do not suppose for one moment that the Springfield Bicycle Mfg. Co. selected the location of their factory at Highlandville with any idea of the picturesqueness of its position, but a more beautiful spot, or more charming surroundings than those in the vicinity of their factory at Highlandville could hardly be wished for.

Dismissing the question of beauty, as the one of practicability is of more moment, it will be our endeavor to give a brief sketch of the interior arrangements of the building. From the outside we see a well-built frame building of four stories in height, with several wings of one or two stories attached thereto. Ascending a few steps, entrance is at once made into a large room, in one corner of which a neat partition marks off the part occupied as office. We were courteously received by Mr. C. J. Moore, the Superintendent, and on making our mission known we were escorted through the building, and shown how the Springfield Co., in the short space of two and one half months, had converted an absolutely vacant building into a factory, filled with machinery and bicycles, complete and in the course of construction.

The floor on which the office is built is the second main floor, and that part not occupied as the office is fitted up as an assembling room and repair shop. In another corner of the room a section is fitted up with heavy drawers, each one being numbered, and each being filled with the parts of the Springfield Roadster bicycle. This room will be in charge of a man whose business it will be to give out these parts as they are called for, charging them at the same time to the workman who takes them; by this method every man has to account for the parts he has taken.

From this large assembling room we passed into two smaller rooms, in one of which the polishing and the buffing is done, and in the other all the apparatus and tanks for nickeling are contained. From these rooms a few steps down stairs brought us into the blacksmiths' shop. Here were all the appliances for forging by power. Two large, eight hundred-pound drop hammers were in full blast. The power punch and the power hammer were also busily engaged, shaping the different parts of the bicycle. In this room were also several hand forges, manipulated by the blacksmiths, all busily engaged in forming steel and iron into parts and tools. Just outside the door of the blacksmits' shop is a shed filled with steel. Each rack is marked with the size and particular quality of steel contained therein. This is under control of the foreman of the forging shop, who is responsible for the steel used and has to make an account thereof. In the blacksmiths' shop the ovens for tempering the bearing cases, and other wearing portions of the bicycle, are also located. From the blacksmiths' shop we passed into the machine shop, and here we found as handsome an exhibition of machinery as it has ever been our lot to examine. Every machine is new, and has been built and bought specially for the work to be done. The bulk of these machines come from the shops of Pratt & Whitney and Brown & Sharp, and was selected after careful consultation between Mr. McCune and the manufacturers, in fact, some of it was specially built and designed for this factory. A great deal of it has yet to be placed in position and connected with the shafting, and there are yet several machines to arrive in order to complete the equipment. A technical description of these machines would of course be tedious, and of no value to our readers, but it is a matter of interest to them to know that the machinery in the shops is of the most approved patterns and most expensive in cost, ergo the best. A great deal of preparatory work was being done, we noticed, in the way of cutting the dies and making tools, and we were informed by the Superintendent, Mr. Moore, that in the course of three weeks the factory would probably be in full blast, making bicycles. The power to run the factory is furnished by a water wheel and an eighty-horse power steam engine. The latter is run only in case of a failure of the water power, and also when the drop hammers are being used.

The arrangements for enameling and baking the parts are very complete. We saw one small oven for baking small parts, and two large ovens, about eight feet by eight each, in which the backbones, forks and wheels are to be baked. The building is thoroughly lighted by means of gasolene, and as a protection against fire every room is fitted with patent sprinklers, the water for supplying which is pumped to the roof of the building, and is contained in a large tank. Fire buckets filled with water are also conveniently placed in the different rooms.

We congratulate the Springfield Bicycle Co. in being in possession of such a large and complete factory, and we sincerely trust that the time is not far distant when they will have to more than double the floor capacity of their present factory, by building. We forgot to state that the upper stories of the building are at present used for storage purposes. This flooring space can be utilized (which we trust it will be at an early day) by placing machinery in same, and in purchasing this factory the Springfield Co. had an eye to the future, in the hope that the future would test the already large capacity of their factory to its utmost extent. It is evident that in the automatic machinery, and the labor-saving devices located in this new factory, that the factory cost of wheels is reduced to its minimum, and that with honesty in quality of stock used, the Springfield Mfg. Co. should produce a machine for excellence, and reasonable of price, unsurpassed.

THE spring fork of the New Mail safety is made by means of a strong spiral spring being inserted in the hollow upright, to which the handle-bars are attached, allowing a play up and down of two inches. The famous Trigwell Ball Head is used on this machine. Two excellent cuts of this new machine appeared in last week's issue.

OUR old friend, L. H. Johnson, who made such a hit with the Premier Tandem Safety last fall, has been to England and secured the sole United States agency for Messrs. Hillman, Herbert & Cooper, whose goods he intends to push in a manner which their excellence deserves. His line includes a Special Light Roadster, suitable for either sex, a stanch, reliable men's roadster at a low price, a high-grade youth's safety, and the tandem safety, all greatly improved over last year. He will continue to handle the Sparkbrook straight wheel and the Beeston Humber tricycles.

To riders the following, taken from the C. T. C. Gazette, on the matter of spring forks, will be of great interest, especially as it comes from an English paper, voluntarily and unexpected: "As bearing upon this matter, we may add that no anti-vibrative frame we have yet seen exceeds in efficiency the one used on the 'Victor' safety—an American invention shown at Harrogate this year. In this the front wheel is mounted in a steel cradle as flexible as whalebone, while a ball bearing is fitted to every joint. It is a pity that the Overman Wheel Co., the makers, do not put it on the English market, or license some of our manufacturers to make it under royalty."

RALPH TEMPLE writes us that after much cogitation he has accepted the managership of the cycle department of the Western Arms and Cartridge Co., of Chicago. Mr. Tom Roe will be associated with Mr. Temple. We wish the combination all success.

TO bicyclists it is not necessary to say that anything Joseph Goodman of Hartford takes hold of must succeed. For five months Mr. Goodman has been managing the sale in the United States of Hoop's Lighter, a beautiful little nickle affair which is guaranteed to furnish one thousand lights without replenishing. Mr. Goodman has recently imported a new invoice of these lighters, and can now supply all demands. The success of the lighter has been almost phenomenal. In the five months in which Mr. Goodman has managed the sale, over five thousand have come into use. Mr. Goodman's advertisement will be found in another column.

The L. A. W. Uniform.

Editor BULLETIN: In the BULLETIN for Jan. 19, I discover the fact that a committee composed at least of two thirds New York men have seen fit to change the official tailors from Wanamaker & Brown of Philadelphia to Browning, King & Co., of New York. At the same time and by this change the price of the uniform is increased from ten to twenty per cent. Several years ago without any competition Browning, King & Co., were appointed tailors to the L. A. W., and the suits furnished were a disgrace to the organization. The quality was bad, the color miserable and the price exhorbitant. Then Wanamaker took hold and furnished a good colored suit, and one which held its color, and a cheap one and in so far as the rider is concerned, a perfect fit. And then without any notice which I have been able to find, a committee go to work and burden the members of the L. A. W. with a tailor who in the past has proved inefficient. In addition to this, the notice that the contract is signed, sealed and delivered and goes into effect January 15th, is published in the official organ four days afterward. Such work savors too much of partisanship, and it is a disgrace to the L. A. W. that it should be imposed upon in such a way. There certainly could have been no competition for the position, and there is then absolutely no hold for the L. A. W. to enforce good and true work from Browning, King & Co. A most vigorous protest is entered to such seemingly underhand methods by

L. A. W. 3248.

Treasurer Brewster's Circular.

Treasurer Brewster has sent the following circular to each Chief Consul:

Dear Sir: On the 15th of March last, the Executive Committee of the League issued a circular, a copy of which is herein contained, calling attention to the financial problems facing the organization and urging the different Divisions to come to the relief of the National Body and contribute out of their surplus funds enough money to tide us over the critical period. In reponse to that call there has been contributed $523.00. This sum has been contributed by individual members of the L. A. W. in the States named, and no contributions have been made by Divisions, as such, with the exception of Massachusetts, Ohio and Rhode Island. At a subsequent meeting of the Executive Committee, held in New York on the 27th ult., the Treasurer was instructed to again call on the Divisions for contributions and at the same time to submit such information touching our financial embarassment and the causes that have operated to bring it about, as would give them a correct understanding of the situation.

Below you will find a copy of a letter from the Secretary on the subject which, taken in connection with the circular of March 15th, covers the ground and will enable you to fully comprehend the status of the matter:

BOSTON, MASS., Jan. 6th, 1889.

W. M. BREWSTER, ESQ.

Dear Sir: In reply to your letter asking for a statement of the financial condition of the L. A. W., I will state that we are able to pay all our bills January 1st and have a little balance on hand, but our out-look for the next four months is not very encouraging. Had there been no change in the financial year of the organization we should not have to face the problem that now confronts us, but the alteration obliges us to carry along our membership for four months at a time when our income is not equal to the expenses of the organization and we must run behind. Last July we stood free and clear from debt and there was money left in the treasury. Then came the change of rule which gave the lion's share of dues to the Divisions. Between July 1st and January 1st, the share of dues given to the Divisions has amounted to $1,504.50. Under the old rule they would have had only $581.12. Thus $1,153.38 has been gained by the Divisions and lost to the National Treasury. January 1st I have on hand $705.82. There is due from sundry persons something like $500 which has been charged off to profit and loss, but which may turn us in something, but we do not make account of it, and the WORLD Co. will within a few weeks pay us $300. These assets will more than cover the $942, which I owe to the Divisions, and I shall not have to draw upon the funds in the hands of the Treasurer. My office expenses will not exceed $275 a month, and this for four months will amount to $1,100. Taking last year's applications (872) as a basis the income of the League during the four months will be $430. This exceeds what we shall receive in 1889 because these months of 1888 were at the opening of the year when an applicant was paying for nearly a full year's membership. Now these months are at the end of a year when new comers are very scarce. If the Divisions would appropriate a per capita tax of twenty-five cents per member the League would be out of debt and there would be money on hand.

Fraternally, ABBOT BASSETT,

Secretary.

The circular called for a contribution of fifty cents per capita, but with what has already been received, we find that a contribution of twenty-five cents per capita on the membership of each Division will enable the organization to pay all its obligations and put it entirely out of debt, with sufficient surplus to carry it along to the beginning of the new League year. Will you kindly bring this matter before your Board of Officers at as early a date as possible, and send us as large a contribution as the condition of your treasury and your own needs will warrant.

Particular attention is called to the increased revenue which the Divisions have been receiving, and will continue to receive, under the new Constitution, which should be taken into consideration in deciding the amount of your contribution.

All contributions will be promptly acknowledged in the "BULLETIN."

Awaiting your early reply, I am, with fraternal greetings, Yours very truly,

W. M. BREWSTER, Treasurer.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 20, 1889.

BOSTON, March 15th, 1888.

Dear Sir: The Executive Committee of the League of American Wheelmen desires to call your attention to the present and prospective financial condition of the organization, and they ask that you will co-operate with them in a measure looking toward a speedy relief from the embarassment that the League is now under, which is but a continuation of that which has obtained for several years. The members of this Committee feel that the time has come for the taking of heroic measures to place the League financially upon its feet once more, that we may enter upon our work under the new plan of organization fully equipped for our duties. The League will stand very nearly out of debt on the first day of April. The Secretary-Editor assures us that he hopes to be able to pay the Divisions in full on that day, but his hopes are largely grounded on the payment of sums due us from advertising patrons, and he may be unable to do as he may wish to. If he were able to do so, there is still no money on hand to pay bills now in the hands of the Treasurer and these should be met at once. It is just possible that we shall be able to free ourselves from debt very early in April and stand clear before the world; but if we do this, it will be at the expense of what should be our working capital, and we fear that we shall go in debt before the close of the year. The great bulk of the League's income is derived from the dues of members, and this money is received during the first two months of the year. We have received a little short of $8000 in the way of dues up to April 1st, and of this sum the National Body gets $4000. This money will have to be spent in making up the deficits of 1887 and 1888, and all that the League may depend upon for future income will be fifty cents per capita that comes to us. It is fair to suppose that we may get 12,000 members this year, 4000 more than we now have. These 4000 members will give the League a little over two thousand dollars, for the Treasurer will get but fifty cents per member after the new plan is adopted, though until it is adopted the money will be divided as of old. Thus it will be seen that the National organization will have about $4000 for its expenses for fourteen months, since under the new plan renewals are not due until May, 1889, four months later than usual. This sum is entirely inadequate to the probable demands on the treasury.

The Executive Committee has the choice between two plans: It can instruct the Secretary-Editor to withhold payment to the Divisions of all that is due them, thus making them creditors of the National Body as they were in 1887, or it can call for a popular subscription. The League has been in financial straits quite long enough, and it behooves us to throw off the incubus. We must have money for the work in hand. We have decided that it is much the best plan to make an appeal to members for a popular subscription in our behalf. We ask that you bring this matter to the attention of your Division at once, and confer with the members relative to the best method of aiding us. We ought to have a sum equal to at least fifty cents per capita, and as much larger individual subscriptions as the generosity of donors may dictate. We leave it to your Division to decide whether or not they will vote a sum from the Division treasury or call upon members for donations, or both. Our present income is large enough for our purposes could we have it all, but each year we see it melt away under the burning influences of debts we have inherited from former years.

Any and all sums of money should be sent to our Treasurer, Wm. M. Brewster, 309 Olive street, St. Louis, Mo. Fraternally submitted,

T. J. KIRKPATRICK,
H. W. HAYES,
GEO. R. BIDWELL,
Executive Committee.

APPLICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP.

The following is a list of applications for membership received up to date, and published in accordance with Article III. of the Constitution, which is as follows:

"Any amateur wheelman, in good standing, eighteen years of age or over, shall, with the indorsement of two League members in good standing, or of three reputable citizens of the United States or Canada, be eligible to membership in this League upon payment of an initiation fee of one dollar, and such dues for the year as may be provided for in the By-Laws. Upon the approval of the Board of Officers, or a committee thereof, two weeks after the publication of the name in a list of candidates in the official organ of the League, the applicant shall become a member."

Tickets will be issued seventeen days after the publication of names.

Candidates will please notice if their names and addresses are correct.

Members are requested to examine carefully these lists as they are published, and to report errors and omissions to the Secretary. In order that no objectionable person may unite with the League, members are given the right to protest, but such protest must be received by the Secretary within two weeks from the date of publication, and contain specific charges so far as it is possable to make them. All such communications will be considered confidential.

The application list is closed at 10 A. M. on the Monday preceding day of publication. All applications received after that hour must go over to the list to the following week.

Gentlemen:

I noticed in the Bi. World of Jany. 25th a cut of New Mail riders, purporting to be all members of the Nashville Bi. Club, but in justice to the "Victor," I will state that there are twenty-four members in the club; ten of whom ride Victors, including the President, Sec. and Treasr., and only two ride New Mails.

Very truly yours,

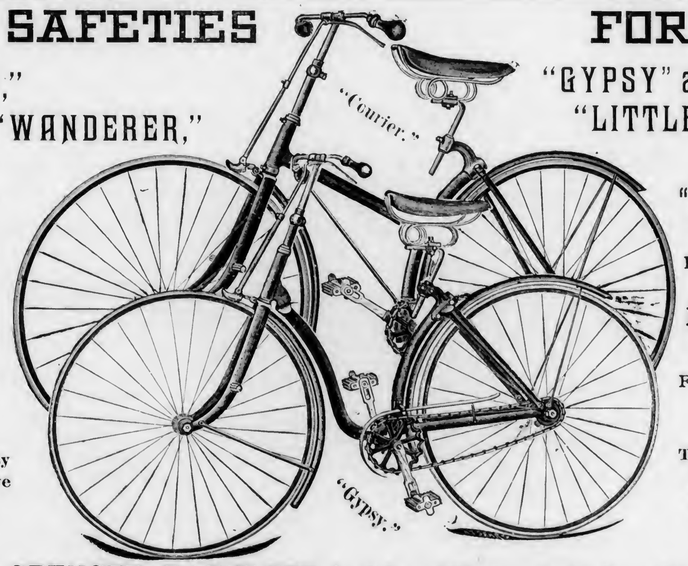
THE ENGLISH PREMIER,



Lord Salisbury, is not more widely known or more highly esteemed than the PREMIER SAFETY BICYCLES. There are Riders and Riders. A. is a medium-weight, wants a Light Safety, to ride himself, out of business hours, and for his wife to use at other times. "B. is a Bachelor," a heavy rider, who wants a Sound, thoroughly reliable Safety for pleasure or business purposes, at a figure that will not stretch his pocket to the tune of $135.00. C,, wiser than either, wishing to share the joys of Cycling with his wife or sister, desires a Strong Tandem Safety. [Mem.—A Tandem Bicycle that is not Strong enough to resist indefinitely the tremendous strains to which that class of Machine is subjected, is NOT a Tandem SAFETY.] D. is a vigorous Youngster, outgrowing a straight wheel every season. Paterfamilias decides to get him a first-class Safety, adjustable for many years' growth, and durable enough to withstand many years' use. What can we do for these Inquirers? A. buys a SPECIAL PREMIER, the finest "Compromise" Safety ever built, weighing 46 pounds. B. takes our POPULAR -PREMIER, a splendid Roadster, with balls all around, 7-8-inch rubbers, hollow forks and diamond frame, putting $30.00 in the bank towards a Premier Tandem, when the right girl turns up. C. buys a PREMIER TANDEM SAFETY, and is surprised to find what pleasure it is to ride it alone, when Mrs. C. is otherwise engaged. D. invests in a YOUT'HS PREMIER SAFETY, thereby closing a leak in his exchequer for a number of years. We shall be happy to furnish Riders and Dealers with full particulars of these Wheels on application.

MESSRS. WM. READ & SONS, BOSTON.

Gentlemen—Will you kindly put my name down for one of the first copies of your new Catalogue, describing your New Mail Safety. I am anxious to see what I am sure will be the the heighth of mechanical art, judging from the perfection of your "New Mail" bicycle. I have ridden one of the latter, bought of you, through thick and thin for two years, and I know I can depend on it every time. Graceful in outline, rigid, yet elastic as whalebone, its Ball Head firm as a rock, yet sensitive to every touch as the mouth of a high-bred horse, every ounce of metal put where it will do the most good, it seems as though in it the skill of the bicycle builder had culminated, and that if further improvement is to be, it must be in other designs as yet undreamed of, or in other materials, whose nature is perhaps hinted at in the metal aluminum. Very respectfully,

EDITORS:

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 8 FEBRUARY, 1889.

ADVERTISERS will bear in mind that we intend to get out a mammoth edition some time during the month of March. It is our intention to make it the finest and most extensive of any single edition ever published by any cycling paper in this or any other country.

NEW YORK wheelmen will be pleased to read in another column the correspondence between Mr. E. J. Shriver and the Hon. J. H. Robb, on the question of the condition of West 72d street, New York. Pennsylvanians will also be gratified to notice that Gov. Beaver of that State has received official recognition at the hands of the Associated Cycling Clubs of Philadelphia.

THE Scottish Cyclist has discovered a gentleman by the name of J. B. Dalzell, son of Gavin Dalzell deceased, who claims he has positive proof that his father was the first man to apply the principal of cranks to a velocipede. The date was sometime in 1845. Bicycling News says:

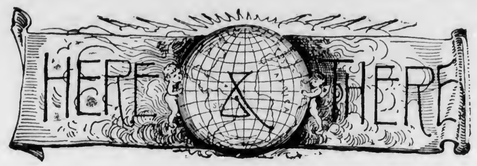
"As regards the machine itself, visitors to the Bishop's Palace in the Glasgow Exhibition will remember seeing an ancient wooden structure on view, labelled 'the first bicycle.' This was of bone-shaker appearance, the rear wheel, which was the larger of the two, being the driver, by means of long levers attached to roughly-made pedals."

It seems from the above that Mr. Dalzell's was not only the first to claim the idea of a crank but he produced the crude idea of the present rear driver.

NOT a week passes now but we receive papers, from different parts of the country, containing editorials and letters setting forth the great advantage to be derived from the improvement of highways, and more intelligent methods of securing this desideratum. We must not, however, deceive ourselves with the thought that enough has been accomplished. On the contrary, we must appreciate that the work has but just begun. Discussion has been started and agitation has been set on foot, but in order to bring about results we must never swerve from the determination to keep the ball in motion. Relaxed effort at this time means disaster and a condition of things even worse than before, because the discouragement of "Failure" will be a fatal stumbling block to future effort and movement.

To those gentlemen (whether cyclists or not) who are devoting their best energies to the end that the roads of the future in this country be an honor instead of a disgrace to our vaunted civilization, we extend words of encouragement and grateful recognition, with an earnest appeal to them to persevere. Their example should be a stimulous to the luke-warm and apathetic. A grander cause on which to exert your influence cannot be named. A year ago the question was practically somnolent, but by active tickling it is now very much awake. Let every well wisher of the "Good Work" see that the Road Improvement question enter into the politics of his State, county, city, town and village. Let candidates for offices that may control or influence the highway maintenance, place themselves on record as being for or against road improvements. Let the battle cry of the friends of a better condition of highways be "cash taxes, skilled labor, intelligent and scientific supervision!" Let the "Good Work" go on to a final and successful consummation.



WOMEN, BICYCLES AND DOCTORS.

BEING a member of the L. A. W. I naturally see the WORLD every week, and I have beside me a copy of your newsy paper, in which I notice an article on "why a woman should ride." I agree with the writer, in that the ladies should ride, and from my own experience I have found it improves my "health and complexion" very much. I have only been riding since last June, but I am stronger now, and enjoy living much better than I ever did before that time. The pains and the doctors have both gone, where I don't know and care less, so long as they have gone and so long as I still have my bicycle and can take my ride every day. It seems to give me life and I feel the life-giving exhilaration born of this splendid exercise, after I take a five-mile run around the city, or perchance the country. It is such sport to leave far behind fast trotting horses and men and women who are obliged to take the street car every place they go. And what could be more amusing than to see some or all in a car rush to that side to see a "lady riding a bicycle." I sometimes get just a trifle angry when I hear some old feminine fuss and feathers say, "oh, isn't that disgraceful to see a woman riding a man's bicycle!" They, I suppose, never read the papers, as they would scarcely ever have time after working, worrying and scolding their husbands (if they are lucky enough to have one). If they could just for an hour have the pleasure of riding as I do, I think the cross, fretful and worrying fits would be few and far between. I could not do without my bicycle now. Sometimes when I have been out I come home laughing, and as I trot my five-year-old baby on my knee, she sometimes says, "what's happened that's so funny? tell me," and as I take her little hands and we fly round the room together, I feel that no woman on earth is as happy as I. Even after riding ten miles I do not feel tired, but come home feeling better than when I started. My husband is very much pleased that I ride, and here I will mention that the advantage in having a lady's safety is that either can ride. I actually think sometimes that my bicycle is keeping me too young in actions, and that I am not growing old gracefully as I ought to.

I have a boy with big brown eyes, who said to me the other day, "Mamma, you don't seem like my mother, I guess I'll call you my chum." Now I don't want anyone to infer from this that I am one of those strong-minded women that want to vote, and keep the men in petticoats. Oh no indeed, I am very well satisfied to let the men run this government as it is or as it will be, after March next.

GRACE E. S.

THE preliminary trials of Boynton's bicycle locomotive at Portland, Me., last week were an undoubted success. A great many railroad men were on hand to pooh! pooh! the affair and see it fail, but they had to acknowledge that there was "something in it." Further extended experiments are to be made, and if the one half is realized that is claimed it will revolutionize the railroad business of the country. Among the claims are that a speed of 100 miles an hour can be maintained at same cost of power and as easily and safely as 40 now. Single track roads can be converted into double track roads at a maximum cost of $3000 per mile. In wear and tear the saving is from ten to twenty per cent.

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

THE E. C. C. boys are not to be put in the shade by their city brethren, and card parties, dances, oyster suppers, etc., follow each other in rapid succession. Several sleighing parties have been projected but all in vain, on account of the absence of the "beautiful." I am still in hopes that the Englewood Bicycle Club may yet consolidate with the Chicagos, and am inclined to blame that "Recruiting Committee" of the Chicagos because it has not already been accomplished. Suppose you stir up that committee a little, President Skinkle.

THE Illinois Club gave a last convulsive shudder over Wilson a few weeks ago, all on account of some enthusiastic members proposing him for an honorary membership in the club. The night of the election, the club rooms were crowded, and speeches were made for and against. Finally things became so warm that President Sloan had to use a gavel continuously, to preserve the necessary order and decorum of the club. The ballot was against Francis, and two of his supporters immediately resigned from the club. Francis and Pauline have certainly made things lively in cycling circles during their stay here.

THE annual ball of the Illinois Club was a success, as usual. Eighty couples were there, and made merry until the end of a most delightful programme.

WHAT do some of our Eastern clubs think of the following mileage record made by the Illinois Club the past season. The number of miles ridden by thirty-seven of their members makes a record of over 85,000. John Mason heads the list with 7002 miles. Thirty-three century runs were made, twenty-one of which were by John Mason. Mason also made a twenty-four-hour record of 277 miles, and Frank Riggs one of 240 miles. Tom Roe, of the Chicagos, holds the record in Chicago for mileage the past season, his cyclometer showing 8009 miles to his credit from April 1st to Nov. 1st.

THE Douglas Cycling Club gave another of their unique but enjoyable balls Saturday evening last. It was a masquerade, and was a "howling success," as Davis would say. Financially it heads the list for the season.

LUMSDEN and Riggs had a little experience in a walking match at the Casino gymnasium last week, and now both of them say that racing on the pike beats walking by a large majority.

THE latest in the Lumsden-Stone races is that it is almost agreed upon as follows: One mile here in Chicago about the middle of May; three miles at St. Louis a week later; and the third to be a road race at Crawfordsville, Ind., distance from ten to twenty miles. The "Prof." as Brewster calls him, insists on one road race at least, and Lumsden good naturedly agreed to this.

THE Chicagos held what they were pleased to call an inaugural reception, in honor of their newly elected officers, Thursday evening last. It was a full dress affair, and their charming club house was crowded to its utmost capacity. An elegant supper was served by Kinsley, and dancing was kept up until the wee small hours began to grow large. One hundred couples were present.

SAM MILES is working tooth and toe nail to make our tournament next May a complete success. All the dealers here seem to be greatly interested in it. All the financial aid necessary has been promised. The clubs have all taken hold of it enthusiastically, and everything indicates that it will be one of the most successful tournaments of the kind ever held. Miles is determined to win the title of the "Ducker of the West." Success to you, Sam.

THE Æolus Cycling Club give their annual masquerade ball Feb. 22d. They are also on the lookout for more commodious quarters, having outgrown their present club house.

THE Pastimes are also compelled to seek new quarters, being crowded for room in their present club house. Their membership is now nearly 150.

THE Lincoln's next reception will take place Feb. 14th. They have also changed, or added on to, their name, and propose to call themselves in the future the "Lincoln Cycling, Athletic and Social Club." I have not been informed as to whether this name is to be parted in the middle or not.

SYRACUSE.

"SALINA."

CARL G. WHITE, an ex-President of the Cycling Club, returned recently from a trip to Washington. He speaks very fondly of the beautiful streets, and says the wheelmen of Washington are "blooming clever." Mr. White, while on his wheel one day, rang the Hon. Jas. G. Blaine off the walk. "The Hon. J. G. shied out beautifully," according to Carl.

OUR quartette will soon begin active rehearsals, and several new pieces will be added to their repertoire. There are certainly some good voices among us, and we intend to have a quartette soon that the boys will be proud of.

THIRTY men paid their little fifty cents to doorman G. Howard Avery, and were ushered into the spacious parlors of Mr. Ed. I. Rice's home last Wednesday evening, Jan. 30. The occasion was a sleight-of-hand performance given by Mr. Rice, for the benefit of the "billiard fund." At 8.20 Mr. Rice appeared before the curtain and introduced the "justly celebrated banjo quartette from Dockstader's Broadway Minstrels." Upon the rise of the curtain we saw four colored gentlemen in full dress, with the regulation red lips, big collars and flashy scarfs. Upon close examination they were found to be Messrs. Wood, West, Cherry and Curran. Their music was very satisfactory. Mr. Rice then proceeded with his tricks, which, by the by, were numerous and splendidly performed. His box trick was received with a storm of applause, as was the Egyptian head, and the pillory. Mr. Rice was ably seconded by "Wes" Yale. During the intermissions Tom Lunn whistled in his own admirable style; Fred Brigham sang, as only Fred can; the quartette "quarted;" "Brudder Cherry" made a stump speech; Percy Morgan recited, and everyone lent a helping hand to the entertainment. Refreshments and cigars followed, and a general good time was had. Mr. Rice's charming better half and his father and mother did much for the enjoyment of the company.

PENNSYLVANIA.

"ARIEL."

Do you know, Mr. Editor, you will get me disliked if you do not let my news of club elections see daylight in your columns. I sent you the election lists of the Camden Wheelmen, Century and South End Clubs, and have had to take it from the various members ever since because they did not appear. Allow me to set myself straight with them by shouldering the blame on the WORLD.

[We accept the responsibility and the blame. About one year since we announced that we would have to cease printing names of officers elected as a rule, as we could easily fill two pages each week of names alone. We donbt if this would prove of much interest to our readers and so we shut down.—ED.]

LANCASTER had a very handsome ball and reception on Thursday evening, given by the Lancaster Bicycle Club, in Eshleman's Hall. The attendance was large, a number of wheelmen from Reading and other places being in attendance, and the affair was a great success.

THE correspondent from New Haven hit the nail on the head when he sat upon "Star" as regards the League cap. A cap is for utility, not show, and the dropped visor is the only one that shields the eyes. However, brewery wagons are not as common in the streets of New Haven and Philadelphia as in Cincinnati, and if the drivers in Porkopolis use the L. A. W. caps, I would suggest that "Star" obtain an injunction, restraining them for doing so.

THE Mount Vernon Wheelmen are about removing to new quarters in the same locality as their present house, their rapidly increasing membership—now upwards of fifty—demanding more room. On the evening of Feb. 21st they will have a theatre party at the Grand Opera House, the proceeds to go toward furnishing the new house. The attraction will be the Boston Ideal Opera Company, and the opera will be "Martha," if it can be arranged.

THE South End Wheelmen paid a friendly visit to the club house of the Mount Vernon Wheelmen on Saturday evening returning the recent visit of the latter, and had a jolly good time. Our clubs are becoming quite sociable and it has an excellent effect. The South End gave another of their dancing parties on Thursday night, which was attended by about twenty-eight couples, the majority of whom were in full dress. With an orchestra in attendance, they danced to a late hour, supper coming in as an intermission. Quite a number of applications for associate membership have been induced by these dances of the club. The next sociable comes off on the evening of St. Valentine's Day.

MONDAY night the mock trial of the defendants in the suit for infringement of the club rules at the recent housewarming of the South End Wheelmen came off, and although it was held with closed doors—no reporters being admitted—yet enough transpired to show that it was a great—a howling—success. Although ably defended by his lawyers (Messrs. Jackson, Kirkbride, Kolb and Roberts represented the legal lights) one unhappy wight was found guilty, upon his own testimony, and duly sentenced by His Honor, Judge Taylor. If the "club cat" could only have testified (it had been subpœnaed, but failed to materialize) every man indicted would have paid his little fine—so I'm told!

SEVENTEEN thousand dollars is a nice little sum of money, but that figure is what the new club house of the Century Wheelmen, No. 1606 North Broad street, is to stand them. They have truly got a magnificent property, which even as an investment must prove profitable, and once fairly housed in their new quarters, they will see an immediate result in increasing membership, particularly of the associate class, if they are wise enough to bid for it. The last of the money paid on account of the purchase was handed over last week. The new property is a handsome brown stone and brick front, with a twenty-five foot frontage on Broad street and a lot running back two hundred feet to Carlisle.

MESSRS. E. P. HAYDEN, W. T. Norris, Yates Penniman, Albert Mott, W. H. Beatty, S. T. Linton and H. E. Brown of the Maryland Bicycle Club, are registered to the Collonade Hotel, and last evening they paid a visit to the house of the Philadelphia Bicycle Club. The relations between these two clubs have always been particularly pleasant. Mr. Charles T. Stran, an ex-member of the Maryland Club, and one of the early League representatives, was also in town for a day last week on business. Mr. Stran, with Mr. Osborne of this city, one of the old P. W. and B. tourists, the recollections of whose delightful trip are yet green in the memories of the partici pants. Mr. Stran's stalwart brother-in-law, Dr. Lindley, has just returned from a sojourn in the European hospitals and as he is one of the most popular of Baltimoreans, it is determined to make him an advocate of the wheel in his daily practice.

"LINNEUS."

THE social season has been an extremely lively one here thus far, smokers and parties following one another in rapid succession. One of the most successful, if not the best affair of this kind, was the musicale and athletic entertainment given by the Cycle Club on Jan. 26, at which the major portion of the active members of the Missouri B. C. were present by invitation. The musicale opened with a piano solo by Jno. S. Richards. Mr. Wilson then sang a song, which was followed by a duet on the guitar and banjo by Messrs. Eaches and Sweringen. Will Harding opened the athletic part of the programme with an artistic exhibition of club swinging. This was followed by a set-to between Snyder and Sanders. By request Messrs. Hinchman and Waterhouse here gave a selection on the guitar and banjo, which was succeeded with a piano solo by G. A. Summers. An adjournment was then made to the gymnasium, where an elegant supper was served. After supper the guests were treated to a beautiful exhibition of the manly art by Messrs. Morris and Victor, of the Cribb Club, the champion amateur sparrers of the city. Hy Groffman and a quartette of singers were then introduced, and entertained those present with a fine rendition of songs to a late hour. Mr. Aviles gave a laughable sketch and also recited a scene from the Merchant of Venice with telling effect. Taken altogether this entertainment was the best one I ever attended and the programme was varied, so that all were interested and staid until the wee small hours to see it out. It is an open question if a better Entertainment Committee than the present one, which consists of Messrs. Jordan, Snyder and Barnard, could ever be gotten together.

JACK HOLDEN, Captain of the Cycle Club foot ball team, left for Eureka Springs on Friday to take charge of the office of the Eureka Springs Hotel.

CONSUL HALE, of Unionville, writes me that he had a sorrowful experience at the big fire in his town, he losing his machine and all the accessories, in the conflagration.

ONE of the most ardent advocates for road improvement in this State is Mr. Walter Williams, editor of the Booneville Advertiser. Almost daily his paper publishes an article on this subject, and is awakening a wide-spread interest in the matter. Mr. Williams is an enthusiastic wheelman and a member of the L. A. W.

J. B. GLOVER, M. T. B. (member of the Touring Board), writes that Joplin expects to have fully sixty riders next year. They now have thirty-seven active riders, among whom are six lady cyclists. This is the only town in the State, to my knowledge, that has any lady riders. A large proportion of Joplin's wheelmen are League members, and it should not surprise me to see her become the second city in the State as regards the largest number of League members.

SOMETHING ought to be done to encourage League recruiting in this State, as no applications have been sent in for over a month. St. Louis has, in the Chief Consul, Vice Consul and Secretary-Treasurer, the three main officers of the Division, still nothing is done to augment the membership that amounts to anything. St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joe each have a large number of riders that ought to be in the fold. Get to work, gentlemen, and see if we cannot have 400 members by March or April.

LOCAL cyclers are taking to foot ball in great shape, and the past two Sundays were devoted to playing games with the Missouri Amateur Athletic Club, the crack organization of the city. In the first game the cyclists showed a little nervousness, but as they became more familiar with the rules steadied down to work and gave the athletes all they could do to down them. It would be a good thing for St. Louis if the intermingling of these athletic interests resulted in the building of a good track for cycle and foot races.

WHEN the subject of forming a stock company to handle and repair cycles was first broached last summer the local riders went wild over it, and all thought it to be the best scheme yet devised to boom wheeling in this town. Since then two meetings have been held, representatives of manufacturers have been spoken to, but nothing resulted therefrom. It seems to me that there is no reason why a scheme of this kind should not succeed and if it received the backing of a prominent manufacturer would prove a success from the start.

IN the Stone-Lumsden matter I am advised that the races have at last been arranged and papers have been sent to Stone for his acceptance. The proposition is to race one and five miles on the track and twenty miles on the road; one of the races to be held at Chicago, one at St. Louis, and the third, if necessary, at Crawfordsville, Ind. The first race will take place about the middle of May, and the others at intervals of about one week. As Stone rides a Victor and Lumsden a Columbia it would be a good idea if the participants rode regular stock road wheels in these races.

BALTIMORE.

"NORVAL."

THE mild weather in Baltimore this winter has been of great advantage to the wheelman, and in my recollection has never been known before. Every fine afternoon a large number of cyclers can be seen on the turnpikes and roads leading from the city, while on Sunday the number of riders is multitude.

FRIDAY night dances at the Baltimore Club are a duration.

HARRY G. TYLER, of Norfolk, Va., but recently prominent in the Baltimore Club, spent last Sunday in this city.

THE supposed consolidation of the Baltimore and Rambler Clubs is found out to be false, and it is reported that the Rambler Club will exist.

LAST Saturday a party of about fifteen or twenty members of the Maryland Club left for Philadelphia on a visit to the Pennsylvania Club of that city.

THE Baltimore Club has decided that C. Breckenridge, who claims to have ridden something in the neighborhood of 6000 miles last year, cannot have the long-distance medal without a legal fight for it. The reason for this decision is that Breckenridge did not comply with conditions, and that there is a lurking suspicion that he did not ride as many miles as he said he did. It is suspected that he claims to have done most of his riding in Druid Hill Park, and the roads therein don't show that much wear and tear.

A SPECIAL meeting of the Board of Officers of the Division was held at the Maryland Bicycle Club house last Friday night. Several subjects were discussed, among them the advisability of sending delegates to the meeting of the National Board of Officers, and a recently received circular from Treasurer W. M. Brewster soliciting financial aid to tide the national body over the period when, owing to the change of time for renewal of membership, it will be without income. The appointment of a committee was authorized, which will act with Postmaster Brown in preparing to make bicycle races a feature of the fair to be held at Pimlico in September. The road book matter was also discussed. It is almost certain that the one which Mr. Kirkwood is getting up will be adopted, and it is desired to have it ready for delivery April 1. Mr. Kirkwood says that he can do his part of the work in two or three weeks, but that the assistance which he must depend upon—the local Consuls throughout the State—is not being given as promptly as could be wished. Those who have been written to by the committee on the subject will benefit the entire Division by pushing the work as rapidly as possible. The District of Columbia Division will be asked to join the Maryland Division in adopting as official the book which Mr. Kirkwood is getting up.

THERE may be an unusually large number of ordinaries changed for safeties this year, and then again there may not be; for this reason. Local cycle agents are rather reluctant in allowing even a reasonable price for an ordinary; and if this feeling continues until spring (and it will continue if the calls for ordinaries do not increase) the number of "big" wheels changed for safeties will be small. A well-known agent, in answer to my inquiries, said: "No sir, I'm not stocking my warerooms with second-hand ordinaries for the mere pleasure of keeping them. It is my opinion that there will be very few ordinaries sold this year, whilst there will be a constant call for safeties for the next two years, when the ordinary will again regain its hold, and then the two styles will sell about alike." "Will there be many exchanges for the safety?" "Well, yes, if wheelmen are foolish enough to accept what we offer them for ordinaries, but if the outlook for ordinaries should grow brighter I may be able to make a reasonable trade with some."

THE members of the Ramblers' Bicycle Club will be called upon to decide a question of utmost importance to the club, viz., "is it advantageous to the club to remain a League club?" I regret to say that there are some members, happily in the minority, who think the club has not received the recognition from the League it is entitled to. This may be true in some respects, but they should take in consideration the fact that the Ramblers of to-day and the Ramblers of a year ago are as different as man and boy. The growth of the club the past year has been remarkable, and, if appearances don't fail, this year the membership will be doubled, and it is now when the club should remain in the League. They seem to lose sight of the fact that if they withdraw from the League now and in after years if the members should think it would be beneficial to the club to be a League club they must begin at the end of the line and not resume the position which they now occupy. Wheelmen in general don't seem to realize to what extent they are indebted to the League. Cycling would not have attained the postition it now occupies were it not for the L. A. W. A bicycle club not a League club misses it.

PORKOPOLIS NOTES. "STAR."

So the man from New Haven takes exception to my criticism of the present League cap, does he? He doesn't care for style so long as he is comfortable, eh? The straight visor is no good, is it? The present cap is good enough for him? Well, well! there is no accounting for taste! If he could only visit Porkopolis and get a glimpse of our numerous brewery employees, it is my humble opinion that he would fire his League cap instanter. Of course no one disputes his right to wear what he pleases, but still there are some wheelmen who have a little regard for appearances and are somewhat particular as to what they wear, even if they do live in the "wild, woolly and windy West," and who think that their wishes should be consulted. The present cap may be becoming to one per cent. of the League members, but it makes a good many of them look decidedly tough. A cap is only worn while riding about the city, and on the roads during the spring and fall, for, from the middle of June to the middle of September a well ventilated helmet is what every sensible rider should wear. The C. B. C., after trying all sorts of head gear have finally adopted a low-crowned, black silk cap with a straight visor. The crown is two and one fourth inches high, and the angle formed by the top and the sides is rounded off, thereby avoiding that accordian-like fold so often seen in caps of this description. It is a neat and dressy cap and you just ought to see how handsome it makes the boys look.

THE "Duke" is away on an extended Southern tour.

THE C. B. C. are seriously debating the advisability of doubling their initiation fee.

MARQUA is to take part in an amateur minstrel performance to be given in Library Hall, Price Hill, on Feb. 16. The C. B. C. intend to secure a block of seats near the front, and perhaps they won't give him a send off; oh, no!

CONSIDERABLE surprise has been manifested at the apparent indifference of our member of the Committee on Improvement of Highways, Mr. H. S. Livingston, to the road bill now pending in the State Legislature. He might have called a meeting of the local wheelmen and thereby stirred up some interest in the question.

A GREAT many cyclists as well as others will regret to hear that the Anheuser Busch Brewery Co., of St. Louis, met with a serious loss by fire last Sunday. The figures are $200,000 but the insurance is said to cover same.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

THE Rhode Island delegation will go on to New York the 18th, solid for Luscomb. The Massachusetts delegation will be divided, some for Luscomb and some for Jessup. Pennsylvania will be almost solid for Jessup; New York divided. Missouri will come on as a Luscomb delegation. Illinois, Ohio and other large Divisions will be divided, but the indications so far as we can learn, show Luscomb in the lead. It appears to be a close fit at this particular writing.

WE really thought that we were going to pass over the time of three months and not have to chronicle the discovery (?) of a method for producing aluminum at a cost of not more than that of first class steel. NO. 3562 writes: "For the benefit of those who have not read Max O'Rell's book on Americans and their country, I extract the following, which is his opinion of our streets. He says: 'Streets in America are horribly ill paved. From my window the carriages appear to rise and fall as if on a troubled sea. Drunkards have had to drop their habits, as they could not reach home from the beer saloons.'"

IF the report that reaches us is true, that the San Francisco Bi. Club is pluming itself on being the oldest club in the country since the disbandment of the Massachusetts Club, then we wish to correct them. The Boston Club is and was always the oldest club in America. The Massachusetts Club disbanded over a year ago; the present club bearing that honoroble name is the Phœnix, so to speak. The Boston Club was organized Feb. 11, 1878, and the San Francisco Club was formed Nov. 28, 1878.

THE Rochester Wheelmen debated the question as to why does a bicycle stand up while rolling and fall down as soon as onward motion ceases? The answer, which was decided as being correct, was: "The bottom of the wheel can have no side motion because it rests on the ground, and the bottom is constantly becoming the top and the top the bottom. If the upper part of the wheel gets any lateral motion it is checked by being brought round upon the ground again, before the motion has too much influence."

great deal to astonish me in cycling performances. I have grown used to almost everything. The smashing of an old record and the making of a new one, the decadence of one club and the improvement of another, all are allowed to pass me by without the faintest bit of wonderment or surprise. On Friday last, however, I saw a performance that took away my breath for the moment. I had to cross Madison avenue near Twenty-eighth street, when an object shot by me on a bicycle in such close proximity to my face that for a moment I thought I was going to be the innocent cause, and sufferer, too, of a header. Now a bicycle, that is a full-sized one, is a rara avis below Fifty-ninth street, and this, and the rapid pace of the rider, caused me to step upon the sidewalk and more closely examine the performer. My surprise was, perhaps, natural, when I discovered that the rider was Miss Helen Baldwin, who was mounted upon a 50-inch Rudge ordinary, and was engaged in doing a forty-mile practice spin in training for the forthcoming ladies' —I beg pardon! women's—bicycle race at Madison Square Garden."

POLLY, OF SWEETBRIAR VALLEY.

BY SECRETARY.

(Concluded.)

"They are coming," shouted Charlie, as he turned his tandem down the lane. "When they round the bend, start."

Running his machine behind a sheltering bush Charlie stopped it.

The clatter of the old mare's feet was soon heard, and then Polly saw the other tandemites start and tear down the pike at lightning speed, and a minute later Thought flashed by, and she saw her father and Humphrey in the buggy. When all was quiet and still, and a few moments had been spent in getting breath, Charlie turned his tandem towards the Cornpatch homestead, and when they arrived there, the preacher was waiting, and by the use of a little persuasion from Polly, Sr., Polly, Jr., and Charlie, the good man was prevailed on to tie the knot and make our sweet Polly Mrs. Cracker.

The whole thing was so sudden as to take the breath away of the contracting parties, and those who aided and abetted them, but Polly looked radiant, and Charlie, even through the coating of dust and perspiration, looked actually handsome, so full of happiness was he.

"Well, dear," whispered Polly." "I had my own way and was married in the parlor, anyway!"

As for the preacher, when the deed was done he seemed very anxious to leave before old man Absum got back. He was a mild-man and hated "scenes," and dreaded Absum's anger.

Down the road flew the tandem, and down the road followed Thought. Absum obstinately refused to believe it, but Humphrey saw the flutter of what he thought was Polly's dress getting farther and farther away. Finally it disappeared altogether, but the plucky Absum kept up the chase.

Reaching the brow of the next hill, they joyfully beheld the tandem by the roadside at a standstill, its occupants quietly sitting on the saddles.

"There," exclaimed Absum, triumphantly, "I knew we'd catch 'em. No mortal living could have held that pace. Aint I beat that that young man on his bicycle every time we ever had a brush. I tell you there aint no horse nor machine either that can get away from old Thought." By this time they had reached the tandem and sprang to the ground.

"Why, you aint Charlie," gasped the surprised Absum, staring at a young man who was calmly smoking a cigarette.

"Nor you aint Polly," exclaimed the bewildered Humphrey, staring at a young man dressed in woman's clothing, who was also calmly smoking a cigarette. They both laughed.

"No," said the young lady man, "I am not Polly."

"No," added his companion, "and I aint Charlie."

"Who are you?" demanded Absum.

"We are two young men engaged by Mr. Cracker to take the feathers out of the cap of an old chap who thinks he has a fast horse."

"What's them things?" asked Absum, pointing to several bright articles adorning their breasts.

"Oh," responded the Charlie young man, "they are the prize medals we have won, racing horses. We stopped here to let you catch up, as we didn't want to take you too far from home."

"Was it you who came out of my gate just now?" questioned Absum.

"No," he answered.

"Well, where are they?"

"Who?"

"Why, that villian and my daughter Polly," roared Absum.

"I guess you will find them at Mr. Cornpatch's," answered the Charlie young man.

Absum said not a word but motioned Humphrey to get in the buggy, he followed and Thought was turned homeward.

They spoke not a word until they reached the gate, when they beheld the house brilliantly illumined.

"I guess I won't go any further," said Humphrey, faintly. "I'll get out here and walked down home."

"I guess you may as well," answered Absum grimly, "'cause I went for the preacher myself."

As he drove to the barn he muttered to himself, "when that old mare kicked me this morning I knew something was going to happen."

MR. MALTBY LEAVES FOR AUSTRALIA.

Editor Bicycling World: I have withdrawn my deposit with New York Clipper which was left as a forfeit with challenge, as I now plan to leave New York for the West and Australia about the middle of this month. I have to-day received an offer from the Salt Lake City Bi. Club to ride there February 22d. Should any of the aspirants for the championship in fancy cycling commence "crowing" after my departure this time (as they did in England last winter) I shall look to the WORLD to call their attention to the fact that the "crowing" should have been done during the three months time my deposit was with the New York Clipper. I remain,

Very truly yours, W. S. MALTBY.

THAT TOBOGGAN SLIDE RIDE.

Editor Bicycling World: I have just been reading an account in the BICYCLING WORLD headed "Down a Tobboggan Slide on a Bicycle," in which you say, "it reads like a fairy tale, and in order to assist deglutition we fain would know how steep the chute was." I cannot say exactly how steep it is, but the speed was a little better than one mile a minute. It was not intended that any newspaper reporter should know anything about it. Miss Mulford and Mrs. Morehouse have ridden since October last many hundred miles, over all kinds of country roads. There are only three lady riders in New Jersey that we know of, Miss Mulford's sister being the other rider. I do not consider the slide a dangerous place; we have some hills near here that I consider far worse, and so does Mrs. Morehouse. The slide is on the east side of the Orange Mountain, about two miles east of Eagle Rock Hill; the Eagle Rock road goes up the mountain sidewise, the toboggan slide goes up straight, and is consequently steeper. When you get to the bottom of the slide you pass over a brook and then up grade so that you can easily stop at the end. About five minutes' walk to the south of the slide brings you to Chestnut Avenue Hill, which Mrs. Morehouse has coasted several times. This is about the steepest hill around, and I do not know of anyone having climbed it, yet the hill is short and the approaches quite good. I have repeatedly tried to climb it on a Star and on Mrs. Morehouse's safety, but without success. The only dangers on this hill are loose stones, dogs and wagons and at the foot, while on the slide you have nothing to fear if you keep a level head and keep in the centre, which can be done by good riders on safety machines, but would be impossible on the ordinary, because you could not sit back far enough on the back bone of the machine, and the narrowness of the chute making it impossible to steer without running into the sides; the same trouble with the Star machine, the front bar would be pointed under you, and as you could not get the seat far enough back you would undoubtedly take a header. I do not consider the slide dangerous when ridden on a low safety, but very dangerous if ridden on any make of high wheel, but I regard Chestnut Hill dangerous on any kind of a wheel. Yours truly,

J. T. MOREHOUSE, L. A. W. No. 18,369.

CAPITAL CLUB OF WASHINGTON, D. C.

THE tenth anniversary banquet of the Capital Bicycle Club was held at their club house January 31, 1889. Sixty members sat down to the spread, which was served in an entirely satisfactory manner.

The gem of the evening was the response of Mr. Charles Richard Dodge, which was made in verse, in the various styles of Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Walt Whitman, James Whitcomb Riley, Amelie Rives Chanler and others.

The following sketch of the evolution of this organization was prepared from data found in the club scrap book, containing programmes, badges, invitations, newspaper clippings, etc., etc.

HISTORICAL.

The Capital Bicycle Club was organized almost simultaneously with the introduction of cycling in this country, and came up into prominence through its annual races. Its first meet was held June 29, 1880, at Iowa Circle in the presence of several thousand people. The contestants were J. McK. Borden, William Chester, George Cook, A. M Coyle, Max Hansmann and L. W. Seely.

The second annual meet was held June 18, 1881, at the same place, but more elaborate preparations were made. There was a parade by the Capital, Baltimore and Arlington Clubs, music by Douch's Band and fancy riding by Rex Smith. In addition to those entered in the first year's races, I find the names of H. M. Schooley and E. H. Fowler on the programme.

In 1882, Wallace Crossman, L. J. Barber, Harry Davis and Leland Howard were enrolled among the contestants for racing honors. All the above races were given on a public street (Iowa Circle) and the difficulties of keeping the people off the course were something prodigious.

In 1883, the annual races were held at Athletic Park, and great preparations were made. A cinder track was laid at an expense of $3000 and a prize of $500 was offered to the World's champion. The latter race was contested between J. S. Prince of Washington and Harry W. Higham of England (now a cycle agent in this city.) Messrs. B. W. Hanna, Seward Beall and E. A. Newman were the entries from the club for amateur honors. Three large meetings were held this year, June 11 and 12, July 22 and 23 and October 3. From 3000 to 5000 people present each day of these races. The National Marine Band furnished the music.

The races in those early days of cycling were hotly contested between the local amateurs. Every one was fought from the start to the finish, as may be seen from the newspaper accounts.

In 1884, the annual meet of the League of American Wheelmen was held in Washington. The Capital Club, by invitation, took part in the parade with 70 men all in full uniform. It had maps of the city printed for the use of the visiting wheelmen and did its full share in entertaining them. The club, which at that time had only a few League members, has now some 25 or 30.

The races held this year were also very successful, and attended by some 4000 people. Mr. Howell Stewart won the honor of having his name engraved on the Flint Challenge Cup. This cup had to be won by the same party three times in five mile races, before it became the property of the winner. It now belongs to Mr. W. E. Crist, our present champion, who spurted into fame in 1885, although in 1886 Mr. Phil Brown, our next best man, won the honor of having his name engraved thereon.

The club reached its highest state of perfection as a drilled organization in 1883 and 1884, and the evolutions performed before large audiences in the Baltimore and Washington skating rinks, and at various parades in which it took part, excited wonder and created great enthusiasm.

For a number of years the club held an annual outing at Martha's Vineyard, extending over several weeks. It was always represented at the Springfield races, and tours to Philadelphia, New York and Boston, up the Shenandoah Valley, and to points of interest West and South, were every summer occurrences.

The social features of the club were developed at an early day in its history. The "Annual Uniform Soiree" was an event that was looked forward to by the young ladies of Washington with the brightest anticipations. The programmes were in the form of a gilt wheel, with the order of dances printed between the spokes.

The anniversary banquet has always been one of the happiest occasions of the year, being reinforced with music and speeches, which always have a spice of fun in them.

The club has at present 115 active members, all wheelmen. Its elegant house on Fifteenth street was completed in the fall of 1886, and the entertainments given there through the winter season are of a very pleasant character, and have a good influence in keeping up the standard of the club membership. These entertainments consist of concerts and lectures given by members, an occasional party to which outsiders are invited, and a German every three weeks, which are restricted to the members of the club and their lady friends. "TOURIST."

RESOLUTIONS TO GOV. BEAVER.

BELOW we give copy of the resolutions to be engrossed and presented to Governor Beaver, by the Associates Cycling Clubs of this city, in recognition of his late annual message.

To his Excellency James A. Beaver, Govenor of Pennsylvania, etc.

At the regular meeting of the Associated Clubs, held Tuesday, January 15th, 1889, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, His Excellency Hon. James A. Beaver, Govenor of Pennsylvania, in his message to the General Assembly, January 1st, 1889, has been pleased to refer to the want of a proper system of the laws governing the care of the roads of this Commonwealth: and

Whereas, His just criticism of the deplorable condition of the roads in this State, will receive the strong endorsement of all cyclers whose tours are made over them and

Whereas, The message has officially recognized the bicycle as among the vehicles to be considered in connection with the improvements of our highways: therefore be it

Resolved, That the Associated Cycling Clubs of Philadelphia, heartily endorse the wisdom of Govenor Beaver's course, in calling the attention of our State Legislature to the want of a better system of laws for the care of the roads in this State and that they hereby acknowledge their appreciation of his official recognition of the bicycle as a vehicle.

Resolved, That the officers of this Association be authorized to sign and transmit to Govenor Beaver, copy of the foregoing preamble and resolutions.

Very respectfully yours, WM. R. TUCKER, President.

"HAWKSHAW" HAS ADMIRERS.

Editor Bicycling World: I cannot refrain from noticing the remarkable letter of L. A. W. No. 14,670 in your issue of the 18th. It is very evident that No. 14,670 is "not in the habit of devoting much time to the notes contributed by your correspondent, 'Hawkshaw,'" from the general tenor of comments.

Of course, L. A. W. No. 14,670 displays no egotism when he undertakes to "express the sentiments of perhaps a majority of your readers." Oh! no.

No. 14,670 doubtless thinks a correspondent should confine himself to such local and brilliant items as these:

"Bill Bangs looks great on a safety."

"Dick Dunder is a scorcher from 'way back.'"

"Baby Bunting has a dandy mouth for oysters:" and other similar matter that is of thrilling? interest to wheelmen who never heard of Bill Bangs, and the rest of them, except in the aforesaid items.

Instead of this, "Hawkshaw" actually has the audacity to write upon general cycling topics, of interest to the whole fraternity (except No. 14,670) instead of only a few local readers, thereby "lowering the high standard of your paper."

Now, what has "Hawkshaw's" utterances to do with the L. A. W.? He has the privilege, in common with every other member, to criticize the League and its officers in an honorable manner, but I know of no instance in which he has said aught to injure the League.

It is certain that No. 14,670 is not likely to exert himself to help increase the League's usefulness, since he thinks that the paper furnished is the only substantial benefit accruing from membership in a majority of cases (he seems well posted as to majorities). $1.00 per year would secure that, and the dollar required to join the League could be saved. The League has secured free transportation for wheels on most railroads; gets lower hotel rates for its members; fight unjust laws against wheelmen; has done much to get better roads, with considerable success, besides much other good work it has done, and is doing, but all this counts for naught with No. 14,670.

One who holds such opinions, has little idea of what would be likely to induce wheelmen to join the League.

The WORLD has no correspondent whose contributions are read by the present writer with more interest than "Hawkshaw." His criticisms are usually just and sincere, and many of his suggestions are well worthy of adoption. Keep up the good work, "Hawkshaw." Your notes are full of interest to at least one reader, and he is quite as likely to voice the sentiments of the majority as is your critic, L. A. W. No. 14,670. Truly, SAFETY.

West Virginia, Jan. 26, 1889.

MR. SHRIVER AND THE NEW YORK CITY PARK BOARD.

WE append below some interesting correspondence between Mr. Shriver and the Hon. J. H. Robb, President Park Board, New York City. We congratulate wheelmen of New York City that Mr. Shriver and the New York Bicycle Club have taken the matter up, and from our knowledge of the gentleman and his associates, we can rest assured that the "good work" will be pushed without any let up:

E. J. Shriver, President New York Bicycle Club:

Dear Sir—Referring to my communication of the 17th inst., I have the honor to inform you that our Engineer of Construction has submitted a detailed report in regard to the present condition of West 72d street, in which he states that in his opinion "the work is generally well done," and that, "with the exception of a few places which will require to be remedied in the spring, the work, taking it from first to last, is pretty good."

He adds that "after the pavement has become thoroughly compacted, and the interstices thoroughly filled with the binding material, and after the mud which is formed from the crushing material used for binding has been scraped off and removed, all of which will be done at the proper time, the street will be as free from dust and mud as roadways surfaced with broken stone generally are."

He further adds that the roadway is in all particulars similar to the roads now in use in the Central Park, and which were constructed under his own direction. He does not agree with your statement that no binding of sand, dirt, etc., should be put on the surface, but states that in the long experience which he has had in the building of such roads, he has always had same constructed in accordance with the specifications given in the case of West 72d street, and that he has always found it impracticable to consolidate and bind together the stone when placed on the roadways of the heaviest roads, unless some binding material was used.

Yours respectfully, J. HAMPDEN ROBB,
January 29th, 1889. President Department of Public Parks.

Hon. J. H. Robb, President Park Board:

Dear Sir—While thanking you for the trouble you have taken in so courteously responding to the memorial from this club regarding the condition of West 72d street—as per your two letters received—I must still dissent from the opinion of your Engineer that the street is in proper condition or that it was built on correct principles.

Since its construction it has been impassable on foot, by reason of mud during rains, or frozen into bad ruts in cold weather. A properly macadamized road is never in either condition, as may be readily seen from examination of the roads in and around Orange, New Jersey, the only perfectly macadamized system in this part of the country. Even our own Grand Boulevard is in a better state than 72d street, badly as the farmer has been neglected.

The trouble is not incidental to the newness of the road, as that should make no difference whatever; it is inherent in the material used. As I live on 70th street and pass through 72d street daily, on my way to the station, I watched the construction carefully during its progress, and can say positively that the stone used was not broken sufficiently fine. Had it been, there could have been no place for "binding," the use of which is condemned by all authorities on road making, although quite a common error.

The material used for binding was not, however, the same as that with which the park roads are surfaced. The latter are not as good as they should be because the gravel with which they are surfaced is rarely, if ever, screened; but the stuff put on 72d street was not even this gravel. The park roads, moreover, are never called on to perform the same service as 72d street will have to give, and the treatment should be different. In the parks you have Telford with gravel surface, which does not stand street wear, while in 72d street the evident intention was to make a harder road, such as is furnished by Macadam's plan, but his essential principles have been departed from.

Feeling sure that you will be glad to have all the attainable evidence on the subject, I will send you, in a day or two, copies of the pamphlets on road making, issued by the Road Improvements Associations of this country and of England, which I think you will find to be in support of my position.

Very truly yours, E. J. SHRIVER,
January 31st, 1889. President New York Bicycle Club.

THE LOAFING QUESTION.

THE following communication, coming from the source it does, will be read with interest by all who are interested in the question of racing:

Editor Bicycling World: Various plans offering a solution to the great racing problem of the future have at different times been discussed through the columns of your paper. How to prevent loafing, and so give the public interesting exhibitions of cycle racing in place of the present tiresome processions, has become a problem toward the solution of which every racing man ought to strive to the best of his abilities.

Synyer and Howell are perfectly right when they say that time limits have been tried and found wanting.

The first-class men, who care more for their reputation than for any prize, will ride the race in the old way, to win, prize or no prize. So much for time limits.

Now your suggestion in the last number of the BI. WORLD, about the public and the golden eggs, is quite correct. It therefore becomes clear that, unless we want cycle racing to be a thing of the past, racing men and managers of race meets must do something to stimulate the interest of that indispensable goose—the public.

But what?

It seems to me that the best and simplest answer to that question is to induce some good second or third class man (who has no chance of a place) to make pace for the others.

As for the inducement, it would naturally vary a little. For professionals it would take the form of cash, while for amateurs a special medal could be given.

Let us take for example a "one-mile professional scratch race." The manager should pick out some man who could easily ride in say 2.50, or proportionately slower if the track were bad, and offer him a certain sum to finish in that time, irrespective of his place. I think the manager would have no difficulty in finding such a man, and this system would insure a very fair pace for the whole distance. This has, I believe, been tried in England by the American team, with perfect success, W. Woodside being the man picked out to do the donkey work.

For amateurs a slightly different method would have to be adopted. In all scratch races an extra medal (of sufficient value) should be offered (on the programme, not privately, as with the pros.) to the man leading the greatest number of times at the tape and, if it be a mile track, at the quarter, half and three-quarter mile poles.

This arrangement need in no wise make a lap race of it as far as the first-class men are concerned, as they could simply keep together behind the smaller fry, who would be struggling for the extra prize ahead.

It would cost managers a little more, but if they improve the quality of their sport they must expect to pay a little more for it, in the end of course everything coming out of the dear public, for whose benefit the changes are made.

Besides this system, I think the multiplication of handicaps (handicapped, however with a little more judgment than were those at Buffalo last fall) and lap races (only on half-mile tracks and under) would greatly tend to remove the evil of loafing. Yours very sincerely, R. H. DAVIS.

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 2, 1889.

THE Catford Premier Safety is the latest thing out in wheels. It was designed by Hillman, Herbert & Cooper, for the well-known club of flyers of that name, and fitted with 30 and 28-inch wheels; 9-16ths and 3-inch rubbers; the improved "yoke" frame, and weighs complete, thirty-two pounds. L. H. Johnson will handle it in America.

WHEN a man buys an article he always wants to know something as to the reputation of the firm he is buying of. It is therefore a gratification for us to mention the name of Devlin & Company, of New York, to those who want to fit themselves out in the very highest grade of ready-made clothing and gentlemen's furnishing goods. One of the most active members of that firm is Mr. Jones, a gentleman whose whole aim and object is to maintain the unexcelled high standard of the firm of which he has the honor to be a member.

THE NEW STAR SAFETY.
(The H. B. Smith Machine Co.)

WE present this week a cut of the New Star Safety, in which the same principal of the lever driving is applied the same as in the full sized Star machines.

The natural position of the rider is maintained while the levers extend to within six inches of the ground, thus making the mount or dismount very easy, which alone give so much confidence to the rider.

The machine is comfortable to ride upon, as it is provided with large double coil springs and an easy spring saddle. The saddle may be adjusted forward or backward or up or down to suit any size of rider. The handle-bar also adjusts up and down to suit, hence the machine is suited for small boys or large men.

The brake is preferably applied to the front wheel where it will not throw mud, and the machine can be stopped while descending the steepest hill.

It is fitted with their well known patent two-way silent ratchet, and as the levers pivot nearly in the middle they almost balance, hence only a very limber spring is required to bring them back to position, which makes less resistance to the foot and insures greater durability to the spring. It will be seen that the machine is driven from both sides instead of one side as in the case where a chain is used, and they also preserve the independent action of the levers.

The framing is made very rigid and braced in the direction of the driving strain, because any spring in this direction must be lost power. The head of the machine is mounted with compensating cones, and the rear framing is connected by jamb bolts. The lower frame bars are divided so as to support on both sides the pivoted bearings for levers—these bearings having balls and are adjustable, and are well covered from dirt or grit.

Both wheels are provided with mud guards or shields. The rear or driving wheel is 32 inches diameter and provided with the usual plain bearings of hardened steel. The front wheel is 30 inches diameter and is provided with dust proof ball bearing.

The front or steering fork is semi-hollow and made from a solid steel forging, the head also being solid except the upper portion in which the handle bar adjusts. The brake connections also adjust up and down and the principal wearing parts are coned for adjustment to prevent rattle.

The wheels are direct spoke of their patent drawn double butt ended style. They screw direct into the hub of the front wheel, but the rear wheel is provided with the patent nut. The rims are of solid steel that seated and the rubber of best Para about 5-8 inches wide with rather a deeper section.

Roller Bearings will be furnished for the rear wheels at an additional cost of $10.

The machines will be finished in black enamel with nickel trimming.

Price of machine complete including Saddle, Tool Bag, Wrench etc., $135.

NEW RAPID.

A REFERENCE to our advertising columns will show that the Clark Cycle Company will represent the St. George's Engineering Co. in this country for the coming season. Large orders have been placed by the Clark Cycle Co. and accepted by the St. George's Engineering Co. for New Rapid Cycles of this year's pattern. The excellence of the output of the St. George's Engineering Co. is already established among the riders of this country and we have no doubt but that the New Rapids will have a boom during 1889.

HOLMES & CO.

INCREASED business necessitates increased accommodations, and we are happy to be able to chronicle the fact that the Holmes Co., finding their old quarters at No. 17 Kingston street altogether too contracted for their largely increased business, have been compelled to secure new quarters, and of larger dimensions.

A visit to the new Thorndike building, on the corner of Kingston and Essex streets, discovered the Holmes Co. busily engaged in settling in their new quarters in that splendid building; furnished with passenger and freight elevators, lighted on four sides, and with all modern improvements, and they assure us that with ample room and increased facilities they will be able to respond promptly to their large and constantly growing demand for goods in their line. The fittings of this building will be complete in every respect, and it is one of the finest of the kind in the country.

We had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Gerry, the gentleman who represents the Holmes Co. as their travelling man, who was busily engaged in picking out his samples for his spring trip. The excellent quality of the Holmes goods has become a household word all over the United States, and it is a pleasant fact that we can record, that such enterprise and excellence of work has received evidences of appreciation. For those in want of their special line of goods, we refer our readers to their advertisement.

THE STANLEY SHOW.

THE Cyclist of January 23d to hand, contains a list of some of the novelties that were to be shown at the Stanley Show. Those that are likely to reach America, we notice, are:

The St. George's Engineering Co. have modified their brake fittings considerably. They will show, besides their well-known patterns, a rational ordinary, with 22-inch back wheel; a new pattern in safeties at a cheaper price, with direct spokes; and a pattern in tricycles specially built for ladies, in addition to other patterns.

Singer & Co. will place a great many new patterns in line. First, there will be the "Special S. S." light roadster, with three 30-inch wheels, then the military "S. S.," specially fitted for purposes indicated by its name; a new light carrier, a cheap pattern of "S. S." tricycle and two new patterns of the "Velocipman," one with detachable wheel for ease of stowage; a rational ordinary with 22-inch back wheel; several new things in safeties, including a "Royal Singer," a lady's safety, a tandem safety, as well as a tricycle of "S. S." pattern with new patent reducible axle, which is worth looking at. The application of a simple attachment by which the steering wheels of a safety can be kept rigidly in line for purposes of leaning the machine against a wall will be on view.

The Coventry Machinists's Co. are fitting all their tricycles with new bearing adjustment. They will show a modified "Marlboro' Club" racing tricycle, a special pattern of the "Swift" safety with large steering wheel, two new patterns in ladies' safeties, one fitted with Keating's spring forks, and a specially good thing in dress guards; a "Swift" tandem and "Swift" light roadster, besides a general overhaul of their other patterns.

Hillman, Herbert & Cooper will have a long line of new patterns, including a half-diamond roadster safety—the half-diamond frame, by the way, is the one introduced on the "Singer Rover" No. 2 and "Success" safeties last year in general style, but is very considerably modified in detail—a lady's safety (a new pattern); No. 1 "Premier" safety with a new and very strong frame; another [illegible] diamond frame safety, built specially for heavy work; a safety at twelve guineas, with a novelty in a semi-tubular frame—double. They will also show a new tandem tricycle, and new patterns in carriers.

The Quadrant Tricycle Co. will have one of the most striking novelties, this being a new spring wheel, which is decidedly good. The makers liken it to riding on water. The spring is contained in the wheel itself, and the effect is remarkable. This must be seen. In safeties they will introduce new patterns. The No. 17, a machine with new frame and direct steering. No. 18, a direct steerer, built specially for ladies, with excellent dress guard arrangement. The "Quadrant" safety will be shown, too, with foot brake and modified back frame, and they are also introducing a 30-inch lady's tricycle.

THE Eagle Bicycle Mfg. Co. start out with every indication of great success. A reporter of the Stamford (Conn.) Record called at the office of the Eagle and had occular demonstration of the immense interest this new wheel is creating, by the piles of correspondences heaped on the desk. The reporter says: "Mr. Gaylor's position to the pile of letters about him was like Tennyson's immortal six hundred to the cannon. He had letters to the right of him, letters to the left of him, letters in front of him, and would have had letters behind him if there had been any place to put them; but they were laid on the floor for want of another place."

THE KODAK CAMERA---FOR WHEELMEN.

THE operation of securing views with this camera consists simply of leveling it at the object to be photographed, and pressing a button.

One Hundred instantaneous views may be made without reloading, and a knowledge of photography is unnecessary. The "Kodak" is but about six inches in length, and weighs less than two pounds.

A handsome russet leather carrying case with shoulder strap forms a part of each outfit.

The "Kodak" is an article which every wheelman should possess, and secure, by its use a complete pictorial record of interesting scenes and incidents which no trip is without.

☞ Send for copy of Kodak Primer, containing Kodak photograph.

California Announcement.

On September first last 1888 the California Division had upon its roll 379 members, which would entitle it to one delegate to the National Assembly besides the ex-officio members—the Chief and Vice Consuls. The Division failed to elect such delegate at the time specified in the constitution and there is therefore a vacancy in the delegation from that Division. At the request of the Chief Consul of that Division I hereby appoint as delegate from California Dr. J. W. Gibson. This appointment is made under authority of Art. 1, Sec. 1. of the present By-Laws.

T. J. KIRKPATRICK, President.

Springfield, Ohio, Jan. 30th, 1889.

California Championships.

The Racing Board of the California Division met on January 14th, and established the following championships for 1889. One, two, five and ten miles open to every type of bicycle and one and five miles for Rover type safeties. The value of the championship medals was placed at $35 per set of two. It was also decided to establish a time standard, the rider beating such standard to receive a time medal valued at $5. The standards set were one mile 2.55, two miles 6., five miles 15.50, 10 miles 32.30 for the safety races, one mile 3, five miles 16.30. The chairman was instructed to procure designs for the medals. The Carnival at New Orleans.

The numerous inquires (in reply to the invitation of the N. O. B. C.) asking about the Carnival here, prompt us to give you in a few words, a brief description of Mardi-Gras.

Carnival this year commences February 28th and ends March 5th, during which time there will be held some five or six processions.

Each procession consists of some twenty-five or thirty cars elegantly decorated with characters on same in costume representing some subject, each procession costing from $10,000 to $20,000. The parades are at night except Rex., are brilliantly lighted, and move through our principal streets followed afterwards with a ball.

These balls can be attended by invitation only, costume de rigeur rigidly enforced.

In past years, the Iliad, Atlantis. Lalla Rooke, Ancient Mythology, etc., have been represented.

Mardi-Gras day comes on March 5th, the last day of the Carnival, when the fun grows intense, and the streets crowded with costumed maskers; at sunset all maskers must unmask; that night some ten or fifteen balls take place.

Aside from the Carnival, New Orleans is filled with interest to the traveller, our French Market, Cathedral, Old Spanish Buildings and the French Quarters have been so vividly described by the novelist Cable and others, of note, that a description here would be out of place.

All wheelmen who will come here are requested to bring their mounts with them, so as to take part in the runs and tours that will take place during Mardi-Gras week.

The following rates are fixed for Carnival. Tickets will be on sale February 25th to March 3rd, good to return until March 23rd.

From St. Louis to New Orleans and return; $20.00
From Cincinnati to New Orleans and return....$21.00
From Chicago to New Orleans and return.....$25.00
Hotels; St. Charles, Royal and Vonderbanck, $2.50 to $5.00 per day. Good Boarding House from $2.00 to $4.00 per day. Carnival rates. If you are coming send me your name, and by what route you will arrive and what day you will be here. In case you come and do not send word, call at my office on arrival. I will then secure accomodations for you, and invitations to the mystic balls. Fraternally yours,

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 5, 1888.
H. B. SMITH MACHINE CO.

Dear Sirs—I gave that 39-inch Star Safety a good test Sunday, Nov. 30th, by riding 110 miles by way of Fall River and New Bedford, a very hilly and sandy road. I only made one forced dismount all day. Within 30 minutes after the machine was out of the crate I made 7 miles on our "Ocean Drive" in 26 minutes in a head wind, beating previous record by 31 seconds. I went to College Hill, Providence, on a borrowed 39-inch Star the day of the races, Sept. 25th, and rode, and I have ridden everything from an ordinary with the backbone off, to a quadricycle. Yours truly,

W. VAN WAGONER.

H. B. SMITH MACHINE CO.

Dear Sirs—My new 39-inch Star arrived yesterday, and it is a beauty. I gave it a good trial, and find that for the rough, sandy, hilly roads which surround this place, it gives me better satisfaction than my 45. As to speed I think there is little if any difference. Truly yours,

FRANK C. BLODGETT.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 19, 1888.
H. B. SMITH MACHINE CO.

Gentlemen—Your 1888 39-inch Star Safety is the finest road machine I ever placed my anatomy over. It not only has a habit of crawling to the top of the steepest hills, but racks old Father Time's bones in a most distressing manner, as he endeavors to keep pace with what must seem to him a flying shadow. As for its hill climbing powers, when I tell you that the hill climbing record you published in the "Mechanic," in which I was particularly interested, as I was a passenger at that time, was made by 125 pounds of skin and bones with wooden lungs, you will see that it was the machine and not the thing that rode it that took the record.

If you will notice the Providence Journal of Sept. 15, you will see that the Star Safety ran away again from me and made me break the hill record again. Yours,

H. F. CAMPBELL.

beat the previous record of six times, and rode it 10 times without any trouble, and did not change the power hooks. I have not walked up any hill since I got my Safety. I think the 39-inch Star Safety goes as far ahead of the larger sizes of the Star, as the larger sizes (42, 45 and 48) go ahead of the "crank" for speed, comfort and safety on the road. In fact it is the best wheel I ever

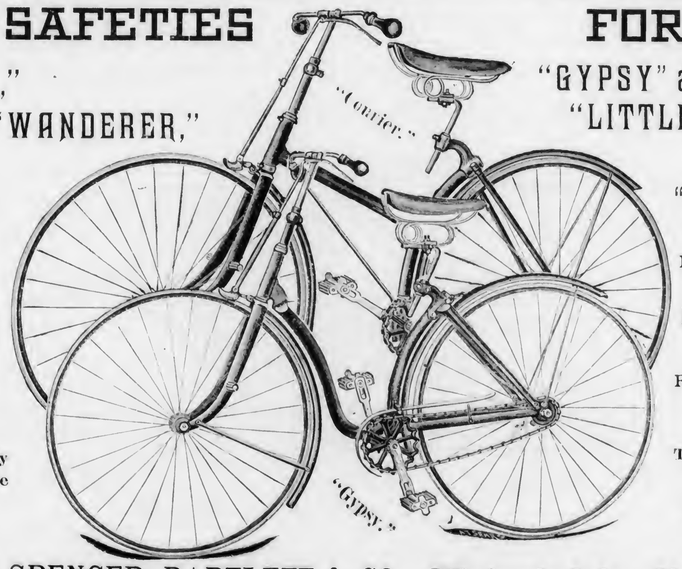
VICTOR, "King of the Safeties."

THE ENGLISH PREMIER,



Lord Salisbury, is not more widely known or more highly esteemed than the PREMIER SAFETY BICYCLES. There are Riders and Riders. A. is a medium-weight, wants a Light Safety, to ride himself, out of business hours, and for his wife to use at other times. "B. is a Bachelor," a heavy rider, who wants a Sound, thoroughly reliable Safety for pleasure or business purposes, at a figure that will not stretch his pocket to the tune of $135.00. C., wiser than either, wishing to share the joys of Cycling with his wife or sister, desires a Strong Tandem Safety. [Mem.—A Tandem Bicycle that is not Strong enough to resist indefinitely the tremendous strains to which that class of Machine is subjected, is NOT a Tandem SAFETY.] D. is a vigorous Youngster, outgrowing a straight wheel every season. Paterfamilias decides to get him a first-class Safety, adjustable for many years' growth, and durable enough to withstand many years' use. What can we do for these Inquirers? A. buys a SPECIAL PREMIER, the finest "Compromise" Safety ever built, weighing 46 pounds. B. takes our POPULAR -PREMIER, a splendid Roadster, with balls all around, 7-8-inch rubbers, hollow forks and diamond frame, putting $30.00 in the bank towards a Premier Tandem, when the right girl turns up. C. buys a PREMIER TANDEM SAFETY, and is surprised to find what pleasure it is to ride it alone, when Mrs. C. is otherwise engaged. D. invests in a YOUTHS PREMIER SAFETY, thereby closing a leak in his exchequer for a number of years. We shall be happy to furnish Riders and Dealers with full particulars of these Wheels on application.

BY THE DOZEN AND MORE.
NASHVILLE, TENN., WHEELMEN. All New Mails.

CORRECTION.

In a former issue we presented this same picture and inadvertently used the word Club instead of Wheelmen as above, as the party sending the picture unsolicited by us was an officer of the Nashville Club. The intent of the advertisement was to show the popularity of the New Mail in Nashville, and that the whole sixteen were on New Mail wheels. This is true, and even more were ordered from that city, and not in this representation, and their testimonials are in our catalogue. But as this petty and trivial difference of wording, which has no significance whatever in relation to the New Mails in Nashville, was deemed important enough by a competitor to devote a whole page to throw discredit on our statement and on our wheel, we desire, as we always do to correct anything not strictly right at first, leaving the reader to judge as to the trade courtesy in the matter.

Our Splendidly Illustrated Catalogue is now out of press. Send for it—showing the specialties of our New Mail Safety and of the Ordinary, which has had so great success.

BOSTON, 15 FEBRUARY, 1889.

THE Stanley show takes up some of our space this week and the concise and chatty account of same will no doubt be read with interest by all. The summing up seems to show that the safety in all its forms is more secure than ever in the public estimation. A decided and popular move will be felt this season toward the ordinary on the rational lines, to what extent this movement will obtain time only can tell.

The tricycle has no doubt been relegated to a "bad third" in the public esteem, the "beetle" bicycle having shouldered out the three wheeler in the estimation of those who crave safety and comfort. We note in the reports the handles of safeties are brought further back. No one knows better than we how extremely uncomfortable it is to ride with bent back when not racing or on a scorch, and we note the change with pleasure.

AT home and abroad the question of legislation on road improvements is constantly asserting itself in a most gratifying manner. In the Official Department of this paper the bill for the improvement of highways as introduced into the New Jersey Legislature is printed in full and is worthy of close perusal of those who are interested in this vital question.

Here in Massachusetts the Legislature Committee on Roads and Bridges gave a hearing to those in favor of, and against a better condition of things so far as better highways is concerned. The hearing was conspicuous by the absence of a single dissenting voice.

Gov. Ames in his inaugural to the Massachusetts Legislation urged special action in the matter and on his behalf appeared Messrs. Home and Dressor asking for some legislation which would bring about the desideratum. Chief Consul Emery on behalf of the League spoke earnestly in favor of some measures while Messrs. Slocumb, Perkins and J. S. Dean also spoke on behalf of the general public. The speeches were telling ones in every case and we are sincerely hopeful that the results will be up to our expectations.

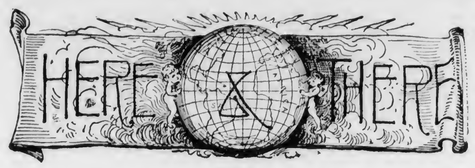
From Missouri comes from the cheering news that the good work is being pushed there and we can do no better than give the report itself as it comes from the pen of our correspondent "Linneus."

"After a great deal of hard work a road bill has at last been introduced into the Missouri Legislature by Senator Carleton. The bill provides that when a majority of the resident tax payers of any county in the State shall petition the County Court for the levying of a tax for the purpose of opening or reopening roads in lieu of labor to be performed on the roads, the court shall levy a tax not to exceed the amount levied for State purposes, to be extended on the tax books and collected as other taxes, the same to be paid into the county treasury. The county shall be divided into road districts by the County Court, regard being had to Congressional townships and section lines. Road overseers shall be appointed and required to give bond, and it shall be their duty to let all road work out under order and by direction of the County Court.

UNITED WHEELMEN OF KANSAS CITY.

YESTERDAY was a red letter day for the Kansas City United Wheelmen. We have had some elegant stag affairs here during the past six months, but not until last night did the bright eyes and soft voices of the fair sex blend with the cycling entertainments of the local wheel club. In short, we are beginning to branch out into the social side of cycling, and the first "branch" was a beauty. The house was lit up from basement to garret; smilax, flowers and evergreens festooned the various points of vaniage, and light-hearted couples glided over smooth canvas to the strains of one of Kansas City's crack orchestras. The boys are not done smiling yet—the recollection still throws its glamour over their work-a-day world—and the girls (bless their good-naturad and light-hearted individual and collectualities) are already figuring on how many days must elapse before the dose is repeated.

It was supposed to be an informal affair, but the opportunity to appear in the striking combination of dress coat and vest, latest style of shirt, knee pants and pumps, was too much for some of the boys to withstand. Among the rule breakers in this respect were Boyd, Custiss, Ceburn, Seymour and Jones; but I can't blame the boys very much, as they certainly showed off their Apollo-like forms to elegant advantage—but for his "specs," indeed Boyd would have looked like a second Adonis. The irrepressible Haynes of course got in his "Bing-Binger" song, as well as his Emmett imitation; Green gave some of his inimitable brass-whistle solos, and the club chorus discoursed the favorite ballad pertaining to the growth of potatoes in a legendary burg known to song as "Maumee." Supper was served at 11 P. M.' and dancing continued until 1 A. M.; but even after the tired musicians had gone to seek repose, a few enthusiasts of both sexes, loath to tear themselves away, continued the dance to the strumming of amateur music.



ERRATIC QUILL.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 8.

THE CENTURY SMOKER.

WHEN Century smokes, she does it with a vengeance, and although the glee club cannot do themselves justice, by any means, yet the smoke of the odorous weed curls around the club rooms in clouds thick enough to cut. At the second of their winter entertainments, last Thursday evening, the club house was thronged with members of the club and their invited guests, and although the reception room was closely packed with chairs, only about two thirds of the club were able to witness the programme srtisfactorily. An excellent entertainment was given, opening with music, and sparring by Messrs. Allen and Steinmetz, three-minute rounds, followed by glee, "Vintage Song;" duet, "The Pilot," Messrs. Schill and Knipe; fencing and single stick exercises, Professors Austin and Kain, which, as they waxed warm, brought down the house, over their clever work; solo, "Heather Bell," Mr. Knipe; sparring Messrs. Kain and Byrne, which instilled a most wholesome respect for the latter in the minds of his club mates; glee, "Beware;" solo, "On Very good Terms with Himself," from "The Lady or The Tiger," rendered in fine style by Mr. Bretz, of the Pennsylvania Club; solo, "Yeoman's Wedding Morn," Mr. Schell; recitation, Mr. Weil. Refreshments were served during the evening, and the presentation of the club mileage medals was made during an interlude. For the highest mileage (Mr Flemming not competing) J. L. Bromley took first prize, with 3943 1-4 miles; W. G. G. Speier, second, 3130 and F. G. Strassburger, third, 2394; while C. Lulzner was awarded a medal for the greatest number of days ridden, he having been out 209 days during the year. Representatives from all the principal city clubs were present, and the Centurions have scored another success. Application was made last week, to the court, for incorporation, for the better purpose of holding property etc. Mr. P. Collins also broached the subject of lady membership when they get into their new house, advocating it in a forcible manner, which should not fail of its effect on his club mates as it would greatly add to the social life of the club. Goodby, Century; Come again, next time!

"ARIEL."

NEW YORK.

"HAWKSHAW."

It has long been a theory among scientific observers, that for some unexplained reasons the affairs of life move in cycles (no pun). For instance, a railroad disaster is at once followed by several more: a conflagration sweeps over some city, and shortly the papers will be called upon to report others of the same kind within a few days or weeks. So when each recurring interval has passed will the same performance be repeated. As like is claimed to cure like, so does like, as a rule, produce like. The same causes under similar surroundings produce the same effects. An example of the foregoing statements is strangely examplified in the twin performances of two brothers here against two brothers who employed them. I am informed that the individual who for some time acted as a bookkeeper for a gentleman here in the cycling trade, and who, while in that capacity, used nearly $1400 of his employer's money to buy faro chips with; had a brother who was employed by the brother of the bicycle dealer, in a similar position to that of the $1500 chip charmer, and he, too, mistook his employer's money for his own, and never discovered the fact till an expert kindly went over his books and placed the amount at nearly $15,000. The only difference in the whole affair seems to be that one took ten times as much as the other, but that is accounted for by his being older and therefore having had more experience, but in Ludlow street jail, where they are both now residing, there is no difference shown between the $1500 brother and the $15,000 one. But it's a queer combination of circumstances at that.

The Riverside Wheelmen, being incorporated last week, gives some color to the rumor that they are stricken with an attack of the club house fever now so prevalent in cycling circles in this vicinity.

The New York Club think they have an awfully good thing in possessing that handsome house of theirs in the midst of Gotham's Belgravia, and in consequence of this opinion, and in recognition of the fact that good things always come high in New York, they have decided to raise their initiation fee to $25 when their membership reaches 150. They have now 135, so the advance is not far off it would seem.

An Associated Press dispatch from the West declares that "'Senator' Morgan of Colorado" offers to wage $1000 that Louise Armaindo gets away with the woman's bicycle race being held this week in Madison Square Garden. The atmosphere of Colorado has long been known to have the peculiar effect of enlarging in appearance any object viewed, but the exact ratio of enlargement has never before been discovered. It is now fixed at one thousand, since it must have this power to enable Morgan to look at a dollar bill until it magnifies to one thousand, and then carelessiy offer to bet it all on Louise. The "Senator" ought to profit more by his experience; he should know that "sure things" in wheel races sometimes go wrong.

It does not often happen in the affairs of life that it falls to the lot of the child to succeed where its elders have failed, and yet that very unique state of affairs was clearly demonstrated on Friday evening last. I think it was in the early part of February, 1883, that the then enthusiastic handful of cyclers here were electrified by the announcement that a cyclers' ball was to be given. Great was the anticipation of the event by the wheelmen, and tickets were sold to them with the rapidity credited to the disappearance of "hot-cakes." When the eventful night at last arrived it was cold, disagreeable and rainy, in fact it was a very "cold night" for the crowds of lightly clad wheelmen who, with their fair friends, shivered and shook, as deluged by the downpour they awaited the opening of the hall at which the ball was to be given. But the ball that they looked for never came. The managers had decamped with the funds, and the owner of the hall said, in the laconic style of the West, "no mon, no fun," and as the wheelmen had not the former, they obtained none of the latter, and went wet and weary homeward, with the kindest of kind thoughts and expressions for the temporal and future welfare of that absent manager. Now this was the first attempt and failure at a cycling dance in this village, and the sponser of the affair was the then flourishing organization, the Manhattan Bicycle Club, now dead, gone and almost forgotten. After this many attempts at such affairs were made, but no great successes were achieved, though the Ixions did succeed in making their private club affairs a go. This is ancient history as cycling history goes, so now for something a little more contemporaneous. On last Friday evening, however, it became the pleasant duty of the Manhattan Bicycle Club of to-day, for the second time, to make a success of an affair that the namesakes had failed to do years before. It was the second annual reception of the club at the Lexington Avenue Opera House, and if one could judge anything from the happy countenances of their numerous guests, it would have been an easy thing to get an aye vote that would have been unanimous, had they been called upon to answer the question as to whether they had enjoyed themselves. It was artistically, financially, socially, cyclingly and theatrically a most pronounced success, and reflects credit upon the cause of the club. Much of the credit of this affair is, as usual, due to Mr. Charles A. Sheehan, the indefatigable Secretary of the Manhattans. The programme, among other novelties, introduced for the first time the "Manhattan Bicycle Waltz," composed by my old friend, Jay T. Knecht, and no further proof of its tuneful excellency is needed than the mere statement that Mr. Knecht is the composer of it.

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

Rumor has been busy once more, and this time I have been told that there was trouble ahead in the Chicago's camp, arising partly from giving up the down-town club house, this causing disatisfaction among the old Chicago members, and also that Skinkle and Randall were at logger-heads, and two factions now existed in the club, one headed by President Skinkle and one by ex-President Randall: and a bitter faction fight was inevitable between the old Fort Dearborn members, while the old Chicagos were interested spectators. I hardly believe this, as only this week I saw our President and ex-President in a very friendly conversation at the club house, and they seemed to be on the best of terms. The regular monthly meeting Monday night will tell the story.

The Illinois have added a very fine library to the many attractions in their club house already.

The Illinois Club has a fine social programme laid out for the next six weeks, beginning with a euchre party Friday evening.

Riggs tells me he has been in great demand by several tricycle agencies for the ensuing year, but he has decided to stay with the Pope people.

The Douglass Club claim a membership of fifty, with applications daily: and what is better still they have a surplus of $300 in their treasury.

The Chicagos held a very pleasant progressive euchre party at their club house Thursday evening, some forty couples being present. Mrs. Sanxay and Mr. F. J. Pike were the prize winners.

What's the matter between Seig and Roe? I notice in last week's Referee that Charlie is trying to stir up bad blood betwesn Roe and Temple as to who is manager at the W. A. & C. Co. Careful, Charlie, or Tom will be after your scalp.

The tournament is progressing finely under the management of Mr. Miles. Another meeting has been called for Feb. 20th, 8 P. M., at the Grand Pacific Hotel when all details will be arranged by the committee having the same in charge. The date of the opening has been fixed for May 6th.

Temple was at one time an honorary member of the Chicagos, and I am told that he is now; and still the Chicagos claim to be an amateur organization. How is this? Or do you think that if Ehlert, of the Illinois, is allowed to remain in the League that Temple's honorary membership does not count?

On the 18th the grand raffle of a New Mail, a spring overcoat and many other articles useful to "ye wheelmen," will occur, and the way the Lincoln men are selling tickets assures a large addition to their bank account. They are also talking up an annex to their club membership, in the shape of a ladies' division.

Captain Davis threatens to change his mount this year, owing to the change in the Star agency here.—"Doc" Gibson withdrew his letter of resignation at the last moment, and all is peace for the present on the West Side.—The Illinois Club fired nine members recently for non-payment of dues. They do not believe in carrying a lot of dead wood over there.

The South Side Tricycle Club held their second annual dinner at the Hotel Florence, Pullman, Friday evening. Some thirty couples were present. President Langworthy did the honors at the head of the table. Grace having been said by the Rev. Dr. Delafield, a most sumptuous repast was served, after which dancing followed, until the eleven o'clock train left for the city, bearing a merry and enthusiastic gathering of cyclers.

Spooner, of the Lincolns, has appeared on the streets with a bran new wheel, and says that he will win the Pullman road race on it.—Oliver is East, and will remain until after the official meeting of the L. A. W. in New York, he being a delegate of the Illinois Division.—The Illinois members grow restive at not seeing themselves mentioned as the "boys," or the "youthful West Side club."

Sauer, the North Side flyer, has recently joined the Illinois, and now they say that with Ehlert and Sauer in their racing team their North and South Side neighbors will be in the soup this year. We shall see.—Mason, who won prizes put up by his club valued at between thirty and forty dollars, very generously donated the money to the club, refusing to have them spend any money on prizes for him.

The Pastimes expect to have fifteen representatives in the Pullman road race and say they will surprise some of the contestants at the finish. I have been told that St. Louis will be invited to take a hand in the race this year. I hope this is true as they seem to hanker for road races in that burg.—Quite a body of local wheelmen attended one of our down-town theatres one evening last week and gave Prince Wells, who was doing his act there, a rousing reception. It is needless to say that it was appreciated by the recipient. I tried to talk up "League meet" here this year, but the generally expression seems to be "wait until next year, when we will be in condition to entertain as royally as did our hospitable St. Louis neighbors."

KENTUCKY TIPS.

"BOURBON."

As the Mussulman turns his face to the East, and devoutly murmurs "Great is Allah, Allah only is great," so I, turning my face to the East, murmur "Great is 'Hawkshaw,' 'Hawkshaw' only is great." "Hawkshaw" is admittedly by far the most brilliant contributor to the columns of the World, and my admiration of and respect for his genius are sincerely genuine. It is really too bad that he should ever be afflicted so sorely with the pain he speaks of enduring when compelled to read a contribution from "ye back-country wheel correspondent." For humanity's sake the "Willie wheelers" should be suppressed.

Here is greeting from the L. C. C. to all our quondam associates, and may the new year bring them happiness, health and wealth.

Judging from the way the manufacturers are booming safeties the prediction made some time ago by a writer in the World that "the days of the ordinary are numbered" is about to be verified.

The annual election of officers of the L. C. C. was held lately. Most of the old officers were re-elected. The meeting was held at the residence of C. G. Lucas. Under the head of new business the club was invited into the supper room to partake of an elegant wine supper. After adjournament we returned to the head of unfinished business, retired to the supper room again, and finished the business. Three applications for membership were received.

Denver, "Occasional," makes mention now and then of Jos. L. Gard. That's our "Jo-Jo," lovingly so called on account of his personal beauty. Joe played us a neat little trick once, when out for a run to a neighboring town. As we approached within seven or eight miles of our destination he asked the boys to ride slow, as he wanted to stop at a farmhouse, just around the next turn of the road, to see a man, and away he went and was soon out of sight. While the boys were loitering along, wondering what was keeping Jo-Jo so long, that astute individual was streaking it at a fifteen-mile gait far ahead, and when we finally reached the village, there was Gard, sitting serenely before the inn, surrounded by an admiring crowd of natives, whom he had told, in answer to their inquiries about the rest of the boys, that "they would be along presently; he didn't like to ride slow, and they couldn't keep pace with him." The Denver boys had better keep a sharp eye on Jo-Jo.

This is the time for reminiscence, and as I look back over the past year I recall quite a number of our associates who are with us no more—none, fortunately, removed by death, but many of our best riders have sought new homes. There is Francis Noriego, the genial Spaniard, who went to New Orleans last spring, and popular, handsome E. R. Turner, now living in Hartford, Conn. Denver, Colorado, now claims as her own four of our old timers, a quartette she may well be proud to possess, J. L. Gard, John Adams, our own dear Jack, Sam Wells, brother of the well known Prince, and Horace Beddo, who could tell so many wonderful experiences. He was never dubbed the "club liar," for his stories possessed the uncommon merit of being true. Here's a sample: Starting one day to ride across a small stream, he had reached the centre when he observed the bed of the creek beyond, to be covered with loose stones, making it impossible to ride further. He came to a stop, did the stand-still while he removed his shoes and stockings, stepped down and waded to the opposite shore in safety, pushing his wheel before him. This feat was witnessed by a farmer, a fisherman and an owl, and cannot be gainsaid.

BUFFALO.

"MERCURY."

The Ramblers Bicycle Club's fifth assembly Thursday evening proved a decided success in every way. The stage was tastefully decorated with rare potted plants, and in the middle neatly trimmed with smilax was Louis Bruch's bicycle, made famous by his century run the past season. Cleverly hidden behind the plants was Kuhn's orchestra, discoursing the choicest dance music. There were fully 150 couples on the floor, and it is needless to say all enjoyed themselves to their heart's content. "These cyclers are such jolly entertainers," remarked a sensible little lady. One of the pleasantest events of the evening was the presentation of an elegant gold watch chain and charm to John S. Kellner. On some pretext or other Mr. Kellner was called upon the stage, where he was met by Mr. Bruch, who spoke as follows: "It is just four years since the Ramblers' Bicycle Club was organized, and the ball this evening is given in celebration of this, our fourth birthday. We are very young, but very vigorous, our membership during the past year having tripled, numbering now 84. In this month of February, three years ago, fire destroyed the home and property of our club; this was our first 'header.' It was in this darkest hour of our existence that we gave control of the handle-bars to a new President, John S. Kellner, and now that he has guided our course into the smooth, broad path of success and retired from office, the members have thought the occasion a particularly fitting one in which to express our esteem and brotherly regard to this tried and faithful officer. It is therefore on behalf of my fellow-members, who know and like him, that I present this chain and charm to him as a tribute to his zeal and well-directed efforts in building up our club, and hope that in future years it will link pleasant recollections of the givers." Mr. Kellner, although very much affected, responded, returning sincere thanks for the substantial tokens of esteem and friendship. The gift is a very handsome affair, the chain is of Isham's latest pattern, and the charm has, on one side a cut cameo, and on the other a wheel mounted on a dark stone with a diamond in the centre: inside is a gold plate, bearing this inscription: "John S. Kellner, from the Buffalo Ramblers' Bicycle Club, Feb. 7th, 1889." The programme contained twenty-one numbers, and the dancing lasted until late. Much credit is due to the Executive Committee, consisting of L. Bruch, J. J. Wirtner, O. H. Sauerwein, W. L. Hughson and A. L. Prentiss, for the successful outcome of this affair; as well as to the Reception and Floor Committees.

The "Zigzags" are negotiating with the Park Commissioners for upper floor of the Park refractory at the front. Success to them.

"Billy" Hughson is still waiting for the return of his wheel, so playfully (?) taken by Senator Carlyle's son (?). Perhaps "Billy" likes to wait: no returns as yet.

The Ramblers will be represented at the meeting in New York by W. O. Graham and Jos. J. Kane.

GEORGIA.

"RAMBLER."

Not long ago I wrote the World a letter, and in it stated that while Northern cyclists were tramping around in rubber boots and under umbrellas, through snow and slush, we fellows of the South were riding about, the same as six months ago—or enjoying the bloom of the flowers and orange blossoms, while the bees and birds were humming and singing all around us. Things were just that way when I wrote, and finer weather than we were having then is not known. But one morning, a few days later, the air began to grow suddenly cold: the sky was filled with dark grey clouds, pouring in from the North, and the wind moaned through the trees and around the corners of the houses in a way dismal enough to make one feel afraid of—he knew not what, but as if something terrible was going to happen.

I took my wheel and started out to see the result—if there was to be any. I met Lou Powers, the new Southern champion, and together we rode out to the Central City Park. We found it absolutely deserted; not a human being was to be seen. The great water oaks and pines were alone in their solitude; the long white walks were deserted. Occasionally we saw a flock of scared birds, as they rapidly winged their way further South, passing over the tree tops like shadows, harbingers of the coming storm. Soon the snow came dashing into our faces as the gusts carried it hither and thither.

The wind began blowing a regular gale; the white snow filled the woods; came sweeping along the walks like hissing steam; it struck us in the face like sharp needles until we had to turn back to. The sight of another rider, coming through the trees on a big full-nickel made him look like some spectre wheelman, grim and gaunt, and there were mutual expressions of surprise when each learned that the other was out "just to see how it felt to be out riding in a snow storm." Soon one of the fellows proposed that we go up town and have our pictures taken, "on our wheels in the snow," and we started up immediately, but when we reached the photograpers it had stopped snowing, so the scheme fell through.

THE Central City Wheelmen are preparing for a tournament, to take place next May.

BALTIMORE.

"NORVAL."

THE cycle clubs of this city are booming at the present time, and efforts are made to increase the membership of the Maryland Division of the L. A. W. Matters have improved somewhat of late with the Rambler Club. Five new members have been taken in and it now looks as if the club would blossom out in early spring with renewed energy and activity pervading its ranks.

THE Baltimare Club gave another dance on Friday evening. A good attendance was present.

THE Centaur was two years old last Friday. They celebrated the event by a social gathering of the members at the club house on East Lombard street in the evening.

A REGULAR meeting of the Hagerstown Bicycle Club, of Hagerstown, Md., was held Monday, Feb. 4th. In addition to the routine business transacted, the proposition to hold an entertainment, a meet and races was discussed, but no action was taken.

IT is stated that Chief Consul Albert Mott has sent to England for a tandem safety, but if he wants to be the owner of the pioneer machine of this kind in the Maryland Club he will have to get his machine quickly, as one of the Columbias has been ordered by another member.

AT the last meeting of the Baltimore Club objections were made to awarding the long distance gold medal for the season of 1888. W. C. Breckenridge, who claims to have made 4051 miles during the season, will get the medal if he can prove that his record is correct. At the same meeting it was decided that hereafter applications for membership shall be entirely in the hands of the Executive Committee.

V. S. EMMERSION, a member of the Baltimore Club, met with a serious accident not long ago. He was riding his nineteen-pound racing wheel out Eutau Place, when a boy riding a small machine unexpectedly turned the corner. Mr. Emmerson took a header which landed him on the hard asphalt surface with considerable force. His wheel was wrecked, and he sustained severe injuries. After a few days he was able to attend to business.

A PARTY of members of the Maryland Club visited Philadelphia last week, and speak well of the trip. They were met at the depot by members of the Philadelphia clubs and escorted to the Colonnade Hotel for supper, and afterward to the Philadelphia Club house, where they were pleasantly entertained. On the next morning they were taken by about twenty members of the Philadelphians on a run out Montgomery avenue to Bryn Mawr, returning by way of the celebrated Lancaster pike, which they characterize as the most perfect road in existence.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

WHEN a member of a certain cycle club in Covington, Ky., decides to marry, and can get a girl confiding enough to say "yes," his club mates band together and pay for the license. In fact it is one of the inducements held out for a man to join this particular club. We hear that the "opposition club" goes this "pioneer" club "one better" in the shape of additional inducements in the form of rubber rings, rattles, and other infantile gear.

NOW is the time to advertise your last year's mount for sale.

PRESIDENT LUSCOMB? or President Jessup? or President ——?

NEXT Monday the politicians of the League will be on hand in force in New York.

THE Maine Division L. A. W. will hold its annual meet at Biddeford on May 30th.

THE Cambridgeport (Mass.) Club will disport themselves at a fancy dress ball to be given some time next month.

NO less than six papers speak of the coming annual officers meeting in New York as "the first meeting of the L. A. W.," etc. Such is fame.

ADVERTISERS should remember that our large March edition will be a splended medium for presenting their claims and goods to the notice of our large constituency.

THE Springfield (Mass.) Bicycle Club is going out of the minstrel business, and any club desiring to obtain the "properties" cheap had better put in its bid early.

HEREAFTER any member of the Cambridge (Mass.) Club found guilty of dallying with the festive poker chip will be "assisted" in his retirement from club membership.

WE notice that the San Franciscans do not believe that George Gould rides an aluminium bicycle, with diamond ball bearings. It is strange how incredulous some people are.

THE English cycling papers are corpulent and ponderous editions this week. From eighteen to twenty-five pages of each paper are devoted to exhaustive but somewhat tiresome descriptions.

CHARLES PYNE, formerly manager of the Woodstock (Ont.) Amateur A. A., has resigned from that organization and has gone to Montreal to manage the cycle department of the Montreal Athletic Association.

THE Overman Wheel Co. are out with a very tasteful circular announcing that their wheels are now on exhibition at No. 182-188 Columbus avenue. The store will be open on Washington's Birthday, and all are invited to call and inspect.

WE hear that Louis Harrison is somewhere secreted in New York, and that when he does appear it will be to hurl a literary effort on to a waiting and expectant public, the reception of which, 'tis said, will insure the brilliant Louis permanent fame and fortune.

MR. I. J. BROWNING of Albany, N. Y., will act as Mr. Maltby's adavnce agent in his Australian trip. Maltby will appear in Chicago, Salt Lake City and San Francisco before sailing. He will stop one week in Honolulu, S. I., sailing from San Francisco April 1st.

BARBER, the trick rider, goes to Paris, France, to fill an engagement; Maltby, the expert, goes to Australia. America is again robbed of all its representative wheel jugglers. Oh no, we forgot, Temple is out West, and so we are not yet utterly without the cheering presence of a good trick rider.

THE Boston Bicycle Club and the newly formed Town Club will jointly occupy the house being fitted up for them located on Boylston street, between Washington and Tremont streets. "The old and the new" will prosper in their joint occupancy, as the location is a splendid one and very convenient.

SENATOR INGALLS says it is a base slander accusing him of remarking that if he had his way he would use a howitzer to blow to pieces every cycler that rode a machine. The apology is accepted, and the Senator is absolved from the charge of wishing to use a "howitzer;" perhaps he said a "mitrailleuse."

THE offer of the WORLD and Texas Siftings to new subscribers for $2.00 has been extended to March 31st. We also will continue to furnish Siftings to present subscribers for $1.25. These offers have proved a great catch, and the publishers of Siftings as well as ourselves are much pleased with the results. Keep 'em a-going.

AN Omaha paper in reporting "Senator" Morgan makes that worthy insert and drop his "hs," in the way popularly supposed to be the failing of cocknies. Now this is wrong, dead wrong; the "Senator" is nothing if not elegantly correct in the use of polished English. We have not heard where the poor reporter was buried.

THE Harvard Bicycle Club is seriously thinking of giving a one-day race meet during next May. Among the events will be an interscholastic and an intercollegiate race. The races will all be short, except a three-mile handicap with a 400 yards' limit, for which prizes of extra large value will be offered. There will be two or three prizes in all the races.

PRESIDENT MILLS, of the Columbia Club of North Attleboro', Mass., entertained his club fellow members two weeks ago at his home. About fifty guests were present. The evening was pleasantly passed in listening to music, both vocal and instrumental. At 10 o'clock an appetizing collation was served. The Columbias will give a grand ball in March sometime.

AT a meeting of gentlemen interested in a great Century run for 1889, held at the Citizens Bicycle Club, New York City, on Monday evening, Feb. 11th, eighteen clubs were heard from and the management was placed in the hands of a Committee of five, representing New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Orange and Plainfield. Due notice will be sent of route, dates and all other particulars.

EVIDENTLY the decoction known as Jersey lightning has found its way west as far as Kansas City. Witness the following "A story is told of one of the prominent wheelmen, who shall be nameless, that he borrowed a machine one Sunday for a club run. After a pleasant ride over hill and dale he took advantage of a long incline Looking back at the machine, he saw what he thought was a snake, and earnestly begged the ladies the loan of their buggy whip to drive the reptile away."

THE FEMALE RACERS IN NEW YORK.

Up to and including Wednesday night the female riders' score at Madison Square Garden was as follows: Stanley, 306 miles; Von Blumen, 292; Armaindo, 132; Woods, 248; Brown, 139; Oakes, 238; Baldwin, 291; Hart, 234; Snallor, 256; Lewis, 247; McShane, 178.

ROAD IMPROVEMENTS OF GEORGIA.

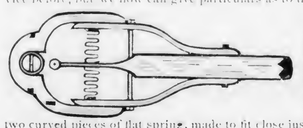
I KNOW the leaders of the good work of having the roads of this country improved will be pleased to learn of the success with which we are meeting down here. A copy of the following letter has been sent to the ordinary of each county, and published in the leading papers of the State:

"The following is a call for a Road Congress:

We, the undersigned, citizens of Georgia, being deeply impressed with the imperative necessity for a permanent system of permanent improved common or public roads in the entire State, hereby unite in a call for a Road Congress, to assemble in the city of Atlanta, on Wednesday, May 22d, 1889, to consider the subject of improved roads in all its aspects and bearings in order to digest and formulate a judicious and economical system. We hereby extend a cordial invitation to every county in the State to send up the most enlightened and practical citizens to take part in the deliberations of the Congress. The basis of representation to be double the number of representatives each county has in the General Assembly. We urge each county to meet and select representatives to the Congress at an early day."

In another part, the ordinary is asked to answer the following questions, that the total costs, etc., may be footed up:

The following are the questions to which answers are desired: Number of miles of dirt roads in county.—Number of days consumed in working the road. Number of hands and cost.—Cost of keeping up bridges.—Number of misdemeanor convicts.—Number of felony convicts.—Cost of Courts.—Rate of county taxation.



Judge Wiley delivered the above to Clerk W. G. Smith, of the Board of County Commissioners, to furnish the necessary information and forward it to Atlanta.

The proposed Road Congress is an excellent move, that should be heartily encouraged, and the Congress should be largely attended. The subject of good roads is a great question, one full of importance and of vital interest to every community and its people.

RAMBLER.

THE CORRECTING OF THE SENSITIVE STEERING OF SAFETIES.

WE have before us several letters asking, to quote one correspondent, "If any plan has yet been adopted by which the extreme sensitiveness of the rear driver has been overcome." While we think use will reduce this objection to a minimum, and while the majority of the modern and later wheels can, after a little practice, be ridden without hands, still the objection does exist among some, and we therefore take pleasure in presenting a cut and description of a device patented by A. J. E. Readio, of Providence, R. I. We have had occasion to refer to this device before, but we now can give particulars as to the claims of the inventor.

The cut, together with the following, we trust will make the idea plain. It consists of a U-shaped clutch, which is attached by a pivot to the steering head just over the front fork, and in front of the cone bearing steering centres. Attached to the backbone, a few inches back of the neck are two curved pieces of flat spring, made to fit close just inside the aforesaid U-shaped piece. From the inner surface of each of these two pieces of S springs, are spiral springs, one end of which presses against the inner surface of the S. spring, and the other ends on each side of the neck.

To the V-shaped clutch is attached a rod similar to a brake rod. This extends up to the handle, and a regular brake lever is attached to work on opposite side of that used by brake. When not in use the U-shaped clutch is lifted by means of the lever so that it disengages the parts attached to backbone, but when it is desired to use the device the lever is pushed down, the two parts engage, and the machine at once becomes automatic in steering. The springs are still enough to hold the machine in a straight line, and yet not still enough but that it will easily obey the rider's touch, and on passing over obstacles this gives sufficiently to insure a proper balance. To those who are annoyed at the sensitive steering of their safety this device is worthy of notice. It is quickly fitted by any mechanic. It can be attached to almost all the different makes. For further particulars address Arthur J. E. Readio, Pawtucket, R. I.

THE Western Arms Co. of Chicago, will handle Singer, Coventry, New Rapid and Star Machines. This concern has opened a riding school for both ladies and gentlemen and on each Friday from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M., Temple gives an exhibition of trick riding.

THE Warwick Perfection Cycles will be handled for the Northwest by C. F. Stokes, 203 Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill., for the Southwest by D. Snitzer, 1012 Olive street, St. Louis, Mo., this gives Kennedy Child two of the finest depots in the country, and judging by the way the factory at Springfield is running night and day the wily K. C. is putting in big business.

THE STANLEY SHOW, 1889.

[SOME of these cuts used in this article have been reproduced from Bicycling News, drawn by George Moore.—ED.]

WHEN your instructions came, MR. EDITOR, some weeks ago, to send you a general article on the great show and warning me to confine myself to the description of of articles and novelties of real practical value and of interest to American readers, I imagined that I appreciated that I had a job cut out for me not easy of performance. I say I appreciated it. Well I will say I thought I appreciated it fully, but I confess my thought fell far short of the realities, and when for the first time I entered the Crystal Palace and saw the enormous display of machines and accessories, my courage failed me. How to separate the old from the new, the useful from the curious, or in other words, the wheat from the chaff.

A ray of light in the instructions you sent me to find out the general trend of the cycle trade and the public demand, relieved me somewhat, and on those lines I determined to pen my report. As a preamble, it may be of interest to your readers to know that twelve years ago the Stanley Club first put forth the idea of holding an annual exhibition of cycles. Those who, with me, can look back on all the annuals from the first to the present cannot but be overcome with the thought of the magnitude of the show of 1889 as compared with the initial affair. The Stanley Show has become a fixture, and is now looked on by the trade and the riding public as a necessity.

The first impression that strikes the visitor is the fact that the safety is now considered on a par with the ordinary, so far as a recognized demand by the riders is concerned. A closer and more detailed examination of the exhibits show that the principal of the diamond frame in its different forms is almost universally adopted. Quite a number of new devices (and a good many old ones modified) to take up vibration were noticed. Some of them appeared to have merit, and some of them the less said the better.

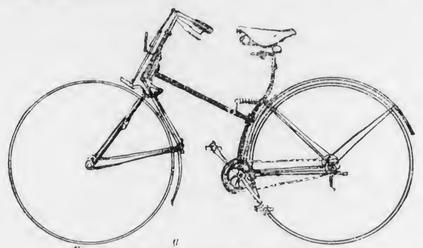
Last year a comparative few of the manufacturers showed ladies' bicycles, but this year not a single manufacturer of any prominence but that has a pattern of this style of machine to exhibit. Another feature in the dwarf cycles was the fact that this year, in the tandem patterns, the low loop frame suitable for the use of ladies has been adopted in a very large majority of cases. Thus our fair friends have been looked after in good shape, and I hope that the season of 1889 will see thousands of our feminine friends enjoying the use of the bicycle in its single or double form.

A strange phase of this ladies' bicycle business was that I found quite a number of manufacturers who did not have much faith in this machine as a bowling success. One prominent manufacturer expressed it by saying: "Don't think there is anything in it, but we had to get out one because the other fellows did!"

That there is to be a rush towards the ordinary built on the so called "Rational lines," is firmly believed by some. Of course your readers understand that the "Rational" is an ordinary with a large back wheel, more rake to the front forks, and plenty of space between the rubber tire and the fork head. Almost all the manufacturers recognizing the coming demand have put a "Rational" on their list. I do not follow the radicals in the matter closely, as I believe it will be as it has been, that the old ordinary and the dwarf safety will take the bulk of the patronage. The "Rational" will be used, but not to the extent that its more enthusiastic supporters believe, at least, that's my opinion.

In the matter of tricycles, the demand has reached its maximum proportion in matter of sales with other cycles, and in the future the man or woman who is after safety and comfort will, in the majority of cases, transfer their choice from the three-wheeler to the narrow gauge.

Taking into consideration the number of exhibits there are less proportionate novelties shown than ever before. The idea seems to have obtained that the correct standard of principal had been reached, and it now remains only a matter to perfect in detail the generally accepted standards. In this position I think the manufacturers are correct. I suppose I must look on the bicycle built on Rational lines as being a claimed improvement on the ordinary, but with this exception the ordinary, the safety and the tricycle have settled down to accepted forms, construction and proportions, and it leaves it only for us to please ourselves by choosing what suits us as to type, weight and the small matters of construction detail.



Among the most striking novelties in the whole exhibition, and those that attracted the most attention, were the two sociables, both on the same idea; one called the Nottingham and the other built by J. K. Starley. The riders sit over the driving wheels; the steering is done by the man. In case it is desired to change to a single, it can be done by transferring one of the saddles to a post in centre; the steering rod also to centre.

I saw an excellent saddle, shown by Mr. Leni, for ladies' use on the safety. It is a known fact that the point of the saddle is apt to catch the skirts and interfere with the rider reaching the saddle. This saddle shown by Leni is made to tip forward so that it becomes almost perpendicular, but on the rider rising up and pressing against it, it assumes its normal position and catches that way until it is desired to tip it again.

Messrs. Robinson & Price show a wheel, the tangent spoke of which may be novel to your readers. Instead of piercing the hub in the ordinary way the hub is made something like a cog wheel. These cogs instead of being bored on a line with axle are bored on a line with the hub itself, and the rim, thus the wire gets only one bend instead of a double one. In the matter of spring forks and anti-vibration devices, none seemed to attract more attention than that applied to the Victor of your Overman Wheel Co. The Coventry Machinists' Co. will present to your lady riders the Keating spring fork. Two types of spring frames are represented by the British Star and the Invicta. The Quadrant people show something which is an entirely new departure in an anti-vibrative device. Instead of having a spring frame or fork they have a spring wheel. Strictly speaking there are two wheels. The inner and smaller is built like an ordinary suspension wheel; from the felloe of this inner wheel there project spiral springs, which connect the outer felloe. Each alternate spring pulls in the opposite direction, to counteract side strain. The outer felloe holds the rubber tire. The season's test will prove the practicability of the invention. Humber & Company had the largest exhibit; then came the Coventry Machinists' Co.

"INVICTA" SPRING FRAME

Singer & Co. had a big space in the Greek Court. They show a special light machine for gentlemen and a handsome lady's machine.

The construction of the framework insures the necessary strength, while it also assists in keeping the dress away from the chain. The whole machine is of the very best quality, and is light, neat, strong, easy running and very elegant in contour. One peculiarity of Singer's exhibit is the absence of any kind of racing machine. The firm builds roadsters only. The Royal Singer safety is a special wheel which will command your connoisseur's attention.

Hillman, Herbert & Cooper had a fine exhibit in Stand No. 129, while the St. George's Engineering Co. showed their New Rapids and the toe clip in No. 30.

The Coventry lady's machine will be something new for our dear Yankee sisters to rave over. Like all the Coventry Co.'s outputs it is a gem in detail and finish. Their Swift roadsters are about the same as last year. They show a tandem for lady and gentleman or two gentlemen that will no doubt take your fancy when you see it.

SWIFT TANDEM.

The machine altogether is built on very graceful lines, one tube running from the back handle-bar to the front head. The linking of the handle-bar is very neely arranged, the handles themselves being far from the rod, and so placed that no pinching of the riders' fingers can occur. The small wheel, I may mention, reduces the length of the machine considerably, which, of course, is a great advantage.

Hillman, Herbert & Cooper will also send a lady's bicycle, so you will have a good lot to pick and choose from.

With the exception of Singer, I believe all your importers will show the "Rational ordinary."

All told there were 190 exhibitions this year. The attendance was large and general interest evident. Among the carrios exhibited was the rear-driving safety, made by Galvin Dalzell in 1818 or 1819; also the tricycle boat used by Cosswain Terry in his trip from London to Paris. Terry rode on his machine from London to Dover, then by means of canvas he transmogrified the wheel into a boat, and on his arrival on French soil he made his change back to a wheel and thus rode to Paris.

One of the novelties was the new home trainer dial. This is an enormous affair, and is subdivided to represent yards. A complete circuit of the dial by the hand registers quarter of a mile. It is a great thing for men using the home trainer and spectators who witness competition of this class.

An electric lamp was shown by Pressland, Glover & Co. The primary battery is fastened to rear of saddle, and one charging gives light for about nine hours.

The oil tight cover and lubricator shown by J. H. Carter attracted a good deal of notice, and that the device is one of more than passing merit was acknowledged by the majority who saw it. It not only copiously lubricates the chain and gear wheels but it effectually protects both chain and gear wheels from dust and mud.

Taken all in all the Stanley Show of 1889 can be counted a grand success, and a marked improvement over the shows of former years in that the manufacturers have settled down to practical and conservative methods. They have shown that the idea of novelty for novelty's sake was wrong. The striving after real and practical improvements has been earnest, the determination to discard the sensational and worthless has been sharpened. The tendency is to improve and to excel in a legitimate way, and not to startle and astonish by fantastic and impractical "novelties."

F. B. C.

It may be of interest to note the fact that at the great race at the Madison Square Garden, New York, the other day, not only were first and second prizes won on Victors but every heat in the race was won on a Victor.

MR. J. T. RYAN of the St. Nicholas Mfg. Co. of Chicago was in town last week. He reports business brisk for his line of goods. W. W. Stall represents them in Boston and New England.

MR. L. UNDERWOOD, Principal of the Powers Institute, Bernardston, Mass., has ridden his Columbia bicycles 1320 miles during the two years and a half which he owned it. A change of residence made it so that he could not conveniently ride, and he sold the machine for three-fourths of what it cost him.

New Jersey Road Bill.

The following bill has been introduced in the New Jersey Legislature.

An Act to enable Boards of Chosen Freeholders to acquire, improve and maintain public Roads.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the board of chosen freeholders of any county in this State to acquire, improve, maintain and assume full and exclusive control of any public road or roads or parts thereof in their county; that in order to acquire and assume such control in any county with power to improve and maintain the same, the said board shall cause a map to be made, or adopt a map already made, on which the principal public roads or highways of the roads or parts of roads which the said board intend to acquire and assume control of to be plainly indicated thereon, and shall file the said map, when so marked, in the office of the clerk of the county; whereupon the roads, or parts of roads, marked or indicated on the said map shall become and be known as "county roads" and shall thereafter be improved, maintained and kept in a safe and convenient condition for public use, exclusively, in the manner provided in this act. And it shall be lawful for the said boards to relinquish control of any road or part of any road so acquired and marked, and to acquire and assume control of other roads or parts of roads in the county from time to time, with the same power to improve and maintain the same; in either of which cases the said map shall be changed accordingly. In acquiring or assuming control of any public road, or relinquishing the same, the said board shall accurately describe such road in a written resolution, and file a copy thereof, certified by the clerk of the board, in the office of the county clerk, who shall record the same in a book to be provided and kept for that purpose.

2. That it shall be lawful for the board of chosen freeholders to cause the said county roads or any part thereof to be graded, paved with Telford, macadamized or otherwise improved by means of stone for a width of at least twelve feet in the center thereof, wherever such improvement may be required to keep the same constantly in good condition. All such pavements or other improvements (except repairs costing not more than one hundred dollars) shall be done under contract with said board; but no contract for any such work shall be awarded, or be valid for any purpose if awarded, unless a notice specifying the work and materials, and inviting bids or propositions to do or furnish the same shall have been published for at least three weeks, at least once in each week, in two newspapers published and circulating in the county, and representing different political parties. Every contract made for improving any county road, or part thereof, shall be based upon carefully prepared specifications of the work and materials required, to which reference shall be expressly made in the contract, and no money shall be paid for any work done or materials furnished unless the same shall be done or furnished in strict conformity to the terms of the contract and specifications. And no contract shall be awarded, or be valid for any purpose if awarded, unless the person or party whose bid or proposition is accepted shall at the time of signing the contract execute a bond to the board with sufficient surety, to be approved by the county collector, conditioned for the faithful performance of the contract. The penal sum of such bond shall be at least one-half the amount of the contract price for the work and materials. All such contracts and bonds shall be held by the county collector. The said board may give the notice aforesaid and award contracts for parts or sections of the improvements intended to be made.

3. That it shall be lawful for the board of chosen freeholders to cause a special tax to be levied, which shall not, in any one year, exceed one-fourth of one per cent of the assessed value of the taxable property in the county, or to issue bonds of the county, bearing interest at not more than five per cent per annum, to be known as county road bonds, for the purpose of raising money to pay the cost, or any part of the cost of paving, macadamizing or otherwise improving the said county roads, or any part thereof, in the manner aforesaid and for keeping the same in repair; but prior to the issuing of any such bonds the said board shall make an application to the circuit court of the county, in writing, setting forth the assessed value of the real estate therein for the purpose of taxation in the year next preceding, together with a statement of the entire debt of the county for all purposes, and of the amount of county road bonds which they propose at that time to issue; whereupon the said court shall fix a time to hear such application, whereof such notice, by publication, shall be given as the court shall direct; and at the time and place so fixed the said court shall proceed in a summary manner to investigate the accuracy of the statements contained in the said application, and shall make a certificate setting forth the assessed value of the real estate in the county for the purpose aforesaid in the year next preceding, and the total amount of the debt of the county for all purposes as found by such investigation, which certificate shall be entered at length on the minutes of the court and filed in the office of the clerk of the county; and no county road bonds shall be issued to such an amount as, in addition to existing debt, shall raise the debt of the county for all purposes above three per cent of the assessed value of the real estate therein, as such debt and assessed value of real estate are shown by such certificate; and in case any such bonds shall be issued so as to raise the debt of the county above the limit aforesaid, all such bonds so issued in excess shall be void in the hands of any person or party, notwithstanding any recitals therein, or any representations that may be made concerning the same. Such application must be repeated in case of every other proposed issue of such bonds.

4. One-third of the expense of paving or otherwise improving any county road, or any part thereof, in the manner aforesaid, shall be paid by the cities, towns, townships, or boroughs in or through which any such pavement or improvement shall be made, in amounts in proportion to the cost of any such pavement or improvement in each city, town, township or borough; but nothing herein shall be construed to exempt any county shall be, or are, laid down, and shall cause the such city, town, township or borough from liability to pay its share of the remaining two-thirds of such cost and interest. And it is hereby made the duty of the officers, boards or bodies, authorized to levy taxes for county purposes, to assess and levy upon the taxable property in the respective taxing districts of the county, such sum or sums of money as may be required, and not otherwise provided, to pay the amount of the cost of making any such pavement or other improvement or the interest thereon, that may be due, or coming due during the current fiscal year of the county, and to assess and levy upon the taxable property of any city, town, township or borough in the county, wherein any county road shall have been improved under this act, such sum or sums of money as may be required from time to time to pay the respective proportions of any such city, town, township or borough, of the amount of such cost, or to reimburse the county to the extent of one-third of the cost of any such improvement made therein, with interest. Said sum or sums of money shall be assessed, levied and collected at the same time in the same manner, and by the same officers that other taxes for county purposes are or may be assessed, levied and collected; and when collected the same shall be paid over to the collector of the county to be applied exclusively to the objects or purposes for which the same were levied.

5. That the board of chosen freeholders shall employ a competent engineer, at a reasonable compensation, to survey the county roads, or any part thereof, when necessary, to prepare specifications for pavements or other improvements intended to be made in pursuance of this act, and to supervise the work and materials used. After such improvements, or any part thereof, shall have been completed, the same shall be kept in repair at the expense of the county, and some competent person shall be employed by said board annually, at a fixed compensation, to inspect the condition of the county roads, from time to time, so far as the same may have been improved; and such inspector shall have power to cause necessary repairs to be made to the pavements or other improvements made under this act; provided, the cost of any of such repairs shall not exceed fifty dollars, and not more than one hundred dollars shall be expended by the inspector in any city, town, township or borough in any year. Repairs costing more than fifty and not more than one hundred dollars shall be made only by authority of a committee of the said board, and repairs costing more than one hundred dollars shall only be made by direct authority of said board. All bills or claims for making repairs, or furnishing materials therefor after being approved by the inspector, shall be rendered to the said board by the parties who performed the work or furnished the materials used or to be used; and no bills or claims for repairs shall be paid unless the same shall have been made strictly according to the provisions and directions of this act. The inspector immediately after his appointment shall give a bond to the said board in the penal sum of two thousand dollars to be approved and held by the county collector, conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties.

6. All roads marked out or indicated as county roads on the map or maps mentioned in the first section of this act, shall be kept in repair by the local authorities of the cities, towns, townships or boroughs in and through which they extend, until such roads shall have been actually improved by the board of chosen freeholders of the county, as provided in this act; but in cases where part or said roads shall have been improved under this act only the unimproved part shall be kept in repair by such local authorities.

7. That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

TESTIMONIAL.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 26th, 1889.

Frank Fairbairn:

Dear Sir—Your knit goods have given me the most satisfaction of any bicycle clothing I have tried, the elastic fit giving such freedom to the limbs, and the durable qualities they have shown, make them most desirable. I could not go back to cloth goods, after these, with any comfort.

I shall wear them the coming summer, for business and pleasure, and wife says the old pair of breeches she cut down for my boy are the best wearing goods he has had yet; outlasted three pair of cloth ones already, and still going. I wore them two years myself. Yours, E. N. BOWEN.

One-Third Actual Size.

This oiler, as the cut shows, consists of a tube for holding the oil, fitted at the top with an Acme tip, which can be unscrewed when it is desired to refill the oiler. A cap of the same diameter fits over the top. Only throws a small quantity of oil at a stroke. Best and neatest in the world. Handsomely nickel plated. For sale everywhere, or sent by mail on receipt of price, 50 cents each. CUSHMAN & DENISON, 144 and 146 Greenwich street, New York.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 5, 1888.
H. B. SMITH MACHINE Co.

Dear Sirs—I gave that 39-inch Star Safety a good test Sunday, Nov. 30th, by riding 110 miles by way of Fall River and New Bedford, a very hilly and sandy road. I only made one forced dismount all day. Within 30 minutes after the machine was out of the crate I made 7 miles on our "Ocean Drive" in 26 minutes in a head wind, beating previous record by 31 seconds. I went to College Hill, Providence, on a borrowed 39-inch Star the day of the races, Sept. 25th, and beat the previous record of six times, and rode it 10 times without any trouble, and did not change the power hooks. I have not walked up any hill since I got my Safety. I think the 39-inch Star Safety goes as far ahead of the larger sizes of the Star, as the larger sizes (42, 45 and 48) go ahead of the "crank" for speed, comfort and safety on the road. In fact it is the best wheel I ever rode, and I have ridden everything from an ordinary with the backbone off, to a quadricycle. Yours truly,

W. VAN WAGONER.

H. B. SMITH MACHINE Co.

Dear Sirs—My new 39-inch Star arrived yesterday, and it is a beauty. I gave it a good trial, and find that for the rough, sandy, hilly roads which surround this place, it gives me better satisfaction than my 45. As to speed I think there is little if any difference. Truly yours,

FRANK C. BLODGETT.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 19, 1888.
H. B. SMITH MACHINE Co.

Gentlemen—Your 1888 39-inch Star Safety is the finest road machine I ever placed my anatomy over. It not only has a habit of crawling to the top of the steepest hills, but racks old Father Time's bones in a most distressing manner, as he endeavors to keep pace with what must seem to him a flying shadow. As for its hill climbing powers, when I tell you that the hill climbing record you published in the "Mechanic," in which I was particularly interested, as I was a passenger at that time, was made by 125 pounds of skin and bones with wooden lungs, you will see that it was the machine and not the thing that rode it that took the record.

If you will notice the Providence Journal of Sept. 15, you will see that the Star Safety ran away again from me and made me break the hill record again Yours,

H. F. CAMPBELL.

Dear Sirs—Inclosed find check to balance account for 39x24 Star. It is the best wheel I ever rode. Have surmounted hills that no one ever thought could be ridden, and generally confirmed the other safety riders as to speed as well. Yours truly,

L. P. THAYER.

For twelve years the Columbia cycles have been upon the market. For twelve years they have occupied a front rank position. Twelve years of statistics show that there are more Columbias in use in the United States than all other makes of high grade machines combined. For twelve years the Columbias have stood the test of the road and the path. For twelve years the best mechanical experts in America have been unanimous in their unsolicited statements that the Columbia machines are the best made of cycles, and reach as close to the mechanical perfection line as modern mechanical skill has been able to go. It is easy to make claims, and printed claims may be as thin as the ink which covers the paper. The broad claim made for the Columbia cycles is that they are in every respect the finest made, and the most durable machines which modern mechanical skill has produced, and this claim is backed by twelve years of experience and by the opinion of unprejudiced mechanical experts and the majority vote of American wheelmen. The Columbia Catalogue should be in the hands of every wheelman. It is free to everybody. POPE MFG. CO., Boston, New York, Chicago.

The advantages of Trigwell's Ball Head to the Ordinary is even surpassed in its application to a Safety (in fact it seem Specially Designed for a Safety), for by its rigid bearing, and not needing adjustment, it keeps the front wheel steady, and obviates sensitive steering, which fault all Safeties have had.

BOSTON, 22 FEBRUARY, 1889.

LEAGUE OFFICERS FOR 1889-90.

CHARLES H. LUSCOMB, of New York, President.
James R. Dunn, of Ohio, First Vice President.
Sanford Lawton, of Massachusetts, Second Vice President.
W. M. Brewster, of Missouri, Treasurer.

WE must ask the forbearance of several of our regular correspondents this week, in that the full report of the National Assembly meeting crowded out their letters.

BY the vote to credit and return to Divisions which have contributed sums to the National body, all excess over the fifteen cents per capita which said Division may have paid in, it will give Massachusetts the sum of about $150. Mr. Brewster on behalf of Missouri seemed to think that his Division would refuse to accept the rebate, and Mr. Cook on behalf of Rhode Island also stated that he believed his Division would be willing to let the matter of rebate pass. We believe that the idea of refunding any such excess is a just one and we were glad to see it prevail.

WE present to our readers this week a full report of the meeting of the National Assembly held in New York last Monday. It was a harmonious, business-like event, scarcely a ripple of excitement stirred the placid flow of the debate.

The election and choice of President, over which we opined there might arise a "sma', wee bit of a breeze," was accomplished in manner decorous to the last degree. The incoming President, Mr. Luscomb, impressed us as being a man eminently fitted to act as a presiding officer. His rulings and decisions were given quickly and correctly, and his method of dispatching business was refreshing to those who dislike drag. En passant we desire to commend the Credential Committee, of which Dr. Emery was the Chairman, for the manner in which that committee discharged its duties.

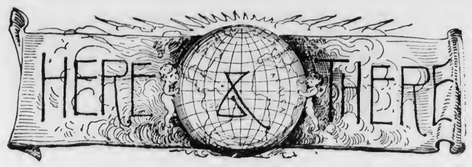
The report read by Mr. Luscomb, in which he deals with that celebrated circular incident, is a strong one, and will be read with the greatest interest by all the members, and especially those of the New York division. Mr. Luscomb takes the bull by the horns: h makes no excuses, but he does explain, and his explanation will no doubt throw an entirely different light on this matter, in the minds of those who condemned Mr. Luscomb's actions. We ourselves were among that number.

The assessment of fifteen cents per capita voted by the Assembly, has to a certain extent been compelled by the fact that the renewal date has been extended to April 30 this year. By this change the members get just so much more advantage out of the League. In other words, they get one year and four months' membership for the usual yearly fee. We therefore do not anticipate that there will be much, if any, objection to the assessment, as the amount is so small and the extending of time so proportionately large, that fair minded members can scarcely protest.

A CYCLE TRACK AND ATHLETIC GROUNDS FOR BOSTON.

THAT Boston is at last to have a cycle track and athletic grounds worthy of the hub of the cycle world, is now a settled thing. The idea has been a pet one of Col. Pope's for some time but now the idea has taken concrete form and so Col. A. A. Pope together with Henry D. Hyde, Asa P. Potter, G. T. W. Braman, Henry M. Whitney, Irving A. Evans, Samuel Brown, Isaac F. Burr, A. D. S. Bell, Colonel Greenleaf and others have bought lands and will go ahead. All are well known capitalists, and include in their number the controllers of the West End Land Co. Certainly the names of the promoters is a good guarantee that business is meant.

The site selected, covers an area of 1,000,000 square feet, and is situated but a very short distance from the terminal of the new Harvard bride, which is to connect Boston at the foot of West Chester Park with Cambridge at Front street. The property is bounded by Front street, Pacific street and Sidney street. The exact plans have not yet been decided on, but in general they will contain a half mile bicycle track, built on the most approved scientific principals, a running path will be laid out inside the half mile track. Inside this, a base ball ground will be laid out. Tennis grounds will also be a feature. The seating capacity of the grand stand will be about 15,000. Exact particulars and plans will be presented to our readers just as soon as the management have fully decided. It is the intention of the company to make these grounds the most complete and best equipped of any in the country, if not in the world. The location is handy to Bostonians and Cambridge people alike, and will be easy and quick of access by either horse cars or cycle. Success to the new venture!



KANSAS CITY. "ERRATIC QUILL."

THE belated wayfarer this morning heard merry music issue from the United Wheelmen's club house, and it was music that made them stop and listen. Within the club house Herman Perlet, musical director of the Duff Opera Co., sat before the piano, while around it, mixed in with a score of cyclers, sat and sang six of the leading male members of the company. The boys, some thirty strong, had just been honoring the cycling musical director with a theatre party, and were now capping the pleasures of the evening by entertaining the aforesaid gentlemen at the club. That dry and good-natured comedian, Harry Brown (the Pasha, Prince Lorenzo, et al.), was there, and so was genial Will Rising (the impecunious European), Willet Seaman (the Beggar Student), Jacob Shopp, the Russian basso, Jas. Lackaye, and Chas. B. Stoughton. It was 2 A. M. before the party broke up, but those of our neighbors who were awakened from their slumber could hardly feel otherwise than pleased, as the general verdict was that the singers excelled their stage efforts of the preceding hours.

THE United Wheelmen are getting there with both feet. As an illustration I cite the fact that eight applications for membership have been filed during the past ten days. New members are coming in rapidly, and with hardly a solitary exception they are men of mature age and the best of social standing. In short, our membership is one that we are justly proud of.

OUR next ladies' reception will take place Thursday, March 7, and will outdo our last. The entire reception room will be canvassed hereafter, giving room for five "sets," queensware, etc., purchased, instead of hired, and various other details improved. These receptions are for members and their lady friends only.

AS to out-door sport—we've had it all winter. Captain Ellis calls a run for each Sunday, and almost every Sunday has brought sunshine, good roads, and a goodly delegation to enjoy them.

NEW YORK PICKINGS.

We were in New York on Monday and we picked up a few pointer as to what was going on. Among the things we heard that pleased us most was that E. J. Shriver through his complaints to the Park Commisioners has caused so much dissatisfaction with the way 72d street has been macadamized, that he has received a letter from them (the Park Commisioners) asking him to take a hand in the construction of the remainder of it, and to see that it is properly contructed. This is a big victory and should be made much of.

The New York Bicycle Club are very much alive, if we are to judge by the above and the following little scraps of news we gleaned relating to that club. It sent its president, E. J. Shriver, to Albany, on Tuesday, 12th inst. to appear before the Committee on Banks to protest in the name of the N. Y. B. C. against the repeal of the half holiday law. No other wheelmen or association appeared to protest. This same club has also authorized its president to appear before the Committee on Cities, favoring the passage of the bill to pave the Boulevard with asphalt.

"I won't go to bed until I get that $500"; thus quoth the wrathful Lottie Stanley, the winner of the woman's race held at Madison Square Garden, New York, last week and Lottie was very mad when she said it. The plucky little cyclienne avers that manager Troy promised to pay her $500 if she won the race and in order to get the prize she rode "all out" and to the bitter end. On the other hand manager Troy said he had a contract with Stanley to ride for a salary of $25 per week. Stanley retorts that Troy broke that contract any way, and that the offer of $500 to the winner was made and she proposed to have the ducats. She would not be put off with a "no" and so after a prolonged session commencing Sunday night and ending Monday at four o'clock in the morning, manager Troy capitulated to the stormy, tearful, persistent little Lottie and he promised to pay her the $500, and so Lottie went to bed.

One of the most pleasant incidents of our trip to New York was the meeting and renewing the acquaintance of Louis Harrison ex-Captain of the Boston Club an ex-Editor of the World. In response to an invitation in company with C. S. Howard and W. I. Harris we took dinner with Mr. Harrison on Monday evening and the few hours we spent with him were all too short in which mutually to recount the history of the past, since Mr. Harrison left the sombre town of Boston, for the glittering capital of the world. Personally we found him just the same jolly good natured brilliant fellow that we bid goodbye to many moons agone; a trifle more flesh to the square inch than he used to carry perhaps, but he was the same "good old Louis" as in the days of yore.

In our exuberance of good feeling we came near putting our foot in it when we were about to ask Prial, "how is your circulation old fellow?" As it was only our intention to ask after the condition of his health, it would have been awkward under the circumstances if we had put it that way; wouldn't it?.

Prial was "werry" glad he did not referee the female cycle race.

W. I. Harris and wife ride a tandem.

NEW YORK AND NEW JERSEY.

"JONAH."

As the spring riding season looms up on the horizon the road scorchers in the clubs are beginning to realize that the interment of the famous Alphabetical Association was unwisely premature. The regret is pretty generally expressed that it was not at least allowed to continue in name, until some big head arose from the cycling wiseacres to suggest some plan whereby the competitions for the cup, that produced the greatest road races the country ever saw, might be continued into indefinite futurity. But now the cup has been deeded in fee forever to the Kings County Wheelmen, and future contests, if there be any, must be run under a new association. There is an urgent demand that such an organization be started immediately. Will not some one now move to reconsider my motion made in other columns, some time shortly before the obsequies of last fall, that one of two plans be adopted? Either let there be a convention of clubs called and a national association formed, with championship meetings spring and fall in various convenient districts of the country; or let the clubs hereabouts form a new organization, purchase a trophy, and throw open the contests to teams from all athletic and bicycle clubs, a good round entrance fee being charged to defray expenses. It need cost the organizers nothing, for I am sure the dealers could be induced to put up the trophy. As to competitors there need be no fear, for with all the clubs in the country to draw from and the strong teams now in existence in the athletic clubs hereabouts the K. C. W. would not have to go out into the highways and hedges to hunt up toemen worthy of their steel. Are there no enthusiasts to start the ball rolling?

For once a professional bicycle race has been made to pay in New York. Even though the exterior attractions of femininity and beauty have had to be added, the success speaks well for the growing interest in the wheel. The wheelmen patronized the race well, the Manhattan and Kings County boys being prominent as "boomers."

A sturdy little lump of flesh on a rowing machine has been attracting crowds to Spalding's window on Broadway for a fortnight. Four hours, or more, a day of hard sliding and pulling, are putting Fred Coningsby, the midget conquerer of Eagle Rock, in great shape for some early tussle with that famous hill.

All the dealers are in high good humor over the season's prospects. The safety craze, which has attacked this neighborhood in a violent form, will be their bonanza. Said the manager of one of the big firms, also a prominent rider, to me the other day: "I shall have to take to my light roadster again. If some of the old riders are not seen on ordinaries we shall have no more sale of them. I am calculating to sell three safeties to every ordinary this year."

The Wheelmen's Bowling League was an excellent idea, and has done much to promote the fraternal relations between the clubs. Comparatively low scores and even inexcusable absenteeism in several instances should not discourage. Novices are never experts and can't expect to be. Let the cycling bowlers persevere, and in a season or two they will have a League that will produce as big records and arouse as much public interest as the famous one of the amateur athletes. Hudson County should prove winners, as they had the advantages of a draft from the Palma and Jersey City teams of the Athletic League.

PORKOPOLIS NOTES.

"STAR."

So your Pennsylvania correspondent rejoices that I have been "sat upon" by the New Haven man, does he? Ah, "Ariel," how unkind! A cap is for utility and not for show? Then why not get a jockey cap and be done with it? You would then have utility with a big U, and no mistake. The claim that the League cap affords more protection to the eyes than one with a straight visor is a mistake, and will not hold good. The straight visor is objected to on the ground that such caps are worn by messengers and horse-car drivers; but isn't the drop visor cap worn by brewery employees, members of that "Leedle German Band," and the recent immigrant from "Vaterland?" You pays your money and you takes your choice. The cry of "utility" reminds one of the time when certain of our wheelmen were wont to ride up and down Race street with nothing on above their waists but dilapitated cotton undershirts. They were going in for utility with a vengeance. Because the employees of certain corporations wear caps that look like stew pans is no reason for objecting to a properly shaped cap with a straight visor. The C. B. C. have a large photo. of President Kirkpatrick to which they point with pride, and on his head is a cap with a straight visor, and his election to the office he now holds was no doubt due in a large measure, to the stylish and commanding appearance it gave him.

Why should wheelmen regret the burning of a brewery in St. Louis? There are unfortunately too many of them left as it is.

The sadly Maim-ed Piper seems to have recovered from Cupid's wound, for almost every day he may be seen riding an ordinary on the asphalt streets.

A number of our local wheelmen took advantage of the delightful weather on the first and second Sundays of this month and took runs to Clifton, Walnut Hills, Linwood, and other places.

In order to insure promptness in the attendance on club runs, the C. B. C. intend, during the coming season, to compel each tardy member to wear a League cap for a day. They believe this will prove an effectual remedy for irritating delays.

After spending two years in investigating the merits of the different types and makes of machines, Charley Allen, much to the surprise of every one, has finally purchased a safety. It is so light, he says, that he can lift it with one finger. Dr. Green and Mr. Bennett had better look to their laurels, for Charley says he intends to do some lively road riding during the coming season.

On Saturday, Feb. 16, the silvery tongued Marqua participated in an amateur minstrel performance on Price Hill. Twenty-seven of the C. B. C. were there in a group near the front, and just as he finished singing "I Believe it, for my Mother Told me so," they sent up by the usher, an elegant plush case, and when Sweet William opened it and saw the golden axe embedded in the folds of satin, he exclaimed, "Oh, Hel-en," and his blushes could be seen in spite of the burnt cork.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

The Cyclist takes exception to our asking for further particulars in regard to that alleged record of 2.18 1-3 on a Triplet. We have before us the Cyclist containing the bare announcement, and stating that full particulars would appear in the following issue. Nothing further was said, and so we still hunger for facts as to whether the performance was "Ah Fongish" in its nature.

Lottie Stanley covered 624 miles 2 laps at Madison Square Garden last week. Von Blumen came next, but 32 miles behind. Armaindo wasn't in it.

There were 79,365 visitors to the Stanley Show. Over 1000 machines were exhibited, 30,000 square feet were occupied and it took three miles of red cloth to cover the stands.

The Kentons of Covington, Ky., have a real skeleton as one of the ornaments [?] of their new club rooms. The skeleton was found there in a closet when the club took possession.

The Cambridgeport (Mass.) Club had a donation party last Thursday. The lady friends were invited, and the club was the recipient of many handsome presents from its fair friends.

A Lowell, Mass., exchange thus comments: "Though the distaff has been superseded by modern machinery, the bicycle race for ladies shows that women retain their ancestral affection for the wheel."

History repeats itself. The papers (of New York this time) are discussing the question as to which is correct, cycler or cyclist and so the musty chestnut becomes a live question once again. Will some one shoot it?

To Colonel Pope and other enterprising gentlemen connected with the West End Land Co. will Boston cyclists and athletes be indebted for the possession of a splendid track and superbly appointed athletic grounds.

Mr. John B. Seward, "of Boston," rather took the meeting by storm in New York last week, by his protest and correction as to the use of the words "trousers," "knee breeches" and "pants!" as applied to the leg gear of the cyclist.

Mr. Isaac B. Chase, of Portland, Me., had the honor of being the first to introduce the bicycle to the inhabitants of Guadeloupe, W. I. When Mr. Chase and his bike appeared all the inhabitants of that district just took a day off to see him ride.

Racing in Omaho is booming. In a race of 50 miles between Senator Morgan and Charles Ashinger, the latter won. Morgan had a bad fall. Among the future fixtures the "lady" bicyclists are booked, and also a race between cowboy bicyclists. Jack Prince is a large bow-wow, in Omaha nowadays.

The California Road-racing Association is composed of eight wheel clubs, one each from Oakland, Stockton, Los Angeles, Pasadena and San Jose and three in San Francisco. During the present month the members of the different clubs will select delegates, who will form the association for 1889 and elect their own officers.

Mr. Walter Collins, President of the Star Club of Cleveland, Ohio, writes us, "I see by last weeks World that the Star Wheel Club of Cleveland, O., have disbanded. Please correct, and say that a meeting was held to discuss the question, but by an almost unanimous vote concluded to continue the organization. We will still "twinkle." I think the report emanated from some one maliciously inclined."

C. H. Plumb, of 908 Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, writes us as follows: "On inauguration day, 4th March, we shall have a stand in front of our place eleven feet above the ground (back seats raised) seating about twenty-five people, with no trees to obstruct the view in front, and all conveniences. We are just midway between the Capitol and Treasury, and can guarantee entire satisfaction. Seats will be $2." For further particulars address Mr. Plumb.

The introduction of the vices of "civilization" among the savages has always been a source of regret to the humanitarian, but the very acme of refined cruelty is reached if the following item is true: "Thomas Stevens, the bicyclist, who has gone to Central Africa, takes two dozen Waterbury watches with him to present to the chiefs." Mr. Stevens was always prolific in expedients, and we can imagine the machialvelianism which suggested the scheme of giving a Waterbury to a troublesome and war-like chief, and allowing him to expend his energy and exhaust his physique by winding this modern instrument of torture.

W. WINDLE ON THE LOAFING QUESTION AND ITS REMEDY.

We took occasion to write Mr. W. Windle, asking for his opinion on the matter of loafing, and how to prevent the same. Mr. Windle's reply is brief and to the point. Handicapping seems to be the panacea for the existing evil from Mr. Windle's standpoint, and we agree with him, but we must differ with him in that it is necessary to have a racing man to do the handicapping. The element of prejudice and self-advancement might enter too largely into the racing man's judgment to be entirely safe. The best hadicappers of England are by no means the most prominent racing men:

Editor Bicycling World: Yours of the 4th at hand. I don't believe that loafing can be prevented in a scratch race. To get fast time, managers should have handicap races, give very good prizes, and have some one that knows how to do the handicapping. I don't believe that any one but a racing man can make proper handicaps—one that has raced with the men, and he knows invariably just about what condition they are in and how fast they can ride. Time limit races are not a success in my opinion. Yours truly, W. Windle.

Millbury, Mass., Feb. 5, 1889.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE LEAGUE OF AMERICAN WHEELMEN,

HELD AT GRAND UNION HOTEL, NEW YORK, FEB. 18, 1889.

The corridors of the Grand Union Hotel were filled with cyclers on Monday A. M. from all parts of the country. No sooner did a delegate or member present himself at headquarters for the first time, than he was the especial mark of attention from the hands of "managers" of the two candidates. The attention was intensified when the said delegate was known to carry in his "inside pocket" a good fat package of proxies.

A sharp and careful canvas showed that Luscomb had a clear lead of from 20 to 30 votes unless something unexpected turned up to switch the vote over to the Pennsylvania candidate. Mr. Jessup's friends claimed that they could count as certain 35 votes, and that there were others that were uncertain which they hoped to be able to scoop. There is no doubt but that a good many delegates went on to New York with a decided leaning towards Mr. Jessup, but the arguments advanced by the other side evidently proved too potent, and a final canvas on Monday just before the meeting convened, showed that Mr. Jessup was losing ground.

At 10.30 President Kirkpatrick called the meeting to order and read the following report:

PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

To the National Assembly L. A. W.: As President of your organization for the past two terms, and in closing my administration I beg leave to submit the following:

I congratulate you and the League at large upon the harmony and peace which has prevailed, and upon the quiet and effective work that has been done. This result has been attained largely through the adoption by the recent administration of what is known as the cabinet method of administering our affairs, by which is meant that as President I have undertaken no important measure without first seeking the advice and opinions of the Secretary, Treasurer, my associates in the Executive Committee, and the Chairmen of the national committees. This has resulted in greatly improved plans, in a community of interest, and in thorough harmony in all our work. This plan has, in my opinion, proven a great success, and I heartily recommend it to him, whom, you in your judgment, may elect to succeed me.

We have been criticised somewhat from time to time with that ancient query, What has the League done? On this point I ask you to remember that two years ago the organization came to us heavily in debt, with the Bulletin a regularly losing venture. From that day until this the great point of concern has been to so husband our resources and income as to make ends meet. The League has not done much in the way of new and progressive work, simply because we have not seen the time during the past two years when we felt we had a single dollar to spare. Much might have been and much would have been done, had we had the money necessary for such work. We call attention to the fact that a year ago an arrangement was affected that secures to the League all the necessary features of the Bulletin to every member not only without cost to the organization but actually at a small profit; and this contract was recently renewed for three years, with certain changes of advantage to the League.

During the time mentioned a new Constitution has been evolved and adopted—a work of no small magnitude. New By-Laws, in accordance therewith, are present at this meeting, prepared by a special committee, which By-Laws will come before you for adoption. This work has taken much time and thought, and in view of the unsettled state of affairs naturally growing out of this change, but little other new work could have been undertaken.

For the future I desire to call your attention to the fact that a change in the date of renewals has left the organization a period of four months without any income. An appeal was made last March by the Executive Committee, asking for voluntary contributions from all the divisions to provide the means for running the national organization during this intervening period. Scarcely any attention was paid to this request. Recently our Treasurer has made a similar appeal, with but slight returns. The national organization must have the means with which to meet its necessary expenses, between January 1 and May 1, 1889, and I suggest and urge that this National Assembly at this meeting levy an assessment of at least fifteen cents per member upon all the divisions, allowing such divisions as have made contributions a credit upon their assessment to the amount of said contribution.

In retiring I have to thank the members of the Board of Officers, the members of this Assembly, and through you the membership at large for the very kind and cordial treatment I have received at their hands. My term of office has been to me a pleasant one, and to your forbearance with my mistakes and your kind approval of what I have been able through my co-workers to accomplish, I have to attribute this pleasure. To my associates in office and in the committees, I have to say, sincerely, I thank you for your assistance, your labor, your criticism and your cordial support. You have been to me a source of strength at all times, and to you, far more than to me belongs any credit that may be due my administration. I wish you all God speed, feeling assured that if the same friendly, hearty spirit of co-operation is accorded my successors, the League will come to be the foremost athletic association of the world.

Respectfully submitted, T. J. KIRKPATRICK.

New York, Feb. 18, 1889.

The nominations were then in order and Mr. Geo. R. Bidwell presented the name of Mr. Charles H. Luscomb of New York. Another nomination was then made by Mr. D. K. Trimmer, and he in fitting words presented the name of Mr. George A. Jessup of Scranton, Pa. Mr. Brewster, on behalf of the Missouri Division, seconded the nomination of Mr. Luscomb, and Mr. Oliver, on behalf of the Illinois Division, seconded the nomination of Mr. Jessup. The meeting then proceeded to ballot.

The tellers, Dr. G. Carleton Brown of New Jersey, and John J. Van Nort of Pennsylvania, reported 58 votes for C. H. Luscomb and 20 votes for George A. Jessup. The Chairman then reported Mr. C. H. Luscomb elected President of the League of American Wheelmen.

President Luscomb then took the chair, and in a few terse words thanked the assembly for the honor conferred, and at once proceeded to push the work. Nominations for First Vice President were declared as the next in order of business.

Mr. Geo. S. Atwater nominated James R. Dunn, of Ohio, for First Vice President of the League.

Mr. Kirkpatrick seconded this nomination. The meeting then voted to cast one vote for Mr. Dunn. This was ordered and Mr. Dunn was declared elected.

Dr. Emery, of Massachusetts, nominated for Second Vice President, Sanford Lawton, of Massachusetts. Dr. Brown, of New Jersey, seconded the nomination, and one vote being cast by the Secretary, Sanford Lawton was declared elected to the office of Second Vice President.

Geo. E. Dow nominated W. M. Brewster for the office of Treasurer. Edwin Oliver seconded the nomination, and the Secretary cast one vote for Mr. Brewster, who was declared elected to the office of Treasurer.

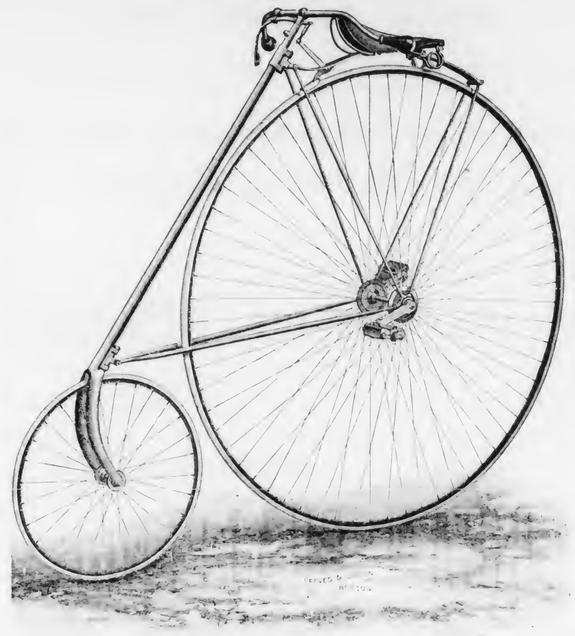
The following reports were then read:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

11948 names were on the roll of the League on the first day of January last, and to-day we have 12,100 members. Again has the organization scored a "best on record," and once more we have raised the mark at which we must aim in order to preserve our reputation for always moving forward. New York still remains the "Banner State," and she has now a membership as large as that held by the National Organization in its third year of existence.

The ten largest divisions of the Leagues have risen and fallen in the past two years as shown by the following tables:

1887.		1888.
New York	2317	New York	2467
Pennsylvania	1730	Pennsylvania	1476
Massachusetts	1328	Massachusetts	1236
Ohio	940	Ohio	946
New Jersey	865	Illinois	756
Connecticut	642	New Jersey	742
Illinois	635	Connecticut	471
Missouri	368	Maryland	465
California	344	California	401
Maryland	289	Missouri	361
PERCENTAGE.
Maryland	.160	Missouri	.0980
Illinois	.119	Massachusetts	.0930
California	.112	New Jersey	.0857
New York	.106	Pennsylvania	.0853
Ohio	.100	Connecticut	.0733



The tables speak for themselves, and tell the tale of those divisions which have gone forward and those which have fallen behind. The financial condition of the League is always an interesting one, and especially so is it when the important question of cheerful solvency or gloomy insolvency is hanging in the balance. On the first of January the League was able to pay every dollar it owed by using its quick cash assetts only, and to-day our entire assets exceed our liabilities though we have hardly cash resources enough to meet all our bills, should we be called upon to pay them at once.

On the first of February the Secretary owed to the divisions the sum of $995.33. To meet this liability, he had $467.19 in cash on hand, and $225.00 in claims on call, and this together with the $300.00 due March 1st from the BICYCLING WORLD Co., making $992.19, will very nearly pay the obligation, leaving only the deficit of February to be met. The four extension months through which we are now struggling are not very productive ones, and our expenses by far exceed our income. Our entire income for January was $38.60, and that for the present month will be even less. A deficit at the end of the financial year is inevitable, and the income for 1889-90 must be encroached upon unless the Assembly, in its wisdom, provides for the extinguishment of our debt in some other way.

During the year 1888, there was received for initiation fees and dues the sum of $14,610.50, and of this $7851.00 came from the 7851 renewals, and $6759.50 was paid in by the 4049 new members. Of the sum received, $6427.16 was credited to the divisions, and $8183.34 was the Treasurer's share. Under the new system of apportionment, provided we duplicate our membership record, the sum of $8660.50 will go to the divisions and $5950.00 will go to the Treasurer. Or if the Assembly shall vote to make but one division of dues, charging the entire dues for six months and half dues for the remainder of the year, the Divisions will gain about $500.00. The expenses of the Secretary's office for 1887 were $5687.96; for the past year the expenses were $3152.16. At the beginning of the year, the Secretary charged off $1556.81 loss on Bulletin. During the year cash to the amount of $1868 60 has been sent to the Treasurer. The card case account has shown a profit of $181.20 and there are 125 card cases now on hand.

During the year that has past we have done not a little in the way of moulding and manufacturing public opinion in favor of improved roadways. The little pamphlet issued by the Secretary has been circulated in every State in the Union. In many cases these have been sent to members of the Legislative Assemblies, to Town Committees and to Highway Surveyors. Interested wheelmen have secured the publication of the contents of this pamphlet in very many local newspapers. For such a pamphlet there had been an eager demand, and it seems to have done a good work in making not only the people but men in high position talk of highway improvement. The Secretary has had in mind the publication of several other documents relating to road improvements. The Massachusetts Agricultural College has just had prepared a very valuable essay on road making, and it will be published in its annual report soon to be issued. The President of the college and the author have written the Secretary that the League may use this essay, and have copies printed from the original type before it is thrown down. All such work as this rightfully belongs to the Committee on Highways, but a portion of the expense should be borne by the divisions that obtain the advantages which may accrue.

Some plan should be adopted whereby the road work can be superintended by the National Committee, for one central committee can work much more effectively than can a dozen or more different State committees, and at very much less expense. Economy of money in this cause at this time would be a mistake, and if there is one among us who is more of a hustler than another, he is the man for the important work. The hotel system of the League needs, and should have, improvement. Some plan should be devised whereby privileges obtained by League officials should go to League members only. As it is now, hotels give discounts to wheelmen indiscriminately, for the average hotel clerk seldom asks for the ticket. A list of hotels throughout the country should be issued by the Secretary for the benefit of the members. To do this would require a large outlay of money for printing and postage, but your Secretary is now in communication with a publishing firm that will probably issue a complete list of this kind, and distribute it free of cost to League members, getting return for its work from advertising patronage. And while the hotel system is under consideration, measures should be taken to check hoodlumism at hotels, which bids fair to assume proportions that will discredit wheelmen and the League in the minds of the non-wheeling public. A special committee on hotel work would find much to occupy its attention.

There is a distressingly long-felt want for some provision whereby a member can be transferred from one division to another. "A" joins the League from Ohio and the next month he moves to Indiana. Under the present rules he is disfranchised, for he cannot vote in his new home nor can he count on a quota of the division to which he has originally been attached. His division has received the dividend on his dues, and it seems unfair that the new division to which he has contributed nothing should extend such special privileges as the gift of road books, etc., which they have to pay cash for. And yet the League loses many workers in this way. In several cases enthusiastic members have gone from one State to another, eager to continue League work, but they find their hands tied by the rules, and they have to wait till the whirligig of time brings round another year. It would seem an easy matter to institute some such system as obtains in the charity laws common to many States. A person who gains a settlement in one town may receive aid from another town, and the town which extends the aid has for the sum expended a legal claim upon the town in which the settlement has been gained. Some such scheme as this would be of great advantage to the League in many ways.

Next year the League will pass an important mile stone in its history, and it is not too early to give our thoughts to a celebration befitting the tenth anniversary of our organization.

While we do not believe in a frequent renumbering of members we think it will be well to fill up the gaps in our numerical list at least once in ten years, and we will recommend that the numbers be closed up and the new numbers given out next year. We have now in use only 12,000 out of 21,000 numbers.

There are upon the rolls forty-eight life members. The Constitution now in force knows no such kind of membership, and the number cannot be increased. Can it and should it be decreased?

Several of the life members have expressed a desire to withdraw from the list and enter upon the annual list. The fees from these members are now locked up in a reserve fund, and this body alone has the power to turn the key. It may not be well to take any action to force members from this list, but if they desire to retire from it they should be accommodated.

The Secretary wishes to impress upon the State officials the importance of keeping headquarters posted regarding what is going on in their respective divisions. Constant inquiries come to the office, and if the Secretary is to be a reservoir of information he must be kept full. Scores of letters from officials, from State Senators and Representatives, have been received, requesting copies of road bills said to be before State Legislatures, but much writing on our part has been of no avail, and we have been unable to get a sample road bill until, by courtesy of Vice Consul Brown, the New Jersey bill was received last week, and duly published. We can believe that this bill will be well studied, for just such a standard fills the traditional long-felt want.

During the year the Secretary has received very many letters, which he has answered to the very best of his ability, or referred to others for answer, and he finds that the work of the office does not decrease with the increase of members, and that leisure moments are like angels' visits, even in these days when wheels are bathed in vaseline, and wheelmen do no pedalling.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

To the National Assembly, L. A. W.: The undersigned, the Executive Committee for the past term have to report that but few matters outside of routine work has been referred to us.

One matter, however, has come before us of considerable importance. We have succeeded in renewing the contract with the BICYCLING WORLD CO.—the provisions of which contract are familiar to you—for a period of three years, upon the same terms as during the past year, with certain changes rendering some details still more advantageous to the League. We congratulate you upon this renewal, knowing the excellent satisfaction which the WORLD-BULLETIN has given the membership the past year.

Respectfully submitted. T. J. KIRKPATRICK.

RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES COMMITTEE.

To the National Assembly L. A. W.: Gentlemen—The Committee on Rights and Privileges reports that since the last annual meeting numerous questions involving the rights of wheelmen have been presented for attention and advice.

That in several sections of the country, particularly in Illinois, Minnesota and Pennsylvania, the committee has been called upon for information, where attempts have been made to interfere by ordinance with the free use of the streets by wheelmen.

In all such cases the committee has at once responded, furnished all necessary information and stood ready to take an active part in the case, should it be desired or required. There have also been brought to the attention of the committee several cases of assault upon wheelmen, while riding on the public highways, and in answer, the committee has forwarded advice as to the proper method of procedure, with precedents and authorities.

Early in the year, your committee caused to be prepared and printed, a small pamphlet containing much useful and important information, stating the rights of wheelmen upon the public highways and parks, and giving citations and opinions from judicial decisions in various parts of the country. Copies of this pamphlet can be obtained at any time from this committee or from the Secretary, and it is believed that its compilation will prove of value to wheelmen in their contests with hostile authorities, and with drivers and horsemen who have not yet learned that the bicycle has become a power in the land.

Your committee has also been called upon to pass upon several questions of construction of our laws, both as to the selection of delegates to the National Assembly and the election of State officials, caused by the transition stage of our organization and the absence of a complete and harmonious code of By-Laws.

There is not, at present, any important litigation in which the national organization is engaged.

It is recommended to the National Assembly that steps be taken, as early as practical and politic, looking toward the presentation of bills defining the rights of wheelmen and the legal status of the bicycle and tricycle, by statute, in every State where the wheeling interest is sufficiently strong to warrant it, and in this work the active aid and assistance of the national organization should be expended and its influence concentrated.

This recommendation is made from the experience of the Chairman of the committee in New York State affairs, arising out of and in connection with the "Liberty Bill," which passed the Legislature and became a law last spring.

At the time of the earnest and combined effort made by the wheelmen, when the fate of that measure was in grave doubt before the Governor, the Chairman of this committee did not hesitate to throw all the influence of the national organization in favor of that bill. With Chief Consul Bidwell of New York, the Chairman of the State Committee, and ex-President Charles E. Pratt, of Massachusetts, the Chairman of this committee attended at Albany and rendered all the aid and assistance possible to secure the signal advantage the signature of the bill would bring to the general cause of wheeling.

The question was close to an unusual degree, and every argument possible was brought to bear upon the Executive of New York State.

While in the Governor's hands, efforts were made through all those who were supposed to be influential with him, to induce him to see the importance of the bill, and the argument least neglected and very frequently pushed, was that the signature of the bill would secure to the Governor the support of the wheelmen.

This was not the promise of an individual but the common and distinctly understood and approved representation by many loyal wheelmen, using their best diligence to secure the signature.

Whether this representation was the potential reason for its approval or not, it is impossible to know. That it was signed and against strong opposition, is a matter of history.

This brings us in proper sequence, to the action of the Chairman of this committee, who, in November last, sent to the members of the L. A. W. residing in New York, the circular letter hereto annexed, and which has caused some comment and criticism both favorable and otherwise among our members.

It is proper to say that the other gentlemen upon the Committee are not responsible for the act of the Chairman, as the circular was published and distributed without their knowledge, solely and only, however, because there was not time, between the request for our support and its issue two days before election, to discuss the propriety of the action in committee and agree upon its detail and presentation. This was a technical violation of commitee etiquette to which my associates may rightfully take exception, but the circumstances being urgent, the Chairman did not allow delay to defeat the response, and upon his own responsibility and over the signature of Chairman, to indicate that it was an officer and not a committee, personally assumed to advise the wheelmen to support one of two gentlemen, then candidates for the office of Governor of New York.

Directly prior to the election, your Chairman was specifically reminded of our promise of support made in the early spring, and our action solicited.

The call placed our organization in this dilemma: Either respond instantly, redeem our promise and gain all the advantage such proceeding would win in our coming legislation, or prove false to our representations and lose all the force of united organization for the accomplishment of future work.

It is useless to shut our eyes to facts, or to lose sight of the primary proposition, that the L. A. W. is organized for something more than parades and mutual acquaintance.

The purpose of our association is to secure and defend the legal rights of wheelmen, whenever and wherever we can, and by all lawful measures.

This is the reason for the appointment of a National Committee on Rights and Privileges.

We are not fighting play battles upon highly moral grounds.

We are organized to demand and secure our rights and when we go into the enemies country, we must employ weapons which they will feel. We can't win victories by waving banners with mottoes on them.

Last November we were confronted with a situation which forced the political question to a direct issue. Several times heretofore, we have loaded our gun, with great pomp and display and ceremony and trained it on the enemy. Now the conditions demanded, "withdraw the charge or fire the gun!" Gentlemen, I fired that gun! And I declare, with all the confidence that after thought has added to careful consideration and judgment, that it was the best thing that could have been done for the future success of the L. A. W. in legislation.

Remember, the circular was not partisan; did not advocate the principals of either political party; did not ask support for a political party; but asked the wheelmen to demonstate their strength as an independent body, whose influence must be considered as an ever present political factor, by casting their votes for a public official who had recorded himself as the wheelmen's friend, by his official act.

Establishing our position as a voting organization, makes us a power which every public official recognizes and respects; places in the hands of our representatives the most potent argument for the future legislation we seek, for it is the one which the politician most fears and wherefore most readily appreciates.

So, Gentlemen, the Chairman of the Rights and Privileges Committee saw before him, what he firmly believed to be a crisis of unusual importance to the L. A. W.: of serious injury to us if we failed to respond, incalculable benefit if we seized the vantage ground by a bold and aggressive move. Your Chairman felt that he would have been derelict to his duty, had he allowed so valuable an opportunity to have been lost through irresolution or indecision, and he acted without hesitation and threw the whole force of the League's influence, so far as lay in his power.

That the action was radical and far reaching in its nature, is unquestioned.

The motive and real reason for issuing the circular was at first generally misunderstood by our members.

I can only hope that in the calmer moments of clear thought, out of the excitement of a close contest, and with a more careful analysis of the situation and the necessity for active, aggressive and successful work by the L. A. W. you will appreciate both the necessity and the wisdom of the action; and taking a new departure, so vigorously advance the lines, that every Legislature will feel your influence, respect your demands and place upon the Statute Books such enactments that the "Road Hog" and the "Town Ordinance" shall be but the tender recollection of the infancy of wheeling.

Respectfully submitted, CHARLES H. LUSCOMB.

IMPROVEMENT OF HIGHWAYS COMMITTEE.

To the National Assembly: Owing to the impoverished condition of the League treasury and the advancement of the season, the Committee have actually done nothing this year, and so have little to report except some suggestions as to the future work of the League in the matter of improvement of Highways.

The members of the League should feel that this is their work, and that this Committee is simply an instrument of theirs. That accordingly it is their duty to furnish the Committee with information and suggestion. This Committee wishes to know what are the best approved modes of constructing roads in the different sections of the country and on different soils; and what local laws require of public officers in the matter of making and maintaining roads, and whether such laws are practically effective.

A League man should always be known as in favor of an enlightened and advanced public policy in the matter of roads, and should use his influence as a citizen, politically, by supporting candidates of similar views and favoring measurses tending towards road improvement.

The Committee should be in a position by reason of the large amount of facts within its knowledge to assist with advice and practical suggestiom those who might apply to it for that purpose.

All printed matter on the subject of highway improvement should either be prepared by this Committee or approved by it before it should be allowed to go out in the name of ths League.

In such ways as suggested above, and perhaps in others, the League of American Wheelmen may make itself felt as power tending to the material advancement of a higher civilization for the American people. Respectfully submitted, STEPHEN TERRY,
Chairman of Committee on Improvement of Highways.

TRANSPORTATION COMMITTEE.

Mr. T. F. Kirkpatrick, President, New York: Dear Sir—The report of the Transportation Committee for 1888 will cover no new work accomplished, but rather the strengthening of our position with railways over whose lines we have free transportation. Bicycles are now transported free, when accompanied by owners and at owners' risk, all over the United States. The very few exceptions are the Boston and Albany Railroad and the Pennsylvania Railroad east of Pittsburg. These are the two prominent exceptions or roads of consequence who do not accord the free transportation privilege. Each year pressure has been brought to bear on both roads, with some success in case of the Boston and Albany, which last year issued a circular reducing its prohibitory tariff to reasonable figures.

Our position was considerably strengthened by the Baltimore meet, in that we kept good faith with the Baltimore and Ohio, and other lines that had granted us favors in the past. A very desirable business was concentrated to these lines and satisfaction was expressed by them. Large meets and gatherings help to a large degree in heightening the privileges of wheelmen on railways, for in proportion to the revenue we have to offer, our League will be ministered to by transportation lines.

An evil that wheelmen have most to contend with is the attitude of baggagemen in making unauthorized collections under the explanation that the rules of their company had been changed. This matter can be corrected by wheelmen paying and taking receipt and reporting to the Chairman, or to the railroad direct. Much work of this kind has been done during the past year, and the result has been satisfactory to us, in that baggagemen have been generally corrected by the General Passenger Agents of their roads. It would be a good thing if the divisions would take this matter more in hand, and audit complaints of wheelmen for overcharges and difficulties occurring within the division. One committee, through one Chairman, is unable to properly handle these details for the whole country. It has done the best it could in the past, and yet many complaints have not been investigated, much to our regret.

With the increase in tricycles the question has many times been raised as to whether they were included in the free transportation concession for bicycles. They are not so included. In many cases, however, there has been ample space in a baggage car and the tricycles have been carried free. It has been thought best not to press this matter with railways, as by so doing the interests of bicycle-owners might be prejudiced.

We have ceased to publish the names of railways that transport bicycles free. Many times during the year we are in receipt of requests for such list, from wheelmen who contemplate journeys. Wheelmen are recommended to the ticket agents for such information, as instructions concerning bicycles have as a general thing been printed in the books of instructions to agents, which are issued by railways. The two exceptions first stated above can be memorized and routes planned via other railroads which in every case are quite as desirable and direct on the longer journeys.

It now being an established fact that free transportation is accorded wheelmen all over the United States, the maintenance of and better application of this privilege depends upon the good organization and continued work of the League. There are influences at work every year to confine bicycles to the express car. The express companies are working for it, and some railways as well.

Yours respectfully, B. B. AYRES, Chairman.
Chicago, Feb. 16, 1889.

RACING BOARD REPORT.

To the National Assembly: In preparing the annual report of the Board I have endeavored to embody all action taken since the previous report. For information regarding the work of the Board between April, 1888, and October, I have relied upon the official columns of our paper.

Nine men have been reinstated since the last report was presented: John Illston, Birmingham, England; Allie P. Steele, Franklin, Pa.; James Bearrup, Wellington, Ohio; Percy Stone, St. Louis, Mo.; W. C. Hull, San Francisco, Cal.; E. B. Burnham, Newton, Mass.; T. R. Finley, Smithville, N. J.; C. P. Adams, Springfield, Mass.; G. M. Hendee, Springfield, Mass.

The application of Burton Hulett, of Armada, Mich., for reinstatement is now before the Board.

One wheelman has forfeited his amateur status by competing with professionals: Charles V. Richardson, Bryan, Ohio.

The national championships for 1888 were located and won as follows:

Half-mile bicycle—New Castle (Pa.) Bi. Club, by Will Windle, Aug. 29; 1 19 1-5.

One-mile bicycle—Maryland Division, by Will Windle, June 19; 2 43.

Two-mile bicycle—Long Island Wheelmen, by Chas. E. Kluge, June 2; 6.51.

Three-mile bicycle—New York Division, by Will Windle, Sept. 6; 9 27.

Five-mile bicycle—California Division, by F. D. Elwell, July 4; 16 56.

Ten-mile bicycle—New York Division, by Will Windle, Sept. 4; 31 37.

Twenty-mile bicycle—Not located.

One-mile tricycle—Maryland Division, by H. L. Kingsland, June 19; 3.02.

Two-mile tricycle—Not located.

Five-mile tricycle—New York Division, by W. E. Crist, Sept. 5; 21.47.

The Board has given its attention to the rules, and three entirely new rules, two substitutes—for rules repealed—and three amendments, have been adopted. The rules were printed in the January 25th issue of the BICYCLING WORLD. We hope, by these changes, to bring the racing men more under the control of the Racing Board and race officials.

It has been suggested to the Chairman, that amateurs who race at meetings where professional events are held should be suspended. Such a movement would seem both unnecessary and unjust, and would tend to place the Racing Board of 1889 in almost as warm quarters as the old Board of 1886 found itself the first day of June. If amateurs comply with our present rules, they should not be made to suffer by reason of the disreputable acts of professionals.

There has been no claim for record since October, 1886.

During the past season very little trouble has occurred among the amateur racing men, and we trust the season of 1889 will be entirely free from the faults that have injured the sport of cycle racing. The coming season will witness a trial of the time limit rule, also the new rule governing lap races.

In place of one handicapper we will have seven, each in charge of a district. Pace making is forbidden, and ungentlemanly conduct on the track now renders the offender liable to suspension.

These rules should be given a fair trial before being condemned. It is the opinion of the Board that they have covered a few of the weak places noticed in our rules last season.

Respectfully submitted, CHAS. S. DAVOL,
Feb. 18, 1889. Chairman Racing Board.

Dr. Butler, of Buffalo, moved that an assessment of fifteen cents per capita be levied on each division, and that every division that had already contributed be credited with the amount they had so contributed. The motion was seconded. Mr. Brewster moved an amendment to the effect that in case the contribution already made by any of the division exceeded the proposed per capita assessment then, and in such cases the League should not return such excess to such division. Dr. Emery and others spoke strongly against the amendment which when put to vote was lost by a large majority. The original motion of Dr. Butler was then put and was carried. Recess was then taken until 2 P. M.

Reconvened at 2.10, with President Luscomb in the chair.

The recommendations in the Secretary's report seemed to call for some action and a motion was made that they be referred to a special committee which should consider the report and recommend any action they should deem expedient. The Committee, Messrs. Jessup, Mott and Cooley reported later in the meeting and recommended that the matter of Road Improvement be referred to Committee on Improvement of Highways.

Hotel arrangements be referred to a special committee of three to be appointed by the President and it is recommended that the Secretary be one of that Committee.

The matter of transfer be referred to Committee on Rules and Regulations.

The matter of Renumbering and Arrangements for 10th anniversary be referred to the Executive Committee.

The afternoon was spent in revising the By Laws, which were finally adopted as follows:

ARTICLE IV.

DUTIES OF COMMITTEES.

Section 1. The Executive and Finance Committee shall have the general management and control of affairs of the League while the National Assembly is not in session. Shall regulate and direct all matters of revenue, disbursement and investment, and determine all questions of detail arising in the conduct of the League. It shall have visitorial power over Divisions and Sub-Divisions and may take summary action in cases of default.

Sec. 2. To the Membership Committee shall be referred as they arise, all protests against members or applicants for membership. The Committee shall act without delay, and a decision of the Committee in the case of the applicant shall be final. The Committee may impose a penalty of reprimand, suspension or expulsion, but in the latter case an appeal may be taken to the Committee on Rights and Privileges.

(b) All fees and dues shall be returned rejected candidates.

Sec. 3. The Committee on Rights and Privileges shall consider and advise in all matters pertaining to the maintenance of the rights of wheelmen, the enactment of legislation, and the protection of the privileges of the members of the L. A. W. and may take such action in connection therewith as the circumstances of the case may require.

Sec. 4. To the Committee on Rules and Regulations shall be referred as they arise all matters relating to the By-Laws and Rules of the National Assembly.

(b) It shall arrange suitable accommodations for delegates and provide a place in which to hold the meetings of the Assembly: take charge of and become responsible for such other matters of detail as shall be necessary for the comfort and convenience of the Assembly in the discharge of its duties.

Sec. 5. It shall be the duty of the Committee on the Improvement of the Highways to promote in the public mind, through the instrumentality of the League, a sense of the utility, general economy and desirability of high class roads, and an active sentiment in their favor: to encourage legislation requiring committees and public officials to construct and maintain good roads: to collect practical suggestion and information based upon observation and experience concerning the methods of making and mending roads: to publish printed matter calculated to further these ends, distributing the same to members of the League and highway officials as in the judgment of the committee shall seem wise: and generally to perform such other duties as shall best promote the objects of the League.

Sec. 6. The Committee on Transportation shall arrange and secure special rates and agreements for the carriage of members of the League and their wheels: shall have power to represent the League in negotiation with transportation lines, and fix the routes for League travel.

Sec. 7. To the Racing Board are referred all matters pertaining to racing and the championships. They shall make all arangements for the annual championships which are held under League auspices, and shall assign such other championships as are now or may be established, to be run under the auspices of such clubs or associations as they may consider most desirable, and under such conditions as they may deem expedient.

(b) It shall be their duty to make inquiry regarding any wheelman whose amateur status is questioned, and all protests or charges shall be entered with the Chairman of the Board, who will provide for an investigation by a member or members of the Board. Pending investigation, the party against whom these charges are brought may be suspended from the track. Suspicious circumstances, which are, in the judgment of any member of the Board, sufficient to make the status of any wheelman a matter of reasonable doubt, shall be the basis of an investigation in the absence of formal protests or charges. The member or members to whom the work of investigation is assigned shall immediately communicate with the party under suspicion, either in person or by registered letter, lay all charges before him, or set forth the circumstances which lead to a reasonable doubt, and call for an answer to the charges for a removal of the reasonable doubt. Silence and failure to reply within thirty days to the charges presented, will be considered an admission of guilt. If the charges are proved, or the reasonable doubt is not removed, it shall be the duty of the Chairman to report the findings in the official organ, declaring that the party has forfeited his amateur status, and warning all amateurs not to compete with him; and such official declaration shall carry with it expulsion from the League, if the person concerned be a member thereof.

(c) It shall be within the province of the Racing Board to receive the request of any wheelman for reinstatement as an amateur, to make full inquiry, and to decide the case on its merits. A unanimous vote shall be required for reinstatement.

(d) It shall be within the province of the Racing Board to suspend from the race track, for such a time as they may deem proportionate to the offence, any wheelman guilty of unfair dealing or ungentlemanly conduct on the track, or any wheelman who competes in a race not governed by the rules of the L. A. W., or those that may be approved by the Racing Board; and any wheelman who knowingly competes with one who has been suspended will render himself liable to a like penalty.

(e) The Racing Board shall have the power to make such rules for its government, and the government of its race meetings as may be deemed expedient, and may appoint one or more official handicappers at their discretion.

(f) The Committees on Rights and Priviliges, Rules and Regulations and Memberships shall consist of three (3) members each. The Racing Board shall consist of at least five members.

(g) The Committee on Transportation shall consist of a chairman, who shall have power to add members to his committee not exceeding ten in number.

ARTICLE V.

MEMBERSHIP.

Section 1. All applications for membership shall be forwarded direct to the Secretary of the League, together with the proper fees and dues, and such information as may be required.

The League year shall be divided into two equal parts, beginning with the first day of May and November respectively. Any person making application for admission to the League shall pay in addition to the admission fee the amount of dues fixed by his Division By-Laws, if his application be between May and November, otherwise half that amount.

Objections to the admission of any candidate for membership must be made to the Secretary within two weeks after the publication of the name of such candidate, and such objections shall be considered confidential.

Section 2. In passing upon the eligibility of candidates as amateurs, the Membership Committee shall be guided by the following rule, and shall take proper pains to ascertain and determine through the Racing Board the facts in the case where objection is made to a candidate on this ground.

Section 4. An amateur is one who has never engaged in, nor assisted in, nor taught cycling, nor any recognized athletic exercise for money, or other remuneration, nor knowingly competed with or against a professional for a prize of any description.

To prevent any misunderstanding in interpreting the above, the League draws attention to the following explanation: A cyclist ceases to be an amateur by

(a) Engaging in cycling, or any other recognized athletic exercise, or personally teaching, training or coaching any person therein, either as a means of obtaining a livelihood, or for a wager, money prize, or gate money.

(b) Competing with, or pace making for, or having the pace made by, a professional in public or for a prize.

(c) Selling, realizing upon, or otherwise turning into cash any prize won by him.

(d) Accepting, directly or indirectly, any remuneration, compensation, or expenses whatever from a cycle manufacturer, agent, or other person interested in the trade or sport for cycling.

(e) This rule does not apply to the teaching of the elements of bicycling solely for the purpose of affecting the sale of a bicycle.

(f) The League recognizes as athletic exercises: Running, walking, jumping, pole leaping, putting the shot, throwing the hammer, throwing of weights, tug of war, and also rowing, sparring, lacrosse, polo, roller and ice skating.

ARTICLE VI.

PROTESTS, SUSPENSIONS, REMOVALS AND EXPULSIONS.

Section 1. Any member of the National Assembly charged by ten members of the League or two members of the National Assembly with malfeance in office or with conduct prejudicial to the interests of the League, may be suspended by the President, a copy of the charges to accompany the order of suspension.

(b) Any member of the National Assembly against whom charges have been regularly preferred shall be heard without delay before a committee consisting of the President and the Chairman of the Committees on Rights and Privileges, Rules and Regulations, Membership and Improvement of Highways, and if found guilty as specified in the charges, may be reprimanded, suspended or removed from his office.

(c) Any member found guilty under clauses [a] and [b] of this article shall have the right of appeal to the National Assembly, a majority vote of which shall be necessary to overrule the decision of the Committee.

[d] Any member of the League charged with conduct prejudicial to the organization may be protested in writing by ten members of the League; the charges and specifications to be forwarded at once to the Membership Committee.

[e] Expulsion from League Clubs shall entail expulsion from the League provided the Membership Committee concur therein.

ARTICLE VII.

Section 1. Members removing from one Division to another may obtain membership in the latter Division by filing with the Secretary of the League and the Secretary-Treasurers of both Divisions notice of intention of such change. Upon receipt of such notice the Secretary of the League shall forthwith transfer the applicant as requested and shall debit the old and credit the new Division with a pro rata share of the members' dues computed quarterly.

ARTICLE VIII.

ASSESSMENT OF DIVISIONS.

The National Assembly may at any meeting, by a vote of the members and proxies present, lay a per capita assessment upon the Divisions.

ARTICLE IX.

UNIFORM AND BADGES.

The uniform of the League shall be of cloth adopted by the National Assembly, and shall be made as follows:

The coat shall consist of a single-breasted sacque, square front, to button up close to the chin, with six L. A. W. buttons; falling collar, fitting closely around the neck; no inside lining; a facing of the same goods back to the arms and over the shoulders, double-stitched edges, and welted seams; four outside patch pockets; two small buttons on each sleeve at the underseam.

The knee breeches shall button at the bottom on the outside with three small L. A. W. buttons; reinforced seat; two hip pockets and one watch pocket; French fly; five loops for belt of same cloth on the waist-band; the V notch at back to adjust with lace eyelets.

The vest shall be single-breasted, six L. A. W. buttons, no collar, four outside pockets.

Caps: L. A. W. cloth, flat top, soft crown, silk lined, falling visor, L. A. W. buttons, black silk veleurs band, and silk cord, four ventilators in top.

Hose: Ribbed woolen, brown mixture, to match suit.

Shirt: Gray flannel, to button in front, one breast pocket.

Section 2. The emblem or badge of the League shall be a wheel, having upon its side three wings radiating from the hub to the rim at equal distances apart, and the letters "L. A. W." on the spokes between the wings.

(b) The emblems of the officials of the League shall be such as are established by the Executive Committee.

ARTICLE X.

SEAL OF THE LEAGUE.

The seal of the League shall be a fac simile of the League badge surrounded by the words "League of American Wheelmen, Organized 1880,"

ARTICLE XI.

ELECTION BY BALLOT.

The election of officers in the National Assembly shall be by written or printed ballot.

ARTICLE XII.

ADDITIONS AND AMENDMENTS.

Additions or amendments to the By-Laws may be made by the National Assembly, but no amendment shall be made unless thirty days' notice thereof shall have been given through the columns of the official organ.

An invitation was extended by Mr. Van Nort, of Scranton, Pa., to the members of the National Assembly to attend the opening of the Scranton Bicycle Club house, which event will take place Feb. 25. A vote of thanks was passed to the Scranton Club for its courtesy.

Mr. Kirk Brown, of Philadelphia, asked for a report from the Uniform Committee as to the reasons for taking the contract for making League uniforms from Wanamaker & Brown, and further if the committee had called for bids before giving the contract to Browning, King & Co. On behalf of the Uniform Committee Mr. Geo. R. Bidwell stated that the committee had been unable to prevail on Wanamaker & Brown to push the sale of the uniform in a way which was considered by the committee as proper. Further, that in the estimation of the committee and from complaints received from members the uniforms turned out were not considered satisfactory. He had used his best endeavors to have Wanamaker & Brown live up to the contract which they had inherited from John Wanamaker, but without avail. Mr. Bidwell stated that he had become tired of trying to make W. & B. do the proper thing by the members and he had insisted that the committee take decisive action and appoint some one else, which they did. The arrangement with Browning, King & Co. is not for any stated term and can be terminated at will by the League.

The complaints against W. & B. are that the suits do not fit in many cases and that the stockings furnished were not up to sample. He further stated that Browning, King & Co. were not responsible for the poor cloth which they put into the uniforms when they were official tailors before. This cloth was and is furnished by the League.

After a vote of thanks to the retiring officers, the Assembly adjourned at 4.10 P. M.

The New Mail catalogue just out is one of the handsomest issues of the year, very fully illustrated and showing the specialties of these favorite wheels. Certainly no wheel stands higher, and it has earned its place by its strictly high quality. The New Mail Safety is receiving general commendation for its good points, and Wm. Read & Sons report very large orders already booked for it. Its special points are worth looking over and every wheelman should add this catalogue to his collection if intending a purchase. It is sent free.

Hillman, Herbert & Cooper are using a chain wheel of their own design on their Premier safeties, which is remarkably strong, yet lighter than any other. The rim and teeth are of cast steel, arms and hub being punched from a sheet of steel and securely riveted on. The strain being solely in the plane of the wheel, it is impossible for it to get out of true, the entire wheel weighing about one half the ordinary cast gear.

TESTIMONIAL.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 26th, 1889.

Frank Fairbairn: Dear Sir—Your knit goods have given me the most satisfaction of any bicycle clothing I have tried, the elastic fit giving such freedom to the limbs, and the durable qualities they have shown, make them most desirable. I could not go back to cloth goods, after these, with any comfort. I shall wear them the coming summer, for business and pleasure, and wife says the old pair of breeches she cut down for my boy are the best wearing goods he has had yet; outlasted three pair of cloth ones already, and still going. I ware them two years myself. Yours, E. N. Bowen.

Testimonials.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 5, 1888.
H. B. SMITH MACHINE Co.

Dear Sirs—I gave that 39-inch Star Safety a good test Sunday, Nov. 30th, by riding 110 miles by way of Fall River and New Bedford, a very hilly and sandy road. I only made one forced dismount all day. Within 30 minutes after the machine was out of the crate I made 7 miles on our "Ocean Drive" in 26 minutes in a head wind, beating previous record by 31 seconds. I went to College Hill, Providence, on a borrowed 39-inch Star the day of the races, Sept. 25th, and beat the previous record of six times, and rode it 10 times without any trouble, and did not change the power hooks. I have not walked up any hill since I got my Safety. I think the 39-inch Star Safety goes as far ahead of the larger sizes of the Star, as the larger sizes (42, 45 and 48) go ahead of the "crank" for speed, comfort and safety on the road. In fact it is the best wheel I ever rode, and I have ridden everything from an ordinary with the backbone off, to a quadricycle. Yours truly,

W. VAN WAGONER.

Mohegan Lake School, PEEKSKILL, N.Y.
H. B. SMITH MACHINE Co.

Dear Sirs—My new 39-inch Star arrived yesterday, and it is a beauty. I gave it a good trial, and find that for the rough, sandy, hilly roads which surround this place, it gives me better satisfaction than my 45. As to speed I think there is little if any difference. Truly yours,

FRANK C. BLODGETT.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 19, 1888.
H. B. SMITH MACHINE Co.

Gentlemen—Your 1888 39-inch Star Safety is the finest road machine I ever placed my anatomy over. It not only has a habit of crawling to the top of the steepest hills, but racks old Father Time's bones in a most distressing manner, as he endeavors to keep pace with what must seem to him a flying shadow. As for its hill climbing powers, when I tell you that the hill climbing record you published in the "Mechanic," in which I was particularly interested, as I was a passenger at that time, was made by 125 pounds of skin and bones with wooden lungs, you will see that it was the machine and not the thing that rode it that took the record.

If you will notice the Providence Journal of Sept. 15, you will see that the Star Safety ran away again from me and made me break the hill record again Yours,

H. F. CAMPBELL.

Dear Sirs—Inclosed find check to balance account for 39x24 Star. It is the best wheel I ever rode. Have surmounted hills that no one ever thought could be ridden, and generally confirmed the other safety riders as to speed as well. Yours truly,

Gentlemen:-

I have a 58 Expert, '88 pattern, which I wish to have overhauled. I wish to have it overhauled in the most thorough manner possible, so that it will be in appearance a new machine. I also wish it re-nickled and new tires. Please advise me by return mail how to ship it and how long it will take you to return same.

Very Respectfully,

E. J. Pennington.

N. B.

I have ridden for 6 years, have used two English and two American machines, besides yours. A friend of mine persuaded me last season to try your machine. I must say that I am more than pleased with it, and I think it preferable to a light roadster. I have been in the manufacturing business for 10 years, and I am a close observer and appreciate a good piece of work. I must say that your machine is the most perfect of any machine that I have ever used. This machine I send you has made about 3300 miles, and has been in 13 different States. Myself and friend, who rides a 52-inch machine, intend to start from Cincinnati and ride to the Pacific Coast, and I want my machine to be in the best possible condition, regardless of cost.

E. J. P.

THE track here will be four laps to the mile, and will be made out of clay. Work will be commenced as soon as the frost is out of the ground, and bicycling will this year be on the boom.

SEVERAL of our men are already laying for Colie Bell, and I am afraid if he don't train pretty carefully he will get into the "soup." He had too much of a snap last year, but I think things will be very different this coming year.

IN speaking to your correspondent, Colie Bell said that he would have one of the finest Star racing wheels yet turned out of the factory at Smithville. He expects it will weigh about 30 lbs. Bell will race at the Chicago tournament, that is, if his better half will let him.

THE boys have been wondering who "Whiskers" is. Evidently, "Whiskers" is not very well acquainted with affairs here in the City. I should judge so by the way he writes. In speaking about our pleasant runs around the City he mentioned, "White Bear!" "Why, the sand is 'steen feet deep all the way out there.'" Nobody as yet has attempted to ride out there, unless there were strangers, and then they probably did not go all the way out, that is, if they were sensible.

BALTIMORE.

"NORVAL."

THE fourth annual reception of the Maryland Club was given Wednesday, the 13th. It was one of the events of the season. The club house was well decorated with all sorts of tasteful decorations. The gymnasium on the third floor was transformed into a charming banquet hall. The event was so complete a success as to eclipse all those that had gone before. There was a large attendance present.

THE annual election of officers of the Maryland Club will take place on Monday, March 11.

THE usual Friday dance held at the Baltimore club house last Friday evening was attended by a large number of members.

F. L. LEVERING and T. H. Bourne are applicants for membership in the Baltimore Club.

THE Centaur Club is looking for new quarters on account of lack of room. They prefer a club house near present location on East Lombard street. The club started two years ago, and had eight members, now it numbers forty.

THE Rambler Club Committee on Ways and Means gave, last Friday, an enjoyable entertainment to the members. Among those who participated in the entertainment were E. J. Sutton, H. Barrington, E. B. Jones, H. Smith, W. H. Thomas, Jr., and E. H. Cole. An elegant supper was served.

THE Maryland Club members are arranging a series of sparring matches between themselves. The first came off last Friday night, in the presence of a large crowd, between Messrs. Springel and Warwick. Soft gloves were used. Five bloodless rounds were fought and it was declared a draw by the referee.

MONDAY, Feb. 11th, City Councilman Hoffman, the Second Branch member from the Twenty-first and Twenty-second Wards, offered a memorial from German H. Hunt, William Shirley, James E. Ingram, Wallace King and others, protesting against the passage of the ordinance relieving Park Heights avenue (Pimlico road) and against fast driving within the city limits. The memorial was referred to the Committee on Police and Jail. A large number of cyclers in favor of restricting fast driving on the avenues in question were present, as were the horsemen, who came to plead for the privilege of fast driving.

F. C. KIRKWOOD reports reasonably satisfactory progress on the proposed road book. The data for Baltimore, Carroll, Frederick, Allegheny and Queen Annes Counties is all in, and others are expected to be heard from shortly. It is desirable that all reports be forwarded as soon as possible, because until they are all, in the drawing of the maps cannot be begun, and this work will consume some time. The Pennsylvania Division continues to urge Maryland to join in the preparation and adoption of a road book which will cover Maryland, Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey. It has not yet been decided to do this or to adopt Mr. Kirkwood's book.

THE vexed question of what should be done with the long-distance medal of the Baltimore Club has at last been satisfactorily settled. At a special meeting called, all those who had entered the contest signed a withdrawal of all claims to it. Breckenbridge, whose claim had promised to give some trouble, was the first to sign off, under pressure of circumstances.

ANOTHER AUTHORITY ON THE LOAFING AND RACING QUESTION.

Editor Bicycling World: I have read, with interest, the many suggestions regarding racing and the loafing question and hope you can find space for the following. It is a most difficult subject to adjust to every one's satisfaction, but the public are pre-eminently the ones to be considered. They do not care for long races.

The most interesting racing I have ever seen was the professional championships at Buffalo last fall (a series of three races counted by points), and the mile handicaps, professional and amateur, at Hartford. Why isn't it a good plan to make a feature of mile heat races, the same as in horse racing, best three in five? For the professionals, as much money could be put into one race as is now given in three, and the same way with the value of the amateur prizes. Then divide the amateurs into two classes, slower and faster than 2.50. Have a novice race (one heat of a mile) and a good day's racing would be the result. Where the meetings are longer than one day, a mile handicap the first day, two-mile on second, and three-mile on the third ought to make good racing. A longer handicap than three miles ought never to be given, and no scratch race above a mile. The professionals are evenly enough matched to go in the same class, and any amateur, in the class slower than 2.50, will endeavor to compel his opponents to beat 2.50 to win. Compel every amateur to fill out the blank of "previous best performances" or put him on a short mark, and in a tournament of two or more days have some one who knows the men handicap them on the basis of their performances each day, that is, make out the handicaps every night for the next day's races.

A lap race, if it is a race instead of a procession, is too severe a task for the majority of the riders. Old riders can stand it, but the young men cannot do it with safety to themselves.

The pacemaker plan will never be found feasible, and the plan of offering a prize to the man who is ahead at each quarter mile has been tried without success. In the heat races there is a doubt till the last moment, and the people like the suspense. Of course there are a thousand and one arguments against this plan, and I am not egotistical enough to say it is the only one. At the same time I would like to see it tried and let the public be the judge. If I have been informed correctly, in England the men are compelled to ride four and five heats in one afternoon for one prize, and not too valuable a prize either. To the managers of race meetings I would like to say that they must not expect good time on poor tracks. Some club must take the initiative in this matter, and we shall never know whose plan is the best till they have been tried. Any one of those suggested is better than the present state of affairs.

Yours respectfully,
H. S. CORNISH,
Instructor Boston Athletic Association.

MR. AMERICUS TO MR. OCCASIONAL AND MR. PARKINS, ALL OF COLORADO.

"WORDS, empty words, what do they profit?"

I have been watching, with mingled feelings of amusement and pity, the controversy that is at present being hotly carried on between two of your Denver correspondents.

With all due respect to the literary and journalistic abilities of Mr. "Occasional" and "Mr. Parkins, of Colorado," as well as their desire to show up their respective clubs to the best advantage, I must say that their recent utterings remind me of a parcel of school boys fighting for the possession of a handful of marbles more than what would naturally be expected from well-bred gentlemen.

As the conflict thickens, each contestant waxes hotter and uglier, and I am sure the controversy can be productive of no good for either organization.

Where peace and harmony should reign supreme, ill-will and dissension are gaining the upper hand by this jealous and spiteful cross-fire.

As an uninterested party, though in a position to judge with some accuracy how the land lays, I wouldsuggest that the would-be journalists, from the cow-boy district, let this matter drop right where it is before any more harm is done.

Both sides are in the right to a certain extent, in my opinion, yet both are wrong.

With regard to riding abilities, I think "Brother Parkins" has the best of the game.

If a team race should ever materialize between the two clubs, the "Ramblers" would make it decidedly interesting for their opponents, but certain it is that the "Social" Club has no ground whatever for being jealous of its Rambling friends, as far as an enjoyable, pleasant and well organized club is concerned.

I have accompanied the S. W. C. on several of its runs, and have always found them most enjoyable, for the reason that they go in for fun and wholesome pleasure, rather than for pumping their legs off over well nigh impassable roads simply for the purpose of piling up "records." Now, my dear children, one word more and I leave you in peace.

Do you not think you had better give the matter up, and acknowledge that you have both bitten off more than you can masticate? Do you not think the existence of a more friendly and harmonious feeling between the two clubs would be more productive of good for both than this childish and unavailing squabble? I do. Let's quit and call it square.

AMERICUS.

A SUGGESTION TO THE RACING BOARD.

Editor Bicycling World: In reading over the Racing Rules of the L. A. W. for 1889, I find that nothing has been done to provide for the safety riders. Now, as the safety has come to stay, I think it would be in order to suggest that the L. A. W. establish a one, two, and three mile safety championship, also to introduce a rule barring safeties from all ordinary bicycle events. I think the above will add strength to the L. A. W. Rules, and protect the ordinary rider from danger. Hoping that the L. A. W. will accept and act on the above suggestions, I am

Truly yours,

NEW YORK.

"HAWKSHAW."

"The learned and the unlearned write," exclaimed Horace, referring to the cacoethes scribendi which had attacked the Romans. His melancholy words are recalled to my mind by an article which recently appeared in the Cincinnati Enquirer, the writer of which, in his efforts for sensationalism, prostituted all truth and an apparent knowledge of medicine, to his inordinate desire to furnish the Enquirer with something startling. The article referred to was in the guise of a "special dispatch to the Enquirer," under date of January 26th, with the following startling head lines: "Marvelous. —An Instructor of Bicycle Riding—Is Injured Internally, Caused by Riding the Machine.—Refused Nourishment of Any Kind, and His Sufferings Were Intense,—Four Distinct Operations are Made. —His Stomach is Opened and Over Eight Hundred Polypi are Found and Removed."

In the column account that followed was a long and harassing story of how "Jules Benezac, the instructor of the fashionable Madison avenue Club," had been forced to give up his position there and seek admittance to St. Vincent's Hospital, owing to having "produced a boot-shaped fissue in the sphincter" through "the constant strain and irritation on the muscles in contact with the seat of the machine," upon which "his duty as teacher required him to spend several hours daily." Once lodged in St. Vincent's he was, according to the Enquirer's correspondent, placed "under the care of Dr. Winthrop, in the private ward," and was at once made the victim of the most brutal and horrible treatment, in which "a blunt knife" was one of the most minor instruments of torture used. Finally "Dr. Winthrop" must have decided that something or other was wrong inside of Jules, for the Enquirer's correspondent goes on in the most blood-curdling manner to tell how "Dr. Winthrop" decided to make "an incision in the median line, about six inches in length," the result of which when made fully convinced him that his diagnosis had been correct, and most decidedly there was something wrong with Jules' insides, in fact he was a perfect polypi factory, and "Dr. Winthrop" at once saw why his patient had not felt like riding his little bicycle in "the fashionable Madison avenue Club," where he had formerly acted as "instructor for young swells just budding into manhood."

"Dr. Winthrop," however, according to the Enquirer's correspondent, wasn't afraid of any amount of polypi, and he just went to work on Jules' farm of them, and in a long struggle which followed finally came out a victor, having removed "eight hundred and forty-one" of them (note the exactness of the number). This awful case of poor Benezec was still further increased in loathsomeness by the addition of the following details, furnished to a horror-stricken public by the correspondent of the Enquirer: "When the polypi were opened and the tissue submitted to the microscope, they were found to contain myriads of worms and other forms of life. The number of moving things in the tissue examined was estimated, and if the entire mass kept up the same ratio, over one hundred million lives were destroyed with the polypi."

For a moment one is almost dazed by the horrible thought that perhaps any one of the hundreds of thousands of riders of the wheel is at any moment liable to get filled up with polypi just like poor Benezec was, especially when the truthful Jules, according to the Enquirer's correspondent, "is firmly convinced that the bicycle was the cause of all his trouble," and stranger yet to relate, has in consequence decided that he "will never amount one again." We can hardly grasp the magnitude of poor Jules' determination "never to mount again," just because, forsooth, he "is firmly convinced" that the bicycle filled him full of polypi, but it must be, because the Enquirer's correspondent has so declared it. Now it is with much fear and trembling that I pen what follows, because your Cincinnati correspondent has assured you that he is one of many in his city who do not take kindly to my poor efforts to amuse and sometimes instruct your readers, but I hope that he will accept in advance my profound regret at having, through force of circumstances, been temporarily forced to poach upon the sacred precincts of Porkopolis, with which apology, and the security felt in the greatness of distance separating us, I have mustered up the courage to do so, however, so here goes.

Now, when I read the foregoing horrible narrative I at once felt my heart go out to poor Jules Benezec in his suffering, and I at once proceeded to St. Vincent's Hospital to see him and to offer to him any aid in my power. I at once inquired for the celebrated destroyer of polypi, "Dr. Winthrop," and was somewhat surprised to find that there was no such person, nor never had been, in the management of the hospital. This somewhat discouraged me, but I found that the physician in charge was Dr. Winthrop D. Mitchell, and thought perhaps that the Enquirer's correspondent, being on familiar terms with the doctor, and having a laudable desire to save telegraph bills for his paper, had contented himself with sending the physician's given name only, omitting the formality of his surname. Dr. Mitchell, when I arrived, was busy cutting off some one's legs or arms, and could not see me, but having finished that pleasant job he presently came into the room where I was awaiting him, looking just as pleasant as though he had come from a matinee instead of a surgical table. He was as far removed from what the readers of the Enquirer's article would imagine the heroic destroyer of "eight hundred and forty-one" polypi to be as could be imagined. I presented him with the article from the Enquirer, and after reading it he returned it to me with the following words:

"There has never been any physician connected with St. Vincents named Winthrop: there has been no patient here in five years named Jules Benezec: there has been no such case here, or on record elsewhere, of such a disease as he is claimed to have had, and I do not believe that such a complaint could possibly be contracted from riding a bicycle. With these few exceptions I think the account may be correct." Now I must confess that so positive assertions as these, by so able a man as Dr. Mitchell, made me feel a little bit dubious about Jules' polypi, but I wasn't going to give Jules up on so slight a rebuff as this, so I went forth in search of him. A directory soon told me that there was no "Madison-avenue Club," and no Jules Benezec known to the compilers of this valuable book, so at last I had to give up the idea of interviewing Jules and telling him how Doctor Mitchell was denying his polypi. Still further thought on Jules' mysterious case at once convinced me tha the was the first teacher on record whose duty as such compelled him to spend hours in the saddle. Imagine a teacher who instructed his pupil by riding the wheel himself instead of putting the beginner upon it. Such a fool teacher ought to get full of polypi, or pumpkin pie, it matters little which. To put the matter plainly, Murchison of California and Benezec of New York seem to be as closely related as on the special correspondent of the Enquirer and Ananias. The entire thing is a hoax and a lie from beginning to end, and it is to be regretted that so able a newspaper as the Enquirer should thus lend itself to publishing a libel upon a sport that has now for the first time to appear in the role of defendent in a charge of being injurious to health, instead of benefitter thereof. The harm that such an article, in such a journal will do is incalculable as it is only by an investicagation such as I have made that the reader can learn that the writer of it and the truth are as unknown to each other as the Czar of Russia and "Hawkshaw."

MINNEAPOLIS NOTES.

"VERNON."

The Minneapolis Club held "open house" Feb. 14. Invitations were sent to about 150 wheelmen, but for some reason or other they did not respond to the call as was expected. Those present expressed themselves in terms not to be doubted that the M. B. C. was the club, and a large number of the visiting wheelmen joined the club. Mr. Buchman, the President, opened the entertainment by playing some selections from the "Pearl of Pekin" on the guitar, after which he gave an imitation of a brass band heard in the distance, gradually coming nearer and then receding again. He deserved all the applause he got. After an intermission an informal business meeting was held, and the President read the Constitution and By-Laws of the club, and gave a brief outline of the past work and also some of the things outlined for 1889. Mr. S. F. Heath, our Chief Consul for the last four years, was called on for a speech. He made a very short one, but to the point. Mr. Savage was called upon next and expressed his ideas in a few well-chosen words, after which all present were invited to sign the application blanks. Cigars and soft drinks were served, after which the tables were cleared and cards were indulged in until a late hour. Everybody voted the meeting a success, and the club on the highway to prosperity.

F. F. Ives, the ex-bicyclist, was in the City recently, and in connection with W. F. Carter gave three or four billiard exhibitions.

J. R. Stockdale, one of our bright lights of '87, will probably race this year. He is a good one, and the boys will have to look out for him.

The boys are promised, by the manager of the proposed new track, a fine reading and dressing-room, and also a safe place to put their racers.

W. P. Leachman has had a desire to race some one, ever since he won a pair of suspenders at Mitchell in '87, and it is to be hoped he will be seen on the track this year.

A "Veteran" on the Premier Tandem Safety

ERIE, Pa., Feb. 1st, 1889.

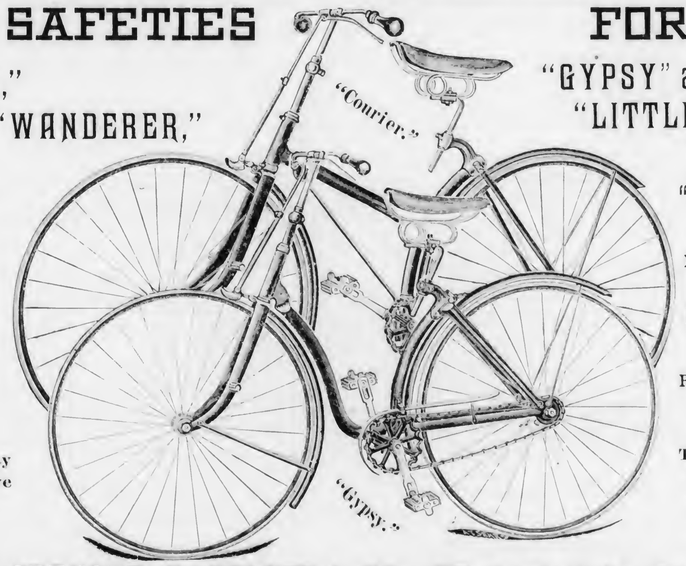
Mr. L. H. Johnson, Orange, N. J.:

Dear Sir—The Premier Tandem Safety, which I purchased of you some five months since, has proved to be perfectly satisfactory in every respect. It is superior to any double machine that I have ever owned, and I have had four different makes of double tricycles.

Any person accustomed to the use of a Rover-type machine can manage it with a novice on the front seat without any trouble, and with two experienced riders the speed is remarkable, as many of our riders can testify.

My wife and I took a run with it to Buffalo last fall; en route we overtook and passed several wheelmen. We travel about ten miles an hour with ease, when the roads are in condition, a thing we never did with the trike.

As for the workmanship of the machine, I must say that it is first-class, and it has proven itself to be very strong.



Of three or four different makes that I have seen, I prefer the Premier, for it is always ready for a lady passenger.

A great many tandem tricycle riders that I have met, are offering their tricycles for sale, so that they may purchase a Tandem Bicycle, and I think the day is not far distant when the tricycle will be a thing of the past. I remain, yours respectfully, FRANK FAIRBAIRN.

NEW MAIL SAFETY.

WITH TRIGWELL BALL HEAD.

The advantages of Trigwell's Ball Head to the Ordinary is even surpassed in its application to a Safety (in fact it seem Specially Designed for a Safety), for by its rigid bearing, and not needing adjustment, it keeps the front wheel steady, and obviates sensitive steering, which fault all Safeties have had.

SPRING FRONT FORK,

preventing vibration—very easy and out of sight.

REAR AXLE BAND BRAKE,

the place for a brake—not fouled with mud as when near the tire.

Has PERFECTLY STRAIGHT FRONT FORK, giving steadiness of running to front wheel.

Has TANGENT SPOKES, half-nickeled to intersections, giving a very handsome appearance.

Has STRENGTHENED BASE HOLLOW RIM.

Has KLYSTONE SADDLE, very easy, and specially fitted for a Safety, as it has no side or rocking motion, which is fatal to steadiness on a Safety.

Approved by R. H. Davis, the Champion Safety rider, and others, as the Best.

Rear Wheel 30 inches, front, 32 inches. Geared to 54 inches.

Price $135, with Ball Pedals.

EDITORS:

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 1 MARCH, 1889.

NEXT week the WORLD AND BULLETIN will go out to our readers in card board rolls, as we propose to send out in the form of supplements two of the most exquisitely executed fac similes of water color drawings ever issued by any publication. We shall send the editions and supplements in rolls so as to protect the plates from harm, and so that they will reach our readers smooth and fit for framing. Look out for the next issue.

OUR esteemed contemporary, the St. Louis Spectator, is peculiarly unfortunate in selecting for its cycling editors men remarkable for their bad temper, and also for a faculty of putting their foot (or feet?) in it. With these few words of introduction we present the following item in full, believing that our readers will agree with us, that in view of the fact that this brilliant scribe is entirely wrong in placing Mr. Dow in the office of Treasurer, and in view of the further fact that Mr. Brewster was unanimously and deservedly re-elected to that position, the following is one of the most scurrilous articles ever put in print. The Spectator can do nothing less than bounce the scribe and apologize:

"The result of the election of officers at the L. A. W. meeting held on the 18th, is, I presume, a surprise to nobody. At least, it should surprise nobody who has given any attention whatever to League matters, as the whole affair was cut and dried and ready for for immediate use. As usual, the intellectual East took everything in sight, totally ignoring the West. Perhaps it is quite as well, as I really do not see how any self-respecting man could consent to become a member of the brazen ring who could force on the League as its chief officer a man who could so lower his official position as Mr. C. H. Luscomb has done. I never could quite figure out how Mr. Brewster came to be elected Treasurer of the League two years ago, unless they were ashamed not to do something for the wheelmen of the city which was entertaining them so handsomely. I believe Brewster has made a good officer and I congratulate him on his retirement from such a set of would-be-if-they-could-be politicians."

THE PENNSYLVANIA "LIBERTY BILL."

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 23.—In the House of Representatives yesterday, on motion of Mr. Patterson, the vote by which the bill giving bicycles and tricycles the same rights of the road as other vehicles failed to pass second reading was reconsidered, and the section taking away from the Park Commissioners and Road Commissioners the right to regulate the use of bicycles and tricycles was stricken out, and the bill as amended passed second reading.

EUROPEAN TOUR NOTES.

THE limit as to members (twenty-five) has been reached, and the management will probably be obliged to increase it to thirty.

Joseph Pennell, the artist, and Foreign Consul C. T. C., will be of the party. He has just been over the larger portion of the route through France, and his presence will be of great value to the party.

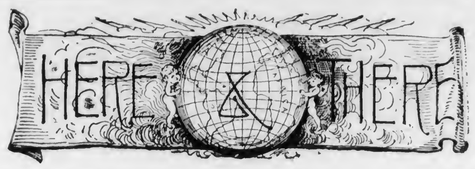
Two Brazilian wheelmen, members of the C. T. C., have written for places. They will connect either at Boston or Queenstown.

Twelves States, Canada and Brazil will be represented. Probably the number of States will be increased. All members of the party who have not already done so should at once send a deposit of $25 to Alex. Martin, Agent Cunard Steamers, 99 State street, Boston, to secure stateroom berth. This amount is deducted from amount sent Treasurer next May.

COUNTRY ROADS.

THE following editorial, taken from the Chicago Herald, is another straw showing that the interest in good work is spreading, and that another leading American paper raises its voice on the side of better roads and scientific building and repairing of same. Keep it up, gentlemen, the more the merrier:

"It has been estimated that by far the greater cost of labor involved in the transportation of the crops may be charged to that short passage over the country roads lying between the farm and and the depot. The highway called the railroad is superb. The turnpike remains in its primitive state.



Efforts, therefore, directed toward the bettering of the road between the farm and the railway station will be wisely inspired. The people are but lately arrived at the knowledge that one railroad, rather than two, three or four, is to be wished for. The Pacific roads at Omaha divide their passengers and freight among no less than five waiting trains, though one would carry all. The people of Iowa, however, must support five crews of railroad operators. With the main arteries of commerce come to this pass, it is time to dwell upon that neglected portion of the public travel, wherein the farmer plods, through mud or sand, over hill and swamp, with fifty bushels of wheat, giving a day's haul, and vast relative expense, to the initial operation of delivery in Europe. E. B. Meatyard is one of the inquirers who have done the country good service in calling the attention of legislators to this subject."

THE WEST END BICYCLE CLUB OF ROCHESTER, N. Y.

THE youngest bicycle club in Rochester and about the liveliest is the West End Bicycle Club. The "Winter Carnival" given under the auspices of this club last Wednesday at the Washington Rink was largely attended by Rochester's best people and fairest daughters. The Carnival was served up in two parts: the first a musical and athletic menu and the latter part the younger portion in dancing to the excellent music of the orchestra in attendance. The participants in the musical melange covered themselves with glory and in most cases secured the encore so dear to the performer's soul. A novelty in the musical line was the duet sung by Messrs. Barnes and Connaly who sang their little song while sitting on bicycles. The song sung was "Trust Her Not." Whether they were alluding to the festive and frisky bicycle deponent cannot say.

W. H. Barber then caused much amusement and amazement by his clever manipulation of the bicycle. A three-mile race between two riders came next and one of the contestants took a header spoiling his chances. The victor's name is C. J. Ivens and the unfortunate's name is B. A. Pratt.

Then came a slow race in which C. J. Connely proved a better balancer than his competitors. After that burlesque riding and polo between Messrs. Punnett and Featherly. Punnett proving the better player. After all that, came the dancing, and young hearts fluttered with enjoyment and young feet beat joyously to the rythmic music, until old Sol came shining up from the East with a smile on his face and a merry twinkle in his eye, as he bade the sad scamps and the bonny lassies to go home and take a rest.

PEEBLES, SCOTLAND.

"JACK."

PRACTICALLY speaking, the cycling season in Scotland, for the winter 1888-9, is at an end, and it is a very enthusiastic creature indeed who would care about bicycling in such wet and windy weather as has been on the barometrical menu for the past few weeks. The roads, too, bear evidence of the work of the road-maker; long, hateful patches of "road metal" crunching under the wheels of the dog-cart as one drives along, or making walking a misery, and cycling well nigh an impossibility.

THE heather hills, that in August were in purple glory, are now a dull brown-black, the "bracken" (a coarse fern) that adorns the steep hillside, and which delighted the eye with its wealth of "grass-hopper" and "sage" greens, is now "wilted," and of a saffron hue, the flowers are all gone, the "burns," that in the summer ran clear as filtered dew, are now rushing brown, foaming and twisting in irresistible strength to their mother, the river, and she in turn to the sea. All the pretty, light and airy accompaniments of summer have disappeared and the winter has set in. And it is well. We had grown to look upon the purple heather, the delicately tinted fern and the pellucid rivulet as commonplaces. They had delighted the eye and the ear and the nostril for so long that we, after a season, looked upon them as something to which we, as inhabitants of this particular section of Bonnie Scotland, were justly entitled.

"A primrose by the river's brim,
A yellow primrose was to him,
And nothing more."

But they are all gone now, and doubtless we will be the more able to appreciate them when next we have an opportunity of living among them.

IT would appear as if (in the language of a fellow scribe) the safety bicycle was in a fair way to oust from popular favor our old friend, the tricycle, and it is not to be regretted altogether. True, the tricycle has many admirable qualities, but as the majority of these are embodied in the geared up two wheeler there is not great cause for grief. A tricycle was always more or less unwieldy and difficult of storage or stabling. It was always hard to find (on bad roads) a path for its two, three or four tracks. The safety is (I think) even easier of storage than the ordinary bicycle. The only disadvantage that I can see, compared with the tricycle, is that a dismount is imperative when the rider wants to stop or rest, but as no one does much sitting on a stationary tricycle this is of very small importance, mounting and dismounting, too, being made with such a minimum of exertion and danger, as compared with our old friend, the big bicycle. I have an idea, a somewhat deep-seated one too, that an ordinary bicycle, well within the reach of the rider, with a big back wheel, say of 23 to 24 inches, or even greater for a 50-inch, is about as good a going machine as one can mount. (See Karl Kron, somewhere in his "XM Miles." I cannot say what mile or page it is in.) I have tried one bicycle built on "rational" lines that was safe enough and fast enough for anybody. I do not think that Thomas Stevens would even have got 'round the world with a safety bicycle. He might, but the bicycle? A wheelbarrow (unicycle) would have been preferable to the little two-wheeled Rover type. I think it will be endorsed by those who ride bicycles in America, in those localities where the roads are especially bad, that the old ordinary was much superior to the safety for riding in well nigh impossible places. True, you might come a cropper with the big wheel, but you might "ride through" without killing yourself, while with the safety you would find that it would pay to get off. And as to its trundling capabilities, where the roads are unrideable the ordinary is, I think, the superior as far as ease is concerned. Some safety bicycles are about as hard to trundle (unless both hands are employed) as is a refractory pig to the slaughter. In this respect, however, the tricycle—especially in the tandem varieties of the vintage of 1882—took all the honors in a competition for cake and "shoe strings," as Overman has it. Mr. Joseph Pennell and his better half will, I think, bear me out in what I say.

I SEE that some of the Pennell writings in regard to "the North" of Scotland have awakened a great deal of criticism in the Scotch and English papers. The Scotsman, the leading Scotch newspaper, has had several column editorials in criticism of their writings. You see, Joe (or his wife) did not like everything in Scotland, and said so, and the Scotch were up in arms. Still, although I am Scotch, I think there must have been a good deal of truth in what the Pennells said, judging by the amount of "leaded minion" that was "set up" in the editorial columns of the Scotch and English papers in contradiction of their writings. Anyhow, their books are read, and that is what they are written for.

SPEAKING of a paragraph in a late "News and Comment" in the BICYCLING WORLD, anent a man who wants to ride for the "deaf-mute championship of the United States" from one to one hundred miles, I wonder they don't get up a championship to be competed for by twins, or bald-headed men. The blind men are at least out of it. "The bald-headed go-as-you-please champion of the United States" would not be an unpretentious name to affix to a medal, although it might need something akin to a "danger board" to contain the inscription.

"SOMEWHERE out West" I once heard of a "champion oyster opener and eater." Perhaps the Scottish Cyclist will not mind my telling a story about Peebles. An American and a Scotchman, travelling together, were looking at the pyramids in Egypt. "Stranger," said Brother Johnathan to the Scotchman, "queer thing for a man to put his money into." "Not queerer than Niagara," said he of the Peebleans in the land of the "Thistle." "Talking about queer things," he continued, "You know Peebles? Well, in Peebles I once saw a peacock with a wooden leg." It took me a long time to see the point of this joke, which consists in what people of different national temperament consider "queer" things.

"JONAH'S"

JOTTINGS.

As an evidence of the far from dead desire for team road racing in this vicinity, set forth by me last week, the Hudson County Wheelmen come to the front with a proposition to form a New Jersey Team Road Racing Association, open to all the clubs in the State. I have not had a chance yet to sound the boys about here much on the subject, but I understand that the project is meeting with favor, and that the cyclers of Southern Jersey and Monmouth are burning for a try at their rivals in the North. If there can be no association formed on the broader lines laid down by me last week, I welcome this new substitute as the next best thing to it, and as the nucleus of something bigger in the near future. The only thing to stand in the way of this local scheme is the acknowledged superiority of the H. C. W. in its own district of Jersey anyhow. But if we have ambitious fighters from Monmouth and South Jersey then a battle is assured.

THE H. C. W. bowling team continues its victories, and as we probesied will have a walk-over for the pennant.

BOWMAN, of the H. C. W. and N. J. C. racing teams, has begun training for the coming campaign, and the other members will soon follow in search of the worms which are said to await the early birds.

I SAW Ed Baggot the other night, and he told me that Charley Kluge had asked him to go up to the club and begin on the home-trainer. Kluge was very busy last season and was seen very little on the path, but this year it is probable that his business will allow him to be a constant competitor in local races.

I WAS up at the Amateur Athletic Union performance of "Billee Taylor," at the Metropolitan Opera House, last Saturday evening. The jovial ex-Chief Consul of New Jersey, Dr. Johnson, as "Sir Mincing Lane," was, as the boys would say, indeed "a piece of work," and easily led all the rest in the race for applause.

LAST season, owing to the efforts of the wheelmen in the club, the New Jersey Athletic Club made cycle racing a special feature with great success, and with such a team as Caldwell, Bowman, Baggot, Pendleton and Gubleman, and the advantages of a fine track for training, scooped the lion's share of the prizes hereabouts. It is a healthy sign when the big athletic clubs open their arms to bicyclers. They have ample means to push the sport, and it is to them that we must look for our big tournaments and race meets. The N. J. A. C. will keep the ball rolling next season, and we shall soon have the other athletic clubs following suit and having their bicycle as well as athletic teams, and the consequent race meets.

THE bill of the wheelmen and the horsemen, giving the control of the roads to the Boards of Freeholders of the various counties, has been formally reported and ordered to a third reading in the New Jersey Senate. This bill takes away the power from the district Overseers of Highways, and renders a uniform system of road building now possible. To the efforts of the wheelmen of Union County the law is due. The father of the measure is Senator Miller, of Westfield, father of Frank Miller, an enthusiastic wheelman and ex-Vice President of the Alphabetical Association. No small credit should also be given the Elizabeth Daily Journal, for its constant advocacy of road reform, at the instigation of the Elizabeth Wheelmen and its business manager, A. S. Crane, and Thomas Bugen, one of its staff, both members of the E. W. Day after day the editor hammered away, and his able articles were copied throughout the State and have done no small share toward the agitation for road reform throughout the State. The press is a power, and to this particular paper and its editors all honor is due. To Senator Miller also wheelmen owe much.

BALTIMORE.

"NOKVAL."

THE first annual reception of the Crescent Club was held last Friday night, February 22, at Smith's Hotel, Govanstown. For the convenience of guests the York Road line cars left 9.30 P. M., and returned early in the morning. The event was an enjoyable one. A number of members were present.

CHIEF CONSUL MOTT'S tandem has been shipped from the Stanley Show and he expects it to be in in about three weeks.

THE annual meeting of the stockholders of the Maryland Club will be held on Saturday, March 9, at 8 P. M. The election of seven trustees for the ensuing year will be held by stock vote at this meeting.

A. C. PATTERSON, once well known in wheeling circles here, sent a few days ago W. Murdock Lind, of this city, a number of photographs of interest to cyclers. Among them was the first part of the Springfield Bicycle minstrel troupe, of which Mr. Patterson is manager. Mr. Patterson is Superintendent of the Dickinson Hard Rubber Company, of Springfield. While living here he was prominently identified with the Beethoven Minstrels.

ST. LOUIS.

"LINNEUS."

AT the last meeting of the Missouri Bicycle Club, Geo. Andrews made a motion, which was passed, authorizing the chair to appoint a committee to look into the feasibility of holding a cycle race meeting in this city next spring. Cycling has been practically dead in this town the past season, and this is certainly a move in the right direction to awaken renewed interest in the sport. The only drawback is the trouble about securing a good track, as none can be had save the one at the Fair Grounds, and the exhorbitant rent which is usually demanded for it, may put an end to the matter, so some cyclists think. If they will consider, however, that the Ramblers gave a race meet on these grounds in the spring of 1885, when St. Louis did not possess one fourth as many wheelmen as now, which was a success financially, it seems to me that this objection could be easily overcome. While it is, perhaps, true that St. Louis at present does not possess men like Jack Rogers and Lin Gordon, who went down into their pockets and contributed almost $1000 to the fund to cover expenses of the last Ramblers' tournament, yet it must be remembered that we, at present, have at least 200 wheelmen who would be glad to contribute from $5 to $10 a peice towards creating such a fund, and the manufacturers who would certainly add their quota. I have spoken to quite a number of the riders and have yet failed to meet anyone who did not think kindly of the scheme. As Chicago gives her big tournament in May a large field of entries could be easily secured by placing the date of the meet a few days after the Chicago affair.

THE question of card playing for money came up before both clubs at their last meeting, and after considerable discussion the Cycle Club suspended one of its members, while the Missouris let its culprits off with a reprimand.

ED BARNARD returned from a trip to Quincy and the surrounding country last week, and speaks in glowing terms of the fine treatment he received at the hands of the Quincy boys, who also made him the recipient of a banquet during his stay there.

E. N. SANDERS, in referring to Percy Stone's statement saying the Missouris could furnish a team to come one, two, three, four ahead of their team, stated that he as well as Snyder had retired from road racing, having no time to train, but if an official challenge was sent to his club, it would receive his prompt consideration.

ROAD reports from different points in the State are coming in, among the latest received being the reports of Jackson County by Nelson Haynes, and of Putnam County by E. H. Hale. The various members of the Touring Board are also doing good work in the way of getting their leading citizens and the press interested in road improvements and the passage of our road bill.

S. G. WHITTAKER writes a friend here as follows: "I have been doing some good work here of late. You no doubt have heard of my record-smashing performances. My last was at the half mile on the great North Road, on the Rover safety: time, 1m. 0 2-5s. It made the London boys look, they could hardly believe it. I was presented with a fine gold medal by J. K. Stärly & Co., a lady's safety, man's safety, and a racing Rover weighing 22 pounds. The Rudge people have presented me with a 19-pound Bicyclette. Allard has challenged the world, S. G. Whittaker preferred (but did not post any money), from one to 25 miles. As he did not say when he would race I have accepted to run him for $500 a side, race to take place inside of two weeks, or will pay his expenses to run me in America. He knows very well that I am going to sail soon, so has challenged, but cannot bluff me, and I have accepted. I shall keep myself in fit trim, and show up at all the tournaments in the States next season, and possibly make another trip over here."

NEW YORK.

"NOTHING succeeds like success," is a saying both old and true, but its truthfulness would have been greatly improved if its originators had written it thus: "Nothing succeeds in causing envy like success." This is brought more prominently to my mind by a recent article in the Wheel, under the heading of "What is the Matter With the New York Club?" I must say that the article above quoted is the worst example of this kind I have ever read. What does the reader of a wheel paper care if the New York Club house is not heated, etc., etc.? Is not that an affair purely belonging to that organization, and if they are satisfied why should the interrogatory idiot be allowed to exploit his lack of brains by that threadbare campaign cry of "What's the matter with ——, etc.?" Such an inquiry into the private affairs of an organization is out of place upon the pages of any periodical making any pretence to being called a paper, for the reason that the article must emanate either from an envious outsider or else from a disgusted member of the club itself. In the former case it is an impertinence, and shows in its conception the absence of any of the instincts of a gentleman, and should be consigned to the waste basket, where such communications belong. In the case of its writer being a member of the organization concerning which he writes, the inquiry is at once an evidence of his idiocy, since any sane man whose think box is not an absolute vacuum should always be able to learn about the affairs of a club of which he is, alas! one of the component parts, in ways less public and more satisfactory than by rushing into print. In the penning of this article I do not wish to be considered as noticing in any way the article quoted other than in the abstract, and as a moral to adorn a tale, neither do I attempt to answer it in any way, as such communications merit only the silence of contempt. One does not enter into a debate with a child, nor answer its senseless questions, but when they become annoying a remedy is found in a slipper or a nursing bottle. I would commend either or both of these remedies to Editor Prial for use upon the writer of the article referred to. As I began this note with a quotation I suppose I might as well end it with the following one, which just fits this case: "Heaven and earth war in vain against a fool."

DESPITE the fact that the recent disgusting spectacle of a lot of women riding and falling upon a track for the edification of an absent public was shown to be a "fake," and was, as far as the poor unfortunates themselves went, far from a remunerative affair, we are now promised a real race, in which $2500 of real money will be given as a prize to the winners. I am glad to be able to chronicle in these notes that, as a rule, wheelmen here were much against the recent display, and are more so against any future ones.

GREAT is the power of gold, but greater still is the power of diamonds. The N. A. A. A. A. offer as prizes at their forthcoming games, diamond rings to the winners, diamond scarf pins to seconds, and gold medals to third contestants in each event, and to all who finish neither first, second or third they will present a gold locket just for the pleasure of their presence as competitors. As a consequence of this over fifty entries are claimed for the one and one-half mile bicycle handicap. Special arrangements have also been made for the attendance of a corps of surgeons and ambulances, and all of these fifty gentlemen who are so anxious to risk their necks for prizes may feel content at having ready at hand the prompt attention that many of them will undoubtedly need.

YOU'VE read "Robert Elsmere" of course. Every body has, or claims to have done so, at any rate, which amounts to the same thing in most cases, as the average reader finds that the scholarly authoress of the novel has gone too deep or too high, it matters not which, for them to understand. But I am not going to write a criticism of the novel, but will be content to steal the closing lines of it to clothe my own ideas in words, altering them to suit the use

I make of them. Here they are as I have slightly changed them:

"Others, I doubt not, if not we,
The issue of his toils shall see;
And future wheelmen gather as their own
The harvest that his zeal had sown."

As the above stands, it but slightly expresses my feelings of admiration for the untiring energy in the cause of the wheel shown for the past five years or more by Mr. George R. Bidwell, who I much regret to see step out of harness, well earned though his retirement be. Vale, my paragon of Chief Consuls, we shall not soon look upon thy superior.

PENNSYLVANIA.

"ARIEL."

The result of the Presidential election is quietly accepted here: in fact it was generally discounted, no one who was well informed ever supposing that Mr. Jessup had even a fighting chance. I cannot help but feel that it would have been a wise thing if the League officials had allowed Mr. Jessup to go in. The cry of "Ring Rule" has done the League a very great deal of harm; of that there can be no question. But you can't tell who's Governor until after the election.

South End dances again on the 28th, and that another enjoyable time will be had at No. 1726 South Broad street goes without saying.

No word from the new road book yet, although it was promised for the latter part of February. This is a matter of great importance, and the printers should be stirred up lively.

Messrs. E. G. Kolb, L. J. Kolb and Chas. Wilson, Jr., all of the South End Wheelmen, made an attempt on the seven-mile course, over which the 100-mile road race was run last autumn, but the conditions being against them, the best they could do was something over thirty minutes. They expect to make another attempt.

Thursday night the Mount Vernon Wheelmen had a benefit theatre party at the Grand Opera House, the occasion being "Faust," as given by the Boston Ideals, and it was a great success in every way. The proceeds are to be devoted toward the furnishing of their new club house. A lively and a growing club are the Mount Vernons.

Another "Road Hog" case in this section, last Thursday, this time at Wilmington, the sufferers being Messrs. Bertolette and Guldin, of the Wilmington Wheel Club. They were run down on the Causeway, while out on their bicycles, by two men in a buggy, who deliberately crowded them into the ditch, throwing Bertolette off and bruising him. Warrants are sworn out for the hogs' arrest, and the club intend pushing the matter as far as it will go.

The last of the winter sociables given bp the Pennsylvania Bicycle Club wound up in a blaze of enthusiasm last Wednesday night. About one hundred people were present, and the affair was a "sociable," in every sense of the word, there being none of that stiffness which characterized the first one, and which was hardly avoidable where so many people were brought together for the first time. Dancing was kept up to a late hour, the programme being well filled, and the only interval being for the very fine supper which was served about eleven o'clock. The patronesses were: Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Supplee, Mrs. Worrell, Mrs. Street and Mrs. Tryon.

POKOPOLIS NOTES.

"STAR."

"Safety," in coming to the defense of "Hawkshaw," seems to think that most persons do not care to know that "Dick Dunder is a scorcher from 'way back,'" or that "Baby Bunting has a dandy mouth for oysters." Now "Safety" was never more mistaken in his life, as that is just what some of us want to know, for if "Baby Bunting" should ever take a notion to start on a tour and should happen to visit our city, our being forewarned of his capacity in that direction would prevent our bankrupting ourselves by attempting to stop that dandy mouth with oysters, for we would then try to appease his insatiable appetite with the succulent wiener wurst, the delicious pumpernickel and the fragrant limburger. Then again, Mr. Editor, those of us who reside in the log cabins of the uncultured West cannot be expected to have the breadth, the depth and the acuteness of one who has had the advantage of the society of the Goulds, the Vanderbilts and the Astors. Still, we do the best we can in our humble way, and often, after milking the cows and feeding the stock, burn our tallow dips till quite a late hour in attempting to write up the news, for we intend to earn our salaries even if it should unfortunately kill the World.

It is said that an amateur entertainment is soon to be given at the Odeon for the benefit of the C. B. C.

We are to have a hill-climbing contest in the latter part of March. Sycamore Hill is the one selected, and Mr. A. A. Bennett will offer three prizes. It is expected that this will effectually settle the claims of some of our would-be hill climbers.

The Crescents have adopted a uniform consisting of a black jersey and black tights. While there is no question as to the comfort of such a costume, the appearance one presents when arrayed in tights is objected to by some as being positively indecent. A good supporter, however, add a light flannel shirt in place of the jersey would do away in a large measure with that objection. To the man who is larger around the waist than around the hips tights are a godsend. A belt is unnecessary, as a piece of elastic braid put in the hem at the top will exert just enough pressure to keep them in place, whether the stomach is empty or just filled with a Miamitown dinner, and then they obviate the necessity of either suspenders or stocking supporters. To a thin man, however, they are not becoming, as they give him too much the appearance of a gigantic spider.

NEW ORLEANS.

"NOKOMIS."

The New Orleans Bicycle Club have at last succeeded in getting a club house. It is situated corner Prytania and Valence streets, and is the nicest and cosiest house they have ever had. The N. O. boys say that they are going to make things hum this summer in the way of amusements. There is a large lawn on the side of the house, which they will utilize for croquet and tennis during the long evenings of summer.

Frank Born has the sympathy of all the members of the L. C. C. having met with the loss of his father.

Claus W. Bogel has come down to a safety. Bogel is a fine athlete, and it is said in the next safety race he will astonish the natives.

We are just on the eve of our Mardi-Gras here, and can promise any of our northern brethren that have the good fortune to be in our gay city, that they meet with a hearty welcome at our hands.

Owing to the conditions of our roads, none of the races for the Batson Medal have taken place, as every race with the exception of one is to take place on the road. When the roads do dry up they will be run once a week until the whole series is finished.

It is said the Spirit of the South, a local sporting paper, is not as partial to cycling as it might be. The editor frequently cutting out its cycling corresdondents notes entirely, and then when inserting them, putting them in an obscure corner of the paper. How is this, Mr. Wharton?

The Louisiana Cycling Club had a special meeting last Thursday evening, at which they accepted resignations of three members, and elected three. It is the general regret of the boys in the club that Percy Batson resigned. Batson has sold his wheel, and has given up riding for good.

There is evidently something wrong here in management of the League. If you will notice in the list of members by states published in your paper sometime ago, Louisiana is way behind her membership of the year before, and I know there are more riders now here, than there were then. Then again no League meeting has taken place for over five months. Whose fault is this?

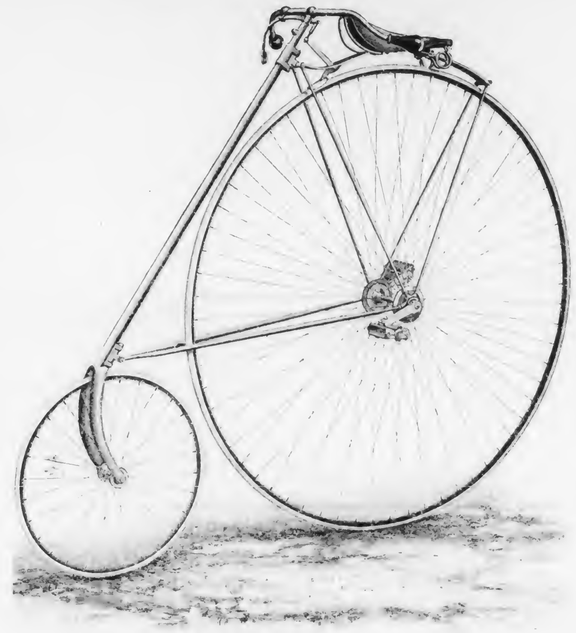
BUFFALO.

"MERCURY."

Theatre parties will reign supreme among cyclers next week. On Monday evening the Buffalo Club will do the gallant by Miss Pauline Hall in "Erminie," and on Wednesday evening the Ramblers will honor Marie Jansen as "Nadjy." Both clubs will attend in large numbers. The change, presenting the operas at the new Star Theatre instead of the Music Hall, was a wise move.

Bushong and Terry, ball players of the Brooklyn Club, seem to be quite enthusiastic cyclers. The former says: "I tell you, honestly, for pleasure and health cycling is much superior to anything I know of. It strengthens wind and muscle thoroughly."

The Sporting Life says an assessment of twenty-five cents would put the L. A. W. out of debt. Thunder and lightning! is that all? Why not create a "popular subscription?" Surely cyclers would not begrudge the small sum of twenty-five one cent pieces if it would put the League out of debt.



The Rambler Bicycle Club, at its last meeting, voted unanimously to remain in the League. I was rather surprised to hear of this sudden change of heart in the "oppositioners," but that surprise was dispelled when I learned that the Great, the Only H. E., King-pin, etc., etc., etc., lent his eloquence to the League defenders.

By the way, speaking of Ducker, I see he is to have the management of a big "event" down your way. Although I would much rather see him manage the Buffalo affair, I wish him every success. It is generally understood he did not have the power he desired at the last tournament, or the result might have been different.

W. G. SCHACK is at the head of a movement to organize a Ramblers' base ball team. The Buffalo Club have a team, why not the Ramblers? It has some very promising material with which to form a strong team. A series of games could be arranged with the Buffalo and Rochester Clubs, and some very interesting contests would be the result.

THE Ramblers are unfortunate in losing two, perhaps four, of its most active members. Otto Schmidt has taken up his residence in your city (Boston), W. O. Graham is now employed in the Erie Railroad office in New York City, and now Wirtner and Hughson, the "inseparables," contemplate taking Greeley's advice, and "go West." What is our loss is others' gain.

IN my letter of two weeks ago I had an item concerning Hughson and his wheel, which was stolen, to the effect that he was "waiting for it" yet. Shortly after the letter was mailed I met Hughson, and he told me that he had found his wheel and stranger still, right here in the city. It appears the party who borrowed (?) the wheel, in riding down Pearl street, broke the tire in some way or other and left it at a store near by. Had the thief (who was captured, I forget where) not confessed, perhaps "Billy" would be "waiting for it yet."

MINNEAPOLIS NOTES.

"VERNON."

NOTHING is talked of at the club rooms but about "our track," as we say. S. G. Morton has changed his mind in regard to putting a clay path in, but will make a four and one half lap board track. On account of the track being inside the ball park, he thought that the ball players would cut the clay all up, and it would take lots of care and attention to keep it in proper shape, so he decided to put down boards instead of clay. Probably no records will be broken here anyway, so a board track will be as good as anything else.

MORE of the fellows are seen around the club rooms this winter than last. They are contemplating renting a house and have it fixed to suit themselves. It is understood that they will have to move from their present quarters pretty soon, and are looking around now for better quarters.

I HAVE always thought (and so has everyone else that I know of) that California was a glorious country, where no snow, no ice, no anything frigid was ever seen or felt, but in "Vindex's" letter from Los Angeles, he stated that U. S. Wing had ordered a lot of ice bicycle attachments! Now if California doesn't want to get thrown in the "soup" she must explain this item some way. May be "Vindex" forgot to state that the attachments were going to be used for pulling through the sand, of which tradition says they have a large amount. Speaking about U. S. Wing reminds me that he was a former Minneapolis lad.

SOME of the members of the M. B. C. look weary when anyone mentions "tournament" to them, as the last tournament was not a success financially, and no wonder it was a failure, as the track was about half way between here and St. Paul, and no way to get out there but the motor line, the management of which would not run trains out there any oftener than every two hours. I know of one of the racers who thought he would ride out on the motor and thus save himself for the races; but alas, he missed the train by a minute or two, and no hacks being around he had to run all the way out, and he got there just in time for his race! On account of the track that we will have here this year being in the centre of the city there is no reason why a good tournament would not pay, and I am sure that if the same "hustlers" have charge of it this year as did last that it will prove a big success, financially and otherwise.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

THE Boston Bicycle Club held its twelvth annual dinner at Parker's last Saturday evening. The affair was, as usual, one long to be remembered by the participants. The dinner was a momentus one, in that the members of the Town Club, with which the old Boston Club is now amalgamated, also took part in the prandial and post prandial exercises. Long may the joint prosperity of the two organizations continue.

[From the above lucid item we should judge our worthy editor must have been at the dinner.—Devil.]

SACRAMENTO, Cal. Wheelmen are making themselves obnoxious by riding on the sidewalks of that city. There is a city ordinance against this practise and we hope to hear that an example has been made. An exchange from Sacramento says, "About three years ago a bold wheelman ran against an old lady and knocked her over, and she has been confined to her bed ever since from the effects of the shock and the injuries she received."

REPRESENTATIVE WARNER, of St. Louis County, Mo., has distinguished himself by introducing a prohibitory bill into the State Legislature. The particulars of the remarkable bill are given in detail in the official department of this paper. It will be well for Missouri riders to ponder whether "the League should go into politics" when any member who supports this bill comes up for office again in his (the rider's) particular district.

J. W. McGOWIN, Secretary of the Keystone Bicycle Club of Pittsburg, Pa., writes: "In your list of 'Oldest Clubs' given in the issue of 15th Feb., I noticed the absence of our club, so therefore write a few lines to say our organization was perfected December 14th, 1879, with a membership of seven (mystical number.) The following year, October 12th, 1880, application was made for membership in the L. A. W., the club retaining said membership until the present time and ranking as one of the few 'oldest' League club."

A WAIL.

Oh for the lights of other days,
Those good old days of yore;
Before they ground the record down
To less than '34!

Dim memories of Springfield in
The half-forgotten past,
Ere riders learned the way to win,
Was not by riding fast!

Avaunt, ye gibbering spectres
Of a glory that has fled!
Why come ye back to haunt us
From regions of the dead?

Why must ye call to mind the time
When club-men hung together;
When runs were runs and always ran
In fine or stormy weather?

For oh, it is a gruesome thing
To see, here in the Hub,
A captain brave in braid and gold,
But minus any club!

And where are now the heroes
Of the last and greatest scoop?
Echo, drops to slang and answers
"Where they should be—in the soup."

WE wish to inform our friends and the cycling trade, that Sam Goodman, who has been travelling with professional racing teams, has no business connections with us, and we will not pay any bills contracted by him. We think he is at the present time in Washington, D. C. HENRY AND JOSEPH GOODMAN.

Hartford, Feb. 26, 1889.

THAT RECORD OF 2.18 1-5.

Editor Bicycling World: We observe in your issue of the 25th ult that you have a paragraph stating you consider the record of 2 min. 18 1-5 sec., accomplished on our now famous "Triplet" cycle a "fake."

We think that we are too well known to want or need any bogus records. The road chosen was from the 61st to the 62d milestone at Buckden (North road), and Messrs. Hillyer, Rowe, and others, were the Time-keepers.

Two minutes 18 1-5 seconds (one mile) is certainly not the limit or speed obtainable by this really wonderful machine, as the day it was accomplished the weather was very wintry.

We think that before this season is out, we shall get inside two minutes on a straightaway level road. Apologizing for troubling you with this letter, and thanking you in anticipation of its insertion, or notice of same, we remain yours truly.

Coventry, Feb. 11, 1889. RUDGE CYCLE CO., Limited.

MORE ABOUT THAT RECORD OF 2.18 1-5.

THUS saith Wheeling in regard to that record of the Triplet: "The BICYCLING WORLD says it is of the opinion that the world's record of the Triplet, one mile in 2.18 1-5, is a fake. Come, Mr. Fourdrinier, your paper is not a Bicycling News that it should strike out like this. We grant that had the record been accomplished in America, that paper (the Bi. News) would have guyed it. No one here would have taken any notice, however. Prithee, Friend Fourdrinier, do not retaliate on the innocent. The record is a good record, made under favorable circumstances, perhaps, but then, so are most path records."

Our end is accomplished. We hammered away until we got some one to say something about the claim. The above letter from Messrs. Rudge and the item from Wheeling seem to put a more reasonable light on the record, and so down it goes, as a wonderful road performance.

[Private advices just to hand, speaking of the claimed record, say: "The Triplet is the fastest and safest cycle ever built. * * I have no reason to doubt the distance or timing, but the start was made flying, the course straight away, a considerable part of which was down grade." * * We are glad to be able to present this mass of evidence, as now we believe it was done, and we know how, also.—ED.]

SHENANDOAH VALLEY—ROUTES WANTED AND GIVEN.

Editor Bicycling World: In your next issue will you ask anyone who knows to kindly give the best route from Chambersburg, Pa., to Washington, D. C.? Also from Washington to Oxford, Chester Co., Pa., via Baltimore. I contemplate taking a trip between the above-named places in the spring, and would be very grateful for any advice as to roads, etc. Fraternally. 19511.

A REPLY TO NO. 3502.

Dear No. 3502.—Have you never heard of the famed Shenandoah Valley pike? No? Well by all means come and see it and enjoy it, or ask about it of some one who does not live on such a road and can better eulogize it. Were I to praise it, it might be thought I had not been from home and knew no better, or at best was prejudiced in favor of home enterprises.

Having reached Cumberland, Md., follow the tow-path (see Karl Kron XM Miles on a Bicycle) to Harper's Ferry, thence to Charlestown, to Berryville, to Winchester, to Woodstock, to Harrisonburg, to Staunton, and even on to the Natural Bridge if you like, though from Staunton on the road is not macadamized, a good dirt road, however. Affording still more of the desired "picnic" would be the route through Greencastle, Pa.; Hagerstown, Md.; Martinsburg, W. Va.; Winchesta, Va.; and so on, as above.

A good road will not remain good by being let alone, so you can fully expect to find some portion of the road being repaired by the addition of new stones. Occasionally this may necessitate a dismount for a short distance, but not often.

Further information will be furnished by any local Consul along the route, or by Yours truly, N. B. SCHMITT.

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 23d, 1889.

Editor Bicycling World: Will some of your readers give me a good route from Philadelphia, for a tour of from one to two weeks? My chief desire is to find good roads and fine scenery.

Would like good routes to Gettysburg or the Northern part of New Jersey. Yours. 19,308.

Philadelphia, Jan. 28th, 1889.

STANLEY SHOW STATISTICS.

A MOST interesting table of statistics is published by the Cyclist of Feb. 13th, showing the number of exhibits at each of the preceding annual shows. The table is an epitomized history of cycling itself, showing the growth of the sport and the comparative rise and fall in popularity of the different types of machines.

From 1883 to 1886 it will be noticed that the tricycle took the lead in numbers exhibited, while at the show just past the single dwarf safeties outnumber all the rest of the exhibits put together.

OUR SHENANDOAH VALLEY TOUR.

(By "Tourist.")

THE first incident of this tour settled our exuberant spirits and shrouded us in a pall of gloom. We had come from Washington on the night train over the Piedmont Air Line, changed cars at Lynchburg, and were now in the early morning at the depot near the Natural Bridge, Virginia. Mac had broken one of his levers in two in an extraordinary attempt to climb the first hill. Now wasn't that lever a hollow mockery?

The day was too lovely, however, to be spoiled by this unlucky accident, and we were soon enjoying the scenery. We spent the day wandering about on foot, following the course of the stream that ripples underneath the Natural Bridge, and ever returning to wonder at this beautiful work of nature.

Towards evening we rode over to Lexington, Mac getting along the best he could with one lever. The road is of clay and quite hilly. We had the good fortune to meet a young Virginian about midway of the longest hill, who was extremely hospitable. He had a number of bottles of beer in his buggy, and said he had emptied a number more, so it was well we met him, or he certainly wouldn't have reached home sober.

We were well entertained at Irvin's, Lexington, and spent the forenoon of the next day looking about, while a locksmith tried to make a weld of Mac's lever. The time was well spent. An article in the January number of the Century magazine, entitled "The West Point of the Confederacy," gives a very interesting history of the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington. There are also the burial places of Robert E. Lee and "Stonewall" Jackson, the Washington and Lee College, and other places of interest to visit.

The locksmith having found out that he didn't know anything about repairing bicycles, we took the afternoon train for Harrisonburg, where we had learned there was a bicycle repairer.

On arriving at Harrisonburg we found that it had been raining there steadily for three days, but we were now on the famous limestone pike of the Shenandoah valley, one of the best roads in this country, and knew it would be all right if the storm would only clear away. And sure enough, about noon the following day the rain ceased, except an occasional shower, and our troubles were at an end, as the repairer had in the meantime inlaid a piece of steel in the hollow lever and riveted the whole thing so stoutly that a team of oxen could not have pulled it apart.

We had made the acquaintance of Dr. Harris during the morning, an enthusiastic wheelman and very genial fellow, and but for his kindly offices would probably have missed one of the greatest pleasures of the tour, namely, a visit to the wonderful caverns, some six miles out of New Market. Leaving the pike where an old sign, "New Market Caverns," points toward the mountains, we stored our wheels in a farmer's barn, and started to walk over, as the side road had not been macadamized, and was far too miry for wheeling.

The entrance to the caverns is located on a farm about three miles from the main road. They do not have many visitors, as there is no railway station near and they are not advertised, but their natural beauty will repay anyone for a long trip. On reaching the farm we found the "old man" crippled with rheumatism and his boys away from home, but his daughter (a comely lass, by the way) said she would act as guide, and a very interesting one she proved to be. The entrance to the caverns reminds one of going down into a well. The air down underneath the ground was pure but cold, although it was then the middle of summer. We were provided with candles and reflectors, and as our guide wound about among the intricate passages, with which she seemed perfectly familiar, we kept as close to her as our bashfulness would permit.

The stalactites were white and crystalized, and formed many beautiful and fairy-like grottos. In one place there was a small crystal lake. After we had gone several miles under ground and could get no further without crawling, we returned by another route to daylight, and, bidding our fair guide adieu, made haste towards New Market for supper.

We concluded to visit Luray caverns the next day, so as to compare them with the New Market caverns.

THE BUFFALO'S BANQUET.

THE Buffalo Bicycle Club celebrated its tenth anniversary and Washington's Birthday with a banquet on the evening of the 22d at the Genesee. Covers were laid for fifty. The tables occupied the center of the dining room in the form of a T. Silver candelabra were placed at each end of the table and in the center was a bank of flowers. The menu cards were beautifully engraved and at a lower corner were bangles of tin lanterns and pails. The menu consisted of fifteen courses—and a toast master. A noticeable feature this banquet was the presence of many our older members, including two of our respected honory members Dr. Danelson of Buffalo and Dr. Blackham of Dunkirk. About two hours were consumed in satisfying the inner man when the tap was given by toast master, Prof. Richardson. He paid a glowing tribute to the Father of our Country and a toast was drank to his memory.

"Our History" was responded to by President C. F. Hotchkiss. Mr. Hotchkiss said that the Buffalo Bicycle Club had a history of which he was proud. It was organized when cycling was in its infancy. The first meeting was held just ten years ago at the office of Dr. H. T. Appleby (deceased). There were two besides Dr. Appleby at this meeting, Geo. F. Chavel and John T. Gard, ex-chief Councelor. Geo. R. Bidwell became a member in April 1879. To these few pioneers we owed our present existence. The club had entertained and banqueted many clubs in the past. Of the large gatherings which the club had entertained were the sixth annual meet of the L. A. W. in 1885, the fourth annual meet of the New York State Division in 1886 and the New York State Division meet in 1888.

Mr. R. K. Smither responded to the toast "Our new members and Ancient History." He was at a loss to discover what connection there was between Ancient History and new members, if applied to his name he congratulated himself on his escape from the ancient family of Smith, he could proudly say that he was Smither. He noticed a general movement for athletics, especially among the ladies and that our physical condition was a condition, and not a theory that confronted us.

Prof. Richardson here read letters of regret from many wheelmen mostly non-resident.

The L. A. W. was responded to by Dr. C. S. Butler. Said he, "I know of no better word picture as a comparison for the destiny of the League of American Wheelmen than this: Among the legends of the late civil war there is a story of a dinner party given by Americans residing in Paris, at which were propounded sundry toasts concerning not so much the past and present as the expected glories of the great American Nation. 'Here's to the United States,' said the first speaker, 'bounded on the north by British America, on the south by the gulf of Mexico, on the east by the Atlantic and on the west by the Pacific Ocean,' but, said the second speaker, 'this is far too limited a view of the subject: in assigning our boundaries we must look to the great and glorious future described for us by the manifest destiny of the Anglo Saxon Race. Here's to the United States, bounded on the north by the north pole, on the south by the south pole, on the east by the rising sun and on the west by the setting sun.' But here arose the third speaker, 'if we are going,' said this patriotic American, 'to leave the historic past and present and take our manifest destiny into the account why restrict ourselves into such narrow limits? I give you the United States bounded on the north by the Aurora Borealis, on the south by the procession of the equinoxes, on the east by the primival chaos and on the west by the Day of Judgement.' Such are the unbounded possibilities of the League of American Wheelmen. The objects of the League were, during its first period of existence for the developement of a social organization, and later its energies were directed to the regulation of racing, and at the present time, the Dr. said, "A question paramount to all others, a question of vital importance to all wheelwheelmen, of infinate benefit to the country at large was the rights of the wheel in the parks, and the improvement of the roads and public highways. This was a stupendous task and it remained with us whether this accomplishment could be realized." (On the question of roads and highway improvement there is not a man in the League more enthusiastic, more capable and more worthy of his steel than is Dr. C. S. Butler.)

"Our Honorary Members" was responded to by the genial Dr. Blackham of Dunkirk. The Dr. told us just what an honorary member was. Two street urchins were viewing a procession, and as the line of carriages hove in sight, said one to the other, "who be them men a ridin'?" The answer was, "Old duffers wat kant keep with the crowd, but foller in hacks."

The "State Division" was well taken care of by Councelor W. S. Bull. It was the largest Division in the League. ALI BABA.

ELIZABETH, N. J.

THE Elizabeth Wheelmen gave a unique entertainment at Temple Opera House, Elizabeth, N. J., Tuesday evening, Feb. 12th. The play consisted of a burlesque on summer touring and tended to bring out the various abilities of its members in the form of solos, quartettes and character delinations.

The Opera House was well filled with the elite of Elizabeth as well as their brother wheelmen from neighboring cities, (many accompanied by ladies) noticeably Hudson Co. Wheelmen, Essex Bi. Club and Atlantas of Newark and the Plainfield Wheelmen.

The entertainment was pronounced a success both socially and financially and as a feature of the same the sweet strains of music by the well trained orchestra were highly appreciated and heartily applauded. The club started in the summer of 1883 but was incorporated in the spring of 1885.

Their pretty Club House situated on East Broad street with all its appurtenances is a crowning object of successful perseverence on the part of its members.

Their club is one of the largest and most influential in N. J. and has carried off a goodly share of honors in mileage, long distance riding and fast time.

The Elizabeth Club has attained as it has undoubtedly earned a leading position in the ranks of the wheelmen of the State.

CLEARFIELD, PA.

The liberty bill question is in full blast in this state. Secretary-Treasurer Carpenter has been sending out the suggestions of the committee in printed form, to all League men in the state, requesting each to write to the nearest Representative or Senator asking their influence and support. The committee is composed of good men. They are Samuel A. Boyle, Philadelphia; W. R. Tucker, Philadelphia and D. K. Trimmer, York. A petition has been circulated among the wheelmen and those friendly to them, urging the co-operation of Senator W. W. Betts in this matter. S. I. Snyder kindly took the petition in charge at the first notice received of the desire of the committee. Our Senator now has that, as well as a few persuasive appeals from interested parties to ponder over.

One of Clearfield's enthusiastic wheelmen, A. F. Boynton, is now indulging in the pleasures of his safety at Thomasville, Georgia.

The safety will soon have the lead here. The ordinary must take a back attic box for the present season, if not for all time.

In the discussion going on in some of the bicycle journals, "Ordinary vs. Safety," it is surprising with what candor a novice will put himself up before old riders as their adviser. One writer in one of the cycling papers of last week says: "Last summer was my first season, I am a novice, a new rider, a new comer," etc., Then he fires away by continuing, "I ride an ordinary, the best machine made for comfort, style and beauty. I ride an ordinary because fresh air may be had up in the air." Yes my dear boy when you get "up in the air" you may have air, but us poor fellows who ride the safety seem to get on somehow or other without air. We noticed that Whittaker made a half mile the other day in about 1.9. If he didn't take air what did he take? I think Whit.'s "take" is seltzer and lemon as a rule, but on this occasion he must have had a "few" air also. J. E. HARDER.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY AT THE VICTOR HEADQUARTERS.

THE headquarters of the Overman Wheel Co., of this city, were the scene of much life and animation on Friday last, the occasion being the opening day in which the Overman Co. showed the wheels they propose to put on the market for the coming season. Washington's Birthday will hereafter be Opening Day for this firm, and on that day in years to come the pleasant affair of last week will be made a regular event. The hospitality of the Overman Wheel Co. was enjoyed by several hundred visitors, who brought their capacity for consuming sandwiches, lemonade and cigars right along with them. The Victor people evidently knew that a big draft on the commissary would be made, and although the demand was enormous the supply was generous and greater.

In the matter of the ordinary the patterns of last year and this are practically the same, the 1888 pattern having been found to be all that could be desired.

The same can be said of the Victor Jr., with the exception of price, which will be $40 for 38-inch, with $2.50 rise for each larger size.

In regard to the safety, some few minor improvements have been made. The angle of the handle-bar has been changed, giving a more graceful appearance. The brake lever has been made heavier, and this with the brake is now absolutely noiseless. The saddle is now fitted to an L post, thus bringing the weight more on the rear wheel, and reducing the difficulty of steering to a minimum. The bearings of rear and sprocket wheels are improved in the manner of attachment to the forks and locking the adjustment.

The rear wheel mud guard has been extended and braced. Front wheel and chain guards can also be supplied if desired.

In the construction of the new Victor Safety chain, each link is perfectly finished and the greatest care taken in putting all together. When complete each chain is subjected to a test of 2000 pounds steain. As a result each joint works freely and the chain runs as smooth as a ribbon.

The nickel and the enamel finish is equal to anything produced. The new safety saddle and spring and a splendid luggage carrier will be the subject of description and illustration next week.

THE Overman Wheel Co. will import the Rover Safety Lady's Bicycle and so that firm will be in position to deliver these splendid wheels on about April 1st.

SCHOREELING, Daly and Gales, the large gun house 302 Broadway, N. Y., have taken the agency for the New Mail Wheels and will have a large stock on hand through the season.

"THE Springfield Bicycle Co. have opened a wholesale house at Cleveland, Ohio, and C. J. Moore, the superintendent of the works here, is to have charge. He moved with his family from this village last Saturday." Needham (Mass.) Chronicle.

MR. EDWARD PENNOCK of Philadelphia, Pa., writes to Messrs. Singer & Co. as follows: "Please send your new catalogue as soon as it is ready. I have had your "Royal Challenge" since spring of '81. It's as sound as ever yet, in all important points [although I have had to put slight repairs to it occasionally, as might reasonably be expected.]. I hardly want a better one today.

GEORGE HENDEE will be connected with W. W. Stall during the coming season. Mr. Stall intends to push for business this year, and he has made immense preparations for an increased repair business. He has one of, if not the finest repair shop in the country.

REINHART T. TORKELSON, who has had charge of the experimen department with Ivers, Johnson & Co., of Worcester, Mass., for the past nine years, has severed his connection with that firm to accept a similar position with the Springfield Bicycle Company. His friends wish him the greatest success in his new position.

THE Premier Tandem Safety receives a strong recommendation in this issue from one of our oldest riders. No other type of cycle receives as severe strain as a tandem safety, and the manufacturers of the Premier have paid such strict attention to this fact that of the considerable number sold in this country during the past six months, not a single one has been reported to the importer as going wrong in the least. Two points of the Premier are worthy of special notice. The frame is so strong as to require no extra stay for the heaviest male rider, and the propelling strain is applied to both sides of the driving hub.

ORATON HALL, NEWARK, N. J.

LEAGUE HEADQUARTERS:
12 Pearl Street, - - - - - Room 27.
ABBOT BASSETT, Secretary.

A BILL was Introduced in the house at Jefferson City, by Representative Warner of St. Louis County, Wednesday, which, if it becomes a law, will seriously affect the bicycle clubs of St. Louis. There is reason to believe, too, that the bill will meet the approval of the assembly, because the average country legislator thinks that only dudes ride bicycles. They do not know, neither do they care, that the members of the bicycle organizations of Missouri are composed mostly of men in the large cities who have no other recreation or out-door exercise than that obtained in riding their steeds of steel. The provisions of the bill are, that it shall hereafter be unlawful for any person or persons to run or engage in any race mounted on any vehicle usually called velocipede or bicycle on any highway or public road in any of the counties outside of any city limits in this state; and all persons travelling by the use of such vehicles upon any such highways or roads, on meeting any person or persons on horses or mules, or in vehicles of any kind, shall come to a halt at a distance of 100 yards from the place on such highways or roads where said person or persons on horses or mules, or in vehicle drawn by horses or mules are met; and the bicycle rider shall dismount from the velocipede or bicycle and remain so until the persons met shall have passed a distance of twenty-five yards. For a violation of the provisions of this law the rider shall, on conviction, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not less than $10 and not more than $100. In addition to the fine he shall be liable to civil action for any damage to persons or property by reason of any horses or mules becoming frightened at the bicycle. This is hayseed legislation with a vengeance.—Spectator.

And yet there are those who say that wheelmen have all their rights and there is no use for the League. Now Missouri show the world what organized effort can do.

Massachusetts Division.

To the Board of Officers: A meeting of the Board will be held at the Clarendon Hotel, 521 Tremont street, Boston, on Saturday evening, March 2, at eight o'clock P. M. Fraternally, WM. H. EVERY,
Boston, Feb. 21, 1889. Chief Consul.

New York.

To the Board of Officers, New York State Division L. A. W.: An adjourned meeting of the Board of Officers of this Division will be held at the New York Bicycle Club House 140 West End avenue near 72d street, New York City, Monday evening, March 4th, at 8.30 o'clock. As certain amendments to our By Laws will be presented at this meeting as well as other business demanding our attention, I earnestly request the attendance of every member. Yours truly,
GEO. R. BIDWELL, Chief Consul.
New York, Feb. 25, 1889.

Pennsylvania Bill.

The following bill defining the rights and regulating the use of bicycles and tricycles is now before the Legislature of Pennsylvania:

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met and it is herby enacted by the authority of the same: That bicycles, tricycle and all vehicles propelled by hand or foot and all persons by whom bicycles, tricycles and such other vehicles are used ridden or propelled upon the public highways of this state shall be entitled to the same rights and subject to the same restrictions in the use thereof as are prescribed by law in the cases of persons using carriages drawn by horses.

Section 2. The commissioners or other authorities having charge or control of any public street, highway parkway, driveway or public place in this state shall have no power or authority to pass, enforce or maintain any ordinance rule or regulation by which any person using a bicycle or tricycle shall be excluded or prohibited from the free use of any public highway, street, avenue, road, driveway, parkway or public place at any time when the same is open to the free use of persons having and using other carriages as hereinbefore named nor shall such commissioners or other persons pass enforce or maintain any ordinance rule or regulation relating only to bicycles or tricycles and not to other carriages as mentioned in section one of this act.

Section 3. Nothing in this act shall be so construed as to prevent the passage of any regulation ordinance or rule regulating the use of bicycles or tricycles in highways, streets, driveways, parkways and public places in such manner as to limit and determine the proper rate of speed at which said vehicles may be propelled nor to require direct or prohibit the use of bells, lamps and other appurtenances nor to prohibit to any vehicle the use of that part of the street, highway or parkway commonly known as the footpath or side walk.

Section 4. All acts or parts of acts inconsistent here with be and the same are hereby repealed.

L. A. W. Uniforms.

To the members of the L. A. W.: We have discontinued the arrangements had with Wanamaker & Brown of Philadelphia, Pa., to the manufacture of the L. A. W. Uniform, and placed same with Messrs. Browning, King & Co., 408 Broome street, New York City, who will supply the coat and pants, and with Messrs. A. G. Spalding & Bros., 241 Broadway, New York City, who will supply the cap, hat, stockings, belt and shoes.

Prices: Coat $8.25, Breeches $5.50, Shirt $2.00, Cap $1.25, Hose $1.00, Belt $.50, Shoes $5.00.

Arrangements have been made between A. G. Spalding & Bros. and Browning, King & Co. whereby any suit or parts of suits wanted can be procured from either house, thus in many instances saving extra express charges. Prices will be the same in either case.

Members who desire to have their suits made to measure by their home tailor can be supplied with the cloth at $2.25 per yard on application to B. K. & Co.

Messrs. Browning, King & Co. through previous experience in making the League Uniform, and also through the fact of having the largest and best equipped establishment in the United States, are in position to give us satisfaction in any particular, and as the matter has not been handled to the satisfaction of the members of the League or the committee in the past two seasons, we considered a change necessary and in fact imperative.

The above mentioned firms will mail each member of the League a sample of the L. A. W. Uniform cloth. Also an illustrated descriptive circular of all the different articles with full directions as to ordering, measurements, etc.

This change will take place January 15th.
GEO. R. BIDWELL,
Chairman Uniform Committee.

New Jersey Road Book.

It has been a great source of annoyance and regret to the officers of the New Jersey Division that the promised road book has been so long delayed, but the delay has been no fault of theirs.

We were promised the book should be ready at the beginning of the riding season last year, but after some considerable delay the publishing house failed and nothing was done upon the road book for a number of months. Then Mr. Wells, who had it in charge went to Europe thus causing another delay. Now we are assured that it will be ready for delivery to the members before the first of May. J. H. COOLEY,
Chief Consul.

Tennessee Appointment.

Mr. Frank R. Birdsall has been appointed Local Consul for Nashville, in place of Mr. Ed. D. Fisher who was recently elected Vice Consul of the Division.
Fraternally, JOS. R. WILSON, JR.
Chief Consul.

APPLICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP.

The following is a list of applications for membership received up to date, and published in accordance with Article III. of the Constitution, which is as follows:

"Any amateur wheelman, in good standing, eighteen years of age or over, shall, with the indorsement of two League members in good standing, or of three reputable citizens of the United States or Canada, be eligible to membership in this League upon payment of an initiation fee of one dollar, and such dues for the year as may be provided for in the By-Laws. Upon the approval of the Board of Officers, or a committee thereof, two weeks after the publication of the name in a list of candidates in the official organ of the League, the applicant shall become a member."

Tickets will be issued seventeen days after the publication of names.

Candidates will please notice if their names and addresses are correct.

Members are requested to examine carefully these lists as they are published, and to report errors and omissions to the Secretary. In order that no objectionable person may unite with the League, members are given the right to protest, but such protest must be received by the Secretary within two weeks from the date of publication, and contain specific charges so far as it is possible to make them. All such communications will be considered confidential.

The application list is closed at 10 A. M. on the Monday preceding day of publication. All applications received after that hour must go over to the list to the following week.

TESTIMONIAL.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 26th, 1888.

Frank Fairbairn. Dear Sir—Your knit goods have given me the most satisfaction of any bicycle clothing I have tried, the elastic fit giving such freedom to the limbs, and the durable qualities they have shown, make them most desirable. I could not go back to cloth goods, after these, with any comfort. I shall wear them the coming summer, for business and pleasure, and wife says the old pair of breeches she cut down for my boy are the best wearing goods he has had yet; outlasted three pair of cloth ones already, and still going. I wore them two years myself. Yours, E. N. BOWEN.

H. B. SMITH MACHINE CO.

Gentlemen—The bicycle has done extra good work and has been over all kinds of roads without repairs. Yours very truly,
FRANK J. WOODARD.

WESTERLY, R. I., Feb. 11, 1889.

H. B. SMITH MACHINE CO.

Gentlemen—I am very highly pleased thus far with the 39 inch, as a road machine. It is a better hill climber than any machine I have ever before ridden, for all I can see it is just about as speedy as the larger sizes, and I am astonished to find so slight a difference if any, in the jar on rough roads.
Very cordially yours,
DR. J. HOWARD MORGAN.

MARVA, Ill., Dec. 7, 1888.

H. B. SMITH MACHINE CO.

Sir—I have rode a crank wheel for 12 years, but last season I bought a Star; I would not give it for any wheel I was ever on, for all round riding and tricks.
Yours respectfully,
SILAS LONG.

JACKSON CENTRE, O., Aug. 21, 1888.

H. B. SMITH MACHINE CO.

Dear Sir—I can say in regard to the wheel (Star) that it is the lightest running, best hill climbing, and speediest wheel I have ever ridden, and I have tried both the "crank" and lever wheels. Yours respectfully,
J. E. MERANDA.

CHESTER, Pa., Dec. 7, 1888.

THE STAR MFG. CO.

I have been riding a 51-inch American Star for the past few months, and find it a constantly increasing source of pleasure. I am city editor of the Chester Times, and find my wheel valuable in reaching suburban points quickly. A friend also began riding a crank when I started in on my Star; has three times broken his handle-bar by headers, while I haven't spent a dollar for repairs to my machine, and it is an old wheel, while his is new.

This in brief is my experience with a Star, and though it is of the old pattern I wouldn't exchange with any one of the other fellows. If you wish to use this as a testimonial I have no objections. Very truly yours,
T. W. ENTWISLE.

To the POPE MFG. CO.,

Gentlemen:

I enclose my check for the amount of your bill. I tried the Columbia Light Roadster Safety to-day, and was delighted. I call it a poem. It is a sonnet, it has such unity and finish. Or it is a tune on a hand-organ, it runs along so steadily and merrily. Sometimes I took it for a mesmerized mechanism, for it seemed to know my thoughts without telling, and that is more than most mesmerized subjects can do.

Yours very truly,

E. H. Johnson.

VICTOR, KING OF SAFETIES.

The VICTOR SAFETY has the original and only efficient Spring Fork in the market. It is the only "diamond frame" Safety made in America.

OVERMAN WHEEL CO., Makers, - - - BOSTON.

THE POPULAR PREMIER SAFETY

Has been happily named; it has sprung at once into the front rank of popular favor, and orders are coming in for it from all quarters. Many orders? well, we thought we had booked enough Populars to last us some time, will admit, in fact, that we felt a little dubious about its reception. But we underrated your good judgment and beg your pardon for our error. We have quintupled that first order, and now expect to double that, shortly. Perhaps you would like to know why our Popular Premier Safety is so popular. First, because it is good, and second, because it is low-priced. How can it be both good and low-priced? We'll tell you that. Good because the workmanship is honest and material of the best; low-priced because Mr. Hillman's ingenuity has devised a frame which is just as strong and durable as weldless tubing, but is not nearly so expensive. It is heavier than our Special; lightness and strength are the costliest attributes to build into a wheel—together. But it is no heavier than many of the high-priced Safeties, and we guarantee it to be as staunch, durable and easy-running as the best of them. Steel throughout—forged, rolled, cold-drawn. No castings. Diamond frame; hollow curved forks; weldless steel tube handle-bar and steering-rod; adjustable ball bearings throughout; seven-eighths rubbers and butt-ended spokes; handsomely finished in Harrington's Enamel and Nickel. Price, including ball pedals, bag, tools and oiler, $105. That is why it is popular, both with riders and dealers.

EDITORS:

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 8 MARCH, 1889.

READ that splendid testimonial, on page 306, of Mr. L. H. Johnson, addressed to the WORLD. Those figures talk.

THE colored supplements, which we send out this week will speak for themselves. This is the first time, we believe, that the editors of this paper have ever sent out portraits of themselves. We think the likenesses good, so it will be the means of giving our large constituency an idea of what manner of men we are. To those who have never seen us, we would state that Mr. Fourdrinier has control of the steering, while Mr. Dean is shown on the rear seat. As to the likeness of Mr. Garden we think all will admit that it is excellent. As to the mechanical excellence of these dainty water color reproductions, we will allow that to speak for itself.

WE have been advised that the author of that remarkable article printed in the Spectator, and which we reprinted in our last issue, is none other than our old friend Page. We do not vouch for the truth of the statement, but it certainly had a Pagerian flavor about it. Who ever the author may be, the article in the Spectator just to hand shows how that astute scribe can turn a double flip-flap and come up standing and smiling, pat the backs of the same fellows whom he has castigated, and smooth down the fur that he has ruffled with his rod of wrath.

Mr. Page, or who ever he may be, has a queer notion of what constitutes a panacea for insult offered. His notion may be that you can revile a man one week, and the next week jocosely pass it off as being nothing particularly offensive in his peculiar methods.

The time, however, may come when the "Pagerian" editor will awaken to the fact that the outraged man possesses a heavy hand and a boot of large proportions, well directed.

HEAR what the Providence (R. I.) Telegram saith: "The report that a Pawtucket bicyclist ran over three Pawtucket Aldermen is likely to prove damaging to the reputation of wheelmen for good judgment. It is beyond the general knowledge how a bicyclist of good sense could waste his time running over aldermen when the Rhode Island Legislature is in session."

THE SCRANTON BICYCLE CLUB RECEPTION.

THE splendid new headquarters of the Scranton Bicycle Club were the scene of great festivities on the evening of Feb. 25. Chief Consul Jessup is the President of this club. This paper has, on a former occasion, printed a description and cut of this club house, but a short resume may not be out of place.

The basement, which is entered from Olive street, contains a large room for the reception of wheels; a room for the lockers; toilet rooms; a shower bath; furnace room; janitor's cellar, etc.

The first story is divided into a large hall, parlor, reception room and dining room. By the arrangement of the neatly constructed doors the whole floor can be thrown into one room when desirable. The finishing of the building is in light wood, and the handsome mantel that adorns the main parlor is a gift from Architect Duckworth, who designed the club house. In the parlor and other rooms about the house the skill of Draper Hart, of Hull & Co.'s establishment, is manifested in the handsome portieres and other hangings that have been placed in position in a manner to produce the best artistic effects.

Ascending the staircase that leads to the main hallway on the second floor, two cozy card rooms greet the eye at the left. At the end of the hall in the tower over the main entrance, is situated the President's room. This room has been handsomely furnished by Mr. Jessup, the President, who takes a lively interest in the welfare of the club upon all occasions, and has labored hard with the rest of the members to achieve the results. The reading room, with its comfortable leather chairs, adjoins the President's room, and beyond this is the billiard room, which contains two tables. This floor also contains bath and toilet rooms.

Upon the third floor is situated the kitchen, china closet, and a number of bed rooms. The rooms last evening were used in serving refreshments.

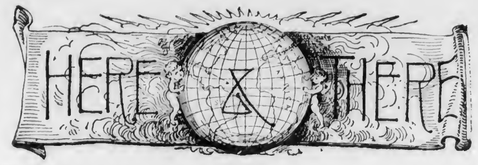
Elegant stained glass windows soften the rays of the orb of day in the hallways, and at night the place can be made brilliant from numerous incandescent lights or gas burners upon the beautiful chandeliers about the building.

President Jessup and Dr. Frey, together with the patronesses, Mrs. G. A. Jessup, Mrs. Frey, Mrs. S. P. Hull, and Mrs. J. A. Scranton, received the guests.

After the first hours of the evening had been passed in viewing the beauties of the elegant structure, and after congratulations, the floors of the dining room and parlors were cleared, and those who desired indulged in dancing to the merry music from Bauer's orchestra, which also rendered selections at intervals during the reception.

Guests were present from Boston, New York, Washington, Pittsburg, Wilkesbarre, Rochester (N. Y.) and other cities.

The officers and members of the bicycle club are as follows: Geo. A. Jessup, President; John J. Van Nort, Vice President; J. A. Spencer, Secretary pro tem.; F. D. Watts, Treasurer; H. C. Wallace, Captain.



STREET IMPROVEMENTS IN NEW YORK CITY.

THE New York Bicycle Club have sent out already over 3000 of the following circulars to prominent citizens and cyclists of New York State, asking for the signature and that same be returned as per an addressed and stamped envelope enclosed. In the matter of postage alone this has already cost the New York Bicycle Club over $60. Vive la New York Bi. Club, vive la Shriver!!

Hon. Ernest H. Crosby, Chairman Committee on Cities, Assembly of the State of New York:

The undersigned gives his hearty endorsement, as a citizen of New York, to Mr. Connelly's Bill for the repaving of the Grand Boulevard with Asphalt, and urges that your committee will give it such favorable consideration as will ensure its passage by the Legislature.

THE report that Sam Sterling, the celebrated hill climber, was burned in the Hartford, Conn., Hotel, was not correct. Mr. Sterling is alive and happily, unburnt. He will be in Boston this Spring and will beat his own record for climbing Corey.

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

MR. GARDEN'S annual dinner to talk over the Pullman road race, is a thing of the past. The following wheelmen were fortunate enough to receive the coveted invitations: Miles, of the Referee, formerly known to wheelmen as "the Looker-on," and generally believed to be the "Stroller;" W. C. Thorne, the "author;" Van Sicklen, the old war horse; Sieg, the truthful; Davis, Skinkle, Randall and Street, schemers and politicians; Hosford, the cycling capitalist; Ingalls, the festive; and Roberts, Harris, Irwin, Mason and Frost; and it is needless to say that at the roll call all were present. These dinners have become famous, owing to the entertaining powers of Mr. Garden and his better half, and if you have attended one or heard your fellow cyclist describe one, you need no urging to accept an invitation, provided you get one. The "Stroller" would have liked nothing better than to have been present, but, alas, the invitation that he longed for never came. By a little judicious pumping of some of the fortunate I have succeeded in getting the following account of the occasion: Before the edibles had been disposed of almost two hours had elapsed. The last toast had been proposed and responded to, chairs were pushed back, cigars were lighted, the identity of the "Stroller" was discussed, and finally a ballot taken resulting as follows: Garden 13, Thorne 1, Hosford 1, Miles 1. Garden immediately collapsed, and after recovery especially requested not to publish the same, as he would not have St. Louis know it for anything. A shade of relief passed over Skinkle's classic countenance, while Sieg smiled sorrowfully, and Davis and Street nudged each other significantly. A game of billiards between representatives of the Lincolns, Illinois and Chicagos resulted in a victory for the Lincoln man. Then music and smoke mingled in delicious harmony, as it were, until the hour grew late, when the third annual Pullman road race was discussed in an informal way, until train put an end to everything. A unanimous expression of thanks having been given to host and hostess, the annual dinner was over.

LUMSDEN has been on the sick list for a week or so, but is one more able to attend to business. e

THE Lincolns' raffle netted the club some four hundred dollars. Fairclough won the New Mail bicycle.

CONKLING and Garden seem to be unusually sarcastic about each other. Would you know the reason? Ask Riggs.

ABOUT a hundred couples attended the masquerade ball of the Æolus Club. All the other clubs were well represented.

IN the social line the Chicagos, Lincolns, Illinois, and in fact all the clubs have kept up a continuous round of social events.

I UNDERSTAND Miller is experiencing a little difficulty in getting the Exposition Building for his tournament, and that he may have to secure other quarters. I hope not, for the Exposition Building is the only desirable place.

A CORRESPONDENT, called "Observer," tells me that Temple never was a member of the Chicagos, honorary or otherwise. If memory fails me not Temple was made an honorary member of the old Owl Club, afterwards the Fort Dearborns, who consolidated with the Chicago Bicycle Club, forming the Chicago Cycling Club, thus making Temple an honorary member of the Chicagos to-day, unless some action was taken by the club in regard to the same. What say you now, "Observer?"

THE Chicagos now have a smoker every Saturday night, with a light lunch. They also had what they were pleased to term a New England dinner Thursday evening, followed by dancing, etc. Pumpkin pie, baked beans, brown bread and doughnuts were there in plenty, and other representative dishes of New England. The ladies were dressed in Martha Washington costume. And say, did you notice Randall at the supper table? He was not alone, either, "but for goodness don't say I told you."

WHAT does the Illinois Club think of "Observer" and his description of Sauer? Thus spaketh Miles: "Nobody has yet replied satisfactorily to the Referee's offer to send the paper for one year to anyone who would reveal and prove the Stroller's identity. Meanwhile the rascal continues to make faces at us all, and to prove himself the best correspondent Chicago has yet had. By the way, an attache of this paper has been accused a dozen times recently of being the guilty one. We take this opportunity of assuring all interested that he is not." Thanks for the compliment, friend Miles. But are you sure that an attache of your paper is not "the Stroller."

PORKOPOLIS NOTES.

"STAR."

IN the column and a half which "Hawkshaw" takes to tear to pieces a so-called surgical report in the Cincinnati Enquirer, he speaks, among other things, of his "profound regret at having, through force of circumstances, been temporarily forced to poach on the sacred precincts of Porkopolis." The article in question was so full of misstatements, whose inaccuracy was patent to even the non-medical mind, that your correspondent did not believe they would have any effect on League members, and so did not dignify it by mentioning it in his notes: but, lest it might have some effect on the non-cycling mind, he wrote a criticism on it which he gave to the wheel editor of the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, but which was cut out by the city editor, whether on account of deficiency in style or to make room for advertisements, your correspondent knows not.

QUITE a number of ladies in Cumminsville have the bicycle fever. Some seven or eight machines have been ordered. That number will no doubt be considerably increased before the season's close, and a ladies' bicycle club be among the probabilities.

A NEW cycling firm is in the field. It is composed of Billy Miles, the "Mascot," and Bert Kitchell. They will handle the "Warwick" machines, and expect to make 'steen thousand dollars before the season closes. If there is anything in a name the "Mascot" ought certainly to bring good luck to the firm.

THE Young Men's Gymnastic Association is to give an entertainment on the 16th inst. to raise funds to fit up the grounds they intend to secure. The track they intend to build will soon be a certainty. We will then be able to have a series of races every season, which, with our present facilities, we have not been able to do.

THE six weeks of bad weather we are having, because the ground hog was said to have seen his shadow, will soon be past and the riding season of 1889 will be on. In anticipation of its advent the boys are beginning to oil up their cyclometers, clean the dust and cobwebs out of their "ka-meer-as" and hunt up their luggage carriers.

THE Wheelmen's Gazette seems to be edited by a pair of shears. The editor, however, does not have the courtesy to give the proper credit for his clippings. Perhaps it is due to ignorance, or perhaps it is through fear that such a course would reveal the woeful paucity of original matter in his paper. He has foraged on Porkopolis notes several times and has never given due credit.

NEW YORK.

"HAWKSHAW."

PRESIDENT SHRIVER, of the New Yorks, has got himself placed in rather an embarrassing position, through having protested, in the name of his club, against the improper macadamizing of 72d street. Now be it known that Mr. Shriver is like most all wheelmen, an enthusiastic road improver, and like all the balance of the confraternity, is an excellent discourser and essayist upon the proper theoretical way to construct roadways. Now his practical experience as an actual builder or supervisor of road making, is in an inverse ratio to his theoretical knowledge, and he finds himself placed between the "devil and the deep sea," through having been invited by the President of the Park Board to supervise the new macadamizing of 72d street. He can't decline the offer after all the learned objections he has raised against the contractor's method of building the part already laid, neither can he confess that he has not the practical knowledge necessary to supervise its building by anyone else. Now here is a splendid chance for that great slumbering infant, "the Roads Improvement Association." Why don't they furnish an expert engineer, who, in the name of the R. I. Association, could see that this macadamizing is properly done? Here's a chance for something practical. Let's see if they will take advantage of their opportunity.

I SAW Frank White, of Spalding's, the other day, and he laid before me a plan of an athletic and wheeling conquest of the globe that fairly took my breath away. He is planning taking a party of American racing men and athletes around the world, following somewhat in the footsteps of the recent base ball party. At convenient, and, I dare say, some inconvent points, too, athletic games and cycling races will be held. Time limits for each event will be set, and all capable of performances inside of them will become eligible to membership in the party, with the understanding, however, that when San Francisco shall have been reached only such members shall proceed further as have demonstrated in the games that will have been played in every city, between Boston and the Golden Gate, that they are competent to repeat under any circumstances the performances that first brought them into the team. From the time a racing man or other athlete becomes a member of White's party, until he has been round the world and is once more landed in his home, not one cent of expense will he be called upon to pay, training, hotel, travelling and sight seeing expenses all being defrayed by Mr. White. When one hears Frank, with his brilliant word painting, discourse upon this trip it just acts upon an impressionable old man like I am very much as a dose of hashesh is credited with doing upon the brain of one of its Eastern devotees. But anyway its a great scheme, this painting of a strip of American athleticism around the world, and I know no artist capable of undertaking so large a contract except this same Frank White. I forgot to say I am going into training to get a position on that team, and if friendly scorers and proper clocks will get me there, you can count on having a correspondent along with the aggregation, who will keep you posted from the inside.

WELL, the grand and lofty tumbling that they call racing was a sight to see at the games of the N. A. A. A. A. on Saturday evening, in Madison Square Garden. Out of fifty-eight candidates for coroners' and surgeons' attention, forty-one faced the starter, and fallen wheelmen were strewn around the track "thicker than leaves in Valambrosia." After the exhibition of falling off and getting on again had been continued for some time, to the great edification of the audience, it was announced that the Kings County Wheelmen, with fifteene entries, had succeeded in winning the mile and a half race, with R. W. Stevens, from 110-yard mark, in 5m. 37s.; J. W. Shoefer, Brooklyn Club, 65 yards, second; and E. A. Powers, Harlem Wheelmen, 95 yards, third.

LOS ANGELES.

"VINDEX."

IT is midwinter, according to the almanac, but it requires a most violent stretch of the imagination to fancy that it is not rather midsummer, in this glorious country of Southern California. Before your correspondent lies an Eastern paper, containing dire accounts of blizzards and snow storms, with the suffering unavoidably incident to such things. As I read of trains snowed in, of men freezing to death, of children starving, the wonder grows that any one with a few dollars, or even a person able to walk, should remain long in such a region, when but a few days' journey to the West is a country where the breezes are balmy, where flowers and trees are a-bloom, where the earth is covered with her lovely dress of green and gold, and where suffering from heat or cold is practically unknown. This is a midwinter day. Come, you fugitive wheelmen from the frozen East, and take a spin on your faithful steed with me into the country, to Pasadena, the crown of the far-famed and beautiful San Gabriel Valley, or to Santa Monica, the seaside resort of the Pacific coast. The morning air is clear and balmy; the odor of millions of flowers is wafted to the nostrils; on every hand the lusty growth of grain and grass testifies to the entire absence of any such thing as winter, viewed from an Eastern standpoint. The rose, the camellia, the geranium, the heliotrope are in bloom, and the perfume rivals that of Araby the blest, or the spicy breezes that are supposed to "blow soft o'er Ceylon's isle." If this is not Paradise, there is not such a place, and the word is a misnomer. What think you, Eastern wheelmen? Where is the jibe and covert sneer at the "glorious climate?" That may be a hackneyed phrase, but "it goes, it permeates," as Louis Harrison says in "The Pearl of Pekin," or what other words could express the truth? Glorious! Aye, thrice glorious is the climate of the Golden State, and at no time are its glories so manifest as at the season when the rest of the country is bound in icy fetters.

LOS ANGELES indeed is an ideal place for the wheelman. In no place in this grand country can he mount his wheel as many days in the year as he can here. Then, besides, the roads, as a general rule, are fine, and make excellent wheeling. The scenery is especially fine among the canons of the Sierra Madre mountains, or in the valleys. The grand boulevard to Santa Monica, the seaside resort, is to be constructed, which will be one hundred feet in width, passing through the grounds of the Soldiers' Home, now in process of construction. The improvement of the highways is being agitated by people and press. The sentiment is good roads, and this is extremely gratifying to the wheelmen here. Los Angeles will soon become a well-paved city, the principal thoroughfares now being paved with asphaltum, as well as the residence streets.

THE number of wheelmen in this city is extremely hard to name, not even the various agencies knowing the approximate number of the riders of the wheel. It is safe to say there are not less than 1000 here. Notwithstanding this great number the club (the Los Angeles Wheelmen) is few in numbers, and very much handicapped by small and incommodious quarters. There is no plausible reason why the club should not be located in large, handsome and attractive quarters, which can be obtained on residence streets, and quite near the business centre of the city. There is ample material for a good, strong and progressive club here in this city, and is a "consummation to be devoutly wished for" by the many devotees of the wheel here. True, these innovations cannot be gotten for the mere asking, and there is a large class of wheelmen who would be found willing to "pungle up" the necessary filthy lucre for increased comforts and conveniences. (Ah!—Mr. Editor: "Pungle up" is a California word, meaning to bring to the surface. Sabe?) It is to be hoped wheelmen will take some action in the matter.

THERE are quite a number of ladies in this city who ride tricycles, and in a future letter I will write of them in extenso. A number of ladies' bicycles and tandem bicycles will, no doubt, be brought here to meet the demand for this type of machine.

BEAVER.

"OCCASIONAL."

WILBUR F. KNAPP, after an absence of two years, is again at home. Knapp is still the same old, comical, good-natured boy he always was. He greets his old acquaintances in a manner that puts to flight their fears—that success had turned his head.

WILL SPERRY, of Campaign, Ill., is now a resident of Denver. Mr. Sperry, since seeing our roads, said: "I don't blame Mr. Hopkins (the who rode from here to Ohio) for calling our Illinois roads bad. You have, without a doubt, the finest natural roads in the country.

"BOURBON" (Kentucky) will be pleased to hear of the addition of H. K. Lamb and Prince Wells to our ranks, from those of Louisville Old Rye (beg pardon, I meant Bourbon); may be interested in the fact that Chief Consul Beddo rides a safety now, and therefore attempts no stand still story on us. As for J. L. Gard, if we should catch him, at some unguarded moment, trying to trick us in the manner mentioned, his name would be "Mud," a regular mud Guiguard, in fact.

THE first annual ball of the Social Wheel Club took place at the Chamber of Commerce on the evening of Feb. 20th. The hall was prettily decorated with wheels and streamers of the club's colors. The majority of the ladies present wore the red, black and old gold (club colors), while each member of the club wore a rosette of the same. Two hundred and fifty couples danced to the splendid music of Denver's best orchestra until 3 A. M. Financially it was a great success; socially, the event of the season.

AMERICUS—a merry cuss, indeed! It pains me deeply to have to raise objections to the utterings of such a jolly individual, but right is right. The above named gentleman would have the readers of the BI. WORLD inter that the feeling between the Ramblers and the Social Wheel Club is very bitter, whereas, the only bitterness between them is the difference of opinion as to their relative riding abilities, a subject that should not, nor do I think it does, affect their sociability. At any rate I think that the time is not very far distant when the difference of opinion mentioned will be settled on the road (not on paper). Once more and I am done. Americus is no doubt a new arrival (I won't say tenderfoot) from the East. If he were not, he would know better than to put Denver in the cowboy district. If he were not, he would have omitted all reference to the "wild, windy and whooper-up, woolly West." I have noticed that the majority of Eastern writers—excuse me, journalists—never fail to mention the West in words to the effect of those quoted.

NEW HAVEN.

"ELM CITY."

THE first club run of the New Haven Bicycle Club of the season was called by Captain W. F. Perkins on February 22, 1889, "Washington's Birthday," to ride out to Lake Whitney, about two and one half miles from the city. With skates, eighteen of the members of the club showed up, with club suits and wheels, and as the roads and skating were good a fine afternoon was enjoyed.

THE season opens very encouragingly for cycling here; new mounts are being ordered already. We have two concerns here in the bicycle business, E. C. Bennett and the Wm. M. Frisbie Co., and both report a good business and prospect of good trade in 1889 wheels. A great many wheelmen have ridden all winter, as we have had no snow, and others are fast getting out their wheels this spring weather.

TWENTY of the members of the N. H. Bi. Club composed a theatre party that visited the New Haven Opera House, to see "The Cosair," which was well put on by one of Rice and Dixey's Companies. The scenery was very fine, especially the court yard scene in the second act. The boys were all captivated by the pretty faces and forms of the girls in the company.

A VERY enjoyable Smoker was held in the club rooms Thursday evening, Feb. 28th. There was an attendance of members and friends of eighty, and the following very taking programme was given: Selection by Mowers' Orchestra, which gave several others during the evening; tumbling, by Morgan brothers; clog dancing, by Bowman; a very interesting exhibition of mesmerism, by Prof. L. J. Parsons; sparring, by Hayes and Comers; cornet solo, by John Moxley; comic song, by C. E. Larom. There was plenty of refreshment for the inner man, and the punch looked tired when it was time to go home. We intend to hold these smokers during the coming season, and the New Haven Bi. Club will be a good place for any fellow that wants to enjoy himself with a crowd of nice companions.

ST. LOUIS.

"LINNEUS."

REPRESENTATIVE WARNER'S anti-cycling bill has been the chief topic of conversation at the clubs the past week. E. N. Sanders tells a story which I think has a bearing on this bill. He says that when he and two other companions were coming in from Ballwin last May, they encountered a loaded hay wagon, going in the same direction, the driver of which was asleep and was sitting on the double tree of the vehicle. Two of the men passed him all right, but when the third man came up the mules shied and ran off of the road into a telegraph pole. The shock threw the driver off the team, and he was dragged some distance before the cyclists stopped the team. On examination it was found that the driver was slightly hurt, and, at the request of Sanders, went to a doctor near by, who pronounced the injury not serious. The teamster then remounted his wagon, and thanking the cyclists for $1 paid him for hay lost drove off. While all this was going on a loud-mouthed politician (whom S. afterwards was told was Warner) drove up and denounced the wheelmen in unmeasured terms. He cursed them roundly, and finally wound up by threatening to have them all arrested, etc., but seeing the farmer remount his wagon he contented himself with taking their names. He afterwards made political capital out of the story to catch votes at last fall's election.

SECRETARY BASSETT made a good point when he stated that the League hotel privileges should be extended to League members only, and not to every Tom, Dick and Harry. This hotel privilege is a big argument in getting new members, and the lines cannot be drawn too tightly on this account.

I WAS sorry to hear that Mr. Walter Williams has laid down the editorial pen and accepted a more lucrative position at the Jefferson City "pen," as bookkeeper. The Advertiser, under his management, has done more than all the country newspapers combined to convince people of the great need of road improvement.

A COPY of the anti-bicycling bill was obtained through Senator McGuinness, and is now in the hands of C. C. Brewster, who has taken strong steps to head the bill off, and who will go to the capital with others to protest against it. Senator McGuiness says: "I don't think it will pass. I certainly shall not vote for it, nor consent to its passage by my silence." Hurrah for McGuiness.

HERE are some gems from the pen of Editor Williams, of the Booneville Advertiser: "God made the country, man made the town," but the devil made the Cooper County roads. The kind of a road law that Missouri wants, needs and must have, in order to make highways out of hog-wallows, is a law that will provide for "cash taxes, skilled labor, intelligent and scientific supervisions."

THE prizes, offered by the Missouri Bi. Club, to the value of $10 to first and $5 for second, to be given the members bringing in the greatest number of members, have stimulated recruiting to some extent, and at the next meeting some six applications for active membership will be acted upon. The Cycle Club will also act upon a number of applications at its next meeting, and will fire a lot of delinquents unless they pay up in the meantime.

THE Missouri's committee, consisting of Messrs. Andrew, Stone and Brown, who were appointed to look around for grounds suitable for a cycling track has acted promptly, and I hear that through Geo. Andrews they have made an arrangement with the St. Louis Gun Club to construct a three and one half or four lap track on their grounds. The matter will be brought before the club at Tuesday's meeting, and I hope will be favorably acted upon, as a series of cycle race meets will be sure to boom cycling in this town.

THE Board of Officers at their recent meeting levied an assessment of fifteen cents per member. This is certainly all right as the League must have funds to carry on its good work, but, in 1887, when the League was better off financially than now, the Missouri Division donated half of the balance remaining of the League meet fund to the National Treasury. Last year a certain division had double that sum left. Did they come to the aid of the national organization and donate half of it? Not much. Well, we can't expect all divisions to be like Missouri.

BUFFALO.

"MERCURY."

Last evening (Feb. 27) the Ramblers Bicycle Club numbering between 30 and 40 attended the Star Theatre to honor Miss Marie Jansen as "Nadjy" in the opera of that name. The boys attracted no little attention as they sat in the first rows attired in full dress with a neat bow of the club colors [blue and white] upon their manly bosoms. The colors were worn by all members of the company; when cute Marie appeared she was greeted with tremendous applause: she was also presented with an elegant basket of flowers, also bearing the club's colors, acknowledging the same with a pretty bow and irresistible smile that made the boys' hearts thump with unusual rapidity, each claiming the smile was meant for him. In answer to my query she said: "I am no bicyclist from lack of time and opportunity, not desire.

WELL, Wirtner and Hughson have bid us good-bye, and are now on their way to the far, far West. The club's best wishes go with them. "Chonny" will keep the boys posted, with a monthly letter, as regards cycling out that way.

"ANDY" PRENTISS, our mechanical genius, is constructing a tandem for himself, which, he claims, will be a "hummer" hard to beat. Andy rode a wheel of his own make all last season, and he didn't take a back seat for anybody.

THE Ramblers are thinking of renting the upper floor of the building they are now in, for a gymnasium.

MR. BOWEN rides his safety, rain or shine, hail or snow: his wheel knows no vacation.

SYRACUSE.

"SALINA."

LONG trips will be the rule with the Syracuse cyclers this summer. Already a party of four are planning to ride from Albany to Boston. The ride from here to Albany is dreary and tiresome, as was experienced by two of our men last summer. However, club runs will be held every week, or oftener if practical, and Camillus, Liverpool, Fayetteville and other suburban towns will be imposed upon.

CAPTAIN WOOD, of Albany, and Mr. Putnam, of Rome, spent last Friday evening with us.

HOWARD AVERY says: "It's just like dis wid us! see? Dere was tree of us! see? An' we slid on de 'Renwick' bobs and took de tird prize! see?"

A BENEFIT concert will be held in Music Hall on or about March 20 by the Cycling boys. The club will be assisted by our best local talent, which insures all attending a pleasant evening.

OUR billiard room will soon be graced with a new Benedict "Central City" combination table. The sharks will then have an excellent opportunity to show their skill, and will arrange for a tournament to be held at no distant date.

AT a dinner party recently we heard Charlie Wood explaining to a lady the advantages of cycling, and lauding our club in royal style. He is very much in love with wheeling and has several dates for rides with numerous lady friend, on his Columbia tandem.

CAPTAIN CHAPIN proposes to make our club rides and drills things of beauty and joys forever. The honest Captain is very much infatuated with "order," and is doing his prettiest to enthuse the boys with his pet thought. Lead on, Winnie! and, like "Rats," in "A Tin Soldier," "you'll get there."

NEWS AND COMMENT.

WE are in receipt of two most valuable little pamphlets for cyclists' use. One is the Sporting Life Companion, the cycle record department being compiled by Mr. H. H. Griffin, official handicapper. Another book, the Cycle Record, is a record of cycling celebrities, clubs and general information. This is also edited by Mr. H. H. Griffin. Both books are a valuable addition to our library.

OUR special edition will be issued on the 29th of March.

PAGE, of St. Louis is a veritable Don Quixote. In place of the "windmills" put "rings," and the simile is complete.

W. A. ROWE has settled down into the prosaic life of a grocer. We hope he will make a "record" in his new business.

WELL done, New Jersey! A road bill on approved lines is almost an assured fact. The bill passed the Senate having only three dissenting votes.

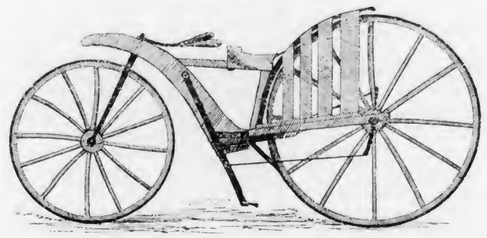
THE Manchester, N. H. Bicycle Club and the Nashua Bicycle Club fraternize very agreeably. They exchange courtesies and entertain each other by turns.

A RUBBLE pavement is to be put down on the Moorestown, N. J., Pike from Camden nearly all the way to Merchantville, and the wheelmen are much disgusted.

A. W. Stevens, the brother of Thomas Stevens takes rather a pessimistic view of the great travellers chances of ever getting out of Africa alive. Let us hope that his fears will prove unfounded.



THE fifth annual dinner of the Citizens' Bicycle Club, of New York, was held at Clark's Twenty-third-street restaurant last evening. Guests were present from Boston, Philadelphia Washington and other cities.

THE thieving of bicycles has become such a grave question in England that it has been a strong factor in bringing into existence the Cycle Agents' Protective Association. This association has already been instrumental in the discovery of fifteen stolen machines and the capture and conviction of two habitual cycle thieves.

STRANGERS visiting Troy, N. Y., are struck most unpleasantly with the fact that street signs are apparently unknown. A stranger visiting Collar and Cuff town the other day nearly got lost because of this deficiency and parsimony of the city authorities. Troy is usually looked on as a "lively, wide awake town," but this does not indicate it.

THE roads question is being vigorously discussed in New Orleans, and the Picayune and Democrat both are training their heaviest guns in favor of some concerted action and legislation. We are pleased to be able to trace to the wheelmen of the L. A. W. a large share of influence which has brought this question up so prominently before the people of Louisiana.

A BROOKLYN, N. Y., paper prints the following: "A New York wheelman is having a rear-driving safety built to his own specifications, the feature of which will be an attempt to avoid steering sensitiveness. This he expects to accomplish by having the front forks curve upward or outward instead of downward and, running out beyond the centre of the hub of the front wheel, connect with it so that the wheel will drag instead of being pushed. He claims that this will secure to the bicycle a castor principle and that his object will be accomplished. We believe this plan has been tried years ago, but a patent has been applied for.

"THE ORIGINAL BICYCLE."

WE have referred before to a machine made in about the year 1845, by Galvin Dalzell, a Scotchman. The above cut shows the machine and is a reproduction from the Scottish Cyclist. The driver is 40 inches and the steerer 30, both iron shod. The general delicacy of the mud guard and frame work will be appreciated. It, however, is a most interesting relic.

RACING AT OMAHA.

A woman's six-day race will commence March 11. Cowboys vs. cyclists six-day race will commence March 18th. J.

BELOW we give the final score of the contestants in the six days race at Philadelphia. Lottie Stanley, the heretofore unbeatable, did not start; Jessie Woods, 337 miles 6 laps; Hattie Lewis, 327 miles 6 laps; Helen Baldwin, 297 miles 4 laps; Kittie Brown, 286 miles 5 laps.

OUR SHENANDOAH VALLEY TOUR.

(By "Tourist.")

CONCLUDED.

The road lies directly over the Massanuttin Mountain, and the distance is eighteen miles from New Market. We walked up and rode down the mountain. The road is pretty fair, but your brake hands get very tired before the bottom is reached, notwithstanding all the back pedalling you can do, and it would never do to let your wheel get away with you. I never fail to note with satisfaction in touring how much easier it is to keep my little wheel on the ground on steep hills with that four or five pounds of luggage strapped to the backbone.

We reached Luray a couple of hours ahead of the regular daily excursion, and had the caverns nearly to ourselves during that time. They are larger than the New Market caverns, lighted with electricity, and the formations are quite as wonderful, but man had hewn so many artificial passages, and had done so much to aid (?) nature that for us, who had just come from one of her favorite haunts, these caverns did not have the same charm. The Laurance, at Luray, is a good hotel, and the League rate is $2 a day.

We returned over the mountain to New Market in the afternoon, and the following day rode to Winchester. The mountain scenery on both sides of the valley has new interest every day. We pass through places made famous by the war.

At Strasburg we took dinner at the Chalybeate Springs Hotel, and afterwards enjoyed a rest in the hammocks in the shady side yard. The lines of "Sheridan's Ride" occurred to us, as some one spoke of "Winchester, twenty miles away." What a nice thing it would have been to carry dispatches up and down that valley during the war, if the couriers could have been mounted on modern light roadster bicycles! At Winchester we were informed that several hundred wheelmen pass through there on their way up the valley every year.

On Friday we rode to Martinsburg, thence to Falling Water, where we ferried across the Potomac, and then followed the tow path of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal to Williamsport. This route has no particular advantage over the regular pike between Martinsburg and Williamsport, except variety. We continued on to Hagerstown early in the afternoon, where there is a grand League hotel and a live bicycle club. Their club rooms are cozy and the boys are very hospitable. We passed a pleasant evening with them.

Saturday morning we rode to Pen-Mar, on the dividing line between Pennsylvania and Maryland, where we spent a large portion of the day. The view is grand, but the climb is a long one, and you can believe we took the bus up to High Rock and Mt. Quirack. In the afternoon we took the train down to Mechanicsville, wheeled to Cohacton Furnace over three miles of very bad road, and there struck the finest pike we had seen during our whole journey, leading into Frederick, twelve miles distant.

It was on this part of the road that we did our first scorching, and this is how it happened. We had been enjoying the company of three Baltimore wheelmen during the day, and when we left Cohacton Furnace my two companions were riding ahead with one of the Baltimore wheelmen, while I was lagging behind with the other two. The pace was lively, and the riders I was with, didn't appear to care about keeping up, so I left them and drew near the front. The Baltimore man dropped out, as he probably didn't care to run away from his companions, and I slipped up in his place without my friends noticing the change. Then the fun began. Not a word was spoken, but every now and then they would see the rim of a big wheel pushing up between them, and would put on another spurt. They wouldn't have looked around for the world. We kept this up for several miles, when I asked, "what is the hurry, Mac?" The look of surprise that came over their faces, as they turned around at sound of my voice, was confirmed by the answer, "I thought it was that durned Baltimore fellow that was pushing us so hard."

At the City Hotel, Frederick, League headquarters, we had good accommodations, and on the following day rode to Washington

REMOVAL.

Holmes & Co. have removed from their old quarters, 17 Kingston street, to 109 Kingston. Our readers are urged to take careful notice of the removal to new and larger quarters.

Holmes & Co. have issued their catalogue of 1889, and it is a marvel of typography and complete in detail. Send to Holmes & Co., 109 Kingston street, for this catalogue, or call and get one.

NOVELTIES.

One of the neatest luggage carriers it has ever been our lot to see is the "Handy Carrier," made and exclusively controlled by the Overman Wheel Co. The cuts will aid our readers in getting an idea of what the "Handy" is like. It weighs but six ounces, and is very strong. The manner of attaching to bicycle and detaching is instantaneous, and can be done with one hand. The bundle can be made up in the house, carried out as shown, and attached. It is without doubt an ideal carrier, and we predict big sales for it. The Overman Company will supply the trade. The retail price of this carrier is only $1.

WHITE CYCLE COMPANY.

Some two months ago it was our pleasant duty to publish an article in this paper, descriptive of what the White Cycle Co., of Westboro', Mass., intended to do, and at that time we promised our readers that, as soon as the proposed work was far enough along, we would continue the story.

A week ago we took a train for Westboro', and shortly after our arrival at that lively little town we put ourselves in personal communication with Mr. Frank E. Peck, the Secretary, and one of the Directors of the company. We were sorry that we missed seeing Mr. Frederick White, the President of the company, who was then absent in Springfield.

In company with Mr. Peck we paid a visit to the factory of the company, which now consists of a machine shop, 152 by 50, and a blacksmiths' shop, 30 by 50. It is without exception the most desirable, well lighted, well warmed, well ventilated, and conveniently appointed establishment for its size, of any we have visited. The walls, from a point about three feet above the floor line to the edge of the eaves, are all glass windows. During the winter time these windows are double, and warmth is secured by means of fine steam radiators. Ventilation is secured by means of several large domes built on the apex of the roof. The floor is laid on concrete, while the floor itself is formed of two and one half inch planking. It will be seen by this, that the desideratum of a perfect light perfect ventilation and comfort is secured to those whose pleasant duty it will be to work in this factory.

In the matter of machinery, we have to record our opinion that as a collection it is, without doubt, the finest for the purpose we have ever seen. Every machine is of the latest and most expensive pattern that the firms of Pratt & Whitney Co. and the Brown & Sharp Mfg. Co. can turn out. It is not extravagant in us to say that some of the machinery was exquisite, and if the White Cycle Co. are unable to turn out good machines it will not be because of the lack of fine machinery to do it.

All told, we counted some fifty odd machines on the floor, and we understood that there were several yet to come to complete the equipment.

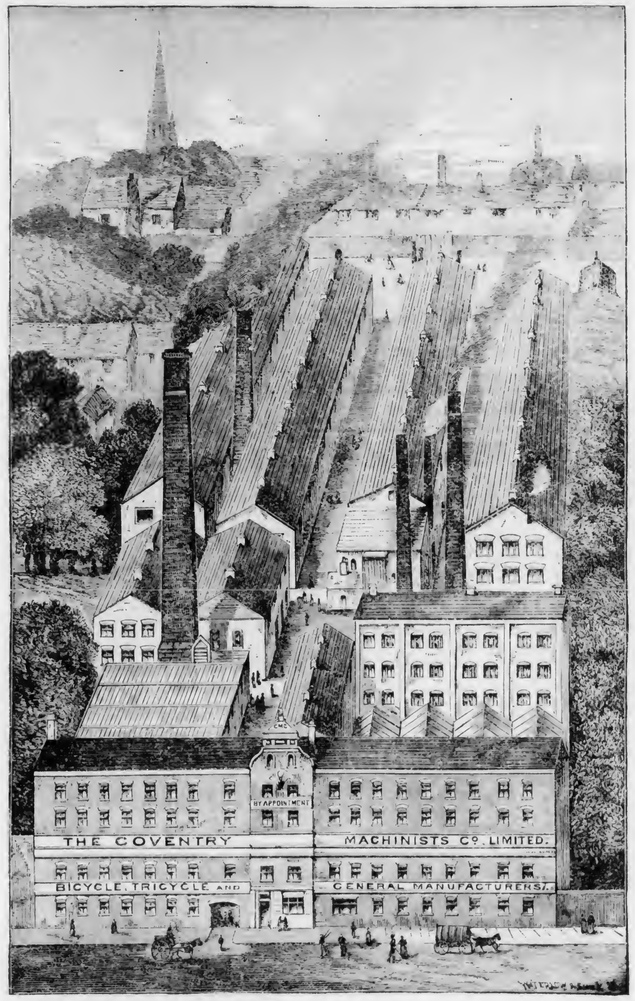
The capacity of the shop will be about 2500 machines a year, and so enthusiastic are the officers of the White Cycle Co. in regard to the expected demand for their machines that they anticipate that this capacity will not be sufficient to supply the demands in the course of a year or two.

The blacksmiths' shop is fitted up with power hammers, and all the necessary appurtenancies for the blacksmiths' work. The ground owned by the company is about three acres in extent, so that it will be seen that when the demand comes, which we trust it will, they will have ample space on which to build and meet a growing business.

The company are putting up another building a few feet west of the main building, in which the nickeling plant and enameling furnaces will be placed.

We complimented Mr. Peck on the perfection of the factory and the plant therein contained. Mr. Peck replied: "Our standard has always been high. Our directors insisted that in going into the business, we would go into it with a factory and equipments each, in excellence and completeness, to be the best that could be procured. Whether we have carried our point, we leave you and those who inspect our factory to judge."

The company is hard at work in manufacturing tools to produce the parts of their special machine, and it is the hope of the company that before the season is far along they will be in a position to deliver their first machines.



It is not the purport of this article to deal in the specialties of the bicycle (which will take the form of a rear driving safety and tricycle) which this firm proposes to present to the American riding public. But we hope at a very early date to be placed in possession of the cuts and descriptions, which will show our readers what the White Flyer people propose to put upon the market. Mr. Peck told us that they were at that time in the course of preparing their catalogue and description, together with the cuts, and that at as early a date as possible they will have their catalogues out. Those of our readers who are interested, it would be well for them to send in their names to the White Cycle Co., of Westboro', Mass., so that these catalogues, as soon as out, can be forwarded to their address.

In the meantime we will keep our readers well posted, and as soon as the White Cycle Co. can give us the necessary data and cuts we will let them know all about it. There is one feature in the manufacture of this machine which Mr. Peck claimed (and we think his claim is correct) was something that no other bicycle manufacturer could say. He tells us that in certain parts of the metal used in the machine aluminium is used as an alloy. It is a well known fact that an infinitesimal portion of aluminium, if properly amalgamated with steel or iron, will enhance its wearing and tensile strength to a most marvellous extent. They, therefore, intend to introduce to us this alloyed metal in certain parts of their cycles.

REMOVAL.

The Butcher Cyclometer Co. has removed its office from the corner of Berkeley and Tremont streets to No. 338 Washington street, in the same place they used to be before moving up into the Berkeley street quarters.

In these days of road riding the cyclometer has become to be one of the necessities of cycling, and no well equipped rider is without one of these distance measurers attached to his wheel. We have had occasion to refer to the excellence of the Butcher cyclometer as known from personal use and experience, and riders can do no better than by procuring one of the Butcher instruments. We again call attention to the fact that the Butcher Co. will be found hereafter at No. 338 Washington street, Boston, to which address the rider without a cyclometer should at once proceed in person, or write for further particulars.

THE COVENTRY MACHINIST'S CO'S FACTORY.

In 1863 the ribbon manufacturing interest of Coventry, England, received a death blow. Up to this time Coventry was the chief ribbon manufacturing town of England but through circumstances, now a matter of history, hundreds were thrown out of employment. It was at this time that the Coventry Machinist's Co. was organized for the benevolent purpose of giving employment to the ousted ribbon operatives. The original idea was to make sewing machines and so this branch of manufacturing was taken up by the Coventry people, until a year or two later, seeing the future of the cycle business, the company turned its attention and energies in that direction and have followed it up until the present colossal cycle business is the outcome, and the sewing machine business is abandoned. The capital was originally £5000, but now it is £100,000, quite an increase, but a good index as to the increase of the business. Up to within a short time the capacity of the works was 700 men, but finding the demand still growing, great additions were lately added and now the Coventry Machinist Co. have 1000 hands, all busily engaged in turning out cycles of all descriptions. Every part of the machine whether bicycle, tricycle, tandem or carrier, is manufactured on the premises. The huge shops are full of machinery, and some of the processes are as remarkable as they are interesting. The works are well appointed, the utmost care is exercised by the management in matters of detail, and the operations which follow one another in rapid sequence from the time the raw material is first dealt with till the perfect cycle is produced are most conscientiously performed.

The accompanying engraving will show more plainly than any words, the size and possible capacity of the Coventry Machinist's Co.'s factory must be.

Mr. Geo. Hendee is permanently located at Stall's headquarters on Tremont street. Mr. Hendee brought a Psycho tandem over with him. It is the identical one that was shown at the Stanley. It is worth a trip to Stall's to see it.

Mr. Ross of Singer & Co. has placed at our disposal for a thorough trial, a Royal Safety. It will give us pleasure to test the machine under as many conditions as possible and we shall be pleased to give the results of our experience.

The Victor catalogue is now out and as usual is a beautiful specimen of typography as well as being a valuable hand book of the Victor specialties and a complete price list cyclist sundries.

The Warwick Cycle Company are more than pleased at the way the orders are coming in for their machines. The company is prepared to meet the great demand even to the extent that is expected by them.

In order to supply the demand for ladies' safeties, the Overman Wheel Co. will import several of the best English machines of this type and will sell them direct and through their many agents for $115 each. It was stated in these columns last week that these wheels would be ready for delivery April 1. We are now informed that this was an error, as they are now ready for delivery. We also stated that the importations would be confined to the Rover, this also was an error as they will import several of the best makes.

On Saturday, the 2, inst. at Madison Sq. Garden, in the mile and a half race, not only the first and second prizes, but also the third were taken by Columbias.

The first lot of New Mail Safeties has come out of factory this week and are elegant machines certainly. Wheelmen who have examined them are loud in their praise—an unusually handsome wheel and with the good points described in the New Mail catalogue. It is a high grade safety sure, and very heavy orders are reported for it.

THE OLD BOSTON BICYCLE CLUB.

Editor Bicycling World: In your last issue, speaking of the Town Club, you say "with which the old Boston Club is now amalgamated." This, while not positively untrue, may convey to some of your readers an incorrect impression. Permit me, therefore, to explain, that the Boston Bicycle Club has not amalgamated with any pre-existing organization, but that its associate and active members have combined in the organizing of an entirely new corporation, known as "the Town Club of Boston, Mass.;" a purely social and literary organization, with "the encouragement of athletic exercises" tacked on to its charter. Membership in the "Town Club" is controlled in the same manner as in similar organizations elsewhere, but active membership in the Boston Bicycle Club is only open to members of the "Town Club." As a result, the dues of the old Boston Club are now merely nominal, their social facilities—as members of the "Town Club"—are greatly enhanced, and their cycle enjoyments and privileges are increased rather than diminished.

As a member of the old Boston Club I am anxious that wheelmen everywhere should understand that it still retains the place at the head of the list of active wheeling organizations, which it has occupied since that memorable day when, in 1878, it started the wheel a-rolling in this country. That it will ever relinquish this proud position, I cannot think there is any great danger. Certainly there is not the slightest intention on the part of its present members that it should do so, whether by "amalgamation" or any other process.

FRANK W. WESTON,
Secretary the Town Club.

LEAGUE HEADQUARTERS:
12 Pearl Street, - - - - Room 27.
ABBOT BASSETT, Secretary.

LOUISIANA Wheelmen have taken hold of the road improvement question with enthusiasm, and through the press they are creating public opinion in favor of better roads.

MISSOURI Wheelmen promise to fight to the death the obnoxious bicycle bill introduced in the Legislature. A vigorous fight will be entered on and no pains or money will be spared to defeat the measure. If the bill cannot be killed while in the hands of the committee it will be fought at every stage, and, if finally passed, a test case will be made and the matter will be carried to the court of appeals if necessary.

THE New Jersey Road Bill has passed the Senate with only three opposing votes. No opposition has developed in the House, as yet, and that the bill will become a law is no longer a matter of doubt.

THERE is no good reason why any wheelman need withhold the credit which is justly due for the benefits conferred by the League's action in fighting unjust legislation, nor is it a good reason why the cost of this work should be borne exclusively by the wheelmen who compose the League. Gentlemen cyclists, whether you choose to join the League or not, don't forget to put up your cash contributions. Self-respect alone should make you ashamed to ride on a road which is kept open for you by the CHARITY OF OTHER WHEELMEN—Spectator.

WE second the motion made by Mr. Joshua Reynolds in the Wheel. The ladies of the League have the right to some recognition, and they should be made to feel that they are not simply "hangers-on." Our lady contingent is now of a most respectable size, and they should have entertainment within our lines that will make the League attractive to them, and lead to an increase in their number. We believe that the participation of the ladies in our favorite sport will not only dignify it but give a permanence that nothing else will. When the ladies are with us hoodlumism hides its head and men do not forget, as they sometimes do when they are with only those of their own sex, that they are or should be gentlemen. The Cottage City meets of the Massachusetts Division are, more than any other meets that we know of, graced by the presence of the ladies as active participants, and that they are the most enjoyable of all such gatherings is the unanimous verdict of all who have attended them. We vote with both hands for any measure that will keep those ladies in the League who are now with us and bring others within the fold.

Connecticut.

In consequence of the resignation of Mr. Edward P. Lyon, I do hereby appoint Mr. Arthur A. Dean as local Consul of Danielsonville. C. E. LAROM,
New Haven, Mich. 1, 1889. Chief Consul.

From the Foreign Marshal.

Editor L. A. W. Bulletin:

As Foreign Marshal, L. A. W., I have during the past year received a much larger number of letters from members of the L. A. W. asking for information on the subject of touring in Europe than in any previous year. These I have endeavored to answer to the best of my ability and shall only be too glad to continue to do so.

I look forward this year to a large increase in the number of tourists, for two reasons; first on account of the exhibition in Paris, and secondly if Mr. F. A. Elwell is able to carry out his projected tour, an enormous incentive will I believe be given to European Touring. To individual tourists I would say, join the C. T. C. because any necessarily brief notes will be supplemented by fuller information which will be supplied by the officials of that organization, and also because the C. T. C. Consul for Paris has made arrangments already for regular rates in Paris (whereas during the exhibition the hotel charges will be enormous.)

To those cyclers either of a companionable nature, or ignorant of foreign languages, I believe Mr. Elwell's tour will be most pleasant and the route he has planned is most interesting, while I believe the reception he and his party will receive will be most flattering, and of the greatest possible advantage not only to those who may be fortunate enough to accompany him, but to the interests of cycle touring in general; and the entire cost of this trip is most moderate. I have myself applied to him for permission to join if circumstances permit.

Finally I repeat, I am willing, and it is my duty to aid, either any individuals, or parties of cyclers who propose to visit Europe during the coming season.

JOSEPH PENNELL, Foreign Marshal, L. A. W.
London, Feb. 2 1889.

Supreme Court Decision.

Following is an abstract of a decision made by the Supreme Court of Indiana, February 23, 1889:

13,553. Edward Mercer vs. David Corbin. Miami C. C. Affirmed. Elliott, C. J.

(1) Corbin was standing on a public sidewalk in the town of Rochester, near the outer edge of the pavement, facing the northeast. Mercer, coming from the west, rode a bicycle against him, threw him down and severely injured him. The sidewalk was fourteen feet in width, and there was nothing to obstruct the view or passage of appellant. The appellee's complaint charges that the appellant assaulted, beat and wounded him. The special verdict states that appellant carelessly, recklessly and rudely ran against and upon the appellee. Held: That a case is made for damages as for an assault and battery. Held, also, that under sec. 3,391, Revised Statutes, 1881, sidewalks are for the exclusive use of footmen, and it is therefore unlawful under that section to ride a bicycle along a sidewalk. A bicycle is a vehicle within the meaning of the statute. (2) Where all the evidence is not incorporated in the bill of exceptions, some statement must be made showing that it was excluded because deemed intrinsically incompetent. In many cases where questions arise on instructions or on ruling in admitting or excluding evidence, statements may be embodied in the bill of exceptions which will obviate the necessity of bringing all the evidence into the record.

I do hereby appoint Mr. Geo. B. Woodruff, Consul of Winsted. C. E. LAROM, C. C.

All Kansas Local Consuls will hold office until the expiration of the present League year, May 1st, 1889.

W. C. BRADLEY, Chief Consul.

Massachusett's Consuls.

To Local Consuls:

In order to promote the interests of our Division, I deem it best to cancel the appointments of Local Consuls at present existing because of the imperfect condition of the list.

I desire a live, active corps of Consuls in this State who are willing to attend to the duties and try to place their districts in the front rank as regards League work.

I intend, so far as I am able, to make your office one of consequence, to oblige you to accept its responsibility and to give you credit in every way possible for good work. This will be shown by the increase of League members in proportion to the number of wheelmen in your district.

To accomplish the present aims of our Division in improvement of highways, it is necessary that we have at least three thousand members. This can be easily and quickly done if every present member renews promptly and induces one other wheelman to join.

The duties of Consuls are as follows:

To acquire and give information as to roads, laws, hotels and other matters of interest in their localities to members of the League, calling on them in person or by letter; perform such duties as the Chief Consul may require of them, and generally promote the interests of the League and its members.

Consuls' term of office will expire September 1.

I should be pleased to reappoint all local Consuls.

If any one feels that he cannot give the time and attention to the position, I should be pleased to have him suggest some League member in his place who could.

Certificates will be furnished at once on receipt of application which I have fowarded to each consul. This should be filled out and signed by the member applying for the position, and returned to me at once. Should I not hear from any consul by March 5th, I shall be compelled to tender the position to another wheelman, as the renewal season opens April 1, and it is necessary to act at once. Fraternally yours,

WM. H. EMERY, Chief Consul.

APPLICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP.

The following is a list of applications for membership received up to date, and published in accordance with Article III. of the Constitution, which is as follows:

"Any amateur wheelman, in good standing, eighteen years of age or over, shall, with the indorsement of two League members in good standing, or of three reputable citizens of the United States or Canada, be eligible to membership in this League upon payment of an initiation fee of one dollar, and such dues for the year as may be provided for in the By-Laws. Upon the approval of the Board of Officers, or a committee thereof, two weeks after the publication of the name in a list of candidates in the official organ of the League, the applicant shall become a member."

Tickets will be issued seventeen days after the publication of names.

Candidates will please notice if their names and addresses are correct.

Members are requested to examine carefully these lists as they are published, and to report errors and omissions to the Secretary. In order that no objectionable person may unite with the League, members are given the right to protest, but such protest must be received by the Secretary within two weeks from the date of publication, and contain specific charges so far as it is possible to make them. All such communications will be considered confidential.

The application list is closed at 10 A. M. on the Monday preceding day of publication. All applications received after that hour must go over to the list to the following week.

TESTIMONIAL.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 26th, 1889.

Frank Fairbairn: Dear Sir—Your knit goods have given me the most satisfaction of any bicycle clothing I have tried, the elastic fit giving such freedom to the limbs, and the durable qualities they have shown, make them most desirable. I could not go back to cloth goods, after these, with any comfort. I shall wear them the coming summer, for business and pleasure, and wife says the old pair of breeches she cut down for my boy are the best wearing goods he has had yet; outlasted three pair of cloth ones already, and still going. I wore them two years myself. Yours, E. N. BOWEN.

Gentlemen—I am very highly pleased thus far with the 39 inch, as a road machine. It is a better hill climber than any machine I have ever before ridden, for all I can see it is just about as speedy as the larger sizes, and I am astonished to find so slight a difference if any, in the jar on rough roads.
Very cordially yours,
DR. J. HOWARD MORGAN.

THE STAR MFG. CO.

I have been riding a 51-inch American Star for the past few months, and find it a constantly increasing source of pleasure. I am city editor of the Chester Times, and find my wheel valuable in reaching suburban points quickly. A friend also began riding a crank when I started in on my Star; has three times broken his handle-bar by headers, while I haven't spent a dollar for repairs to my machine, and it is an old wheel, while his is new.

This in brief is my experience with a Star, and though it is of the old pattern I wouldn't exchange with any one of the other fellows. If you wish to use this as a testimonial I have no objections. Very truly yours,
T. W. ENTWISLE.

THE SOLID VOTE OF MAJORITY.

An even dozen of seasons. The path, the road, the hill, have proven the mettle of the Columbia metal. The American cycler knows the Columbia and rides it. "The best in the World!" Really we are beginning to think so, we are told so so often, and always get an emphatic majority vote when question is called. When over half the wheelmen, and about all the mechanical experts inspect Columbias, talk Columbias, and ride Columbias, it means something. Those who ought to know, and who are disinterested, say that it means that Columbias, all things considered, are the best wheels for all uses. The Columbia majority continues solid. Perhaps the fact that we have the largest plant, the most skilful workmen, and a world-wide reputation for the best mechanical workmanship has something to do with making people think that the Columbias have been and are superior to all other cycles. Have you read the Columbia Catalogue? It was sent to every League member. Perhaps you would like another copy for a friend. It is free to you and to everybody. Pope Mfg. Co., Boston, New York, and Chicago.

the Division, and at the same time by arousing and enlisting their attention and support, we believe it will tend to draw the members more closely together, and by its far reaching influence extend and continue through the future the state of harmony and unity that has characterized our body in the past.

E. A. DE BLOIS, Sec.-Treas.

Missouri.

Following is a copy of the objectionable bill that has been introduced in the Missouri Assembly. Wheelmen of the State are asked to cooperate with the League Officials in remonstrating against it.

Be it enacted by the general assembly of the State of Missouri as follows:

Section 1. It shall hereafter be unlawful for any person or persons to run or engage in any race, mounted on any vehicle usually called Velocipede or Bicycle, on any highway or public road, in any of the counties, outside of any city limits in the State, and all persons traveling by the use of such vehicle upon any such highways or roads, on meeting any person or persons, on horses or mules, or it any vehicle of any kind drawn by such animals, to come to a halt at a distance of one hundred yards from the place or such highway or road, where said person or persons on horses or mules, or in vehicles drawn by horses or mules are met, and to dismount from the velocipede or bicycle and remain so until said persons on horses or mules, or in vehicles drawn by such animals, have passed a distance of twenty-five yards.

Section 2. Any person or persons violating the preceding section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not less than TEN nor more than one hundred dollars, and shall moreover be liable to other persons who may have sustained damages by reason of the frightening or running away of horses or mules, to be recovered by civil action in any court having competent jurisdiction.

Introduced by IRA B. WARNER of St. Louis County.

California Division L. A. W.

General Membership Meeting, Tuesday, 19th Feb, at the rooms of the San Francisco Bicycle Club.

The Chief Consul having called the meeting to order the minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The Secretary Treasurer presented his report showing a balance on hand of $752.75 and the membership of the Division as 407.

Chairman Smythe of the Division Racing Board read his report reciting the business of the Board for the year, the State championships run, the records broken, etc., also that time medals would hereafter be given in championship events to prevent loafing.

The Secretary read a circular asking for assistance for the National Organization.

It was decided that, the Division could not spare any money from its treasury for that purpose, but that a subscription list should be opened and circulated throughout the State calling for contributions for the assistance of the National Organization.

The invitation of the Los Angeles Wheelmen to hold the Annual Race Meet thereon 9th May, was accepted as was also their proposition to pay the Division $100 for the privilege of having full control of the meet.

Mr. Moore of Stockton gave a brief history of an affair in which a Mr. Wright, a bicycle rider, had scared a horse and caused some slight damage.

The owner of the horse had threatened suit and had got up a petition to suppress bicycle riding on the road on which the accident occurred.

The Division Board of Officers at their meeting on the 18th inst. had decided to stand by Mr. Wright in any suit that might be brought against him and also if the petition were successful to make a test case and fight it to the end.

This action of the Board of Officers was unanimously endorsed and after a vote of thanks having been tendered the San Francisco Bicycle Club for the use of their rooms the meeting adjourned.

ALEX S. IRELAND,
Secretary-Treasurer California Division.

Massachusetts.

To the members of the Massachusetts Division:

I desire to call your attention to the necessity of promptly renewing your membership and to the equal necessity of your recruiting a few members for the League.

All the energies and resources of our organization in this Division are being devoted to securing legislative action in the appointment of a Commissioner of Roads, this being the beginning of our plans for an improvement in our highways. To accomplish this we need 3000 members in our Division that we may use the force of a large organization.

We have today nearly 1500 members, and if every member renews promptly and will bring in one or two members by May 1st, we can easily reach the desired number in time to secure valuable results. There are 19000 Wheelmen in Massachusetts and there can be no failure if members give this matter a little personal attention. For the first time members of this Division are directly appealed to for personal effort and given a chance to do something for the League, I ask you as Wheelmen to give the Division your support and assist in making the effort for an improvement of roads successful.

If you have not a blank application with you, accept the two dollars and send it with correct name and address of applicant to Abbot Bassett, 12 Pearl street, Boston, Box 5295, simply endorsing it with the word "I recommend him," and signing your name and League number, thus securing a member.

Send your own renewal in April as the League year begins May 1.

There are remaining postpaid books and the first new members coming in will each receive one. If we succeed in this effort to increase our membership we shall have ample funds to purchase more, so that every new member this year can have one.

The benefits from League membership may briefly be stated to be: 1, Road Book; 2, Weekly Paper; 3, Reduced rates at League Hotels; 4, Available information from Consuls; 5, Membership ticket equal to an introduction to members everywhere; 6, Right to take part in League tours and meets; 7, Security of rights on the Road; Durable uniform at low cost; and thus by organization the League returns more in dollars and secures to members privileges worth many times the cost.

Our present aims are to secure improvement of highways, free transportation of wheels on railroads and promote the general interest of cycling.

During the last two years in this Division, we have obtained a law compelling towns to erect guide posts at intersection of roads leading to adjoining towns and cities. Any failure on part of towns to comply with this law should be reported to the Chief Consul at once as these guideposts save much trouble and many dismounts for Wheelmen.

For those joining before November 1 next the fee is two dollars ($2.00), after November 1 to May 1 next year, one dollar and fifty cents ($1.50).

Send the name and address of any wheelman in the State who is not a member of the League to the Chief Consul and he will send a recruiting circular urging the Wheelman to join.

Some of these circulars will be mailed you it requested.

I desire a Local Consul in every town in the State where there is a League member. If you are willing to do a little work for cycling, a blank application will be mailed at your request, and the district placed in your charge.

Trusting in your patriotism and pride in the good name of Massachusetts among cyclists and your loyalty as Wheelmen to the cause, I anticipate through your efforts a rapid increase in our membership.

Fraternally yours,
WM. H. EMERY,
Chief Consul.

APPLICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP.

The following is a list of applications for membership received up to date, and published in accordance with Article III. of the Constitution, which is as follows:

"Any amateur wheelman, in good standing, eighteen years of age or over, shall, with the indorsement of two League members in good standing, or of three reputable citizens of the United States or Canada, be eligible to membership in this League upon payment of an initiation fee of one dollar, and such dues for the year as may be provided for in the By-Laws. Upon the approval of the Board of Officers, or a committee thereof, two weeks after the publication of the name in a list of candidates in the official organ of the League, the applicant shall become a member."

Tickets will be issued seventeen days after the publication of names.

Candidates will please notice if their names and addresses are correct.

Members are requested to examine carefully these lists as they are published, and to report errors and omissions to the Secretary. In order that no objectionable person may unite with the League, members are given the right to protest, but such protest must be received by the Secretary within two weeks from the date of publication, and contain specific charges so far as it is possible to make them. All such communications will be considered confidential.

The application list is closed at 10 A. M. on the Monday preceding day of publication. All applications received after that hour must go over to the list to the following week.

EDITORS:

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 15 MARCH, 1889.

JOE PENNELL, whose experience in cycling touring, if not so varied as that of Thomas Stevens, is of a more practical nature, contributes a very instructive article in the last Outing. We can, from our own experience, heartily endorse most of his remarks about cycle touring in England. We cannot quite agree with him as to the advisability of carrying all one's luggage for a six weeks' tour on one's wheel; we have found it quite convenient and pleasant to have one's town togs available occasionally. The English parcel post system is so reliable and cheap, that when one's destination a few days or a week hence is known, it is an easy matter to send all extra changes on ahead.

WITH us in Boston, it is no longer cycles that frighten horses, but electric cars that startle those sensitive quadrupeds. It is not for long, however, as, though horses are nervous creatures, they soon become accustomed to unusual sights and sounds.

WITH the great public interest in the development of electricity, we hear much discussion as to the appliances for electric propulsion. It is generally predicted that the day is not far distant when storage batteries will be made light enough to be used in many cases where they are not now available. We sincerely hope so, and devoutly wish that some useful road carriage propelled by a storage battery will be invented ere long. Nothing will more promote the cause of road building than the more general use of our highways.

AT a recent meeting of the Society of Cyclists, Dr. Benjamin Ward Richardson read a paper on vibration in cycling, wherein he discourses on the merits of devices to lessen what he considers a drawback to healthful and enjoyable cycling. It is a pity that the custom of the Society forbids the mention by name of the particular devices, as Dr. Richardson might, we think, furnish us some very useful information on this most important matter.

WHILE we think this learned gentleman has very much exaggerated the amount of vibration in riding the well-constructed wheels of to-day, he points out that vibration, if it does exist, is likely to be dangerous.

He says: "I am of the opinion from all that I have seen since I became practically acquainted with the art of cycling, and with those who practice it, either for competition, pleasure or business, that nothing produces so much injurious fatigue, or so much of bad effect on the health in cycling, as vibration. I speak only from personal experience on the matter. I was once more wearied by a short ride to Hammersmith on a tricycle that vibrated intensely than by any other ride I ever took on a machine at any other time, short or long. Moreover, the effect, which lasted several days, was something more than mere fatigue. It was like a shock to the nervous system, causing a continued feeling of vibration through the body, a sense of nausea, and a degree of nervous prostration, accompanied with a reduced power of the lower limbs, which, to say the least of it, was very inconvenient, and which in a feeble person might be attended with actual risk."

AFTER Herbert Hayes' brilliant departure for Brazil it is too bad that the failure of the firm employing him necessitates his return to a more prosaic existence than that which characterized his life immediately preceding his migration. We deeply sympathize with the ex-Chief Consul, who returns shorn of some of his glory and prestige.

FROM what little we know of the Society of Cyclists it is one of the most sensible cycling organizations in existence. Its object seems to be the intellectual entertainment of its members. At the meeting alluded to, besides the paper by Dr. Richardson on "Vibration," G. D. Ingell read a very interesting article upon "Military Cycles," and at other meetings such gentlemen as Joe Pennell and Col. Saville have contributed to the entertainment of its members. Those who think the only enjoyment in cycling is scorching, running up a record, or racing, may scoff at such a cycling association, but we think that the intelligent discussion of topics akin to cycling would be a great relief. We have wheelmen whose experience and education enables them to do any subject justice, and it would be a pleasure to listen to them expound on any matter of cycling moment.

NO legislation necessary, was reported by the Committee on Road and Bridges, on so much of the Governor's address as relates to the appointment of an officer for the oversight of the roads and bridges in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

May be not necessary, but some legislation that will improve our highways is essentially desirable.

AN invitation has been extended to the League of American Wheelmen asking them to participate officially in welcoming home the All America and the Chicago base ball teams. The teams are expected in New York during the first week in April. We do not know what action the Executive Committee will take in the matter, but it seems to us clear that the League should not officially join in the proposed ceremonies.

We have no doubt but that every member of the base ball teams is worthy of the most hearty consideration, but it must be borne in mind that these gentlemen have really done nothing worthy of national recognition. They have not circled the globe to meet ball players in any way their equal, but they have had a very pleasant tour and given exhibition games only.

Had it been an open question as to the superiority of certain foreign players over the All Americas or Chicagos, and had the Americans gone abroad for the purpose of settling the question and come home victors, then the matter would assume a different aspect, and even then we would question the policy of an amateur organization officially recognizing the prowess of a professionals'. As it is, however, the All America and the Chicago base ball teams have accomplished nothing, except to travel round the globe and give most interesting exhibition games, the gate to which presumably paid all their expenses.

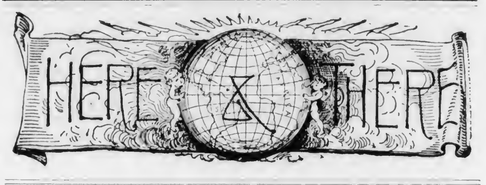
THE question of the use of the cycle for scouting purposes is engaging the minds of some of the more progressive officers of the National Guard in New York State. Mr. Luscomb is an enthusiastic member of the Citizen Soldiery, and is Captain of the "Talmage Company" of Brooklyn. Captain Luscomb proposes to make some trials this coming summer, as to the advisability of introducing the safety for use in scouting manœuvres. Mr. C. E. Pratt, who has just returned from England, stated that in conversation with some of the officers and also privates of the English volunteer force, he was advised that the safety would, to a certain extent, be used by the scouts and skirmishers. He further noticed that, as a rule, the views of the officer compared with those of the private differed somewhat as to the permanent adoption as a branch of the army. The officer saw the satisfactory results only, while the poor scout had in memory the tremendous strain physically he had to undergo to bring about those results.

The English experiments included a good deal of "cross country" work, and we agree with the private in thinking that if the safety is expected to be the means of transporting scouts safely and swiftly over the usual obstacles to be met with in a cross country run, the expectation will exceed the realization.

Stick to the roads, and the ordinary and safeties can, to a limited extent, be used to great advantage, but when it comes to climbing fences, fording streams and moving over a rough country, the results achieved will not warrant the physical force expended.



WHEN a writer so far loses his temper and becomes so utterly lost to all sense of decency as to politely request those who differ with him to go to H——, we draw off, we retire, and acknowledge that we have no answering argument. It is, no doubt, a "vigorous" style, but we hope it will not be largely copied. Had this remarkable suggestion emanated from the brain or pen of the editor of the Bloody Gulch Bowie we should have readily imagined that it was in line with the general tastes of his readers, but when the editor is supposed to cater to an educated and refined constituency, we marvel much that Temper should so get away with Judgment as to produce and print such a delicate and refined request.

AN esteemed contemporary seems surprised that we accept the "record" of 2.18 1-5, claimed to be made by Whittaker, Lee and Oxborrow on a Triplet. A more careful perusal of our article will show our usually careful brother editor, that we do not accept the performance as a record. We call it "a wonderful road performance," not a record, by any means, except so far as it is recorded the best of a special kind of a ride. The start was flying, and we cannot accept any claim for record unless the start is from a stand still. Barring yacht races and horse races, we believe all records must be made from a stand still.

That the 2.18 1-5 was done under special conditions not admissable in cycle record breaking is plain, and so we put it down as "a wonderful road performance," not a record in the strict and technical application of the word as applied to cycle records.

THERE is no writer more welcome to space in our columns than "Jack" (J. Purvis-Bruce). He has always something to say of interest, or some news to impart that is of general importance. His sketch of "Men I Have Met" will be read with interest by all, as he describes men of international reputation. Mr. Purvis Bruce is now in this country, and we hope to hear of his identifying himself with some cycle manufacturer before many moons have passed.

WHEN an editor criticizes, there should be a basis of fact for such criticism. When, therefore, a certain editor takes the position that the League has not been prominent and a leader in the matter of road improvement, he shows a woeful lack of knowledge on the subject. But then, he is so "well informed you know."

"JONAH'S" JOTTINGS.

THE Jersey bill, giving the control of the roads into the hands of the Boards of Freeholders, after a hopefully smooth course, has, I am sorry to say, struck a snag. "The bill went through the Senate without a hitch," said Assemblyman Voorhees to me the other day. "I got it out of my committee inside of fifteen minutes reported favorably. When it reached the Assembly, to our surprise, an opposition was developed on the part of the hayseeds, who feared to trust their freeholders with so much power; but I think we can pull it through all right yet." After all the good missionary work that has been done, it is hard luck that it should be in danger from the very class that it will benefit most.

IN the bowling tournament the Atalantic Wheelmen, of Newark, beat the Hudson County men the other night, leaving the two teams tied for first place, with six games won and two lost, each.

SAICH, the veteran bicycle maker of Newark, has given birth to another new cycling creation. This time it is a — I don't know what you call it. It is a rig for speeding a horse. Two large bicycle wheels, with ball bearings, rubber tires, etc., are rigged side by side, and between them, raised on high, is a framework to support the saddle of the rider or driver. Under this framework, and between the wheels, the horse is hitched, the driver sitting on the saddle in the framework above the horse. Saich claims that with this arrangement the horse can be trotted with practically no resistance.

I WAS out on the road the other afternoon and saw several horses frightened by that abomination, a full nickeled bicycle. Jersey riders have so generally discarded the nickeled wheels that the latter now frighten horses by their very strangeness. A half a dozen or more enamelled wheels passed the same animals without even attracting their attention. The age of dudeism in wheeling is gone and these nickeled nuisances are the last vestiges that remain. May they soon vanish.

AN account appeared in the New York papers the other day, of an accident on the Newark boulevard, to Mr. Ward, of Elizabeth, through his horse being frightened by a bicycle. Mr. Ward has been seen by Dr. Brown, and completely exonerates the wheelman from all blame. The bicycler was riding against a gale and in a cloud of dust, and did not see the horse until right on him.

PENNSYLVANIA.

"ARIEL."

THE Century Club rejoices in having escaped, scot-free, from what might have been a serious loss. Owing to the inadequate space in the club house, proper, they have been storing the tricycles and tandems belonging to the members in an annex to the Columbus avenue market house, a block above, and last Monday night the entire market house was destroyed by fire, which started, some time during the night, in a cigar store in the building. In an incredibly short space of time the entire building was in flames, and the efforts of the firemen were directed to the saving of the property and the adjacent buildings. All of the Club's machines were gotten safely out, the only damage done being a broken handle-grip or two; but Wall and Boyer, who occupied one of the stores on the Columbia avenue side, doing a trade in the repair and hiring of bicycles, etc., lost heavily, having had but a few of their machines saved, and most unfortunately having no insurance on their stock. Singular, isn't it, that business men should neglect this most important precaution?

I HAVE a phenomenon, here, in the shape of my oldest hopeful, who, never having ridden a bicycle before, this morning mounted and rode, at the first attempt on a safety. I put him on in front of the house and within the first hundred yards he was riding when I took my hands off the wheel, and we turned around at the end of the square and came up, he was able to ride the greater part of the way by himself. When the boy realized that he was actually going alone, I thought he would have a fit right there on the street. He is just thirteen, but already can stretch a 52-inch, and the fellows at the club advise me to put a brick on his head to stop his elongation.

MR. S. LEVY, of the Pennsylvania Bicycle Club, has offered a stop watch as a prize either for the largest mileage, or for the greatest number of club runs, the decision being left to Captain Supplee's judgment. If "Pennsy" does not take record for the year, in the season, in the shape of mileage, I shall be very much mistaken.

THE social season is going to have a handsome wind-up. All the clubs are down for full-dress balls, that of South End coming off April 25th, at St. George's Hall. The Philadelphias will give one more informal sociable, next month, with a ball in May, while Pennsylvania's next affair will be their ball. Their last Smoker is down for Friday, 15th, inst., and as engraved invitations have been issued for it, I judge it to be quite an affair. Shall be on hand to size it up for the WORLD. Century will also have one more Smoker, and after that comes the House-warming in their new home.

SPEAKING of the new house of the Centurions, reminds me that they are going to have one of the finest and most conveniently arranged houses in the city, after they get things in shape. The contract has already been awarded for the erection of a one-story wheel house, to be built on Carlisle street, which will be the full width of the lot—26 feet —65 in length, affording ample space for the purpose. Later on, it is their intention to add a second story, which will be fully equipped as a gymnasium. A revision of the by-laws is also under way, so as to allow the admission of lady members—a most excellent move, and one that is mainly due to the efforts of Mr. Collins and one or two others of the far-sighted members.

MR. PAUL E. SLIPP, a former Philadelphian, now a resident of Aden, writes, under date of February 6th, that Mr. Stevens had just visited Aden. He was in good health and spirits and had been the recipient of a dinner from the English and American residents.

AS a weekly the American Athlete will now come to its subscribers, it having been decided to change it from a semi-monthly. May its shadow never grow less.

MR. CHAS. H. SIEG, of Chicago, was here yesterday and Friday, visiting relatives. Mr. Sieg is a Philadelphian by birth, but swears by the home of his adoption. It was greatly regretted that his stay was so short, as we should like to have made things pleasant for him.

THE South End Wheelmen have hitherto been the only one of our city clubs to enjoy an immunity from the Safety craze, but at their last meeting the spell was broken, and the incorrigible goat crept in.

THROUGH the efforts of a number of the Wilmington Wheel Club, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company have at last consented to carry bicycles free, when accompanied by the owner, between this city and Wilmington. Not much of a concession to be sure, but it is the entering wedge, let us hope.

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

THERE is a scheme being concocted in the Chicagos to bring that club back into the League as a League club again. Conkling, Ayres, Thorne and Ellis are said to be at the bottom of it, and the first card was played when the club's own definition of an amateur was changed, at the last special meeting, to conform to the rules adopted by the League, and it is expected that the April meeting will be the time chosen to spring a resolution that will once more make the Chicagos a League club. In the meantime a great deal of lobbying is being done by parties interested to win over a majority in favor of the scheme. I am rather in hopes this will succeed, but—????

BERNSTEIN started to attend the inaugural ball at Washington, having had a full dress suit made that was a dazzling display of triumph for the skill of tailor and jeweler. I have not heard of his success there, but if any of the Washington cyclists saw a suit of the kind described, covered with diamonds, etc., they may know it was "our Sam."

I SEE that our Chief Consul has appointed Lumsden as Local Consul for the South Division, and Arthur is busily engaged in getting recruits for the League. Whether this is part of the scheme of Ayres, Conkling & Co., is an open question.

THE Douglas Cycling Club, following in the lead of the others, has become a corporation, with all the power appertaining to the same.

BY the way, I see Skinkle has joined the League again. How is this, William? Have you changed your mind in regard to that organization, or, as President, do you think it a duty you owe the club to be a member once more?

JOHN CORY thinks a good deal of his moustache, but owing to an accident he had to part with the same. If you would smoke a good cigar, just go around and ask John to explain the accident, and see how quickly he will offer you a cigar to say nothing.

THEY long talked of pool tournament has finally taken shape, and the first games will be played at the Chicagos' club rooms Wednesday, March 13th, between a team from the Lincolns and one from the Chicagos. It is even money at the present, on the result.

CAPTAIN ROE had thirty men in line for a run through the Parks. A pretty good showing for this time of the year. And how the safeties did loom up; more safeties than ordinaries. The safety craze has struck this burg hard.

IT is extremely doubtful whether Van Sicklen will enter the Pullman road race, or do any racing at all this year, his better half being most emphatically opposed to it, owing to his severe accident at Buffalo last fall.

OAK PARK now has a cycling club, with K. S. Doan as President, and the speedy Maas as Captain, and a membership of seventeen as a starter.

GARDEN is still worrying as to the disposition of the Challenge Cup he has given to be contested for: but whether it shall be by individuals or by teams is the sticker. The Chicagos and Illinois are in favor of team races, while the other clubs say no. And Bob is in a quandary, therefore.

BALTIMORE.

"NORVAL."

A SPECIAL meeting of officers to examine the work already completed on Mr. Kirkwood's road-book was held at the Maryland Club on Thurday night, March the seventh. It was thought that a copy of the Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Jersey book which is being prepared by the Pennsylvania Division could be obtained by that time so that the two could be compared. This proved impossible as that work is still in the hands of the compiler. A mass of manuscript and sample pages was submitted by Mr. Kirkwood. The work was much thought of by the Board of Officers and Mr. John D. Lord Jr., Chairman of the Rights and Privilege Committee was instructed to draw up a contract with Mr. Kirkwood. This road-book should draw many new members in the League as the cost of the volum same would come to nearly as much as the expenses of joining The book will be gratuitously distributed to every member of th Division.

THE Maryland Division went solid for Jessup at the late election. He has acknowledged the favor by writing the Chief Consul and thanking the Division most heartily.

THE Crescent Club have purchased the new house on the corner of Boundary avenue and Barclay street which they will handsomely fit up for a club house. The club now has eighteen riding members besides a number of honory members. Eight new members recently joined and it is in a flourishing condition. The club will be incorporated this week.

THE annual meeting of the stockholders of the Maryland Club was held Saturday, March 9th, at their club house on Mt. Royal avenue. About sixty members were present. The report of the trustees was read, showing the club's financial condition to be satisfactory to the members and stockholders. The revenue for the past year was over $1800 in excess of all actual expenses during the same period. So satisfactory was this showing considered that the 530 shares of stock remaining in the treasury unsold were eagerly subscribed for, thus completing the entire capital's stock of 2000 shares. The old Board of Trustees consisting of Moses Morris, Yates Penniman, James D. Mason, E. F. Le Cato, S. T. Clark, H. E. Brown were unanimously re-elected.

BUFFALO.

"ALI BABA."

THE theatre party which was to be given by the Buffalo Bicycle Club, in honor to Miss Pauline Hall, didn't materialize. Yes, the fellows were all going, but they couldn't just for once (including your humble servant) bear the thought of going without being individually accompanied by some one of the gentler sex, so it was that each went with himself and another. It is safe to say that less than a dozen of our club men failed to witness Miss Hall's brilliant and charming performance. If we did fail to keep our promise we hope that we are forgiven, and we wish to assure Miss H. that she occupies a very warm place in our hearts. [Whew! she did strike hard.—Ed.]

The final reception of the Buffalo Bicycle Club, for the season, was held last Friday evening. There were guests present from New York, Rochester and Erie. These receptions are exclusively club affairs, and have been the source of much enjoyment. We hope there will be just one diversion from this exclusive rule next season. I must not say more for fear of disclosing an important secret.

Miss Ida Bender addressed the Women's Wheel Club last Monday evening, in the reception rooms of the Buffalo Bicycle Club house. The parlors were well filled. Miss Bender spoke on the subject, "Woman."

The question of another hundred-mile run, on Decoration Day, is receiving some attention, and possibly will soon take definite shape.

There will be a large demand for safeties this season, and from reports, it will not be a novelty next fall to see the ladies riding the safety bicycle. Mr. C. N. Bowen will have a department, in charge of Miss Chase, to sell and to teach the ladies how to ride the lady's bicycle.

The Zigzag Bicycle Club is still (according to latest report) looking for a larger and finer house. I would suggest that they rent a house somewhere near the front. I believe that the membership could and would be doubled before another twelve month. Look well on the question of good surroundings, and it will pay in the end.

The speech in answer to the toast—The Ladies—rendered by Mr. Jenkins, on the occasion of the late banquet, was a most able effort most ably delivered. It was a speech that stirred the feelings of all who heard it; and Mr. Jenkins is a benedict, too!

POKKOPOLIS NOTES.

"STAR."

In a testimonial in a recent number of the World, the writer speaks of his new machine as a "poem," a "sonnet," a "tune on a hand organ," etc. The aptness of the metaphors is, at first, not apparent, but what is a poem without "feet," or a cycle without (cyclo)"meter?" Both must be well handled. The admirers of each rave over the beauty of the "lines." The originators of each are apt to grow rich. The beginner at each generally finds that it is up-hill work, though that depends on who "sonnet." The public may "tire" of their praises for they are often manipulated by "cranks." They may be light, heavy or very ordinary. They may be "ode" for. There's the poetry of motion. The "figures" of the riders, as well as those of the writers, are often criticized, but it is perhaps unnecessary to pursue the subject farther, as every one will no doubt see the bearing of these remarks.

The Enquirer man speaks of a road race that is soon to be held on the Harrison Pike. Why, there isn't a level place on the road long enough to be measured! Think of a road race on a course made up of steep hills, some of them over two miles long! Nixey! The race may be held—in the editor's mind—but the fool-killer would make sad havoc among the contestants.

The hill-climbing contest on Sycamore Hill, for which Mr. Bennett is to offer three prizes, will take place on the morning of the last Sunday in March. A committee of prominent wheelmen will have charge of the event. Entries may be made with Mr. A. A. Bennett, 6 East Fourth street. The contest will be open to any amateur wheelman, no matter what kind of a wheel he may ride.

There is some talk of a combined run to the "Zoo" next month. If it is intended to make it a combined run, in fact as well as in name, it should not be attempted unless the officers of the different local clubs pledge themselves to see that the members of their clubs do attend, otherwise it will be what is commonly called a fizzle.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

We can scarcely say "the riding season will soon be here," because during the winter of 1888-89 the riding season has scarcely ever been closed. But we do notice a change in the song of the paragraphist, who finds less and less in the social phase of the dormant cyclist to discuss, and more and more in the normal out-door road life of the rider. We are glad of it; the dormant, inactive phase is a necessity, but it is none the less galling to the ardent cyclist.

On March 29th look out for our big edition.

Mr. A. E. Schaaf and Mr. C. Seig, both of Chicago, called in to see us last week. Seig says that the Chicago men are backing Lumsden. In the meantime all Chicago wheelmen are hunting for "the Stroller."

The Arnold medal, given for best mileage for 1888 of the Binghamton, N. Y., Wheel Club, was won by the feather weight member, H. Y. Bresee, the "old man" of the club. His mileage was 2500.

At the annual town meeting at Bridgewater, Mass., March 4, it was voted to purchase a stone crusher, for which $3000 was raised. Would that all towns would go and do likewise.

It is said that the three bills now before the Pennsylvania Legislature are defective and so the Engineer's Society of Western Pennsylvania is formulating a bill which it claims will be nearer covering the ground in a satisfactory manner. One of the provisions will call for the creation of the office of Road Supervisor in each county, who shall be elected or appointed for a term of not less than four years, and who shall have general charge of the construction of all roads outside of the cities. It is the intention to provide also that all roads hereafter constructed throughout the State shall come up to a certain standard, which will equal in point of excellence any to be found throughout the country, such as are to be met with in Ohio and Kentucky especially. There will also be some provision made for the collection of the road tax and its use in employing competent men to do the work, instead of as now, allowing farmers to "work out" their tax in a slip-shod way.

"One of the" 1000—or less. At the office of the Squeal there was received an electrotype from a dealer, which was carefully wrapped in a late copy of the Wheel. Will the editor of the Squeal please make a note of that?

It has been rumored that the Albany Wheelmen and the Albany Bicycle Club will join forces and become one. Perhaps??

The rumor of the disbandment of the Cambridge, Mass., Bicycle Club is without foundation. Mr. John Read has lately joined the club.

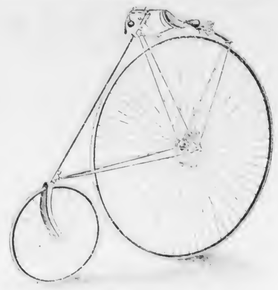
"Vernon" writes us: "The Minneapolis, Minn., Bicycle Club folded its tent and quietly stole away from its old quarters, and moved up to a fine suite of rooms over the Citizens' Bank. By the next meeting the rooms will be provided with a billiard table, velvet carpets, upholstered chairs, etc. Some of the 'hustlers' of the club tendered their services and secured fourteen or fifteen new names, and handed them in at the last meeting. There is no reason now why we will not have a substantial boom. As soon as the rooms are finished the club will have an 'opening,' at which every wheelman and his friends will be cordially invited, and they can be assured of having an elegant time, as the boys will be well fixed for entertaining visitors."

Our big edition will be issued under date of March 29th.

"Senator" Morgan is in Omaha yet, and has captured the town by his "genial and gentlemanly bearing."

The "lady cyclists" will invade Omaha, and so Omaha is blissfully happy.

Verily the Hagerstown men are taking time by the forelock. Although we are writing this item in March, we hear that the Hagerstown, Pa., Club are making vast preparations for a big race meet in their city, to take place July 4th. The intention is to make this a meet of three days' duration. The second and third days will be devoted to runs to the different points of interest, Antietam and the South Mountain battlefields, Fairview and Penmar. The management will send out several thousand invitations.



The Executive Committee was taken care of last Sunday, while in Boston, by Dr. Emery, A. Robinson, Abbot Bassett, Jack Seward, Percy Libby and the editor of this paper. We think the Executive Committee, collectively and individually, enjoyed their visit to Boston.

Chief Consul Emery, of Massachusetts, went down to New Bedford last week, and gave the cyclists of that venerable Massachusetts town a forcible argument as to why all wheelmen should be League members. The key note of how to meet the objections that may be advanced by the country members is contained in the following sentence, taken from the doctor's speech: "The only opposition expected is from the country members, who are afraid that their constituents will object if they saddle more taxes upon them, but when the weight of the argument that everybody in the State will be benefitted by better roads is fully appreciated, these members will probably pocket their objections." That is the point tersely put. Improved roads will be a universal and public benefit. Ring the changes on that sentiment, and divest the rural non-cycling mind of all thoughts that the improvement idea is a something to benefit cyclists only.

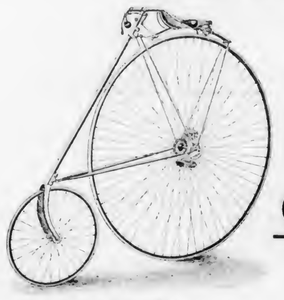
THE EAGLE.

No Levers.

Yes; The "Eagle" will climb a hill. It can be ridden up any hill that has ever been climbed on a Cycle.

No; It will not tip over backward as soon as you mount it, that is, if you know how to ride it.

Can you mount it? Well, we think you can, unless you have less than the average ability as a rider.



No; The position is not pushing backward; but directly downward, and is almost identical with that of walking; it is easy and natural, and an "Eagle" wheel can be ridden a great distance with very little fatigue. It is well adapted to rough and hilly roads, and can be ridden with ease and safety where it would be impossible to go on an "Ordinary."

These statements we are prepared to practically demonstrate, and are doing so daily, to the complete satisfaction of all who visit us

If there is not already an agent for the "Eagle" in your locality, we should be pleased to hear from you.

THE Pagerian methods of asking a brother scribe to proceed to Hades, when things don't go to suit the aforesaid Pagerian taste, shows a wonderful appreciation of what consists of "a pretty wit."

MR. WARNER, of St. Louis, is probably "Hawkshaw's" missing "Jules Benezac." It is said that Dr. Winthrop removed 841 "polypi," but from the looks of things, he did not succeed in getting them all out.

J. PHIL PERCIVAL, Vice Consul of Los Angeles, Cal., has returned from San Francisco, where he went to induce the California Division, in meeting assembled, to hold the State meet at Los Angeles, on May 30. It was decided to hold the meet there, and the local contingent is jubilant. Work will at once be commenced on the preliminaries of the meet, and the success of the event is a foregone conclusion. Elwell, of 'Frisco, will be on hand, and the coast record (2.48) will have to go. The races will be held at Agricultural Park, the best track in Southern California, and it will be put in prime shape for racing and records. Time medals will be given. In the evening a grand ball at the Pavilion will take place.

A CORRESPONDENT gives us the following good one on Jack Prince: "Last Sunday Prince came into the Omaha Wheel Club room and asked me to go over to Council Bluff with him. He said that he knew an old man there that had a pure English greyhound (Jack's favorite dog) for sale, and he wanted me to go over with him to inspect the purp. We started out, and had to walk about a mile and a half through the mud of Council Bluffs to an old hut. The old man would hardly speak to Jack at first, but finally he brought out his dog, a magnificent blue hound, and after a good deal of talking, closed the bargain at ten dollars. "But," he said, that "before he sold the dog he had to see the ould woman about it," who was lying sick in the house and wasn't expected to live very long. The dog had always been a pet of hers, and the old man couldn't sell him without her consent. He stayed in the house about ten minutes (during which time the dog amused himself by tearing a piece out of my overcoat), and when he came back (the old man, not the dog) he told us that his wife wouldn't part with the brute. But he added, "the dhoctor says that the ould woman can't live another week, an' if yez will come over nixt Sunday, sure she will be dead, bliss her soul, and I will take the tin dollars for th' crayture." If chances are favorable, Jack says, he will have the dog next week.

THE following is taken from an exchange, and will probably be read with interest by wheelmen generally: "Tom Eck is going to settle down, and the cycling racing circuits will know him no more, at least for a time. Eck will go down to history as the cycling Romeo. He is a living example of the proverb which tells us that the river of true love runs riotously in leaps and bounds. He is yet rarer as a man who was compelled to elope with his own wife, the general fashion now-a-days being to elope with some other party's wife. Eck will open a store in Minneapolis."

Do we call ourselves civilized and are we living in an enlightened age? When we read such items as the following we doubt it: "Our roads are in a horrible condition, practically impassable for horse and vehicle. A man in a hurry can save time by going a-foot." No, this is not an uninhabitated section, but right in the old Nutmeg State. Where is your vaunted New England enterprise?

ACCIDENTS will happen, so it seems, and we are sorry to note that a small boy was accidently knocked down by a cyclist in Bridgeport, Conn., and quite seriously hurt. We hope this was not another "sidewalk" outrage.

DEAR FOURDRINIER.

TIMBUCTOO, March, 1889.

Dear Fourdrinier—For a bumptious boasting bounce the Squeal carries off the palm, but for a practical wheeling newspaper the BICYCLING WORLD leads. X—Y—Z.

[The above is a specimen of the 9999 letters on this interesting subject which we have received from our readers.—ED.]

EUROPEAN TOUR NOTES.

THE limit having been increased to 30 there are now four vacancies. We trust that if there is any one who wishes to join us he will notify us to that effect at once.

Most cordial letters have been received from Irish and English wheelmen, and it is very evident that we shall not be allowed to get off the right road or feel lonesome while in those countries.

The route through Germany has been changed a little so that it now includes the famous Black Forest.

In Paris arrangements have been perfected to lodge the party at Hotel De La Tamise, Rue et Alyer, a most advantageous location, and a quiet homelike hotel, whose proprietor speaks English.

SOME MEN I HAVE MET ON THE RIPLEY ROAD, AND FAIN WOULD MEET AGAIN—BY "JACK."

IT is a person of diminutive calibre indeed, who does not interest one. Even the prosaic Jones, Brown or Robinson of commerce, the man we meet in every day life, has some besetting sin or virtue, some vagary or eccentricity which makes us remember the man—which either repels or attracts us—which forces us (nolens volens) to recollect him even after his face is no longer familiar, or at best a mere "composite photograph" of the race which is said to owe its origin to the Father Adam and the Mother Eve. He may be one of those orninary "Queen's subjects" or "American Citizens" who has little or no physical individuality, who wears orthodox clothes (a thing the writer was never known to do) but there is something about the man that stamps him a "character" and one to be remembered. The man who is nothing more or less (as the great Carlyle puts it) than "a forked radish with an artistically carved head," a mere mortal such as one sees derby-hatted and faultlessly attired on the streets of the city every day, has but little charm or attraction for the student of wondrous human nature. Of the man who repels, I have nothing to say, as it is a waste of space and an impertinent encroachment upon the filthy ground of libel. Of the man who attracts and interests I have a few words. I deal solely with the man whom I have met and fain would meet again in connection with our sport of cycling.

There are few sports which can show as many intelligent and gentlemanly deciples as cycling, unless perhaps it be the "contemplative man's recreation," the sport which is ever associated with Isaac Walton, the father of anglers. There is generally something very admirable about an enthusiastic fisher. Almost invaribly an admirer of nature and a student of natural history he saunters forth with his airy tackle to the brook that he may there, by means of skilful wrist and light hand induce the "lusty trout" or striped bass or "grayling" to book with longing eye at his fly. The only thing that can be said against the angler is that he is underhand, stragetic and deceptive in his fish luring methods, and imposes upon the credulity of his finny captives. With the cycler there is no fault to find. There is nothing but good will toward man and beast in the heart of the true cycler.

"He liveth best, who loveth best
All things both great and small,
And the same God who loveth us,
He made, and loveth all."

True it is, that wheelmen may be suicidal through enthusiasm in regard to pace, but in time he will be careless whether it is 8 or 15 miles an hour he travels, and that cycling to be enjoyable and recreative and beneficial, must be taken, not in excess, but in moderation. And what is moderation to a strong deep-chested fellow, may mean ill health to a weaker brother. But I challenge the world to produce a case where proper and moderate indulgence in the sport has ever harmed a man or woman.

But to return to our little subject. Among the men who have, by reason of their personal qualities and magnetic attractions, endeared me for all time to them I must mention, first and foremost, two men who "hold the fort" (excuse the expression which suggests a sacriligous hymn introduced by two religous mountebanks, and which lacks all that is likeable and beautiful to a person with any musical perception) at 152 Fleet street, London (E. C.). Two better hearted, better bred, and more likeable gentlemen than Wm. McCandlish and F. Percy Low, of Wheeling, do not exist, in my humble opinion. When I want to find two English gentlemen I know exactly where to go. Wm. McCandlish, or "Mac," as he is known to his friends of the cycle fraternity, is a small boned, refined looking man, who has grown more to mind than to matter, and who can say some awfully irritating things when he has a will to, especially when he smiles that sarcastic smile of his and laughs his carefully-constructed, musical laugh. His "chum," F. Percy, has the name of being a "cynic," but if I mistake not there is more of that same in "Mac" than in F. Percy. A "neat" little man is McCandlish, always irreproachably attired, ever modest, and smiling "a smile that is child-like and bland" when he hears a "fishy" story.

Mr. F. Percy Low is of the thorough English type, and shows good proportions. Quite a comfortable load for a tricycle is Mr. Low; quite a sceptic on the marriage question, and ever posing as a cynic, but in this respect he is an out-and-out fraud, for there is no room under Mr. Low's waistcoat for an unkind thought; generous and good hearted to a fault is this gentleman. There is not a good theatrical plot with which he is not familiar, and he has a great deal of the get-up of a well-to-do gentleman-actor, and indeed his friends in the theatrical profession are very numerous, especially "Professor" Jimmy Nelson, one of the "Old Guard." Some of the kindly expressions of the above gentlemen I never shall forget.

A still more portly personage is Mr. C. W. Nairn, of Wheeling, one of the "Wheeling crowd," or trio. There are few men in or out of Wheeling who have such a decided taste for the fair sex, or such a penchant for their company. Early on a summer morning, C. W. may be seen toiling up Esher hill, with a fair young creature on the front seat of the tandem. They are bound to go to Ditton or Ripley, though on a muddy day Cobham or Oakham has been known to receive them joyously on a quiet English Sabbath morn.

But look! half a mile away on the "Fair Mile" is a cloud of chalky dust, the size of a man's hand. The cloud comes nearer, and discloses two stalwart figures on a tandem tricycle. It is Charlie Liles and Harry Swindley, the London representative of the Cyclist, both of the Ripley Road Club and good riders. "Hello, Champagne Puvy," squeals Liles, as he lifts his closely cropped head off the front handle-bar. "Going to Ripley," pants Swindley, "come on, as we are not going to lag," and on they go at a 3.30 clip, as Swindley is going to read "the lessons" in the quaint English chapel at Ripley. And they don't lag; Liles is a "corker." A little, very strong and active man is he, very handy with his paws on a "road hog," when occasion demands, and a true artist in optic decoration. Well does he know where to lay on the effective tints. There are too many joints and hinges about Liles for the ordinary man to tackle him, and when he screws his eyes up and buries his neck and head in his broad shoulders there is not much left of his cranium except his hair, which is short as velvet pile.

AN EVENING WITH THE DENVER BI. CLUBS.

The writer made two calls, one evening a few weeks ago, at the rooms of the two local clubs, and was very pleasantly entertained at both, though the manner of entertainment was quite different. In the one case he was shown some of the relics of blood-curdling adventures while on club runs. Here was a two-inch cotton-wood stick, three feet long, which the dauntless Captain had once used for a handle-bar, while caught in very close quarters.

He was leading a run one day through the wildest part of the Rockies to be found in the vicinity of Leadville, when, while going at a three-minite gait down an almost perpendicular hill, a pack of fierce and blood-thirsty wolves were seen only a short distance ahead, intercepting the way.

It was a critical moment, and a time when one must think quick. The gallant Captain was equal to the emergency and he "thunk," and sounded three short, quick notes on his fog horn, which his followers understood to mean, "pump like —." They pumped.

The leader, as he came face to face with the man eaters, gave a mighty pull on the handles and lifted himself, wheel and all, over the backs of the herd; the others followed, and all landed safely on the other side, but, horror of horrors, the awful strain had snapped the Captain's handle-bars in two, and the wolves in hot pursuit.

Again he must act quick. It is needless to say he acted.

Just as he was passing beneath a huge cotton-wood tree, he whipped his pen-knife from his belt, and with one dexterous lung had severed the necessary stick from the mother trunk, and in less time than it took him to tell it, the branch was firmly lashed to his head (of his wheel) with a shoestring, and the entire company wheeled up to their club house without further adventure.

When the Captain had finished this recital, which, by the way, had been heard thirty-seven times by every one present but myself, he drew a long breath, wiped the beads of perspiration from his noble brow, lit a cigar and said no more.

Silence reigned for several minutes, but was finally broken by the soft voice of the Second Lieutenant, who, picking up a pair of small sized boulders from a stand, said: "Do you see those stones?" We acknowledged that we had that pleasure.

"Well," he continued, "you would not think those identical stones had been hurled clear through the brain of a huge mountain lion, would you?" Again we agreed with him.

Shifting his left leg over the right, and drawing a cigarette from his pocket, he said, in scarcely audible tones, "I'll tell you how it happened."

Although he spoke in a whisper, his comrades heard him. He was silent: I looked around me to see why he did not continue, when I discovered that we we alone, he had cleared the room, and I left him, reflecting upon the unkindness of the human race in general and his companions in particular, for he has never yet been able to tell that story in the club rooms.

Sauntering over to the other club house, I had no heart for the amusement that was in progress there. Billiards, cards nor genial conversation had any charms for me, my heart was filled with compassion for that unfortunate individual who had never been given an opportunity to let the world know what a narrow escape he had had from death at the hands of a huge mountain lion.

IN MEMORIAM.

At a meeting of the members of the Keystone Bicycle Club, held in Pittsburg, Pa., March 6th, 1889, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased an all-wise Providence to remove from his earthly career our late fellow-member, Frank Magill, be it

Resolved, That, in this sad bereavement, we tender to his family our most respectful feelings of sympathy and regret, and that in his death this club has lost a most useful, attentive and worthy member.

Resolved, That a copy of these proceedings be sent the family of the deceased and placed in the records of the club.

HARVARD NOTES.

At the last meeting of the Harvard Bicycle Club it was definitely decided to hold a race meet during May next. The following committee was appointed to make all arrangements: Baldwin, '81; Davis, '97; Brown, '91; Codman, '91; Greenleaf, '92; Bailey, '91; and McCammon, '88. After the regular meeting of the club was finished the committee held an extemporary meeting. It was decided to have the meet on May 11th if possible. The prizes are to be valuable, and every inducement will be given to suit racers and to make the races interesting to the spectators, by means of handicaps and short-distance races. The track on Holmes's Field is a quarter-mile cinder path, and is kept in the best condition of any track in America. In the short-distance races not more than three men will be run together, and in the long distances not more than six, in order to avoid any chance of an accident.

The H. B. C. also voted to hold a Hare and Hounds' chase during April, and a handicap road race during June. It is probable that the latter will be open to inter-collegiate athletes and Technology men. The following committee was appointed to make arrangements for these: K. Brown, '91; G. H. Merrill, '90; and E. A. Bailey, '91.

It is pretty well known that the Institute of Technology is going to challenge the Harvard Club to a road race this spring. A number of Harvard men have already begun to train for this race and the road race.

DINNER TO THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE L. A. W.

President Luscomb, First Vice President Dunn, Second Vice President Lawton, Secretary Bassett, Chief Consul Emery, Vice Consul Robinson, Mr. C. E. Pratt and C. W. Fourdrinier were dined at the Algonquin Club by Col. A. A. Pope, last Saturday evening. The affair was a most delightful one. The dinner was fully up in excellence and elegance to the usual standard of the Algonquin. After the coffee had been disposed of and the cigars had been smoked, the party, under the guidance of Col. Pope, went over to the Athletic Club and viewed the attractions of that palatial club house. From thence Mr. Pratt took the party under his care, and extended the hospitality of the St. Botolph Club. Taking all in all the guests of Col. Pope and, later on, Mr. Pratt spent a most enjoyable evening, and one which will, no doubt, linger as a pleasant memory in the minds of all who were the fortunate participants.

HOW TO CURE A SPRAINED ANKLE.

John Smith is a well known trainer and he thus describes his modus operandi of curing a sprained ankle: "When a person gets a sprained ankle," said "Happy Jack" yesterday, "he goes to a physician, has the leg painted with iodine and stays in the house for a week or ten days. How I cured John L. Sullivan of a sprained ankle will serve to illustrate my system. I found John L. in his saloon in Boston, laid up with a badly swollen limb. He asked me what I could do for him, and I went to work.

"'What's that?' said I, taking his foot and removing a lot of bandages.

"'My doctor has painted my foot and ankle with iodine,' said Sullivan.

"'All right, I will fix you,' said I. I went over to a grocery store and got a pound of common soda. Then I got a pot of boiling water, put it in a tub and put the soda into it. Then I got some woolen rags, dipped them in the solution and wrapped them around the injured member. I wrapped dry cloths around on the outside, so that the steam could do its work thoroughly. I changed the bandages every fifteen minutes and had his nurse do the same when I went home that night. When I called the day Sullivan was all right. It would have taken two weeks for that iodine to have done its work."

ROUTES.

FROM CHAMBERSBURG TO WASHINTON.

Editor Bicycling World: In your issue of March 1st, No. 19,911 wants to know the best route from Chambersburg to Washington, D. C. The following route I have tried and enjoyed—most of it.

Chambersburg to Greencastle 11 miles C. V. Railroad, never good on road.

Greencastle to Williamsport, fine pike: Williamsport to Falling Waters, tow path: Falling Waters to Martinsburg, fine pike: Martinsburg to Winchester, fine pike: Winchester to Berryville, fine pike: Berryville to Charlestown, good pike: Charlestown to Harpers Ferry, good, bad etc.; tow path to Washington which is fine in some places and bad in others. Unless I am very much mistaken it makes the route about 150 to 160 miles. Will be very glad to give any other information as to hotels, consuls, time tables etc. Fraternally yours, W. G. Nixon, No. 19,205.

Chambersburg, Pa.

ANOTHER.

Editor Bicycling World: In answer to the request of "No. 19,911" for routes, I give the following:

Chambersburg to Washington, D. C.—Chambersburg to Greencastle, 12 miles, dirt road: Greencastle to Hagerstown, 12 miles, pike: Hagerstown to Antietam (see Butterfield), 14 miles, pike: Antietam to Potomac river, 3 miles, dirt, bad: tow path along river to Washington, 60 (?) miles, probably more, no good stopping place after passing Harper's Ferry.

Alternate route—Chambersburg to Hagerstown, as above, 24 miles: Hagerstown to Frederick, 26 miles, pike: Frederick by Baltimore pike to Cooksville, 24 miles, pike: Cooksville to Brookville, 10 miles, dirt: Brookville via Norbeck to Washington, 20 miles, pike. This route offers better surface for bicycling, but is quite hilly.

The only route from Washington to Oxford, Pa., is to reverse Routes 49 and 29 (A) of Pennsylvania road book.

Yours very truly, No. 6992.

Baltimore, March 4th, 1889.

PHILADELPHIA TO GETTYSBURG.

Editor Bicycling World: In reply to L. A. W. 19,308, who requests a good route from Philadelphia to Gettysburg, Pa.:

First leave Philadelphia on the famous Paola pike to Paola, continue on through the following towns, as per Route 26, in the Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Maryland Road Book: Downington, Coatsville, Wagon-town, Compassville, White-horse, Intercourse and Bird-in-hand, hence into Lancaster City. From Lancaster you have twelve miles of fine pike to Columbia, on the Susquehanna River: cross the river in a closed railroad bridge, 1 1-8 miles in length (good riding through the bridge), to Wrightsville: climb the famous hill on the main street of this town, then proceed on a rolling, good, limestone pike through Hellam to York; now from York to Gettysburg there is a route given in the road book, as follows: From York to East Berlin, Hunterstown to Gettysburg; also one as follows: From York to Abbottstown, to New Oxford, to Gettysburg. The greater part of both of the above routes the roads are vile, the worst in this part of the country, therefore I advise the tourist to take the following route from York to Gettysburg: Leave York by West Main street on a good stone pike, proceed for 15 miles to Abbottstown (this pike is from fine to medium); the first part out of York for five or six miles is very good: upon arriving in the square in Abbottstown, turn left into the Abbottstown and Hanover turnpike (which is fair riding), continue to Hanover, 6 miles. Between these two towns a series of hills will have to be climbed: they are known as the Pigeon Hills: they are sure to strike terror to a tourist's heart upon seeing them for the first time, but they are not near as bad as they look: can easily be climbed on an ordinary, also coasted, but with care. Upon arriving at Hanover let No. 19308 call upon me at No. 7 Baltimore street, and I will explain it more fully. Now from Hanover to Gettysburg, distance 14 miles: the first 2 1-3 miles is a good limestone pike, and the rest a country clay road, which is good in dry weather but very bad after a heavy rain: it is generally good riding in the months of June, July, August and September. This route continues on to Hagerstown, Md., hence down the Shenandoah Valley to Staunton, Va., which is the finest ride in the East. Hoping the above will meet the approval of No. 19,308, and also that you will kindly publish the above for his benefit and all others wishing to tour through this part of the country, I remain, Yours respectfully,

Edw. W. Bair, L. A. W. No. 17,370,
Local Consul for Hanover.

Hanover, York County, Pa., March 4th, 1889.

ASPHALT BRICKS.

Now that the roads improvement and paving question has become one of national importance, anything appertaining to the question is read with avidity. In Camden, N. J., works have just been completed for manufacturing asphalt bricks, the modus of which we give below, taken from an exchange:

"Near the main building a shed, 100 by 40 feet, with a capacity for holding 3000 tons of stone, is used for the storage of the hard blue limestone, which is used in the manufacture of the blocks. About 120 tons of this stone are used per day. The 'crushing room,' where the stone is ground or crushed, is of brick, and all the machinery in this room is automatic, the operator of the 'crusher' being the only person employed in it. The machine used has a capacity of ten tons an hour. The stone, after being prepared, passes through a revolving drum in the heater, which makes one revolution per minute and is six feet in diameter and 30 feet long. The crushed stone passes through the drum in 20 minutes, after which 87 per cent. of it, with 13 per cent. of asphalt, is placed in a 'mixer,' which mixes a charge in three minutes. From this machine it is passed to a 'press' and moulded into bricks 4 by 5 by 12 inches. The press has a capacity for turning out 8000 bricks in 11 hours. The blocks when pressed are 270 degrees Fahrenheit, and are run through a carrier 100 feet long, filled with water, for cooling purposes. The blocks are then placed in the yard under a storage shed.

The works have a capacity for making 3,500,000 blocks per year, and it is stated that 2,000,000 blocks will be made by next June.

CYCLING AND HEALTH.

We take pleasure in printing a portion of the speech delivered by Dr. Danelson, at the banquet of the Buffalo Bicycle Club. Said he: "I am a firm believer in muscle. With good physical development we have good will power. With these qualifications results follow in spite of circumstances; while on the contrary, the feeble-bodied and feeble-minded are controlled entirely by circumstances. As a member of the medical profession, it may be expected that I should say something of the effects of the bicycle upon the rider. Occasionally we see in the public prints a startling statement that the learned Dr. Blank has discovered that bicycle riding causes this or that serious disease. And of course he has had in his private practice not a few of these cases to treat. I am not speaking about accidents, for these are likely to happen in all sports.

Now, how about these "serious diseases?" Let us look the ground over, not as professional experts, but in a common-sense, matter-of-fact manner. It is contended that the exposure in the excessive heat of summer is likely to lead the perspiring wheelman to seek cool retreats and refreshing breezes for his comfort, and that this induces colds and rheumatism. The closest observation does not warrant this conclusion, and we all know that there is no truth in such a statement.

Again, that the exposure to sudden showers in the spring and summer, when the system is fatigued also tends to a rheumatic condition. This looks well in theory, and only as such. I remember very well on one occasion being thoroughly drenched to such an extent that my boots were filled with water. I concluded my ride and in the house, finished the bath begun so unceremoniously out of doors, and when again in dry clothing I felt the better for my experience. As far as my observation goes, there is little rheumatism among wheelmen. I account for it by the fact that the rider of the cycle is an advocate of the bath. Blood diseases are not likely to appear when the skin is kept active. Every one of us knows that wounds and abrasions heal promptly, and we have yet to learn that broken bones do not unite with greater facility among athletes than any other class.

Another group of serious diseases are those that effect the brain. It would seem—that with the thermometer in the nineties—that the bicycler would fall an easy prey to sunstroke. In a vast experience and acquaintance, covering over five years, I have not heard of a single case of sun-stroke. My own experience demonstrates that the steel pill is a good remedy for congestive headache, sleeplessness is dispelled by the same remedy, and the brain worker will find in this course the greatest relief from his fatigue. Often when completely tired out by office work, I have reluctantly mounted the saddle, but a ten-mile spin and a bath have worked a perfect regeneration. Headers are likely to cause concussion of the brain, but it is the exception when wheelmen do not recover from this grave malady.

Diseases of the heart follow over-exertion in every kind of labor, but who can tell of a single instance of this character that has compelled the rider to abandon wheeling. There is one kind of heart disease that sometimes thins our ranks, and that is marriage.

A statement was made in the World a short time ago by a physician that bicycle riding was likely to induce rupture or hernia

[Only when the waist was strapped too tightly.—ED.] I do not believe such a thing possible. There are but few wheels made in which the treadles are exactly under the saddle, and even in these the rider does not sit erect. When putting forth his greatest efforts his body is almost at right angles with his thighs. The strain, therefore, is through his arms, along the back and down the legs. The abdominal walls are relaxed, and on account of the rapid breathing it is almost impossible to hold the diaphragm in place more than a moment at a time, and surely not with that rigidity that will force the bowels downwards toward the inguinal canals. Hernia occurs only when the person is erect and supporting great weight.

Finally we have read that the pounding of the saddle upon the perineum produces impotency. The saddle does not pound the perineum. The curved metal at the back of the saddle gives sufficient breadth and firmness to allow the body to rest upon the pubic bones as it should."

WHAT SHALL WE WEAR?

Editor Bicycling World: The matter of apparel is next in importance after the choice of a wheel, and I think nothing could be of more interest to your readers than a discussion of the matter in these pages. There are, doubtless, many wheelmen who think that they have the cycling suit, as regards the best material, cut, color and fit, and one which is the best appearing and most durable. If some of them would send short descriptions of these ne plus ultra suits (taking it for granted that they exist), they would greatly oblige the less fortunate riders of the more numerous class, who have failed thus far to get an outfit that was a success. Let us hear from the lucky ones. Yours fraternally, BUCKEYE.

Canton, Ohio.

[The question of dress is as important a one to the cycle rider as ever it was to Flora McFlimsey, but with this difference, that sweet Flora was perplexed because of her supposed lack of dress for adornment's sake, while the cyclist is strictly utilitarian, and desires to know what is the most comfortable and the most healthful. To our correspondent, "Buckeye," we would say that cut and color are undoubtedly desirable, and should engage every well regulated wheelman's attention, but the principal thing is material, and when we write the word WOOL, we express not only our opinion as to the proper material, but the opinion of others who have made a study of the question of dress. For hot or cold weather, wool is the thing, only in thickness to meet the demands of climate, should it vary. Let the pockets, the waistbands and the linings all be of wool. Pressure round the waist should be most carefully avoided, and in place of suspenders (Anglice, braces) have a band sewn round the shirt, waist high, with buttons attached all the way round, and then in the band of the breeches have corresponding button holes, and don't be afraid that you can have too many of these buttons.

As to color, why any of the grays or browns will do, tastes differ as to color, only insist on wool. As to cut of coat, the present generally accepted style, of a semi-military fatigue jacket, seems to be the best thing, only make it plain—entirely void of braid and other fol-de-rols.

Certain firms, whose advertisements can be found in our columns, make splendid knit jersey suits, which are just the thing for the rough and ready rider. They are cool and warm also, elastic and neat fitting, and for the rider who wants a suit for the road or track alone, they are most excellent.

The rider who avoids cotton or linen as a garment or in lining, and does not strap himself tightly round the waist cannot go far astray in his outfit. Let the clothing be woolen or knit jersey, let it be neat and quiet in color, dispense with all braidings and gold and silver lace. With the above hints a rider will not go amiss. —ED.]

THE PREMIER LADIES' SAFETY.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

We have been informed by some of our agents and others, that they have been offered Premier Ladies' Safeties by outside parties and at a reduction from the regular price. We beg to state that no genuine Premier machines (i. e., those manufactured by Hillman, Herbert & Cooper, limited) can be purchased in this country, except from us or our authorized agents. Our Special Premier Safety is a light machine of the highest quality and finish for either ladies or gentlemen. The price with patent leather guard and ball pedals is $135. This is as low as a forty-six pound safety that carries the guarantee of our Special Premier can be sold. The frame of a ladies' safety, to obtain strength and rigidity, requires the finest steel, the largest weldless tubing, the most skilful workmanship and the greatest care, of any cycle made. We cordially invite comparison of the Premiers with other makes.

LLEWELLYN H. JOHNSON,
Sole U. S. Agent,
Hillman, Herbert & Cooper, Limited.

Orange, N. J., March 11, 1889.

THE Weed Sewing Machine Co., of Hartford, have the General Agency for the "Columbias" for the State of Connecticut.

WE think Mr. Bidwell leads in making the first practical effort to induce ladies to ride the bicycle. This shows special enterprise. Adelphi Hall is situated quite near to Central Park, and is fitted up with nice dressing rooms, toilet rooms and parlors, etc. The greatest care will be taken to make proficient riders of the pupils, and that the ladies of New York have caught on to the idea is proven by the fact that Mr. Bidwell has already a list of some fifty pupils.

THE Columbia Bicycle Club, of North Attleboro', are celebrated for doing things up brown, and the party it gave on the evening of the 11th was fully up to the standard. Over 100 couples were present, and the toilets of the ladies were notable for their elegance. It was acknowledged to be one of the toniest affairs ever held in that town. The Committee of Arrangements were: F. I. Gorton, W. F. Swift and C. Horstmyer. The floor was in charge of President Mills. Nelson H. Gibbs, Secretary-Treasurer Rhode Island Division, was present.

W. J. NEWMAN, 7 Harvard Row, Cambridge, is showing a line of Premier Safeties, including the Special, Popular, Youth's and Safety Tandem, that are well worth inspecting. Mr. Newman has control of these celebrated wheels for Boston and vicinity, and reports a good demand for them already. Ladies should not fail to see the Special before buying a two-wheeler.

MR. JAMES A. LAKIN has made some changes in his cyclometer for the year 1889. The cyclometer for ordinaries will register 10,000 miles. Mr. Lakin is also producing a cyclometer for safeties.

THE Columbia Safety tandem, the first tandem bicycle ever manufactured in America, is now ready for delivery, and can be seen at the Pope Co.'s offices in Boston, New York and Chicago.

ONE of the newest and most novel things out in a stand for Safety Bicycles is the Buffalo Safety Stand. A. G. Spalding & Bros., sole agents. It lists at $1.00, is small, compact and light and will hold a Safety just right. Dealers and riders will find it just the thing.

LEAGUE HEADQUARTERS:
12 Pearl Street, - - - - Room 27.
ABBOT BASSETT, Secretary.

THE Executive Committee of the League have been in Boston this week inspecting League headquarters and familiarizing themselves with the routine of League work. A great deal of work has been done by day, and, after daylight, Boston Wheelmen have shown hospitalities which have been appreciated by the Committee.

THE books for renewals are now open and fees will be received from this date. We publish in this issue a renewal blank which we hope will be universally used. A blank of this kind is more satisfactory than a notice of renewal written on a note or letter sheet. Club secretaries will be supplied with these blanks free of charge on application. Chief Consuls may have renewal blanks in quantities for recruiting purposes on application.

THE books of the League for 1888-9 are now closed, and those for 1889-90 are opened. Applicants may now send $2 and they will be put on the books for the year ending April 30, 1890. No further lists will be published till April 5, and on that date the candidates will be applicants for membership for the year impending.

WE are now sending out the new tickets and shall endeavor to keep up with our work. At present we can quickly respond to every renewal with a ticket, later when the money comes in thick and fast upon us there will be some delay. We have removed our coat for work and we do not expect to put it on again till the renewals are in and the summer election is over.

NEW YORK members will please hold their renewals till after April first. The dues of that Division are now fixed at $1.50, but an amendment to the rules proposing a reduction to $1.00 is now pending and till some decision is arrived at we cannot accept less than $1.50

TESTIMONIAL.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. January 19, 1889.

Erie Knitting Mill—Frank Fairbairn:

Dear Sir—Having worn my Jersey Bicycle Suit, made by the Erie Knitting Mill, and having satisfied myself that it is the best suit that has ever come to my attention, and the best I have ever worn, I having tried all jersey cloth and knitted jersey. So I have deemed it my duty to recommend it to all wheelmen as the best wearing of any goods I have yet seen. And as a testimonial will suffice to say that after trying your Jersey Bicycle suits for wheeling, it will be found to fill the bill, and no other need apply. I speak from my own experience, and others that have tried the suits will agree with me. Wishing you a prosperous year,

I remain yours, etc., HAL. W. GREENWOOD.

H. B. SMITH MACHINE Co.

Gentlemen—The bicycle has done extra good work and has been over all kinds of roads without repairs. Yours very truly,

FRANK J. WOODARD.

WESTERLY, R. I., Feb. 11, 1889.

H. B. SMITH MACHINE Co.

Gentlemen—I am very highly pleased thus far with the 39 inch, as a road machine. It is a better hill climber than any machine I have ever before ridden, for all I can see it is just about as speedy as the larger sizes, and I am astonished to find so slight a difference if any, in the jar on rough roads.

Very cordially yours,

DR. J. HOWARD MORGAN.

MARVA, Ill., Dec. 7, 1888.

H. B. SMITH MACHINE Co.

Sir—I have rode a crank wheel for 12 years, but last season I bought a Star; I would not give it for any wheel I was ever on, for all round riding and tricks.

Yours respectfully,

SILAS LONG.

JACKSON CENTRE, O., Aug. 21, 1888.

H. B. SMITH MACHINE Co.

Dear Sir—I can say in regard to the wheel (Star) that it is the lightest running, best hill climbing, and speediest wheel I have ever ridden, and I have tried both the "crank" and lever wheels. Yours respectfully,

J. E. MERANDA.

CHESTER, Pa., Dec. 7, 1888.

THE STAR MFG. Co.

I have been riding a 51-inch American Star for the past few months, and find it a constantly increasing source of pleasure. I am city editor of the Chester Times, and find my wheel valuable in reaching suburban points quickly. A friend also began riding a crank when I started in on my Star; has three times broken his handle-bar by headers, while I haven't spent a dollar for repairs to my machine, and it is an old wheel, while his is new.

THE NEW STAR, 39x24

This in brief is my experience with a Star, and though it is of the old pattern I wouldn't exchange with any one of the other fellows. If you wish to use this as a testimonial I have no objections. Very truly yours,

T. W. ENTWISLE.

LARGEST MAKERS

IN THE WORLD

WITHOUT EXCEPTION.

"The time when the world-famous name of Singer was associated with the manufacture of strong but weighty cycles has long since passed away, as far as the latter characteristic of the above firm's excellent manufactures are concerned. Their well-earnt reputation for strength, good wear and stability is still maintained in the highest degree, but for some years past Messrs. Singer & Co. have stood second to none in the matter of lightness and strength combined. A brief inspection of the new pattern for 1889, the 'Singer Safety,' will be alone sufficient to prove this, and to those riders, or intending riders, who now upon the brink of the cycling season proper are taking heed as to what they shall ride therein, we recommend a trial of this gem among safeties. From a constructional point of view, the framing is as near perfection as may be, while the new ball socket head is an absolute luxury as far as steering is concerned."—Cyclist.

C. W. FOURDRINIER. J. S. DEAN.

BOSTON, 22 MARCH, 1889.

"BY FAR THE BEST"

BOSTON, Mass., March 13, 1889.

Bicycling World Co., 12 Pearl street, City.

Gentlemen—It may be of value for you to know the following facts in regard to your paper as an advertising medium. We have tried two of the leading cycling papers beside your own in advertising second-hand wheels. The replies received from the advertisements in the two papers were exactly one each, while we take pleasure in stating that we can trace directly the sale of over thirty machines to the advertisement which we placed in your valuable medium. You are at liberty to use this as you see fit.

Very truly yours, SINGER & CO.,

Per WM. L. ROSS, Mgr.

[We won't so far abuse confidence as to give the names of the other two papers, but we don't think our advertisers will have to work their imagination very hard to guess correctly.—ED.]

IN a former issue, Mr. Corcoran made the very sensible suggestion to the racing board that it made provision for safety races and not allow the dwarf to compete in ordinary bicycle events. A careful perusal of the rules as adopted does not reveal that the suggestion has fallen on appreciative ears. Perhaps it was an oversight?

ONE word more to Page, of St. Louis, and then we propose to dismiss him and his name from this paper until the next time he perpetrates an impertinence (which time we fear is much nearer than is pleasant to our readers).

Mr. Page claims the right to criticize the League; we deny his right, and consider anything he may have to say on League matters an impertinence. He is not a member of the League, being either too parsimonious or too hard up to send in his dues. Now the League must expect criticism from its members, and members have that right, but when an outside individual, of the 789 calibre of our St. Louis friend, becomes impertinent by bestowing praise or heaping abuse on officials far above his mental and moral level it is time to sit on him. Vale, Page, my boy, this time; we will sit on you again when further occasion occurs.

FEAR that the adoption of the proposed prison labor bill will in any way interfere with the proposed roads improvement bill is entirely unfounded.

Wicked as New York is, and prolific as she is in producing convicts, we are happy to say that if the entire available force of prisoners were "turned loose" on road building jobs, it would be but as a drop in the bucket, when compared with what the projectors of the roads improvement bill contemplate in their scheme. Employ the prisoners by all means; it is a step in the right direction, even though it be a short one.

KINGSLAND, the Baltimore crack, says that racing interest "is dead, and the people don't know it." The people may be ignorant of the presence of the corpse, but the managers and promoters of last year's race meets are still wearing crape "in memoriam." But may be the "interest" is not dead, but only in a trance. Let us apply restoratives, chafe the numb members, and who knows but that the good old "interest" may take a new lease of life, invigorated by its forced rest and inactivity.

OF late we have had many enquires as to the methods employed in the scientific building of bicycle tracks. We have approached several gentlemen in this country who have been successfully engaged in track laying and we are in hopes to be able to lay before our readers the wisdom born of experience, which these gentlemen most undoubtedly possess. In the mean time a series of valuable articles on this most interesting subject have appeared in the late issue of our esteemed English contemporary, the Bicycling News, which we take pleasure reprinting almost as originally written.

THE important bill now before the New York Legislature, proposing to utilize prison labor in the building and maintenance of public highways, will be watched by cyclers with a good deal of interest. It is needless to say that our sympathies are with this or any other measure tending toward the improvement of the roads of the country. In another column we print the law as proposed. The bill had not yet passed in the House at the time our informant wrote us, but we hope to hear "progress" reported from time to time, and that the bill will receive Gov. Hill's signature is our most earnest wish.

THE association which depletes all the A.s in the type cases, is after a Connecticut man with a very pointed stick. It seems that the aforesaid gentleman, who hails from the Wooden Nutmeg State, competed as an amateur in some amateurs' games held in New York, and captured a very valuable prize. Soon after that event the association of the many A.s demanded the return of the prize, giving as a reason that the enterprising Connecticut gentleman was, at the time of said race, a professional.

He of the Nutmeg Commonwealth denied the soft impeachment, and promptly refused to give up the spoils, retorting, "what are you going to do about it?" This rough and ready reply riled the A.s, and it is trying to set the machinery of the Empire State in motion, whereby it will produce a requisition to be used on His Excellency of Connecticut, "demanding the body," etc., of said Blank to answer in the courts of the State of New York as to his legal right to retain the prize, which, it is claimed, was illegally won. Taking all in all it is a pretty kettle of fish, and lots of fun may be expected.

OFFICIAL handicapper in England is not all in a name only—witness the work done by Mr. H. H. Griffin, who placed handicaps on the enormous number of 3549 entrants, covering 157 races. The tremendous amount of work entailed in properly "placing" 3549 men can be easily imagined, even by those to whom the science of handicapping is a sealed book, is it were. Mr. Griffin has done handicapping for all athletes for the past fourteen years.

THAT Boston, in 1890, will have one of the finest athletic parks in the world is now an assured fact. This summer the land will be filled and graded, and the track foundation laid, so that it will have several months to settle before the finishing touches are put on. And when we get this track we will have the biggest tournament ever given. To those who remember the Springfield, Hartford and Buffalo affairs this boast may seem to be a trifle inflated, but we know whereof we speak, as there is unlimited money, business sagacity and influence back of the scheme to make it go. Nothing short of an earthquake or a financial collapse will head the Boston tournament off, and as these are not likely to stroll this way we pin our faith strongly to the belief that it will be the "record" tournament.

THE following squib, taken from a San Francisco exchange, is as true of Boston wheelmen as of the City of the Golden Gate. The wheelman who potters over the same road year in and year out knows nothing of the delights of seeking new routes and exploring new territory. The very essence of delight to be taken out of cycling is found only in the possibilities of change, new scenery and strange surroundings. Ye potterers stop pottering and strike out for pastures new. The sermon first, and now the text:

"Wheelmen should ride in the country more than they do. There are only a few of the bicycle riders in San Francisco who know how to fully enjoy the sport. It is safe to say that nine tenths of our wheelmen, many of whom are old riders too, do not know the possibilities of the wheel. They ride every Sunday, perhaps; but where? Through the park to the beach and back; over to Haywards, and possibly down to Redwood City. Many, in fact the majority, of the riders in the town take these trips over and over during the whole riding season, when there are any number, yes, hundreds of beautiful rides within a day's reach."

IN looking over the December, 1886, file of this paper, we came across an article penned by us in which we expressed our belief that the ordinary of the future should have a much larger rear wheel than was then being used, in fact we wrote the specifications of the wheel which is now engaging public attention under the name of the "rational ordinary."

There is a demand for this "rational" machine, and it will come in very handy for those who want safety and comfort, and in whose locality the roads are such as to preclude the use of a rear driver, for experience has proven that the dwarf is no kind of a machine for sandy roads, or roads with deep wheel ruts. On such roads the rational would prove the par excellence of a cycle. The ordinary on the rational lines cannot be called a handsome machine; that it is safer and more comfortable than its graceful brother there is no gainsaying. As to looks, it is a pleasant thing to note that the present generation of riders do not choose their mount solely on account of prettiness, but because of practicability, safety and speed. The rational is a compromise, and it is a compromise that has come to stay. The three types of machines that will hereafter divide honors will be the safety, the rational and the old fashioned ordinary. Of course the tricycle will also assert its worth and excellent qualities, but the introduction of the safety has shorn much of the prestige once belonging to the good old three wheeler.

THOSE who did not receive the supplements of March 8th, please notify us. We have ordered an extra supply and we will try and send to all who did not get them. A little patience please. Those who have written as having not received these supplements, will have attention as soon as the extra ones reach us.

HERE & THERE

ST. LOUIS.

"LINNEUS."

ST. LOUIS will have a bicycle track, at least it is almost settled; it will not only be a bicycle track, but it will probably include provisions for all athletic sports. A company has been started under the laws of Illinois, with a capital of $2000. The grounds chosen will be those of the St. Louis Gun Club, on Compden avenue, and it is estimated that a track can be built for about $500. Subscription books have been placed at the clubs, and stock is being taken rapidly. Hence, we are happy.

DID you know that A. Kennedy-Child had a brother? Well he has. He is younger than the kid, and he has got a position here as one of our leading dealers, and will make his home in St. Louis.

REPRESENTATIVE POLLARD, of St. Louis County, stated in the House last Wednesday, after he had filed a protesting petition against the Warner bill, that he had been informed by one of his constituents that the party who had been canvassing the county for signatures had been paid five cents for each name secured. Investigation shows this not to be a fact, and, next to the bill itself, is about the silliest twaddle I have yet heard of.

ON Friday Mr. W. A. Rothwell, in answer to my telegram, wired me as follows: "The bill as amended passed the House this morning. Road racing prohibited." Mr. Rothwell also writes: "The vote was pretty much one way, but strong speeches were made against it, and it will be killed on third reading." If the above prediction proves true it will certainly prove to be very welcome news. If not, it will certainly stop our annual St. Louis Wheel Club road race, which had become a fixture. We wheelmen were greatly aided by the press in knocking out the obnoxious hundred-yard clause, and thanks are due the St. Louis Republic, Post Dispatch, Kansas City Journal, Sedalia Bazoo, and others, who have each had editorials and long articles against the bill. It is safe to say that this bill has caused more discussion than any measure as yet introduced into the present Legislature, and wheelmen have found out how strong they are when backed up by the L. A. W.

Now that there is an attempt on the part of a certain class to curtail the rights of wheelmen, it would be well to put in a word of warning against reckless riding. Only yesterday, I read that Dr. Spalding, aged 75, was run down in this city by a bicycle rider, a boy named Harold. The Doctor sustained serious injuries, and the boy was arrested. Again, while riding to Baldwin's last Sunday, two riders were coasting Solomon's Hill in a reckless manner, and almost ran into a horse and dog-cart; only by Herculean efforts and skill did the driver escape a most serious accident. It was an outrageous exhibition of carelessness on the part of the cyclists.

I WISH to warn your Corey Hill that Captain Hildebrand is going to Boston, with a determination to climb that eminence. He will be the guest of Dr. Emery.

CHICAGO.

THE "STROLLER."

BURLEY AYRES, "our own Burley," is to leave us. He having taken a position with the Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad and will henceforth be domiciled at Milwaukee. That Burley is to leave us seems hardly possible, he who has been so well known in the cycling history of this burg, from its infancy to the present time, and who has been such an enthusiastic worker at all times for the good of the cause, and who in club politics was the one most feared, so that it was always the field against Ayres, and who in defeat was always the essence of politeness, and as a rider was second to none, who on our tours was always the life of the party and now we are to lose you. There are but few of the riders of the earlier days who are now active wheelmen, and I am sorry to have you leave. I have followed you on many a run over what you were pleased to term "sand papered roads," but what to me seemed anything but a road, and I am simply one of many.

SOME one calling himself "Blue and Gold" writes a letter to the Wheel in regard to that "Erminie Theatre Party," and proceeds to call the members of a certain club, boys, and one member in particular he characterizes in strong terms as obstinate. The writer in question seems to be ignorant of the fact that both clubs mentioned are on quite good terms, and what ever grievance some one member may have against a member of the other club, has nothing to do with the feelings between the clubs. "Blue and Gold" must be the "boy" of his particular club, and must have been a very interested member of that theatre party.

FRANK RIGGS mourns the loss of a 50" volunteer Columbia No. 329. Wheelmen are requested to keep an eye open for the wheel.

AN interesting pool tournament is here, played between team from the Chicago's and Lincolns for a $25 cup. The first series were played Wednesday evening at the Chicago club room and resulted in a victory for the Chicago team. The next series will be played at the Lincoln club house. The successful team will probably be challenged by a team from the Illinois club.

WERE you at the Lincoln Club's monthly meeting? If not, you missed ex-President Oliver's speech and it was a scorcher. "Twinkle," "Victorene" and several other correspondents were sitting on the anxious seat. Poor "Observer" has not opened his head since his first effort, at least under that signature. And the Chicago's, they had a "right smart" time also. The head of the road department was hauled over the coals, for some imaginary offence. Then "2 A." Smith sprang a resolution to allow pool, cards and billiards on Sundays when discussed the air fairly scintillated.

The Chicago's at their last meeting jumped on Temple. He has been an honorary member for the past three years and at this meeting it was decided that the election was null and void under the constitution, while on the other hand the Illinois Club, so I am told, have just elected Ralph to honorary membership and the Lincolns were going to, but since the action taken by the Chicago's they are trembling in the balance. A funny world this and lots of funny people in it.

THE Lumsden Stone race here May 18th, will be managed by the Chicago Club as they are backing their man in the series of races to be run.

SAN FRANCISCO.

"TRAMP."

ON the morning of March 1st the members of the San Francisco Bicycle Club found, at their respective addresses, a large, 10x4, blue envelope, sealed round with tape, and bearing a very gruesome legal appearance. Further examination proved it to be a certain legal summons, of the stereotyped pattern, summoning said member and his lady friends to the Supreme Court of the S. F. B. C., 110 McAllister street, on the evening of March 9, at 7:30. Said summons were issued in the name of "the people of the State of California, or as many as are interested in cycling," and "brought to recover a claim of good-fellowship alleged to be due to plaintiff for sundry entertainments, runs, sprees, banquets, etc., etc., etc., enjoyed during the last year and during his connection with the aforesaid S. F. B. C."

CURIOSITY was rife during the ensuing week, but not an inkling could be obtained of the plans of the "presiding justice," save that "Ladies' Night" would be worthy of the honored name of the "S. Fs." On March 9th the rooms were crowded with the members and ladies. A large stage had been erected at one end and was prettily draped with the stars and stripes. Pots of palms stood in the corners, and the boxes were draped with the colors of friendly nations. The rooms presented a very cosy appearance.

THE programme was excellent, opening with an orchestral number of five pieces, followed by songs and recitations. Prominent among the many good things was the flute solo of "Les Sirens," by a prominent amateur, well known in musical circles of this city; and the playing of the Bandurria Club, under the leadership of Senor Jose Sanchos. "One Hour of Magic" was very enjoyable indeed, and concluded with the production of steaming hot coffee from what was apparently cotton batten.

THE advent of messenger boys, who collected their fees with remarkable promptness, caused great merriment, especially when the packages and letters were found to contain personal allusions and presents totally unexpected by the unhappy recipients. Our bank President received a little tin bank, and the Captain a jolly little suit of cycling clothes just sixteen inches long. As said Captain is six feet two, comment is unnecessary. [Our comment is "oh how very indecent."—ED.] The Secretary received a large, four foot club receipt for dues, and in his usual mercenary manner seized the occasion to hint that there were some delinquents. A zither solo, at 11.20, completed the evening's enjoyment, and Ladies Night of March is among many other of the pleasant memories of the past.

THE Outing Cycling Club intend organizing a trip to the Yosemite in the summer months, and have issued a very courteous invitation for wheelmen to join them.

THE Bay City Wheelmen contemplate camping near San Mateo during the Fourth of July week.

POKKOPOLIS NOTES.

"STAR."

A NEW street-sweeping machine, that seems to have escaped the notice of the ubiquitous "Hawkshaw," is on trial in N. Y. City. It is described as: a large, circular water-tank, running on three wheels, underneath which are placed large rollers or scrapers, set diagonally with pieces of rubber instead of bristles, as at present used in street-sweeping. Under the driver's feet is a water-pipe, from which copious jets of water are thrown, washing away the sand and mud, which is swept into the gutters and washed into the sewers. This machine is intended to scrub the filth from the granite and asphalt streets instead of smearing it over the surface as is done by the machine now in use in Porkopolis. It is said to have thoroughly cleaned a block of granite pavement in six minutes. If it really does the work that is claimed it will, its introduction here will be hailed with delight as it will do away with much of the annoyance consequent on our present methods of sprinkling, for a thoroughly clean pavement is not very slippery even though it may be wet, while one just swept by our present methods is as treacherous as if it it had been liberally annointed with lard.

So those are the men that keep the "Whirl'd" in motion, are they? Well, howdy! Glad to see you looking so well. What a pity though that the effect of that intellectual brow, that grecian nose, and that eagle eye of Mr. Fourdrinier should be spoiled by that abortion called a drop visor cap! Just think to what advantage they would appear if he would but wear a properly shaped straight visor cap! A word to the wise etc.

ON the evening of the 12th inst., W. S. Maltby gave an exhibition of fancy riding at the Princess Rink. The attendance was largely made up of local wheelmen. The Kentons, Newports, and Cincinnati's were out in force. The two former clubs came in uniform and made good use of the surface during the early part of the evening, whilst the members of the latter club were content to sit in the balcony and look handsome. The Roller Toboggan Slide did a rushing business. Maltby's performance, while not up to expectations in every respect, was very creditable. Dr. Green and Charley Allen amused themselves during the intermissions by flirting with the girls that flitted by on the toboggan slide. Andy Hanauer, while riding a wheel around on the surface, could not imagine what made it run so hard till he accidently discovered that a string of about fifty skaters was attached to the backbone, when he dismounted in disgust. The pleasure of the evening was somewhat marred by the boisterous conduct of certain individuals, whose actions gave emphasis to the line: "The loud laugh that speaks the vacant mind." It is unfortunate that it is in the power of a few who delight in the appellation of "D. F." to not only make such meetings unpleasant to many of those present, but to give to the general public an impression that wheelmen as a class are given to noise and childish actions.

NEW YORK.

"HAWKSHAW."

MR. C. E. BENTLEY, of the New York Club, has taken out a patent on rather an ingenious attachment to wheels. He has placed inside of the hub, so as to pass entirely unnoticed, unless looked for, a set of gears of the planet type which he uses to overcome the extra power heretofore necessary to use to mount a hill. When the rider, whose wheel is equipped with Mr. Bentley's patent, desires to sacrifice speed for power, as for instance in hill climbing, all he has to do is to reverse the action of his feet just as though he intended to cause his wheel to go down the incline, instead of up it, and at once the gear is thrown into place automatically, and he proceeds upward without almost any effort at all. When descending grades all the rider has to do is to let his feet remain stationary upon the pedals, and the gear will cause them to refrain from revolving with the wheel. Mr. Bentley has ridden a wheel equipped with this appliance for over a year now, and while not in himself a strong rider, has by its aid been enabled to mount with ease hills that have tried some of our most expert grade grinders Patents that are to do away with all the hard work of wheeling are, I know, just as numerous as the cranks who invent them, and they are legion, but really in this case there does seem to be some merit.

THE New York Club's "Smoker" on Friday evening is, so Chairman Heydecker informs me, going to be a record one in the annals of fumigatory affairs. There's going to be a band, beer, spread, wine, song and gaiety galore, and as it's all free, gratis, for nothing, I feel safe in saying that a large and appreciative audience will enjoy it. While I don't want to rave, yet do you know this term "smoker" is more or less of a misnomer? Why should they call these affairs "smokers" any more than any other "stag" rackets? Wherever men assemble, without the company of the fair sex, don't they smoke, if they have anything to smoke? Of course they do, but then the term is an imported one, so I suppose that that makes its use proper.

LOUIS HARRISON has gone West to hunt buffalos, or something or other, so if any of your correspondents out there see anything of a nice looking blonde individual, speaking French, English and Bostonese with equal fluency, they may all know by those presents that the gentleman is the ex-Captain of the Boston Bicycle Club. Any favors, such as showing him where buffalos, Indians and such like can be killed in the vicinity of a first-class hotel, will be duly appreciated by Mr. Harrison and his many friends.

BALTIMORE. "NOKVAL."

HAGERSTOWN, Md., is all aglow over the big bicycle meet to take place in that city on July 2d, 3d and 4th. It is expected to far surpass the one held there the Fourth of July, 1886. It is also expected that the lady bicyclists will add considerably to the attractiveness of the occasion. The various committees are hard at work perfecting all details. It is understood that clubs from all parts of the country will attend. The hotel accommodations are ample. The meet will not be under the auspices of the L. A. W., nor has it anything to do with the Maryland Division. It is the special enterprise of the Hagerstown Club.

A PETITION is being circulated, asking that the Pimlico road be exempted from the operations of the fast-driving ordinance, regardless of the improvement of the road. Cyclists will not object to fast driving, but they want the road improved whether or not fast driving is to be allowed.

THE seventh annual banquet of the Maryland Club was held Thursday evening, March the 13th, at the club house on Mt. Royal avenue. In the gymnasium, on the third floor, a large T-shaped table was set, and about seventy-five men in all the glory of full-dress suits sat down. Mr. S. T. Clark acted as toastmaster, and the speeches were spicy, humorous and worthy of the Maryland Club.

CUMBERLAND, Md., will have a bicycle club, and it will be a League club, too. There are seventeen members, and they are all in the fold.

THE sweet, the fair, the ravishing Pauline is among us, and every susceptible bachelor's heart is on the "flut."

NEWS AND COMMENT.

WE always dislike to miss anything that the Roxbury (Mass.) Club have to do with, because we know from experience that this club never does matters by halves. Hence our sorrow that a previous engagement prevented us from being present at the third dinner of the Roxbury Bicycle Club, which took place at Young's last Saturday. Howard, of the Globe, and Kerrison, of the Herald, were among the honored guests of the evening, also Secretary Bassett.

PARDON us, Philadelphia Item, but Bert Myers does not hold the "best American 24-hour record."

IN the vicinity of Boston the pony team, the Baily brothers, rattled everything round here on a tandem trike. We hear their mount this year will be a tandem bike—buzz!!

THE Cambridge Club will dine at Young's on the evening of the 28th.

WALTER T. BOWERS, of Saco, Me., will put a patent bicycle lantern and attachment on the market this spring. The lantern head is rivited to a steel spring and the spring can be fastened to the pedal pin of the bicycle without the use of screw or bolt. By those who have seen it it is claimed to be an excellent device.

OUR next issue will be a corker.

THE New York Bicycle Club has secured over 2000 names to the petition for asphalting the grand boulevard.

A CYCLIST of Passaic City, N. J., is in the habit of taking the smooth "tramp walk" between the two tracks of the Lackawanna road from the Bloomfield avenue station to the nearest point of the boulevard at Franklin. One day this week he saw an express train in front, and ran close to the other track to avoid it, as he had frequently done. Just then he heard a whistle shriek behind him, close at hand. There was no time to cross, and he threw himself flat on the ground with his bicycle, supposing that his time had come, as he expected the wheel would be caught and so entangle him as to give him little chance for his life. Both trains passed, and neither the rider nor the vehicle was injured. He now sticks to the highway, as being "good enough."

THERE is nothing that a father or mother can do that will do more to save a weak and sickly boy than to put him on a bicycle, and let him ride whenever he can get spare time. The exercise will not only be a benefit to him from a physical standpoint, but it will do him good morally.

THE Mi-sourians are waking up, and the L. A. W. Division is doing great work; petitions are being circulated and signed extensively, protesting against the idiotic Warner bill.

WE grow envious and discontented when we think of that Elwell European party, and the fact dawns on us that our name is not on the roster.

A TIP—but for goodness' sake don't say I told you! W. Windle has bought a new pair of racing shoes!! What portentions does this portend, eh?

THE cycling columns of the general press always have some hoary old chestnuts floating round, and that have certain characteristics of Mr. Banquo's ghosts. The particular chestnut that is now bobbing up all over the country, is that about ex-President Hayes family and the tricycle.

THE Boston Technology Cycling Club have given the defi to the Harvard Club. We admire your pluck, Tech, but—? The challenge reads as follows: "The Technology Cycling Club challenges the Harvard Bicycle Club to a road race of from twelve to twenty miles, for a trophy similar to the last one, the race to take place some time in April."

THE editor of the Pawtucket, R. If the charge is true we don't know but that we would be also pleased to hear of the proposed castigation.

A SINGULAR and amusing coincidence in connection with the new club house of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Bicycle Club, is the fact that the residence adjoining is occupied by a family that recently moved away from the house adjoining the present home of the club on St. Felix street, as they objected to the buzz and noise which necessarily characterizes such a club.

AN IMPORTANT BILL INTRODUCED IN THE NEW YORK ASSEMBLY.

Editor Bicycling World: I enclose herewith a bill which was introduced by Mr. Yates in the assembly last Monday evenihg, amending the prison bill passed last year.

Section four of the amendment is of great importance to wheelmen in New York State, and one that the League, as well as the individual wheelmen, should be interested in. At present our prisons are full of convicts which are kept in idleness and which should be breaking stone and keeping our roads in repair.

In this they would be doing a great public good without interering or competing with honest labor.

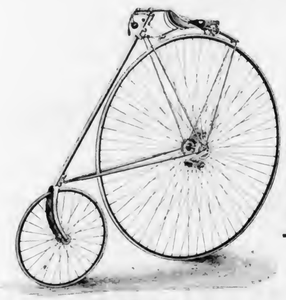
THE EAGLE.

No Levers.

Yes; The "Eagle" will climb a hill. It can be ridden up any hill that has ever been climbed on a Cycle.

No; It will not tip over backward as soon as you mount it, that is, if you know how to ride it.

Can you mount it? Well, we think you can, unless you have less than the average ability as a rider.



No; The position is not pushing backward; but directly downward, and is almost identical with that of walking; it is easy and natural, and an "Eagle" wheel can be ridden a great distance with very little fatigue. It is well adapted to rough and hilly roads, and can be ridden with ease and safety where it would be impossible to go on an "Ordinary."

These statements we are prepared to practically demonstrate, and are doing so daily, to the complete satisfaction of all who visit us

If there is not already an agent for the "Eagle" in your locality, we should be pleased to hear from you.

Every member of the New York Division should be urged to bring what influence he can to bear upon the Representative from his district in order to have this bill become a law.

The bill is to amend Chapter 586 of the laws of 1888, entiled "An act providing for the proper employment of convicts in the penal institutions of the State, and making an appropriation necessary to prevent the prisoners from remaining in idleness."

The proposed amendment reads as follows:

"The sheriffs of the several counties of the State are hereby authorized and empowered to cause all prisoners who may be sentenced by the judgment of any of the courts of this State to confinement to the county jail at hard labor, to be put at work in cultivating and improving the county and town lands, highways, roads and bridges, breaking stone therefor, and such other public work, and at such time and at such locality within their several counties as the Board of Supervisors thereof may direct."

Yours fraternally. C. E. WHITE.

WHEELS—THEIR SIZES AND GEARS.

THE following table and rules for calculating, furnished by Mr. C. D. Buckwell in the Cyclist, will prove of value and interest to our readers.

"A table showing the circumference of different sized wheels, and the number of revolutions each makes in a mile: also the most ready method to determine if a driving wheel is geared level, or how much up or down:

Diameter of wheel in inches.	Circumference in inches and 7th.	Number of revolutions per mile.
30	94 2	672 00
32	100 4	630 00
34	106 6	592 95
36	113 1	560 00
38	119 3	530 52
40	125 5	504 00
42	132 0	480 00
44	138 2	458 18
46	141 4	438 25
48	150 6	420 00
50	157 1	403 20
52	163 3	387 69
54	169 5	373 33
56	179 0	360 00
58	182 2	347 68
60	188 4	336 00

To find the circumference of a circle, multiply the diameter by 3.1416, or 3 1-7. Example, a driving wheel 48 inches in diameter—Multiply 48 by 3 1-7=150 6-7, or say 151.

To find the number of revolutions a wheel 150 6-7 inches in circumference makes in a mile, reduce the mile to sevenths of an inch, thus—1760 yards=5280 feet=63,360 inches=443,520 sevenths of an inch. Divide this by the circumference 150 6-7 of the wheel as above, reduced to sevenths of an inch. Example—150 6-7 multiplied by 7=1056; then 443,520 divided by 1056=420. Answer, 420 revolutions to the mile.

A driving wheel of tricycle or safety bicycle is "geared level" when the number of cogs is the same on both chain wheels. If geared up, the cogs of chain wheel on driving axle are less in number than chain wheel on crank axle. If geared down the cogs of chain wheel on driving axle are more in number than chain wheel on crank axle. To find how much a driving wheel is geared up or down, multiply the diameter of wheel by the number of cogs on crank axle, and divide the product by the number of cogs on driving axle. Example—Driving wheel, 30 inches diameter; chain wheel of ditto, 10 cogs; crank chain wheel, 16 cogs—Multiply 16 by 30=480; then divide 480 by 10=48. Answer, gear to 48 inches.

The number of revolutions made by the crank, which is the actual number of times the foot has to move round in going a mile, must be taken on the size the wheel is geared to; thus, a 30-inch wheel makes 672 revolutions of the crank in a mile, but if geared to 48 inches the crank only makes 420 revolutions to propel the machine the same distance as the 672 revolutions would if geared level.

HOW TO LAY A TRACK.

To Bicycling News are we indebted for almost all of the following valuable hints as to how a track should be built and equipped:

A most frequent question, in the experience of cycling editors, is—How shall a track be laid? It is an absolute necessity that the especial circumstances of the individual cases should be carefully considered, and in every case dealt with accordingly. Just as in road-making one highway may be blasted through solid rock and last, practically, forever, as far as its bed and basis goes, while another may be made through a swamp which yearly swallows up tons of rubble, and yet remains bad and rotten. So with tracks—one may have a gravel, chalky or rocky bottom and need but little care to keep it level and in good order; while another, built upon clay or sand, may be forever sinking and losing its shape. It is possible, however, to lay down some general rules by which any person may be guided in the laying of a racing path, and we propose to propound them briefly for the benefit of those who are in search of knowledge.
